The Hampden Colony was organized in Hampden County, Mass., March 1, 1855. The organization was for the purpose of effecting a settlement in Kansas. W. A. Ela was the first secretary. The colony, when it left Massachusetts, consisted of upward of 70 souls. It arrived at Kansas City, April 14, 1855. Its original destination was Lawrence, but upon its arrival at Kansas City it was induced by S. C. Pomeroy to locate in the Neosho valley. Mr. Pomeroy and George L. Gaylord had previously visited the Neosho valley, selected the Hampden town site, and also taken claims in the vicinity. Mr. Pomeroy selected a timber claim on the river, which was afterwards jumped and pre-empted by Wm. Whistler. Mr. Pomeroy employed Ahijah Jones, who then lived near the present town site of Le Roy, to erect a cabin on his (Pomeroy's) claim. When Mr. Jones appeared on the ground, with men and tools to erect the cabin, he found William Whistler and several Sac and Fox Indians erecting a cabin on the same claim. To avoid a difficulty, Mr. Jones threw up the job and withdrew with his force, leaving the field clear to Mr. Whistler, who subsequently pre-empted the claim. Messrs. Pomeroy and Gaylord, on their return trip to Kansas City from the Neosho valley, stopped at the Sac and Fox agency, where Robert A. Kinzie and John H. Whistler were engaged in trading with the Indians. Learning from Mr. Pomeroy that an Eastern colony would probably locate in the Neosho valley, Messrs. Kinzie, John H. Whistler, and his son, William Whistler, immediately started for that locality, and made claims in the vicinity of the place selected for the town site of Hampden by Messrs. Pomeroy and Gaylord. Mr. Kinzie and John H. Whistler crossed the Neosho River and took claims on each side of the present site of Burlington. The land between their claims, on which is now the city of Burlington, was reserved by Messrs. Kinzie and Whistler for a town site. William Whistler jumped the Pomeroy claim, as has been previously mentioned. The Hampden colonists purchased teams and supplies at Kansas City and arrived at Hampden on the 26th of April, 1855. The colony at this time consisted of the following persons: W. A. Ela and wife; H. W. Ela; Charles Morse and family; Rev. Richard Knight and family; J. R. Pierce, wife and child; S. P. Pepper and family; Andrew Harrington and family; J. R. Harrington; S. R. Harrington; Ebenezer Harrington; Theodore Denecke and family; J. B. Wetherby and family; William Blaisdale, sen.; William Blaisdale, jr.; Chauncey Morse and family; Lucius Morse; Mr. Lombard; N. F. Crocker; Lincoln Morse; J. C. Chapin; J. L. Chapin; G. H. Church; L. G. Currier; B. F. Holland; Charles Dagenkalb; G. M. Abbey; P. Knowlton; C. Knowlton; A. B. Sampsom; B. F. Pease; H. O. Pratt; John B. Pepper; George F. Merrick; Henry Aldridge; Silas Smith; Henry Reynolds; L. Richards; D. W. Seiders; C. G. Athearn; —— Athearn; Franklin Rhodes; H. R. Allen; J. G. Hart; Harvey Bliss; C. H. Grant; D. Haley; Levi Proctor; J. Blackford; E. H. Smith; Mr. Peasley; Mr. Eaton; J. A. D. Clark; E. T. Hills; Alberto Hills; Thomas Y. Proctor; Mr. Newcomb; W. H. Higgins; —— Bushee; —— Bushee; Albert Flanders; Charles Hopkins; Mr. Joslyn; George Law and wife; T. B. Church; Luther C. Smith; Mr. Turner; B. E. Whittaker, and Luther Rice. The first thing done was to select claims. Mr. W. A. Ela, being a practical surveyor, and being also prepared with the proper instruments to do surveying, laid off seventy claims, and on the first of May, 1855, the colonists drew these claims by lot. The hardships experienced by these pioneers were too severe for a large number, who soon retraced their steps to their old New England homes. Those that remained had to combat the ills that human flesh is subject to in all prairie countries. Conspicuously among their physical ailments was the inevitable ague. On the 16th of July, 1855, Mrs. J. R. Pierce gave birth to a son, who lived only ten days. The corpse was enclosed in a match box and buried on the town site by Albert Flanders. Mrs. Pierce survived her child only a few days. In November, 1855, T. Y. Proctor was married to Lydia Harrington. W. A. Ela opened a store at Hampden immediately after the settlement of the colony, and also kept a private postoffice for the benefit of the settlers in the Neosho valley. The mails were brought in private conveyances from Kansas City. All of the settlers in the valley, from Humboldt to the Cottonwood River, obtained their mail matter at Mr. Ela's office. In June of that year Mr. Dagenkalb, while asleep on the bare ground in company with Theodore Denecke, was awakened by feeling something crawling over his face. He seized the creeper and jerked it suddenly to the ground. Upon examining the object, it was found to be a monster rattlesnake, which had been killed by the jerk and dash. This circumstance alarmed the colonists and caused them to speculate upon what might result should any be bitten by a rattlesnake in the absence of the usual remedy for such an accident. The result was that whisky afterward constituted a portion of Mr. Ela's stock of goods. It cost twenty-two cents a gallon at Kansas City, and retailed at his store for fifteen cents a pint. In the summer of 1855 the machinery for a saw mill was sent to the Hampden colony by the Emigrant Aid Company, through the instrumentality of S. C. Pomeroy, its Kansas agent, but owing to the inability to procure water on the town site it was never put in operation. This mill was afterward removed to Burlington. Hardin McMahon came from Indiana to Coffey County in October, 1855, took a claim one mile below Strawn, on the Neosho River, where his family yet resides. He was the first probate judge elected by the people in Coffey County. Wesley Stubblefield came to Coffey County in the fall of 1854, and in March, 1855, took a claim about ten miles northeast of Burlington, on the road to Lawrence, which is still known as the "old Stubblefield place," and was for many years a convenient stopping place for citizens of the county. Mr. Stubblefield died in November, 1872. James A. Grimes came to Coffey County with his family in the fall of 1855, and took a claim about four miles southeast of Burlington, on the Neosho River. Of the family remaining, M. E. Grimes, David Grimes and Lindsay Grimes are still residents of the county.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

Enos Strawn and George Vail were elected delegates to the Big Springs convention, that passed resolutions denouncing the bogus statutes, September 5, 1855. At an election held October 9, 1855, Dr. Hamilton Smith was elected a member of the Topeka constitutional convention and assisted in framing the constitution adopted by that body. The first Justice of the Peace in Coffey County was Gen. John B. Scott, who acted under authority of the bogus laws in 1855.

Organization of the County.—On the 22d day of July, 1855, the boundary lines of Coffey County were established by an act of the Legislature, and defined as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of Welles County, thence south twenty-four miles, thence west twenty-four miles, thence north twenty-four miles, thence east twenty-four miles to place of beginning. The county of Welles, above named, is now Osage. The county was not organized for business until February, 1857. Then it was organized by an act of the Legislature, and the same Legislature, by joint ballot, elected John Woolman, Probate Judge; E. C. Amsden, Sheriff; Richard Burr and Samuel Lock, Commissioners. The same Legislature located the county-seat temporarily at Le Roy, and provided for the election, at the next general election, of three Commissioners, to locate the county seat permanently. John Evans, John Wooster, and Enos Strawn, were elected such Commissioners, and proceeded to locate the county-seat permanently at Le Roy.

Coffey County was named in honor of Col. A. M. Coffey, a resident of Miami County, but a member of the Territorial Legislature of 1855. He represented the Fourth District, consisting of Franklin, Miami, and Linn counties. While in the Legislature his motto was "The Union, it must be preserved." He was an agent of the Confederate tribe of Indians, and Colonel of a Confederate regiment in the Indian Territory during the Rebellion. As late as 1878, the Colonel was a resident of southwestern Missouri, his native State being Kentucky, where he was born in 1804. The first term of Commissioners' Court was held at Le Roy, February, 1857. Alexander Hamilton filed his bond in the sum of $1,000, as County Clerk, and was authorized by the board to draft a plan for a temporary court-house. By authority of the court, Richard Burr procured a set of books for the Probate Judge and for the Commissioners' Court. At a meeting of the board in April, 1857, Alexander Hamilton was appointed a special agent to borrow $800, for the purpose of putting up county buildings. On the 20th of April, Mr Hamilton tendered his resignation as special agent, which was accepted, and no further action was taken in regard to county buildings. The board met and adjourned, from time to time for want of business, until the 18th of August, when they established three election precincts: one each at Le Roy, Burlington, and Ottumwa. At that meeting, Township 23, Range 16, was organized as a school district, but as the organization was premature, it never had any official status and was soon abandoned. On the 21st day of September 1857, the board established an election precinct at Neosho City, and appointed Judges of Election, Charles Vandevere, Noah Vandevere and J. R. Dewitt. The Judges of Election appointed at the same time for the other precincts, were as follows: Burlington—W. A. Ela, M. E. Grimes, Charles Morse; Ottumwa—Hiram Hoover, Hardin McMahon, Enos Strawn; Le Roy—Alexander Hamilton, F. W. Holcomb, James Beard. On the 26th day of September, 1857, the county was divided into four municipal townships, to-wit: Burlington, Le Roy, Ottumwa, and Neosho City. The next meeting of the Board of Commissioners was held in Le Roy, January 18, 1858. At that meeting Hiram Hoover was elected Assessor of Coffey County, J. M. Elliott appointed Surveyor, and Thomas Crabtree filed his bond as County Treasurer, January 21, 1857. J. L. Bacon was appointed County Clerk. In October, 1857, O. E. Learnard was elected a member of the Territorial Council, which met in January, 1858.

Officers of District Court.—The first term of court ever held in the county was held in Hampden some time in 1855, by Hon. Samuel D. Lecompte, then Chief Justice of the Territory. The Second Judicial District, composed of eighteen counties, was organized, and Hon. Rush Elmore, Associate Judge of the Territory, was assigned to it. The first term of the District Court in this county commenced September 5th, 1859, Elmore, Judge; L. McArthur, Clerk, (by A. Jones, deputy); John Chess, Sheriff; and William R. Saunders, County Attorney. Hon. Rush Elmore continued Judge until the admission of Kansas in 1861; L. McArthur continued to be Clerk of the court for the same time, with Silas Fearl a portion of the time as deputy. During the years 1860 and 1861, John Chess was Sheriff and William B. Parsons, County Attorney. Courts were held twice each year. O. E. Learnard was elected first Judge of the Fifth Judicial District, under the State organization, but was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the First Kansas, and resigned his position as Judge, having never held a term of court. Hon. R. M. Ruggles was appointed to the vacancy, and in the fall of 1861 was elected to the office. During the year 1862, William R. Saunders was District Attorney, Ahijah Jones, Clerk, and M. E. Grimes, Sheriff. During 1863, George H. Lillie was District Attorney and M. E. Grimes still Sheriff. During 1864 and 1865, A. S. Howard was District Attorney. H. N. Bent was County Attorney during 1866, and until the fall of 1867, when Silas Fearl (who was that fall elected to the office) was appointed to the office. Silas Fearl was County Attorney from 1866 to 1871, and A. M. F. Randolph from 1871 to 1875, when he was succeeded by William B. Parsons, who was elected in 1874. Parsons resigned the office in March, 1876, when Judge Peyton appointed Samuel C. Junkins to fill the vacancy; Mr. Junkins held the office until January, 1877, when he was succeeded by C. B. Graves, who was elected in the fall of 1876. November 5, 1878, Silas Fearl was elected County Attorney and has served in that capacity since. The last time he was elected, was the 7th of November, 1882. J. H. Watson succeeded R. M. Ruggles as Judge in 1865, and held the office until 1873, when he was succeeded by E. B. Peyton. November, 2, 1880, Charles B. Graves was elected Judge to succeed Peyton and is still serving in that capacity. L. W. Morey succeeded Ahijah Jones as Clerk, by appointment, and Matthew Fennimore by election, who held the office until 1864, when Samuel C. Junkins was elected to the office and held it four years. Jacob F. Harlan succeeded Junkins, and held the office six years, until January, 1875, when he was succeeded by R. H. Adair, who was re-elected, without opposition, in 1876, and re-elected again in 1878. In 1880, Adair was succeeded by William B. Patton, and in 1882, Patton was succeeded by C. P. Allen, the present incumbent. W. J. Sanders was Sheriff four years, commencing in 1864; S. J. Carter succeeded him, holding the office four years. John Chess, Senior, was elected Sheriff in 1871, but died before entering upon his duties; Martin B. Hoover was appointed to fill the vacancy, and in the fall of 1872, was elected to the office, and re-elected in 1873, holding the office little over four years. Mr. Hoover was followed in 1876 by John E. Williams, who was elected to the office in the fall of 1875. Owing to Mr. Williams' poor health, the entire business of the Sheriff's office was transacted by James M. Lane, Mr. Williams' under sheriff. Mr. Williams died in January, 1877, when Mr. Lane was appointed by the Governor to fill the vacancy. Lane was Sheriff until January, 1878, when he was succeeded by Delos Miller, who was elected to the office in the fall of 1877 and re-elected in the fall of 1879, and served until he was succeeded by Thomas Cross, who was elected November 15, 1881, and who is the present incumbent.

Probate Judge.—John Woolman, the first Probate Judge, was elected by the Legislature in February, 1857. He was succeeded by Hardin McMahon, who was elected by the people in 1858; he served but a short time, and was succeeded by William R. Saunders. Mr. Saunders resigned before he had performed any official duties, for the following reasons: Under the United States law it was made the duty of the Probate Judge, when called on, to pre-empt town sites for the use and benefit of the occupants. The Burlington Town Company were anxious to have the present site of the city of Burlington pre-empted in the spring of 1859. Mr. Saunders, for some reason, was afraid to assume the responsibility of pre-empting the town site, and expressed a desire to resign, rather than do so.

In February, 1859, Col. Learnard, B. L. Kingsbury and Charles Persall drove to his residence on Long Creek, received his written resignation, drove from there to Lecompton, and presented the same to Gov. Medary. The resignation was accepted, and on the 1st day of March, 1859, B. L. Kingsbury received the appointment of Probate Judge, and on the 2d day of March, 1859, pre-empted the present site of the city of Burlington. B. L. Kingsbury was succeeded by Enos Strawn, who held the office but a short time, and was succeeded by J. D. Carney, who held the office until January, 1861, when he was succeeded by M. Fennimore, who held the office until January, 1862, when he was succeeded by H. N. Bent, who held the office until January, 1868, when he was succeeded by J. M. Rankin, who held the office until January, 1872, and was succeeded by William A. Allison, who held the office until his death in November, 1875. On the 22d day of November, 1875, B. L. Kingsbury was appointed to fill the vacancy, and in November, 1876, he was elected Probate Judge, and re-elected in 1878 and 1880. November 7, 1882, Charles O. Brown was elected Probate Judge.

County Treasurer.—Thomas Crabtree, the first County Treasurer of Coffey County, was appointed January 19, 1858, and held the office until January 1, 1860; William Manson, from January, 1860, to January, 1, 1862; A. F. Wilkinson, from January, 1862, to January, 1866; J. M. Lane, from January, 1866, to July 1, 1870; C. H. Graham, from July 1, 1870, to November 1, 1873; H. E. Cowgill, from November 1, 1873, to July 1, 1874; S. J. Carter, from July 1, 1874, to October 1, 1878. H. E. Cowgill was elected in November, 1877, to succeed S. J. Carter. Cowgill was re-elected in November, 1879, and was succeeded by D. V. Mott, the present incumbent, who qualified October 9, 1882.

County Superintendent.—The following is a list of County Superintendents in the order of their election: 1859—H. H. Johnson; 1860—Lewis Morey; 1862—Lewis Morey; 1864—John M. Rankin; 1866—B. Wheat; 1868—William Crow; 1870—J. S. Kline; 1872—George N. McConnell; 1875—John M. Rankin; 1876—P. K. Wadhams, appointed July, 1876; 1876—P. K. Wadhams, elected; 1878— —— Robinson; 1880—John C. Gray; 1882—John C. Gray.

County Clerk.—Alexander Hamilton was the first County Clerk, being appointed by the Commissioners in December, 1857, and held the office until January 4, 1858, when J. L. Bacon was appointed County Clerk. H. B. Beall succeeded Bacon, and entered upon his duties in May, 1858, and was succeeded by Silas Fearl on the 16th day of June, 1858, who continued in office until the 6th day of April, 1859, when he was succeeded by Ahijah Jones, who held the office until the general election, November 8, 1859, when Thomas M. Sanders was elected and entered upon his duties January 20, 1860. On the 9th day of July, 1860, Mr. Sanders resigned and Orson Kent was appointed to fill the vacancy. In November, 1860, B. L. Kingsbury was elected and continued in office until January 11, 1862, when he was succeeded by I. E. Olney, who was elected November 5, 1861. Mr. Olney was succeeded by Isaac Cabbage, in January, 1864. Mr. Cabbage was succeeded by S. C. Junkins, who was elected November 7, 1865, and entered upon his duties in January, 1866, and served four years. Allen Crocker succeeded Mr. Junkins, who also served four years, and he was succeeded by Job Throckmorton, who served four years, until January, 1878, when he was succeeded by his brother, W. H. Throckmorton, who was elected November 6, 1877. Robert H. Adair, the present incumbent, was elected November 8, 1881, and succeeded W. H. Throckmorton, January 7, 1882.

Register of Deeds.—First Register of Deeds, Alexander Hamilton, from July 6, 1857, to May 3, 1858; Sylvester I. Bacon, from May 3, 1858, to January 5, 1859; Judson A. Walkling, from January 5, 1859, to January 9, 1862; Hiram Hoover, from January 9, 1862, to January 8, 1864; F. A. Atherly, from January 8, 1864, to January 8, 1866; P. S. Patton, from January 8, 1866, to January 12, 1868; W. H. Bear, from January 12, 1868, to present time. He was last elected November 25, 1881.

Legislative.—By the apportionment of July 18, 1857, the counties of Shawnee, Richardson, Davis, Wise and Breckinridge constituted the Seventh Council District, the counties of Bourbon, Godfrey, Wilson, Dorn and McGee constituted the Eighth Council District, and the counties of Butler, Hunter, Greenwood, Madison, Welles, Coffey, Woodson and Allen constituted the Ninth Council District. These three council districts, consisting of the Seventh, Eighth and Ninth, and containing eighteen counties, had apportioned to them only two Councilmen, who were voted for at large by the people of the eighteen counties. Oscar E. Learnard, of Coffey County, and Cyrus K. Holliday, of Shawnee County, were elected, October 5, 1857, to represent these eighteen counties in the Territorial Council. By this same apportionment of July 18, 1857, the counties of Richardson, Davis, Wise and Breckinridge constituted the Twelfth Representative District; the counties of Welles, Madison, Butler, Hunter and Greenwood constituted the Thirteenth Representative District; the counties of Bourbon, Godfrey, Wilson, Dorn and McGee constituted the Fourteenth Representative District; the counties of Woodson, Coffey and Allen constituted the Fifteenth Representative District, and the counties of Anderson and Franklin constituted the Sixteenth Representative District. These five representative districts, embracing nineteen counties, were allowed only three members. At the election held October 5, 1857, Samuel Stewart, of Allen County, C. Columbia, of Wise County, and John Curtis, of Franklin County, were chosen to represent these nineteen counties. August 9, 1857, Hamilton Smith, of Ottumwa, was elected a Senator under the Topeka Constitution. December 21, 1857, John T. Cox, of Ottumwa, was elected State Senator, and Allen Crocker, of Avon Township, Representative, under the Lecompton Constitution. March 4, 1858, R. A. Kinzie, D. A. Hawkins and J. M. Elliot were elected delegates to the Leavenworth Constitutional Convention. In June, 1859, Allen Crocker, of Coffey County, and Samuel E. Hoffman, of Woodson County, were elected delegates to the Wyandotte Constitutional Convention from what was officially designated as the Twentieth District. November 8, 1859, John C. Lambdin, of Butler County, was elected a member of the Territorial Council from the Thirteenth District, consisting of the counties of Coffey, Madison, Hunter, Butler, Chase, Godfrey and Greenwood. At the same election O. H. Sheldon, of Osage County, and George W. Nelson, of Coffey County, were elected Representatives to the Territorial House from the Twenty-second District, embracing those two counties. December 6, 1859, J. W. Kerr, of Coffey County, and E. P. Bancroft, of Breckinridge County, were elected State Senators under the Wyandotte Constitution from the Twelfth Senatorial District, and at the same time O. H. Sheldon, of Osage County, G. A. Cutler, R. W. Cloud and G. H. Reese, of Breckinridge County, and Benoni Wheat and W. R. Saunders, of Coffey County, were elected Representatives from the Twelfth Representative District. The first Legislature under the Wyandotte Constitution did not convene until the 26th of March, 1861. Before its assembling J. W. Kerr, who had been elected State Senator from Coffey County, died, and the vacancy was filled by the election of Hiram S. Sleeper, of Breckinridge County. March 5, 1861, G. A. Cutler, who had been elected Representative from Lyon County, removed to Coffey County before the first State Legislature convened, and lived there during his term of office. November 6, 1860, D. A. Hawkins, of Coffey County, and J. M. Winchell, of Osage County, were elected Representatives to the Territorial Legislature from the Twenty-second Representative District. November 5, 1861, O. H. Sheldon, of Osage County; P. P. Plumb, P. B. Maxson and C. V. Eskridge, of Breckinridge County; and F. W. Potter and J. H. Leard, of Coffey County were elected Representatives to the State Legislature from the Twelfth Representative District. November 4, 1862, F. W. Potter was elected to the Senate from the Eighteenth District; Horace Tucker was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and W. R. Saunders was elected Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 3, 1863, Job Throckmorton was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and W. R. Saunders was elected Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 8, 1864, F. W. Potter was re-elected State Senator from the Eighteenth District; Job Throckmorton was re-elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and W. B. Perry was elected Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 2, 1865, Charles Cochrane was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and A. V. Coffin Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 6, 1866, James Rogers, of Osage County, was elected State Senator from the Eighteenth District; Job Throckmorton was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and Allen Crocker Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 5, 1867, Harrison Kelley was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and P. H. Smith Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 3, 1868, M. M. Murdock, of Osage County, was elected Senator from the Eighteenth District. J. A. McGinnes was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and E. E. Coffin was elected Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 2, 1869, Hardin McMahon was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and E. E. Coffin Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 8, 1870, M. M. Murdock, of Osage County, was re-elected State Senator; Charles Puffer was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District, and Charles B. Butler was elected Representative from the Sixty-second District. November 7, 1871, Charles B. Butler was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District (the whole county at this time constituting this District). November 5, 1872, Charles B. Butler, of Coffey County, was elected State Senator from the Twenty-second District, consisting of the counties of Coffey and Woodson, and S. K. Cross was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District. November 4, 1873, F. W. Potter was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District. November 3, 1874, D. W. Finney, of Woodson County, was elected Senator from the Twenty-second District, and B. L. Kingsbury Representative from the Sixty-first District. November 2, 1875, Jacob Baer was elected Representative from the Sixty-first District. November 7, 1876, D. W. Finney was re elected Senator from the Twenty-second District. At this time the Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Representative Districts were embraced within the limits of Coffey County. At the election on the 7th of November, 1876, Jacob Baer was elected Representative from the Fifty-eighth District, and Butler Wood Representative from the Fifty ninth District. At the same election D. W. Finney was re-elected State Senator from the Twenty-second District. At this election the Senator was elected for four years and the Representative for two years, it being the first election of legislators under the constitutional amendment providing for biennial sessions. November 5, 1878, Jacob Baer was elected Representative from the Fifty-eighth District, and Butler Wood Representative from the Fifty-ninth District. November 2, 1880, Harrison Kelley was elected Senator from the Twenty-second District; A. W. Jones was elected Representative from the Fifty-eighth District, and John Geisey Representative from the Fifty-ninth District. At the session of the Legislature in 1881, a new apportionment was made, when the counties of Coffey and Franklin were constituted the Thirteenth Senatorial District, Harrison Kelley, then Senator from the Twenty-second District, consisting of the counties of Coffey and Woodson, holding over for two years more. At this same apportionment, in 1881, Coffey County was constituted the Forty-third Representative District. November 7, 1882, Samuel J. Carter was elected Representative from the Forty-third District.

COUNTY SEAT STRUGGLES.

The act of the Territorial Legislature organizing Coffey County, approved February 17, 1857, located the county seat, temporarily, at Le Roy. The same act also provided for the election of three commissioners by the people of the county at a special election, for the purpose of selecting a site at the most practicable point near the center of the county for the permanent location of the county seat. An election for commissioners was held in pursuance of that act September 25, 1857. Concerning this election Judge Enos Strawn makes the following statement: "There were only five candidates at that election—Mr Wooster, east of Le Roy, Mr. Evans, west of Le Roy, Dr. Cutler (then of Burlington), myself, and the name of the fifth candidate I have forgotten. [F. A Atherly says that Clark Tritt was the name of the other candidate.] The election came off on the 25th of September, 1857. I received 476 votes, Evans and Wooster received 346 votes each, and Cutler and the other man were a good ways behind. After I found out I was elected I went to Lawrence to see the Burlington Town Company. The company held a meeting and proposed to give Coffey County the park in Burlington (now partly occupied by the schoolhouse and court house), forty lots around the park, and finish the bridge across the river then in erection, providing the commissioners would locate the county seat at Burlington. I then saw Evans and Wooster; they agreed to meet me at Ottumwa on the 10th of November, 1857. When I arrived there they had gone home. They left word for me to meet them at Le Roy on the following Monday at 12 o'clock A. M., when we would locate the county seat. John T. Cox and I went to Le Roy on the day appointed, arriving there at 11 o'clock A. M. Evans and Wooster had met there, located the county seat at Le Roy, and gone home. The whole town was drunk. The candidates on the Burlington ticket were Doctor Cutler, myself, and the man whose name I have forgotten; and the Le Roy candidates were Wooster, Evans, and myself. Of course, the Le Roy ticket was elected. Wooster and Evans located the county seat at Le Roy; I had no hand in it. I was sworn in as locating commissioner by Alexander Hamilton, in the timber at Le Roy." Owing to the fact that the territorial authorities were Democratic, in harmony with the politics of the people of Le Roy, it was deemed inexpedient by the Burlington people to contest the election, and therefore nothing was done about it.

By an act of the Territorial Legislature, approved February 12, 1858, the county seat was removed from Le Roy and located, temporarily, at Burlington. The same act also provided for its permanent location by a vote of the people at the next general election (October 4, 1858). From June 5, 1858, until October of that year, the sessions of the Board of Supervisors were held at Hampden, where the County Clerk, Silas Fearl, resided, but all of the other county officials resided and held their offices at Le Roy. The first meeting of the Board of Supervisors held at Burlington was on the 5th of October, 1858. On the 5th of June, 1858, it was ordered by the Supervisors, at their meeting at Hampden, that a jail should be erected at Burlington, "the county seat," but on the 26th of the same month this order was revoked. On the 26th of June, 1858, the Supervisors passed an order directing the County Clerk and Register of Deeds to "remove their respective offices as near the center of the county as can be provided for by the Board of Supervisors." The Board of Supervisors at this time consisted of seven members. Each township had three Trustees, and the Chairman of each township was ex officio, a member of the County Board of Supervisors. The seven municipal townships then in existence were Le Roy, Avon, Ottumwa, Pottawatomie, California, Burlington, and Neosho.

At the election for the permanent location of the county seat held October 4, 1858, the result was as follows:

Precincts.	LeRoy.	Burlington.	Hampden.	Nashville.	Neosho City.
Total	206	191	1	2	1

The foregoing table is taken from the records in the office of the Secretary of State at Topeka. No record of this vote or of any proceedings of the Supervisors in relation to it can be found in the County Clerk's office of Coffey County. For some unexplained cause Le Roy was not officially declared the county-seat, although the county officers continued to hold their offices at that place. On the 7th of March, 1859, Rush Elmore, Judge of the Third Judicial District, arrived at Burlington to hold a session of court for Coffey County. Neither the Clerk nor Sheriff was in attendance, their offices being held at Le Roy. In pursuance of the Judge's order these officials immediately removed to Burlington with their official records and the court was held there. From that time Burlington was officially recognized as the county-seat. March 11, 1859, a peremptory mandamus was issued from Judge Elmore's court, commanding S. J. Bacon, County Recorder, to remove his office to Burlington.

At the session of the Territorial Legislature held in January and February 1860, the boundaries of many county lines were changed and new counties formed for the purpose of giving central locations to towns aspiring to be county seats. Many members of that Legislature were elected on the county line issue. The members of the House from the Twenty-second Representative District, consisting of the counties of Osage and Coffey, at that session were O. H. Sheldon, of Burlingame, Osage County, and Geo. W. Nelson, of Le Roy, Coffey County. On the 1st of February, 1860, Mr. Nelson introduced House Bill No. 174, an act defining the boundaries of Shawnee, Osage, Neosho, Coffey and Woodson counties. The purpose of this bill was fully explained in the minority report of the committee on county lines and county-seats to whom the bill was referred. The majority report recommended the passage of the bill and was signed by E. Lynde, Chairman, James H. Jones and George W. Nelson. The minority report was signed by H. R. Dutton and Thomas Lindsey, and was as follows:

> The undersigned members of the Committee on County and County Lines, respectfully dissent from a report of the majority of the Committee on House Bill No. 174, "An Act defining the boundaries of Shawnee, Osage, Neosho, Coffey and Woodson counties," for the following reasons: First, from a careful consideration of the petition and remonstrances presented upon the subject, we are satisfied that a majority of the people interested are opposed to the proposed change. Second, the bill reduces the size of four important and well organized counties, viz: Jackson, Shawnee, Coffey and Woodson—the latter to the extent that it would be impossible to maintain a county organization, while there is not a single petition from that county asking the proposed change; but, on the other hand, 189 voters out of 200, the whole number in the county, remonstrate against such change. The bill reduces Coffey County from twenty-four to eighteen miles in width, and organizes Neosho County with only fifteen miles in width, subject to settlement, thereby greatly enhancing the expense of supporting these county organizations. Third, we are further satisfied that this whole scheme has for its only object the making of county seats in localities where nothing but this proposed kind of legislation would ever place them, as by the provisions of the bill, three county seats already existing are destroyed and four new ones are established; and, further, that this is but the initiatory step toward carving out the whole territory, for the purpose of building up certain local interests, without regard to the public interests or the public good; and the undersigned respectfully protest against that system of legislation which is continually directed toward some local and in many instances personal interests, to the exclusion of these more important measures which merit and demand our whole time and attention.

The majority report of the committee, recommending the passage of the bill, was rejected by eleven yeas to twenty-one nays. This action on the reports was not had until on the 17th of February, the intervening time between the 1st and the 17th being occupied by the friends and opponents of the bill in laboring with the committee to adopt recommendations favorable to their respective sides. Petitions and remonstrances from the people of every county interested in the bill poured in upon the Legislature.

On the 20th of February Mr. Nelson introduced House Bill No, 411, "An Act to change the boundary between the counties of Coffey and Woodson." This bill proposed to attach six miles from the southern portion of Coffey County to Woodson County and to make Le Roy the temporary county seat, February 23 this bill passed the house by thirty yeas to two nays. The members voting in the affirmative were Messrs. Brown, Brooks, Chandler, Caniff, Cornwell, Cave, Dutton, Elliott, Fitzpatrick, Heath, Jones, Lombard, Lindsey, Murphy, McMath, Martin, Noel, Nelson, Parks, Pierce, Robertson, Reynolds, Steward, Sims, Shively, Sheldon, Scott, Sopris, Whitehead, Wagstaff and Mr. Speaker.

Those voting in the negative were Messrs. Bartlett and Wood.

February 25, in the Territorial Council, James M. Hendry and Chester Thomas submitted a majority report on House Bill No. 411, recommending its indefinite postponement. C. G. Keeler submitted a minority report, recommending its passage without amendment. The majority report was adopted by eight ayes to five nays. The councilmen voting in the affirmative were Messrs. Benton, Hendry, Mathias, Palmer, Stewart, Thomas, Woodward and Mr. President (Updegraff). Those voting in the negative were Messrs. Beebe, Christison, Elder, Keeler and Lambden.

Mr. Nelson then introduced a bill providing for another "permanent location" of the county seat of Coffey County, which passed the House but was defeated in the Senate.

This brief history of the effort to change the boundaries of Coffey County has been given here to show the cause of the many conflicts that occurred in this county on the county seat question. Le Roy and Ottumwa had hopes of so dividing the county as to make both places the centers of new counties that might be established by such division. Subsequent efforts were made to change the county lines, but they were always thwarted by the opposition of Burlington before they assumed any formidable proportions.

In April, 1861, another act for the "permanent location" of the county seat of Coffey County was passed by the State Legislature. The bill was introduced by Dr. G. A. Cutler, of Le Roy, and the act was approved April 30. The first election under the act was held June 11, which resulted as follows:

	Le Roy	Burlington	Hampden
Hampden	1	3	41
Nashville	37	1	31
California	0	22	34

No town having received a majority of the votes, another election was held November 5, at which Le Roy received 303 votes, Burlington 275 and Hampden 1. No record by precinct is given of this vote. January 7, 1862, the board of County Commissioners met at Le Roy. Neither the County Clerk, I. E. Olney, nor his official records appearing, Dr. J. Jenks was appointed clerk pro tem. who served as such through that session of the board. At the next meeting of the board, April 7, Mr. Olney was in attendance and recorded its proceedings. Other county officials, however refused to recognize Le Roy as the county seat and did not remove their offices thither. Suits were instituted against them compelling the removal of their offices to Le Roy and a suit was also instituted against Ahijah Jones, District Clerk, compelling him to remove his office from Le Roy to Burlington. These were mandamus suits. The petition for the mandamus against Jones was heard by Judge R. M. Ruggles during a session of the court at Le Roy, August 21 1862. The case was entitled "State of Kansas on the relation of B. L. Kingsbury and F. A. Atherly vs. Ahijah Jones Clerk of the District Court of Coffey County; petition for mandamus." The petition was granted and a writ of peremptory mandamus was ordered, commanding Mr Jones to remove his office forthwith to Burlington. The ground upon which this petition was granted was that the County Commissioners having failed to publish a proclamation for a second election on the county seat, the second election was void. The judge therefore decided that Burlington was still the county seat. In vindication of the commissioners it may be stated that the required proclamation was ordered by them to be published in the Neosho Valley Register at Burlington, and a copy of the proclamation was handed by the County Clerk, in timely season, to the editor, who left the copy on a composing stand while absent at dinner. Upon his return the copy was missing. He immediately notified the County Clerk of the loss and requested another copy but it was never furnished. Mr. Jones took an appeal to the Supreme Court and was allowed to retain his office at Le Roy upon his filing a bond in the sum of $200. In pursuance of this decision of the judge, at a special session of the Board of County Commissioners, held at Le Roy, August 26, the following order was passed:

> It is ordered by the Board that the County Clerk County Treasurer, Register of Deeds, Sheriff and Probate Judge immediately proceed to occupy the several offices provided for them in the town of Burlington, which is decided to be the county seat of the county of Coffey by the District Court for said county. Said offices to be held in the upper and lower rooms of Kingsbury's building, in said town, and the County Clerk is requested to notify said officers of said order.
>
> I. E. OLNEY County Clerk.
>
> HARDIN MCMAHON,
> R. B. WOODWORTH.

A. A. Burr, the other commissioner, was present, but did not sign the order.

The next meeting of the Board of County Commissioners was held at Burlington, October 6, 1862. All of the county officers, with the exception of District Clerk, had removed their offices to Burlington. At the January, 1863, term of the Supreme Court of the State, the decision of Judge Ruggles in the mandamus case was affirmed. Ahijah Jones thereupon removed his office to Burlington, February 16, 1863. The District Court, Judge Ruggles presiding, met at Burlington, and that session of the February term was held there.

April 7, 1863, in pursuance of a petition of three-fifths of the voters of the county, another election was ordered to be held on the 19th of May, 1863, for the "permanent location" of the county seat of Coffey County. The election resulted as follows:

PRECINCTS.	Burlington	Hampden.	Ottumwa.	Spring Creek.
Avon	5	69	0	0
Pottawatomie	0	14	1	0

Hampden having received a majority of all the votes cast, was duly declared the county seat by the County Commissioners, May 23, 1863. The first session of the Board of County Commissioners at Hampden was held in August, 1863.

The next election for the "permanent location" of the county seat of Coffey County was held November 7, 1865, in pursuance of a proclamation ordering the same, issued by the County Commissioners October 3. A petition for the election, signed by three-fifths of the voters, had previously been presented to the Board. The result of this election was as follows:

Precincts.	Burlington.	Hampden.	Ottumwa.
Hampden	18	36	1
Neosho	36	4	2
Ottumwa	6	11	83
Pottawatomie	6	8	0
Total	219	191	165

No town having received a majority of the votes, another election, to be confined to the two points receiving the highest number of votes at the first election, was ordered by the County Commissioners to be held November 21, 1865. This election resulted as follows:

Precincts.	Burlington.	Hampden.	Ottumwa.
Total	342	289	1

November 25, 1865, Burlington was declared the county seat by the Board of County Commissioners. January 1, 1866, the Board of County Commissioners met in the upper story of the Hurlbut building, in Burlington. This story was rented one year for county offices for $100.

October 26, 1866, the County Commissioners issued an order for another election for the permanent location of the county seat of Coffey County, to be held December 4, in pursuance to a petition for such an election, signed by three-fifths of the voters. The result of this election was as follows:

Precincts.	Burlington.	Ottumwa.	Hampden.	Blank.
Total	328	330	2	1

No town having received a majority of the votes, another election was ordered by the County Commissioners, to be held December 18, 1866, which resulted as follows:

Precincts.	Burlington.	Ottumwa.	Blank.
Nashville	28	32	0

Burlington was proclaimed the county seat by the County Commissioners on the 22d of December, 1866.

This was the last election for the "permanent location" of the county seat of Coffey County. The county seat has remained at Burlington since November 25, 1865. The main cause of the many elections on this question was the hope of the people of Le Roy and Ottumwa of dividing the county, as has been previously stated. It was believed by them that by locating the county seat either at Le Roy or Ottumwa the prospect of so dividing the county as to make both towns centres of new counties, would be strengthened. Again there were other people who assisted in keeping the agitation alive for mercenary motives. A county seat election afforded them opportunities of selling their votes and influence to the highest bidder. At the last election a contract was made between the managers in the interest of Burlington and a Le Roy man, whereby the latter was to receive $50 for every vote cast at Le Roy for Burlington. Six votes for Burlington were clandestinely cast at Le Roy at that time, for which the "party of the second part" received $300. These county seat elections reeked with corruption, and all interested parties and participants were more or less tainted with it.

RAILROAD HISTORY.

The first Territorial Legislature, at its session at the Shawnee Mission in the summer of 1855, chartered the South Kansas Railroad Company. The road was to commence at the boundary line between Missouri and Kansas, directly west of Springfield, Mo., and run to the west line of the territory, so as to extend the southern branch of the Pacific railroad in the direction of California. This road, if built, would necessarily have run through the centre of Coffey County. During that same session of the Territorial Legislature a charter was granted to the "Central Railroad Company of Kansas Territory," the road of which was to commence at Roseport, opposite St. Joseph, Mo., and run southwest to Lecompton, and from thence southward via the Neosho valley, in the direction of Galveston Bay. These were the two first railroads chartered that proposed running through Coffey County. February 12, 1858, the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Fort Gibson Railroad Company was chartered by the Territorial Legislature. This road was to commence at Leavenworth and run to Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, via Lawrence and Minneola, with a branch commencing at the crossing of Deer Creek, in Allen County, and running from thence up the Neosho valley to Fort Riley. This company was organized December 10, 1857, at Leavenworth, and Dr. J. B. Chapman was its first president. Burlington was the headquarters of the Neosho valley branch, and a preliminary survey of this entire branch was made during the summer of 1858, and some grading was also done on the road in Coffey County that year, to save the charter. This was the first railroad work ever done in Coffey County. June 14, 1858, the Jefferson City & Neosho Valley Railroad Company was chartered. This company was authorized to construct a railroad through the counties of Linn, Anderson, Coffey and Breckinridge, in the Territory of Kansas, beginning at a point on the Missouri State line to be determined by the company, and to continue the Osage Valley & Southern Kansas Railroad, chartered by the Missouri Legislature and approved November, 1857, and running thence westward ninety miles, via Moneka, in Linn County, Hyatt, in Anderson County, Hampden and Ottumwa, in Coffey County, to Emporia, in Breckinridge County. The first Directors were Josiah Lamb, John O. Wattles, Augustus Wattles, R. Gilpatrick, W. F. M. Arny, W. L. Webster, Moses E. Grimes, W. A. Ela, John T. Cox, G. W. Brown, E. P. Bancroft, Marcus J. Parrott, and J. W. Denver. The first officers were as follows: W. F. M. Arny, president; E. P. Bancroft, vice president; John T. Cox, secretary; John O. Wattles, treasurer. Meetings in the interest of this road were frequently held at points along the proposed line and the president made visits to Washington to obtain aid from the general government to assist in the work of building the road. The war killed the project. February 5, 1860, the Fort Scott, Neosho & Sante Fe Railroad Company was chartered. The road was to commence at the boundary line between Kansas and Missouri, east of Fort Scott, where the same shall be intersected by the Fort Scott branch of the Tebo and Neosho road and run westerly via Fort Scott, the valley of the Marmaton, to a point in the western or southern boundary of the Territory of Kansas, in the direction of Santa Fe, by the most feasible route. Corporators: William R. Judson, H. T. Wilson, A. G. Osborn, George A. Crawford, C. W. Blair, A. Ellison, B. L. Riggins, J. H. Couch, E. S. Lowman, William R. Griffith, J. A. Smith, John Vetetoe, T. P. Killen, Jesse Parsons, Jr., P. G. D. Morton, J. C. Lambden, G. T. Donaldson, H. Brownson, N. B. Blanton and Isaac Tibbetts. February 27, 1860, was chartered the Olathe and Southern Kansas Railroad Company. The road was to commence at or near Olathe, in Johnson County, and run to some point on the southern boundary of the Territory, via Peoria, Burlington and Chelsea. Corporators: Isaiah Walker, Ed. S. Nash, Alfred Johnson, A. D. Downs, L. S. Cornwell, J. E. Hayes, O. E. Learnard, William P. Overton, Charles G. Keeler, William Donalson, James McGrew, Thomas H. Swoap, P. P. Elder, J. M. Hendry, J. C. Lambden, G. D. Donaldson and P. G. D. Morton. February 27, 1860, was chartered the Western Railroad Company. The road was to connect with the Jefferson City and Neosho Valley Railroad at Hampden, and run southwesterly via Chelsea to the southern boundary of the Territory. Corporators: John J. Sanders, Charles Morse, John Russell, Isaac Sanders, David Grimes, W. A. Ela, John M. Espy, Alva Townsend, H. Brownson, J. C. Lambden, P. G. D. Morton, Perry Woodruff and William Tulk. February 27, 1860, was chartered the State Line, Osawatomie and Fort Union Railroad Company. The road was to commence at some point of Lykins County, and run southwesterly to the south boundary of the Territory, in the direction of Fort Union. Corporators: E. W. Robinson, John B. Schofield, A. Hunt, R. Gilpatrick, W. F. M. Arny, John T. Cox, O. E. Learnard, G. W. Nelson, J. C. Lambden, Dr. Ashmore, Thomas Lindsey, William L. Webster, Penrose Johnston and P. G. D. Morton. February 27, 1860, was chartered the Missouri River, Southern Kansas, Fort Union and Pacific Telegraph Company, which proposed the construction of a telegraph line from Jefferson City, Mo, through Southern Kansas and Fort Union to the Pacific ocean. Corporators: John B. Scott, G. W. Nelson, John T. Cox, W. A. Ela, W. F. M. Arny, D. W. Houston, William Spriggs, William L. Webster, Augustus Wattles, Andrew Stark, R. B. Mitchell, J. B. Huggins, C S. Lambden, P. G. Barrett, H. Brownson, P. G. D Morton and G. T. Donaldson. February 27, 1860, was chartered the Topeka and Southern Kansas Railroad Company, which proposed the construction of a road from Topeka to the southern boundary of the State, in the direction of Galveston via Burlingame, Superior, and Ottumwa. Corporators: Loring Farnsworth, John Ritchie, P. C. Schuyler, J. M. Winchell, John T. Cox, Lyman Allen, J. A. Smith and J. D. Carney. The Topeka, Burlington & Verdigris R. R. Co. was chartered July 16, 1869, with the following Board of Directors: S. S. Prouty, J. M. Rankin, Harrison Kelley, P.C. Schuyler, M. M. Murdock, J. Mather Jones, H. J. Gregory, J. A. Coffey Andrew Akin, T. H. Walker. Corporators: S. S. Prouty, C. K. Holliday, John Guthrie, T. H. Walker and L. C. Wilmarth. This road was to commence at Topeka and run to the south line of the State, via Burlington. Coffey County voted to issue bonds to the amount of $150,000 in exchange for stock in this road, and Wilson County voted to issue $200,000. The panic of 1873 killed the enterprise. November 8, 1878, the Kansas City, Burlington & Southwestern Railway and Telegraph Co. was chartered with the following Board of Directors: W. H. Schofield, Joseph P. Hale, Alfred R. Fisk, Charles H. Stone, Henry L. Chandler, Samuel Fisk, Orson Kent, A. B. Schofield, James Houston, E. C. Manning and Edwin Tucker. This road was to commence at Kansas City, Mo., and run through the counties of Johnson, Miami, Franklin, Coffey, Woodson, Wilson, Elk, Chautauqua, Butler, Cowley, Sumner, Harper and Barber, and if necessary through other counties to some point on the south line of the State. None of these roads were constructed. About all of the work that was done on the most of them was in drafting the charters and completing the organizations.

Missouri Pacific Railway, Neosho Division.—On the 25th of September, 1865, the Union Pacific Railway Company, Southern Branch, was chartered, with the following board of directors: Robert McBratney, James R. McClure, T. S. Huffaker, S. M. Strickler, G. M. Simcock, R. B. Lockwood, E. Goddard, R. H. Abraham, B. B. Maxson, J. H. Watson, G. R. Harper, Peter Harvey, M. M. Baker, John T. Cox, Harrison Kelley, F. W. Potter, John B. Scott, S.S. Prouty, A. V. Coffin, N. S. Goss, Isaac N. Dow, and James Crane. The charter contemplated the construction of a railroad from some point at or near Fort Riley, Kansas, to New Orleans, La., crossing the southern boundary of the State near the Neosho river. November 3, 1865, the directors effected an organization at Emporia by the election of officers as follows: J. H. Watson, president; N. S. Goss, vice-president; S. S. Prouty, secretary; Robert McBratney, corresponding secretary; P. B. Maxson, treasurer. The complete history of this road is given in another part of this work, in the general history of Kansas. Only that portion which affects Coffey County will be mentioned here. Work on the road was commenced at Junction City in the winter of 1868–69, and in January, 1870, the locomotive entered Coffey County. February 22, 1870, the completion of the road to Burlington was celebrated, in a most imposing manner, by an assemblage of thousands of people. A portion of the multitude was an excursion party of six hundred people from Topeka and intervening points, which came on a special train of twelve cars. The entire legislature, including its officers, and also all of the State officers, were of the excursion party. A band of music accompanied the excursionists from Topeka. The party went to Junction City over the Kansas Pacific Railway, and from thence to Burlington over the Southern Branch. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad was not at that time completed to Emporia. The excursion party, upon its arrival at Burlington at 4 P. M. was greeted at the depot by the thundering of artillery and shouts from two thousand throats. The hungry excursionists were immediately ushered into an immense tabernacle, where dinner was served. In the evening a meeting was held in the Episcopal Church, which was presided over by F. A. Atherly, president of the village. Addresses were made by Gov. Harvey, John R. Goodin, Byron Sherry, T. Dwight Thacher, Judge Kingman and others. The excursionists remained in the village that night and departed at 8 o'clock the next day. There were not as many inhabitants in Burlington at that time, as there were people in the excursion party.

On the 29th of June, 1867, the people of Coffey County voted to subscribe for stock to the amount of $200,000, and to authorize the Board of County Commissioners to issue bonds therefor, to the Union Pacific Railway Company, Southern Branch. On the 14th of November, 1868, the railway company assigned these bonds and all other franchises which they possessed to the Land Grant Railway & Trust Company, in consideration of an agreement of the said Land Grant Railway & Trust Company to build, equip and operate a railroad from Junction City to the south line of the State. The Land Grant Railway & Trust Company was chartered by the State of Pennsylvania, which was authorized to do business in any State, Territory or Country, except Pennsylvania. It was this company that built and operated the road. In the spring of 1870, when this company demanded the $200,000 of bonds of Coffey County the commissioners refused to deliver them, on the ground that the Land Grant Railway & Trust Company had no legal existence outside of the State of Pennsylvania, which had created the organization. Mandamus proceedings were instituted in the supreme court against the County Commissioners, and at the July term, 1870, the writ of mandamus was refused, the supreme court sustaining the position of the County Commissioners. Coffey County thus evaded the issuance of these bonds.

In 1869 the name of the Union Pacific Railway Company, Southern Branch, was changed to Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company. August 13, 1880, this company was consolidated with the Missouri Pacific system, and that portion of the road between Junction City and Parsons is now known as the Neosho Division of the Missouri Pacific Railway.

Missouri Pacific Railway Company, Arizona Division.—February 29, 1869, the Paola & Fall River Railroad Company was chartered. The charter provided for the construction of a railroad from Paola to Fall River, via Garnett and Neosho Falls. Subsequently the route was changed, substituting Le Roy for Neosho Falls. A portion of the road bed was graded at an early day, and some townships in Coffey County issued bonds in exchange for stock in the enterprise. Owing to financial embarrassments the company failed and work on the road was abandoned. January 16, 1879, a charter was granted to the St. Louis, Kansas & Arizona Railway Company, one division of which was to commence at or near a point in the county of Miami, where the eastern boundary line of Kansas was intersected by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, and to run southwesterly through the State via Coffey County. This company purchased the old road bed of the Paola & Fall River Company and completed the road to Le Roy January 11, 1880. August 13, 1880, this road was absorbed by the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, and is now known as the Arizona Division of the Missouri Pacific. July 1, 1880, bonds were issued in exchange for stock in this company, as follows: Avon Township, $2,000; Le Roy Township, $35,180; Le Roy city, $20,866; Spring Creek Township, $16,580; total $74,-606.

Ottawa & Burlington Railroad.—The Kansas City, Burlington & Santa Fe Railway Company was chartered February 4, 1870, with a board of incorporators as follows: John M. Rankin, John T. Cox, L. W. Morey, F. A. Atherly, P. S. Patton, Charles Puffer, Orson Kent, H. L. Jarboe, Job Throckmorton, D. P. Metcalf, J. M. Lane, Theodore C. Bowles, A. M. Blair, Daniel De Ford, James Robb, J. W. Magee and Noah Pixler. The charter provided for the construction of a railroad from Kansas City, Mo., to some point in southwestern Kansas, in the direction of Santa Fe, N. M., via Ottawa, Burlington and Eureka: This road was completed to Burlington April 1, 1878. On the 31st of March, 1877, bonds of Coffey County to the amount of $100,000 were issued to the company in exchange for stock. The completion of the road to Burlington was celebrated in an enthusiastic manner by the citizens of that city. An excursion party from Kansas City, numbering about one hundred people, including the Board of Trade of that city participated in the celebration. A twelve-pound Parrott gun was burst during the firing of a salute in honor of the excursionists. On the return of the excursion party to Kansas City the next day, they were accompanied by several hundred people from Burlington and neighboring localities. January 17, 1881, this road was sold at Sheriff's sale, at Ottowa, to Alden Speare, Charles S. Tuckerman and Lucius M. Sargent. February 19, 1881, these gentlemen, together with George H. Nettleton, J. S. Ford, J. B. Emmert, Ira Harris, M. E. Jones and John W. De Ford, formed a new corporation for the operation of this road, under the name of Ottawa & Burlington Railroad Company. It is now operated by the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad Company, which is a part of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad system.

Prospective Railroads.—The St. Louis & Emporia Railway Company was chartered February 2, 1881, with a board of directors as follows: H. C. Cross, C. Hood, William Martindale, Van R. Holmes and L. T. Heritage. The charter authorizes the construction of a road from Emporia to the eastern boundary of Kansas in the direction of St. Louis via the counties of Coffey, Anderson and Linn. Burlington is assured of being a point on this road. The Nebraska, Topeka, Iola & Memphis Railway Company was chartered June 17, 1881, with a board of directors as follows: F. W. Giles, P. G. Noell, T. B. Swett, H. L. Northrup, J. H. Richards, George A. Bowlus, J. D. Hill, Caleb H. Malin and B. F. Hobart. The charter authorizes the construction of a road commencing at some point at or near Topeka and running in a southerly direction through the counties of Shawnee, Osage, Allen, Neosho and Crawford to some point on the east line of Crawford County, in the direction of Memphis, Tenn. January, 1882, Coffey County voted to issue $125,000 in bonds in exchange for stock in this company. The Kansas & Nebraska Central Railway Company was chartered August 1, 1882, with a board of directors as follows: T. L. Wilson, A. M. Ayers, Ira D. Bronson, Loring Farnsworth, J. M. Davies, L. H. Garden and D. H. Horne. The charter authorizes the construction of a road from Fort Scott to Topeka, via Waverly in Coffey County.

MILITARY HISTORY.

When the first call was made for volunteers for the Union army in the late war the men of Coffey County responded promptly. Company G of the Fifth Kansas Cavalry was mostly made up at Ottumwa and Le Roy, and Company E of the same regiment, from about Burlington and vicinity. Many enlisted in the Ninth Kansas Cavalry and other regiments. In September, 1861, nearly every able-bodied man in the county rallied to Fort Lincoln, Bourbon County, in response to a call for aid from Gen. Lane, of the Kansas Brigade, who was expecting an attack by the rebel army that had just defeated Lyon at Wilson's Creek. All of the clothing and camp and garrison equipage that was designed for the First and Second Kansas Regiments, valued at $1,000,000, was in store at Fort Lincoln. Those regiments were at that time with Gen. Sturgis in Missouri, and it was suspected by Gen. Lane that the rebels, after their victory at Springfield, designed seizing the stores that were in transitu from Fort Leavenworth to Sturgis' army for the Kansas regiments. A detachment from the rebel army, under Gen. Rains, did come within a few miles of Fort Scott, where it was met and repulsed by Lane's brigade. The volunteers from Coffey County and other portions of the Neosho Valley defended Fort Lincoln and labored on the earthwork, while Lane and his brigade were at the front. In May, 1862, the First and Second Indian regiments were organized at Le Roy from Refugee Indians. In 1861, Col. W. G. Coffin, of Indiana, had been appointed Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the Southern Superintendency. The headquarters of that superintendency were at Tahlequah, Indian Territory. In the fall of that year he attempted to go to his headquarters with $60,000 in gold for the Cherokee Indians in a Government ambulance, and with a small army escort. From the Osage Mission he was accompanied to Crawford Seminary by Father Schoenmaker, the founder of the Osage Mission. Deeming it unsafe to proceed further, Col. Coffin sent word to John Ross, principal chief of the Cherokees at Tahlequah, that the money for the Cherokees was at Crawford Seminary and could be obtained upon application for it at that place by Mr. Ross. After waiting several days and receiving neither a visit from Mr. Ross or agent, nor any message from him, the Colonel grew uneasy. Upon the urgent request of a scout named Bill Brooks (a nephew of Preston S. Brooks, of South Carolina) the Colonel turned back and went to Washington, and subsequent events proved that his retreat was made none to soon, as Mr. Ross was scheming to capture the Colonel and money, with the probable intention of appropriating the money to his personal use. During Col. Coffin's absence in Washington several thousand Indians from the Indian Territory, who had been driven from their homes by rebel Indians, took refuge on the Verdigris River, near the present town of Coyville. They arrived there during the months of November and December, 1861. Their leader was Opothleoholo, a Creek, who had fought Jackson in the Creek war in Georgia, and who was believed to be over one hundred years old at the time of this exodus. Two or three severe battles were fought in the Indian Territory between these refugees and the rebel Indians. They were accompanied on their march by their squaws and papooses. Their only means of transportation were ponies. Their sufferings were intense, and many died from exposure and hunger.

Col. Coffin having succeeded in securing the removal of his headquarters from Tahlequah to Le Roy, removed the refugees to that place during the winter of 1861-'62. The tribes represented there were Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Seminole, Chickasaw, Uchee, Quawpaw, Keechi, Southern Shawnee, and Southern Delaware. The refugees numbered about 8,000 souls. In May, 1862, the First and Second Indian Regiments were organized at Le Roy. The field and staff officers were white men, and those of the First Indian Regiment were as follows: Robert W. Furnas (since Governor of Nebraska) Colonel; Stephen H. Wattles, Lieutenant Colonel; William A. Phillips, Major; J. H. Gilpatrick, First Lieutenant and Adjutant; S. S. Prouty, First Lieutenant and Quartermaster. Lieut. Prouty served as Quartermaster until February 28, 1863, when he was relieved by Lieut. John T. Cox, who served until September, 1863. Lieut. Prouty then succeeded Lieut. Cox and filled the position until mustered out, October 12, 1864. John Chess, of Le Roy, was commissioned First Lieutenant and Adjutant May 28, 1863, and served as such until the regiment was mustered out. The field and staff officers of the Second Indian Regiment were as follows: John Ritchie, Colonel; David Corwin, Lieutenant Colonel; M. B. C. Wright, Major; E. W. Robinson, Adjutant; George Huston, Quartermaster; Charles Brown, of Coffey County, First Lieutenant; and Jule C. Cayot, of the same county, was Second Lieutenant in the Third Indian Regiment, which was subsequently organized in the Indian Territory. Most of the teamsters of the First Indian Regiment were citizen employees, and were residents of Coffey County. Charles Puffer, of Burlington, served six months under Lieut. Prouty in the capacity of Quartermaster Sergeant, though he was never mustered into the service. During the campaign in the Indian Territory, during the summer of 1862, over one-half of the soldiers of the First Indian Regiment deserted and returned to Le Roy owing to the want of military discipline. In November of that year Lieut. Prouty was ordered by Gen. Blunt, commanding the army of the frontier, then operating in northwestern Arkansas, to go to Coffey County and make an effort to induce the deserters to return to their command. The Lieutenant, accompanied by Sergt. Puffer and a couple of Indian soldiers, proceeded to Burlington, and there established his headquarters. A supply train, filled with commissary stores and clothing, followed him from Fort Scott. By good tact and management on the part of Lieut. Prouty and his assistants, all of the deserters were soon in camp in Burlington and over a hundred new men enlisted. About six hundred Indian soldiers were encamped at Burlington, with only one white officer to command them. The Lieutenant divided his command into four companies, over which he placed an Indian commissioned officer, supplied his men with clothing, arms and rations, marched his men a distance of two hundred and fifty miles, and delivered them to the regiment at Rhea's Mill, Arkansas, without the desertion of a man. The biggest half of the regiment was with him, and the only white assistant he had was Sergt. Puffer. His command served as an escort to a supply train from Fort Scott to Rhea's Mill. He was absent from his regiment less than two months. Coffey County furnished other officers during the war as follows: O. E. Learnard, Lieutenant Colonel of the First Kansas; W. A. Jenkins, Lieutenant Colonel of the Fifth Kansas; S. R. Harrington, Major of the Fifth Kansas; Harrison Kelley, Captain Company B Fifth Kansas; James S. Hunt, Captain Company E Fifth Kansas; H. N. F. Reed, Captain Company I Ninth Kansas; Clark McKay and George W. S. Bell, Captains Company F Twelfth Kansas; George W. Stevens, First Lieutenant and Commissary Fifth Kansas; James M. Lane, First Lieutenant Company E Fifth Kansas; Ansel D. Brown, First Lieutenant Company F Fifth Kansas; William E. McGinnis, First Lieutenant Company K Fifth Kansas; James M. Heddens, First Lieutenant Company K Fifth Kansas; Charles Cochrane, First Lieutenant Company F Twelfth Kansas; Delos Miller, Second Lieutenant Company H Fifth Kansas; William J. Brewer, Second Lieutenant Company K Fifth Kansas; John M. Singer, Second Lieutenant Company H Ninth Kansas; Allen Crocker, Second Lieutenant Company F Twelfth Kansas. During the Price Raid in October, 1864, the Sixteenth Regiment Kansas State Militia, seven companies of which were of Coffey County, went to the front and did honorable service throughout the campaign. The field and staff officers of the regiment were as follows: F. W. Potter, Colonel; N. S. Goss, Lieutenant Colonel; William B. Perry, Major; S. C. Junkins, First Lieutenant and Adjutant; Orson Kent, First Lieutenant and Quartermaster. William Manson, Surgeon. The line officers of Coffey County were as follows: Company A, Joseph Jenks, Captain; D. H. Holt, First Lieutenant; N. C. Terrill, Second Lieutenant. Company B, A. A. Burr, Captain; George Quincy, First Lieutenant; Theodore O'Leary, Second Lieutenant. Company C, Curtis Phillips, Captain; John A. Robinson, First Lieutenant; William B. Perry, Second Lieutenant. Company D, James A. Stewart, Captain; Payton Casner, First Lieutenant; Asa Whitney, Second Lieutenant. Company E, Mark McLean, Captain; J. S. Harrell, First Lieutenant; Joseph Leabo, Second Lieutenant. Company I, John Douglas, Captain; Samuel J. Carter, First Lieutenant; Warren Crandall, Second Lieutenant. Company K, Charles Puffer, Captain; Job Throckmorton, First Lieutenant; Thomas Arnold, Second Lieutenant. During the Price Raid, Lieut. Prouty served on the staff of Maj. Gen. Curtis, who commanded the Army of the Border.

RECORD OF CRIMES, CASUALTIES, ETC.

September, 1857, Dr. Hamilton Smith, committed suicide at Ottumwa, with a shot gun.

December, 1857, Leonidas Williamson, while attempting to walk across the Neosho River on ice, at the mouth of Lebo Creek, broke through and was drowned.

April, 1858, a man named Claywell, hanged at Le Roy, by a miscellaneous collection of citizens, by order of a Squatter's Court, he having been convicted by that court of the crime of horse stealing.

In the fall of 1858, Alexander Hamilton killed John Haney, in a shooting affray at Le Roy. Hamilton was examined before a Justice's Court and acquitted.

July 20, 1860, Victor Moquett, shot through the head by a rifle ball and killed, on South Big Creek. The fatal shot was fired by Dr. William Brown. The parties were deer hunting alone. The doctor claimed that the killing was an accident, the ball having struck a large stone, from which it glanced and lodged in Moquett's head. No coroner's inquest was held, nor did the doctor have a legal examination.

October, 1860, William Shaw and E. A. Green, of Burlington, murdered by Osage Indians, at a camp on the Cimmeron River. In the camp were William Shaw, A. E. Green, A. G. Holland, Andrew Franklin, Jr., Austin Higley and Isaac Yingling, all of Coffey County. They left Burlington October 15, 1860, with two wagons, each drawn by a span of horses, a supply of forage and provisions, and three extra horses. They were on a buffalo hunt. When the camp was attacked, all escaped and fled to another camp of white men, twenty miles distant, except Shaw and Green. The escaped party returned the next day, with assistance, but found nothing but the dead body of Shaw, whose head had been severed from the body and placed upright on his breast. Green and all the property were missing, and were never heard of since.

June 10, 1861, Mary Wiley and her son William, aged about six years, murdered in bed, during the night. Their bodies were hacked to pieces. The murdered parties lived in a small house on the farm of John Johnson, about two miles west of Le Roy, south of the river. Mr. Johnson's family lived in another house, on the same farm. Mrs. Wiley was supposed to be a mistress of the senior Johnson. William Harrison Johnson and Wesley Johnson, sons of John Johnson, of mature years, were missing after the murder. They were indicted by the Grand Jury of Coffey County, on the charge of being the murderers, and Matilda Johnson was also indicted on the charge of an accessory after the fact. Matilda appeared before the October term of the court, was tried and acquitted. Her brothers did not appear, having never been seen after the murder. Shortly after the trial of Matilda, the whole family disappeared.

March 28, 1862, Joseph P. Moore, found dead in his wagon, on the prairie, two miles from his home, in Pottawatomie Township, near the Glenwood schoolhouse. He left his home on the 14th of March, with a wagon and a span of horses, to go to LeRoy to get some grist. Failing to return home that day, as was expected, his friends supposed he had gone to the Verdigris to do some hauling for the refugee Indians. When found, his body was devoid of clothing, his head was hairless, his bed clothing was chawed into rags, and the wagon-box was gnawed to the bed. These devastations had been done by his horses, hitched to the wagon, in their efforts to appease their hunger. One horse was standing and the other lay dead. It is supposed that Mr. Moore got lost on the prairie, and that his death was caused by a congestive chill, to which he was subject. While he was lying in the slumber of death on the bleak prairie, his friends at home elected him to the office of Justice of the Peace, a position he was holding at the time of his decease.

September 25, 1862, William Hamilton, killed Addison Vandever, near Le Roy, during a fight between the two parties at a horse race. Hamilton struck Vandever a fatal blow on the head with a board. August 22, 1864, Hamilton was convicted of manslaughter in the third degree, and sentenced to an imprisonment of three months in the County Jail.

In the spring of 1863 William Gibson, drowned by the sinking of a ferry-boat, in the attempt to cross the river at Burlington.

September 13, 1864, C. R. Key's residence, on his farm near Burlington, destroyed by fire, with all of its contents, including a valuable law and miscellaneous library. Loss, $10,000.

September 17, 1864, a negro named Sam, disemboweled by a negro named Smith, during a drunken frolic at a dance at Nichols' farmhouse in Neosho Township, five miles south of Burlington. Smith was then shot through the head and killed by another negro. Sam died the next day. All of the surviving parties were brought before Abijah Jones, Justice of the Peace at Le Roy, on Monday, August 19, but owing to his inability to disentangle the evidence, the matter was referred to the people, who ordered the entire mob to leave the county. The order was obeyed.

February 2, 1865, William Hastings, of Franklin County, murdered by an Indian named Wa-tee-chee, near Pottawatomie Creek, Coffey County. Hastings was riding in a lumber wagon when he was shot by the Indian, who approached on horseback, in the rear. Hastings, after he was shot, went to place his wallet, containing $500 in money, under a bag of corn, when his murderer fled, supposing Hastings was reaching for a pistol. Hastings drove two miles to a farmhouse, where he died the following night. Money was the motive for the murder but the murderer did not get it. Wa-tee-chee was hanged for this murder at Lawrence, January 19, 1866.

March 12, 1865, the residence of Rev. Peter Remer, at Burlington, occupied by the family of F. A. Atherly, destroyed by fire. Household goods saved; loss $2,000.

April 13, 1865, the wife of Sam Bull, colored, shot through the head and killed by a ball fired through the window from the outside at the house of her brother-in-law, Rufus, in Neosho Township. The murderer was supposed to be her husband, with whom she would not live.

May 8, 1865, the safe of the store of the Perry Brothers, at Le Roy, broken into and robbed of $6,000 in money.

August 21, 1865, a German named Shank drowned while attempting to cross the Neosho River at Hamilton's Crossing, in a wagon drawn by a span of horses. Everything lost.

November 25, 1865, Lewis Clark, a white man, shot a negro woman named Curry, on his farm, three miles northwest of Le Roy, and then fired a shot at her son, John. Mrs. Curry and her son were attempting to release some hogs, owned by them, which Clark had confined in an enclosure on his premises. John returned the fire, which instantly killed Clark, and then ran away. A party of men and boys from Le Roy hanged John's wife to a tree, with the expectation of extracting from her information of the whereabouts of her husband, but she stoutly denied any knowledge of his hiding place. She was released without material injury. The elder Mrs. Curry recovered from her wounds. John subsequently returned and is now a respected farmer, living with his wife near Ottumwa.

January 7, 1866, the wife of Luther Hewlett, of Hampden, killed by a fall from a horse near the residence of Mr. McQuiston, in Eagle Creek, California Township.

February 28, 1866, John M. Singer, of Ottumwa, robbed of $185 in money by two highwaymen, after the exchange of several shots, a few miles this side of the Verdigris River.

March 13, 1866, destruction by fire of the residence of J. H. Howard, at Burlington. Loss, $1,000.

May 24, 1866, Jerome A. Smith, died at Le Roy, from injuries received by the kick of a horse, May 20.

September 8, 1866, visitation from grasshoppers.

November 23, 1866, destruction by fire of the residence, with all of its contents, of W. E. Grimes, in Avon Township. Loss, $1,500. During the previous summer he suffered a heavy pecuniary loss by a freshet. October 11, an infant son died; November 10, his dry kiln, filled with finishing walnut lumber for the Episcopal Church at Burlington, was destroyed by fire, involving a loss to him of $500.

May 24, 1866, John Brashier, aged thirteen, drowned while bathing in the river, near the ferry crossing at Burlington.

April 5, 1867, an infant son of John Russell, in Avon Township, killed by a fall from a rocking-chair.

August 29, 1869, Wilson Hamilton, shot and killed by Jack Taylor, in Burlington, during a family quarrel. Both were colored. Taylor was convicted of manslaughter in the second degree and sent to the penitentiary, where he died before the expiration of his sentence.

September 1, 1869, David Watrous, of Coffey County, killed by the explosion of a steam boiler at Timbered Hill, Labette County.

January 12, 1870, Lewis Highland, aged twenty-four, hanged to death from the crotch of a tree, into which he had been thrown by the sudden rolling of a tree top lying on the ground, which he was trimming, on the farm of Hardin McMahon, in California Township.

September 30, 1871, Timothy Pearson, stabbed Joseph M. Vetetoe in the neck, with a knife, causing death, at Le Roy. Pearson was sent to the penitentiary, but was soon afterwards pardoned.

December 23, 1871, Stephen Brown, murdered Harvey Deaver, at the residence of the later, near Ottumwa. The murder was committed with a pistol. The murderer was sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years.

March 5, 1872, Alexander Louther, a bachelor, aged forty years, blew the top of his head off by a charge from a gun fired by his own hands, during a fit of insanity, at his residence, in Rock Creek Township.

The issue of the Burlington Patriot of April 15th says: "The boys in town made the anvils crack like thunder on Thursday evening last, at the reception of the news of the surrender of Lee's Miserables. The air was clear and still, and the anvils seemed to partake of the enthusiastic sentiment that pervaded the hearts of the townspeople, for they never spoke more eloquently. For ourself, we felt as though we would like to have heard a million-pounder touched off, so the report could be heard in 'auld Ringland,' to waken up the ideas of the people over there as to the true state of things on this side of the 'big [illegible] ality."—April 22, 1865, the Burlington Patriot appears in mourning over the death of Abraham Lincoln, who was assassinated on the night of April 14.—April 17, 1865, organization of the Neosho Valley Immigration Society. BURLINGTON.

The act incorporating the Burlington Town Company was approved February 20, 1857. The corporators were O. E. Learnard, Charles Morse, J. A. D. Clark, T. T. Parsons and C. W. Southway. The first president of the company was C. W. Babcock, and the first secretary was B. W. Woodward, both of Lawrence. The father of Burlington was O. E. Learnard, a native of Burlington, Vt., in whose honor the town was named. In January, 1857, O. E. Learnard, F. A. Atherly, A. H. Vince, Edward Murdock, H. W. Watrous, John Bishop and others arrived. They were the first occupants of the town site. They boarded with Charles Morse, across the river, three miles distant. The first house on the town site was a combination of two small houses, procured at Hampden, and made into one for a provision store for James Jones, the first merchant. It was located east of the present "Central Hotel," about midway between that hotel and the river. The second building erected was a log house, built by Edward Murdock, and used by him for a wagon shop. The third building erected was the "Burlington Hotel," on the site of the "Morris House," built by F. A. Atherly, on contract with the Burlington Town Company, the lumber for which was rafted down the Neosho River, some thirty-five or forty miles. During the building of the hotel, in May, 1857, Rev. Peter Remer and family arrived. Mrs. Remer being the first woman that had ever appeared on the town site, she was greeted with cheers by the workmen at the hotel. The boys regarded her as the loveliest and handsomest lady they had ever beheld, though it is possible that her beauty was hardly comparable with that of Mrs. Langtry. Mr. Remer and his family located at Burlington, the ardent admirers of Mrs. Remer abandoning the work on the hotel until a house could be erected for the family. The "Burlington Hotel" was designed simply for a boarding house, and it was located near the river for the accommodation of the mill hands. When the time arrived for the erection of the hotel proper, it was intended that it should be located on the south side of Rock Creek, on the site now occupied by the office of S. A. Brown, and make that the nucleus for the town. The original town site consisted of 320 acres. In the spring of 1857, Dr. Samuel G. Howe, the Boston philanthropist and husband of Julia Ward Howe, located a Wyandotte "float," of 640 acres, adjoining the town site on the west. One-half of this "float" was surveyed into lots and became a part of the town. The other part of the "float" is still owned by the heirs of the deceased Dr. Howe. In the summer of 1857, Dr. Manson and Dr. Venard arrived and took claims near town. Dr. Manson erected an office for himself on Hudson street, a few rods east of what is now the Central Hotel. This was the next building erected after the hotel. The first landlord of the hotel was Francis Britton. In 1857 a bridge was constructed across the river, near the site of the present bridge, by the town company, but it was carried away by a freshet in 1859. The first steam saw mill in operation in the county was started at Burlington in the spring of 1857. It was removed from Hampden, to which place it had been sent by the Emigrant Aid Company. It could not be operated at Hampden for the want of water. George W. Stevens erected the first store building, in the summer of 1857. Orlando and Judson A. Walkling erected a storehouse about the same time, and opened therein a stock of general merchandise, August 7, 1857. The first celebration in Burlington of "the day that made us free," was July 4, 1857. William B. Parsons was the orator. In March, 1859, the town site was pre-empted by B. L. Kingsbury, Probate Judge.

During the war period Burlington was at a standstill. A large proportion of the voting population of the town and county had gone into the Union army, and no new settlers came into the county. The darkest day the town ever experienced was on the 19th of May, 1863, when the county seat was removed to Hampden, by such an overwhelming majority, it looked as though the people of the county were determined to crush Burlington, and her people were about ready to throw up the sponge. The next day S. S. Prouty, who was then at home, temporarily absent from the army, said he would put up $500 for the purpose of erecting a building for a woolen carding mill and purchasing the machinery necessary to put it in operation providing that three others would do likewise. Within an hour the company was organized, consisting of S. S. Prouty, F. A. Atherly, D. P. Metcalf, and Augustin Holland. A two-story building was erected at once, the machinery procured, and the mill put in operation. This gave renewed hope to the struggling town and convinced her enemies that Burlington was not yet ready to die. The carding mill finally developed into a large woolen factory, and a cotten gin was added to it. Connected with the factory were F. A. Atherly, Levi P. Heddens, Henry W. Atherly, and James Davidson. Cotton growing was attracting some attention in the county at that time. Orsen Peck, a farmer on North Big Creek, realized $800 for his crop in 1864, and 18,000 pounds of lint were ginned at the Burlington factory in 1865. In 1869 the Excelsior Water Mill was built by Cross & Sons, at a cost of $55 000, including dam and races. In September, 1875, Hon. William Martindale purchased the property and still owns it. The Burlington steam mill was completed in 1870 at a cost of $16,000; the Burlington schoolhouse was completed in 1873 at a cost of $28,000. The first bank in the county was organized under the name of Jarboe, Garretson & Co., and began business April 16, 1870. The firm consisted of H. L. Jarboe, N. P. Garretson, D. W. Stormont, and M. Bailey, the latter two of Topeka. The bank was conducted under the management of N. P. Garretson, until it was reorganized as the Burlington National Bank April 29, 1872, with a capital of $50,000; H. L. Jarboe president, N. P. Garretson cashier. Burlington has steadily prospered and grown since the completion of the railroad to the town in 1870. It now has a population of about 2,500, and nearly every branch of business is represented there.

NEWSPAPERS.

In September, 1859, S. S. Prouty arrived in Coffey County with his family and a printing press, arrangements having previously been made with citizens of Burlington for his establishment at that place. In consideration of the publication by him of a newspaper in Burlington one year, he was to have twenty-five average town lots, a guaranty of 300 subscribers at $2.00 per subscription, and house and office rent free for one year. The houses were to be ready for him by the 1st of September. He arrived on the 6th of that month, from Prairie City, where he had previously lived and published the Freemen's Champion. The houses were not ready for him when he arrived, nor had the first steps been taken toward securing any. He was told that he could deposit his goods temporarily in the first story of a little building which is now a portion of the Central Hotel, on the northeast corner of Third and Hudson streets. The first story was vacant, but the family of Mr. Slayton occupied the second story. While Mr. Prouty was in the act of storing his goods in the unoccupied room, Mr. Slayton appeared and ordered Mr. Prouty to move on, as the building was, as Mr. Slayton said, under his charge. Mr. Prouty commanded his oxen to be yoked to his two wagons, and gave directions to move out on the prairie and camp south of town. It was then his intention to go to Le Roy and establish his paper there, as liberal inducements had been offered him, by citizens of that place, to make LeRoy his home. About this time, George W. Stevens appeared, and hearing of Slayton's treatment, offered Mr. Prouty a refuge in his building, which offer was accepted. Had it not been for the timely appearance of Mr. Stevens, Mr. Prouty would soon have been in camp, and all the money in Burlington would not have induced him to return to that place. Mr. Prouty's goods were stored in the first story of Mr. Stevens' building, which was neither plastered nor lathed. A flag was stretched across the room, in front of which was put up the printing press. In the rear lived his family. In this room, on the 4th of October, 1859, appeared the first number of the Neosho Valley Register, the first paper printed in Burlington. October 4, 1859, was also the day when the present constitution of the State of Kansas was adopted by a vote of the people. The press on which this paper was printed was brought to Kansas in 1834, by Rev. J. Meeker, a Baptist missionary among the Ottawa Indians. Mr. Prouty published the Register until December, 1862, when, being then First Lieutenant and Quartermaster of the First Indian Regiment, he leased the office to I. E. Olney for one year. At the expiration of Mr. Olney's lease, the paper again appeared with Mr. Prouty's name as publisher, H. N. Bent being the editor. In March, 1864, William Payne leased the office, and about a month afterward bought the office of Mr. Prouty, the latter being still in the army. Mr. Payne died in July following, and the office then fell into the hands of Silas Fearl, who discontinued the paper. September 3, 1864, S. S. Prouty commenced the publication of the Kansas Patriot, at Burlington, and continued to publish it until April 15, 1869, when he sold the office to J. F. Cummings, and removed to Topeka, to discharge the duties of the office of State Printer, to which he had been elected by the Legislature of the previous winter. May 29, 1869, Mr. Cummings sold the Patriot to A. D. Brown, who has continued its publication ever since. January 1, 1870, Mr. Brown changed its name to The Burlington Patriot. May 5, 1874, Peter Bell commenced the publication of the Voice of the People, which only lived until the following November. It advocated J. C. Cusey for Governor and J. K. Hudson for Congress, and then gave up the ghost. February 11, 1875, the first number of The Independent appeared in Burlington, with the name of A. H. Smith as editor and publisher. June 29, 1877, B. F. Smythe bought out Mr. Smith, and published the paper until October 19, 1877, when he sold a half interest to John E. Watrous. June 7, 1878, Mr. Smythe sold his interest to LeRoy Armstrong, when the firm name became Armstrong & Watrous. Mr. Armstrong retired from the paper July 16, 1880, since which time it has been owned and published solely by John E. Watrous. Previous to the date of the retirement of Mr. Armstrong, the politics of the paper had always been independent. Since it has been under the sole management of Mr. Watrous, the paper has been Democratic. The politics of the Neosho Valley Register was Republican, that of the Voice of the People Reform, and the Patriot has always been Republican. The Burlington Republican was started January 4, 1882, by George Sweesy and W. S. Hebron, under the firm name of Hebron & Sweesy. After a few weeks Mr. Sweesy retired, and Mr Hebron has since been sole proprietor and editor. Republican in politics.

LE ROY.

The land upon which Le Roy now stands was pre-empted, or rather claimed, by John B. Scott and Frederick Troxel. The latter sold his interest to Thomas Crabtree, and when Richard Burr arrived from California in 1856, he purchased a third interest in the town site. A Mr. Holcomb made the survey in 1857. The first frame house on the town site was built by Thomas Crabtree and Isaac Chatham, in the fall of 1855. It stood north of where the Le Roy steam mill is now. The frame consisted of straight, young, hewn walnut trees, and the shingles and weather boards were riven out of logs of the same timber and shaved smooth. This house was afterward moved to where Mr. Crabtree lives now, but before the wheels were taken from under it some some one borrowed it to secure a claim, and it did service for a while in that capacity for different claimants, until it was finally peacefully deposited on Mr. Crabtree's farm. John B. Scott kept the first postoffice and a country store in a log house on the Wilkinson farm. He was also the first Justice of the Peace in the county, having received his commission in 1855. In 1857 Jerome A. and P. H. Smith opened a store in a double log house on the lot south of Mr. A. McConnell's present residence. The same year two saw-mills were put up, one by Futhey, Harvey & Co., on the present site of the Neosho Valley Steam Mills, and one by Smith & Murden, south of Sixth street, close to Mr. R. C. Wood's farm. A great strife was inaugurated between these two rival companies as to who would be first in having their mill running. The whole settlement became interested and took sides, one way or another, and considerable betting was done on the issue of the strife, the main commodity being whisky. Futhey, David Hosick and the Herdy brothers finally carried off the palm and won the bet by running the first log on the gangway and sawing off the first slab by daylight on the 5th of November, 1857. The flour mill, on a small scale, was attached in 1859, and the following year the main building was put up. The town now began to improve rapidly. The first frame house constructed out of sawed lumber was that of Mr. Ringle, which is still standing. A two-story hotel was built in 1859, by a Mr. Fisk, on the lot east of Mr. Ahlefield's present residence, but it was destroyed by a gale in 1860. The present hotel was built in 1858 by Mr. McLaughlin, and was finished the following year by Elisha Amsden. In 1859, a substantial schoolhouse was erected, the largest and best in the county for a number of years, until the present fine two-story schoolhouse was completed in 1869. Dr. Geo. W. Nelson built the first brick house in 1859, the brick being burned by John Cottingham. Le Roy kept steadily growing, and was the largest and most prosperous town in the county until 1870, when Burlington jumped ahead and left her.

NEWSPAPERS, CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

October 20, 1866, the first number of the LeRoy Pioneer appeared, under the management of William J. Kent and William Higgins; William J. Kent, editor. January 26, 1867, Mr. Kent withdrew and was succeeded by Lucas Everett, and the paper was then published by Higgins & Everett until May 4, 1867, when Mr. Everett retired and was succeeded by Thomas H. Graham. The firm name was then Higgins & Graham, until October 14, 1867, when Mr. Graham retired and was succeeded by J. Higgins. The Higgins brothers continued the publication of the paper until May, 1868, when it was suspended, and during the following summer the office was removed to Neosho Falls. October 30, 1869, J. R. Jennings started a paper at LeRoy, which he named LeRoy Pioneer, because the electrotyped heading of the defunct paper was found in the city and appropriated by him for his paper, for economy's sake. His paper lived only till January, 1870. The Southern Kansas Advocate was started at LeRoy in May, 1870, by C. H. OTTUMWA.

Among the early settlers of Ottumwa were Dr. Hamilton Smith, J. G. Shaubell, James Harris, John T. Cox, Jonathan Lyman and Dr. Joseph Jenks. September 15, 1857, Jonathan Lyman issued the first number of the Ottumwa Journal, which was the first paper printed in Coffey County. Only two numbers were issued. The press on which this paper was printed was removed to Linn County by Mr. Lyman in 1860. By an act of the Legislature, approved February 25, Ottumwa was incorporated as a town, the act of incorporation providing for a Board of Commissioners consisting of five members, a Marshal, Assessor, Collector and Treasurer. The Council was clothed with full power to regulate the municipal affairs of the town. The Councilmen designated by the act of Incorporation were: Ebner H. Hoult, William R. Smith, James Harris, J. W. Kerr and Enoch Maudlin. The Western Christian University was an institution located by the Christian Convention of the State of Kansas which met at Emporia in October, 1862. The first Board of Trustees were John Moore, G. B. Taylor, John M. Rankin, N. B. White, Pardee Butler, John T. Cox, James Lee, Solomon G. Brown and Peter Smith. A building costing about $8,000 was erected in 1863. All but $2,000 of this money was raised in Ottumwa. An academic department of this institution was put in operation in the spring of 1863, under John M. Rankin as principal, wherein was taught all the branches and science usually included in the preparatory course of colleges. One hundred and thirty students attended the first year. O. S. Laws, and Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock were employed as assistants the first year. Mr. Rankin retained the position of principal until 1867, during which time the school earned an excellent reputation for thoroughness and dispatch, and was well patronized from all parts of the State. Mr. N. Dunshee succeeded Mr. Rankin as principal, who resigned at the end of the year 1868, when the school closed on account of financial embarrassments. In 1871 the building was destroyed by fire and the institution sank out of existence. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. Since the destruction of the University building Ottumwa has not made much progress, and the town now numbers less than two hundred inhabitants.

WAVERLY.

This town is situated in Rock Creek Township, three miles south of the Osage County line and five miles west of the Anderson County line. It is a point on the Ottawa and Burlington Railroad. In the spring of 1878 the town was platted by Isaac Pierson, who owned the farm on which the town was located. The town company was chartered in 1880, and the corporators were: W. H. Schofield, Orson Kent, James Houston, Isaac Pierson, J. W. Hammond and Thomas Donnell. The officers were as follows: James Houston, president; Isaac Pierson, vice-president; Thomas Donnell, secretary; Orson Kent, treasurer. The first house was a story and a half building, erected in 1878 by A. N. Sylvester, for a store. Several small houses for residences for railroad men were also erected that year. In the spring of 1879 Thomas Donnell erected a frame building for a dry goods store, which he kept himself. Several dwelling houses were also erected in 1879. In 1880 J. W. Hammond built a house for a general merchandise store for himself. Campbell & McSherry built a frame house for a hardware store, for themselves; Z. H. Brock built a story and a half building, the first story of which was occupied by Mrs. I. E. Murray, for a millinery store, and the second story by Mr. Brock for his residence; Peter Weikert built a story and a half frame building, the first story of which was occupied by Weikert & Butler, for a billiard hall, and the second story by the same parties, for a photograph gallery. Some dwelling houses were also erected that year.

In June, 1882, a bank was established at Waverly by R. R. Fisher and John L. Senior. In the same year a hotel 48x48 was erected by H. A. Sunday. The town has two lumber yards, two drug stores, two hardware stores, five general merchandise stores, two millinery stores, one livery stable, one restaurant, one notion and stationery store, one furniture store, one tinware and stove store, with tin shop, one confectionery store, one flour and feed store, one blacksmith shop, one wagon shop, two carpenters, two lawyers, two doctors, two preachers, two school teachers, two real estate offices and three live stock shippers. Coal and flagging stone are found on the town site. This is an excellent trading point, and the supply of goods in the town has never yet been sufficient for the demand. It is the best shipping point for live stock and grain between Ottawa and Burlington. The Waverly News was started October 5, 1882, by J. L. Senior.

DEFUNCT TOWNS.

Hampden.—This town was settled by the Hampden colony, previously referred to, April 26, 1855. On the 5th of the following August the owners of the town site had their first drawing for lots. On Sunday, April 29, 1855, Rev. Mr. Knight preached the first sermon on the town site, and, as far as known, it was the first sermon ever preached in Coffey County. May 22, 1855, the first Sunday school in the county was organized at Hampden. Several houses were built in the town during the years 1855 and 1856, and its projectors and owners expected to make it the leading emporium of Southern Kansas. The establishment of its rival, Burlington, across the river, in 1857, gave a check to the growth from which it did not recover until the removal of the county seat from Burlington to Hampden, in 1863. August 18, 1859, Enos Strawn, Probate Judge of Coffey County, deeded the town site to John M. Espy and Amasa B. Sampson in trust for the occupants, and on the same day Messrs. Espy and Sampson conveyed the property to Rueben H. Farnham, of Lecompton. September 19, 1860, Mr. Farnham conveyed the property to Isaac E. Olney, of Clinton, Mo. Major A. C. Marvin, of the same place, was understood to be a silent partner of Mr. Olney in the purchase. Mr. Olney immediately removed to Hampden and erected a dwelling house there for his family. In the fall of 1863 and in 1864 several houses were erected there and the removal of the county seat there revived the hopes of its friends. June 4, 1864, I. E. Olney issued there the first number of the Hampden Expositor, which lived a precarious existence until the spring of 1865, when the office was removed to Garnett. The town received a death blow in November, 1865, by the removal of the county seat to Burlington, and no efforts have ever been made since to revive it.

Neosho City.—This town was founded in 1856 by Marcus J. Parrott, Joel K. Goodin, and others, in Neosho Township. A hotel, store, saw mill and other buildings were erected there at an early day. The town failed, however, to attract settlers, and by an act of the Territorial Legislature February 27, 1860, the town was vacated and the plat and record annulled.

Nashville.—This town was located on Section 14, Township 21, Range 16, in Avon (now Star) Township. Its founders were W. J. Sanders, John J. Sanders, G. W. Campbell and Mr. Caseboom. Platted in the spring of 1858, it had at one time a store, blacksmith shop, postoffice and a half dozen dwelling houses. It was finished by the drouth of 1860 and is now a farm.

Chickasaw.—Started in 1857 by parties in Louisville, Ky., as a rival to Hampden. Its location was a mile east of Hampden. It was purely a paper town, no improvements ever having been made there.

Aurora.—As the story goes, a couple of men were sent to Kansas in the summer of 1857, to select a town site for a company in Aurora, Ill. The two agents started from Lawrence in a wagon, with commissary stores, including a jug of whisky, intending to select some point on the Neosho river for the town. On the second night out they camped on a bleak prairie, about six miles south of the Torquois Creek, in what is now Rock Creek Township, Coffey County. During the night the whisky gave out, and there being no prospect of replenishing their stock without returning to Lawrence, they selected the spot where they camped that night for the town site and returned to Aurora, where they made a flattering report to the home company of the result of their mission. The new town was called Aurora, was surveyed and platted, a house was erected, and an unsuccessful attempt was made to dig a well. Nothing else was done and the enterprise was soon abandoned. The house was occupied for many years by Thomas Dixon and family, and the place was known as "Dixon's" Lone House." It was kept as a house of public entertainment.

Oread.—This was a paper town, located near the farm of Wesley Stubblefield, ten miles northeast of Burlington. It was started as a speculation by a party of Lawrence men, of which Governor Robinson was the head, in the winter of 1856-7. The town was surveyed by B. L. Kingsbury in the spring of 1857, and many shares in the town, of ten lots each, were sold by the proprietors. No houses were ever built there.

Pottawatomie.—On Section 17, Township 20, Range 17, was located the town of Pottawatomie, in the spring of 1858. The town was surveyed by Orson Kent, but it was never platted. George W. Fletcher and Harmon Hozier erected houses there, and that was all ever done to make a town there.

California.—This was located on Benedict Creek, California Township, on Section 9, Township 20, Range 14, in the spring of 1858. No buildings were ever erected there.

Bangor.—This town was located on Section 9, Township 23, Range 14, at the junction of Dinner and South Big creeks. The founders were from Boston, Mass., and the first settlements and improvements were made in 1872. The members of the colony, before leaving Boston, elected township officers from among their number, supposing that the place they were going to was an uninhabited wilderness. Twelve business and dwelling houses were erected there, but owing to dissensions among the people the town sickened and died, and the buildings were removed to neighboring farms. The last building remaining was the hotel, which was removed by F. A. Atherly in October, 1882.

The county is well watered by numerous streams, which abound with springs of clear, cool water. Good well water is obtained in most parts of the county at a depth of from twenty to thirty feet.

The largest stream is the Neosho River, which enters the northern part of the county from the west, flows southeast, then nearly south through Geneva, Iola, Humboldt, and Cottage Grove townships. The principal tributaries on the east are Indian and Martin creeks in Geneva Township; Deer Creek, flowing through thetownship of the same name; Elm Creek, flowing through Elm Creek and Iola townships; and Coal Creek, flowing through Salem, Humboldt, and Cottage Grove townships. The principal western tributaries are Onion Creek, flowing through Iola and Humboldt townships; Owl Creek, in Humboldt Township; and Scatter Creek, in Cottage Grove Township.

The Marmaton River rises east of the center of the county, and flows southeast through Marmaton and Elsinore townships.

Big Creek rises in Marmaton Township and flows southwest across that, Elsinore and Cottage Grove townships.

Little Osage River rises not far from the head of the Marmaton and flows northeast. Its tributaries are Middle Creek on the north and the South Fork on the south.

The general surface of the country is slightly rolling, though much more level than the greater portion of eastern Kansas. The bottom lands along the streams average one and one-half miles in width, and comprise one-tenth the area of the county. The remainder is the gently rolling or level upland prairie.

Along the Neosho River is a heavy belt of timber which runs through the entire county. There is also good timber along the Little Osage and Marmaton rivers, and Scatter, Big, Owl, Coal, Elm, Rock, and Deer creeks, and along the other streams of the county. The average width of timber belts is one mile. The principal varieties are hickory, oak, hackberry, elm, sycamore, cottonwood, and black walnut. There is also a large acreage of cultivated timber.

It is believed that coal underlies the greater part of the county at a great depth, though this has not been fully demonstrated. Only surface coal has been found in paying quantities, and only enough of this for local domestic purposes, and not of a very good quality. The most coal has been found in Townships 25 and 26, of Ranges 18 and 19, and Township 24, Range 20, and along the Little Osage River.

Every township of the county is well supplied with a good quality of stone, and in abundant quantities. The principal kinds are blue and red limestone, and red sandstone.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first settlement in the county was undoubtedly that of Richard J. Fuqua, who is said to have settled in January, 1855. He located in the valley of the Neosho River, in the northwestern part of the county. He was accompanied by his family, consisting of his wife, two boys, and three girls. He also had sixty head of cattle. He at once built a cabin, started a post, for the purpose of trading with neighboring tribes of Indians, and the next summer opened a farm. This post became a favorite resort of the Sac and Fox Indians, and often a very large number of them were camped in the timber along the river. Fuqua always strove to please them, gave dog feasts and other entertainment, and sold flour, groceries, calico, beads, and other articles to them at a very high price. Fuqua made money rapidly, and kept up the post for a number of years, but finally abandoned it, and still later, in 1863, sold his large and well improved farm and immigrated to Oregon.

The second settlement in the county was made by B. W. Cowden and H. D. Parsons, who arrived in March, 1855, and selected claims in the valley of the Neosho River, near the mouth of Elm Creek. At that time there were about four hundred Osage Indians camped in the heavy timber along the river, in the immediate neighborhood. Parsons had formerly been a trader among the Osages, therefore the pioneers were well received by the Indians, who insisted on their settling in the immediate neighborhood. They therefore made the lodges of the Indians a temporary home until their claims were selected, when they at once began the erection of a cabin on Parsons' claim. It was completed the latter part of the month, and the two pioneers left the country for a short time. Parsons soon returned, however, to find his cabin occupied by a band of Missourians, who proposed locating in the neighborhood. They refused to give up the cabin or claim, whereupon he appealed to Little Bear, Chief of the Osages, who at once summoned a council of his braves, and it was determined that the Missourians were bad men and should be driven from the country. A band of warriors started to carry out this decree, and on their appearance the rascals were so thoroughly frightened that they appealed to Parsons to intercede that their lives might be spared, promising to leave the country at once. Parsons doing so, the party started immediately for Missouri, and never returned.

The next settlement was made near the mouth of Deer Creek, the same spring, by Major James Parsons, and his two sons, Jesse and James, and Mr. Duncan. The creek on which they settled was so named from the large number of deer found in the timber along its banks.

During the spring and summer settlement progressed quite rapidly, the most of it being along and near the Neosho River. Among the first settlers were H. H. Hayward, W. C. Keith, Henry Bennett, Elias Copelin, James Barber, Barnett Owen, A. W. J. Brown, J. S. Barbee, Thomas Day and Giles Sater. On Martin Creek the prominent settlers of that summer were Thomas Norris, Jesse E. Morris, Anderson Wray, George Hall, Dr. Stockton, A. C. Smith, Augustus Todd, Michael Kiser, Hiram Smith and Mr. Martin. The creek was so called in honor of the last named.

Though many of the early settlers of the county were Pro-slavery men, but few slaves were brought into the county. Henry Sater owned two or three, Giles Sater one, who was soon set free, his master being opposed to slavery; James Galbreath owned one; Hurlston, five or six, and Dunbar several. The Free-state people showing so much antagonism toward slaveholders, it was not long until most of the slaves were either liberated or taken from the county by their masters.

During the summer and fall of 1856, immigration continued, though not in very large numbers. Prominent among the settlers of that year were Nimrod Hankins, William M. Brown, Carlyle Faulkner, Carroll Prewett, Henry Doren, G. A. Gideon, William Mayberry, Thomas Bashaw, M. W. Post and Joseph Ludley. The two last named came in February, 1856, being engaged in the survey of the standard parallels. They finished this survey with the fifth parallel through Allen County, and concluded to locate at or near Cofachique. Some time during the following summer, Ludley brought a small saw mill from Westport, Mo., and set it up in the timber near Cofachique and began operations at once. The mill was run by horse power, and was the first mill or other machinery to be put in operation in Allen County. After running it for some time Ludley sold the mill to Drury S. Tye.

The first marriage to take place in the county was that of James Johnson to Marinda Barber on August 14, 1856. The ceremony was performed by A. W. J. Brown, the Probate Judge of the county.

The second marriage in the county was that of George W. Young to Sarah Bennett, October 1, 1856. One of the County Commissioners, B. W. Cowden, officiated and in the acknowledgment of the ceremony signs himself as Associate Judge.

The first death to take place was that of James Barbee, at Cofachique, in 1856, and the second was that of a young daughter of Isam Brown, which took place a short time after.

In the spring of 1855 a party of Pro-slavery men from Fort Scott formed a town company and laid out a town on the high land east of the Neosho River, a short distance west of the present railroad track, and about on the north line of Section 10, Township 25, Range 18 east. The town was named Cofachique, and James Barbee was elected the first president of the company. The first to settle on the new town site was James Barbee. The Legislature in July, 1855, passed an act incorporating the Cofachique Town Association. The incorporators were Daniel Woodson, Charles Passmore, James S. Barbee, Samuel A. Williams and Joseph C. Anderson. The Legislature also empowered the Association to locate and hold a tract of land not to exceed nine hundred acres, around the proposed town site, and passed an act making Cofachique the permanent county seat of Allen County.

During the summer of 1855 the town was located and staked out. The first store was opened by James Galbreath. This was soon followed by another, owned by H. D. Parsons and Mr. Lynn. The next store was opened by Johnson & Owens.

For about two years this was the only town in the county, and as a new town was for a time quite successful. Several stores had been opened and Cofachique was known far and near. There was a heavy trade with the neighboring tribes of Indians, and for a time the town had good prospects.

Until the summer of 1857 there was no postoffice nearer than Fort Scott, and all mail was brought over by a carrier employed by the citizens for the purpose. The first mail route established by the government extended from Fort Scott to Cofachique, and regular mail service began July 1, 1857. Cofachique was established as a postoffice in the spring of 1857, and Aaron Case was appointed Postmaster.

Until 1857 this was the only town of the county, but during that year other towns were started and Cofachique began to deline. In 1858 the county seat was removed, and the next year the greater part of the town was removed to Iola, that town having just been started. The old town site of Cofachique is now covered with farms, and nothing remains to show that a town ever existed there.

The principal cause of the failure of the town was that, being in a hilly region it was difficult of access, besides which it was almost impossible to obtain good well water. Another reason for its failure was that it was settled by Pro-slavery men, generally, and during the early political troubles a company of Pro-slavery men was stationed there, which caused some excitement, and created a feeling of enmity toward the town, and when the towns of Iola and Humboldt were started on either side it was not long until Cofachique became entirely depopulated. During the more prosperous years James Faulkner and Aaron Case were the principal business men.

During the year 1857, there was quite a heavy immigration to the county, yet as in previous years, most of the settlements were made along the valleys of the streams, or on the adjacent upland prairies. The greater settlements formed that year were along and near the Neosho River and its tributaries. The town of Geneva was laid out in the northwestern part of the county, and Humboldt in the southwestern part. Both of these towns prospered and still exist. Their complete history will be found in the description of the towns of the present.

In the spring of 1858, a heavy immigration again commenced. The settlers of that year were of an exceptionally good class, and the growth and development of the county was healthy and natural.

A great part of the settlement of the year 1858, was in what is now Deer Creek Township, along and near Deer Creek. In the fall of 1857, a small colony had been formed in Parke and Johnson counties, Indiana, for the purpose of making a settlement, and building up a town, which was to be named Carlyle. After the selection of the site north of Deer Creek, in 1857, two young men, P. M. Carmine and R. V. Ditmars were left to build cabins. In the spring of 1858, the colonists began to arrive. Among the first were T. P. Killen, J. M. Evans, S. C. Richards, J. W. Scott, David Bergen and H. Scott.

The Carlyle colony selected 320 acres for a town site and proposed to build a church, schoolhouse and make other improvements calculated to insure the speedy building up of the proposed town. Finding many difficulties in the way of making a prosperous town, the project was abandoned, and the site cut up into farms, which were soon opened.

Though not successful in building a town, the colony prospered. A postoffice was secured, and a postal route established from Leavenworth via Hyatt, in Anderson County, Carlyle and Cofachique to Humboldt, in 1858.

A church and schoolhouse was afterward built, a high school kept up, and part of the time there has been a store, while it has always retained the postoffice. The place is well known and it has always been a prosperous and progressive neighborhood.

When the Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston railroad (now the K. C., L. & S. K. R. R.) was built, Carlyle was made a station, but has not yet become a town, and is only known as a prosperous country place.

Florence was the name of a town site which was projected in the year 1858. Its location was east of Carlyle and north of Deer Creek. It was started as a rival to Carlyle, and it was expected that it would some time secure a railroad. Among those interested in the project were Harvey Allen, J. B. Justus, D. C. VanBrunt, D. Rogers, M. M. Hann, W. E. Eastwood, F. M. Powers and R. B. Jordan. As a town the project was a failure, and the site is now covered with farms, while the name of Florence lives only in history.

A Vegetarian Settlement.—In the year 1855 a colony of vegetarians organized in the Northern States for the purpose of forming a settlement in Kansas Territory. C. H. DeWolf, of Philadelphia, was elected president; Dr. McLauren, treasurer, and H. S. Clubb, of New York, secretary. This colony refused to indulge in the use of any kind of meat, tea, coffee, tobacco, or other stimulants, and lived only on weeds, vegetables and fruits. Though each colonist was to own his own property, the colony was to be co-operative to a certain extent. In the fall of 1855 Dr. McLauren was sent to select a location. The place chosen was on a small creek about six miles south of Humboldt. In the spring of 1856 the secretary arrived with a number of the colonists. The most of them came during the months of April, May and June. Among the members were Watson and S. J. Stewart, who arrived on May 19, 1856. They camped on Capt. Coffin's land adjoining Humboldt, and the next day went to the colony, where they found about one hundred persons camped in tents. But not being satisfied with some of the arrangements of the colony, they located claims elsewhere.

During the summer and fall of the year 1856, there was much sickness and the greater number of the colonists left the country. Of those left who settled permanently were Charles Baland, Z. J. Wizner, Watson and S. J. Stewart. The only remembrance of this colony is the fact that the stream on which they settled is still known as Vegetarian Creek.

First Mail Routes.—The first mail route established in the county was from Fort Scott to Cofachique, and service commenced July 1, 1857.

On January 11, 1853, a mail route was established from Leavenworth to Humboldt, via Hyatt, in Anderson County, Carlyle and Cofachique. In April the contract for mail service was let, and commenced on the 1st of the following July. Just before the service began, Dr. J. W. Scott, H. Scott and J. M. Evans took a load of poles and marked a trail between Carlyle and Hyatt. The first mail was carried by Zack Squires, on a little mule. The trail, in Allen County, extended nearly along the line now followed by the K. C., L. & S. K. R. R. It was not long until the business along the route was sufficient to put on a two-horse hack, after which passengers and light freight were carried. The hack was followed by a two-horse stage, or "jerky," and as business increased, this was in turn followed by a four-horse stage, which was kept on the route until the completion of the railroad in 1871. Squires is favorably remembered by all the old settlers along the route on account of his doing so many errands in Lawrence and other places for them, free of charge. The mails on the route were first weekly and afterward changed to tri-weekly.

LAND AND POLITICAL TROUBLES.

Allen County was formed from a part of the territory included in the New York Indian Reservation, which, at the time settlement commenced, had just been ceded to the United States Government. In 1855, Joseph Ludley, with a party of surveyors, began the survey of the standard parallels of the Territory of Kansas, and finished in February, 1856, with the fifth standard parallel, which passed through Allen County, a short distance north of the present town of Humboldt. North of this parallel, the land was soon surveyed into towns and ranges, and then into sections. South of it, the town and range lines were not surveyed until 1857 and 1858, and the section lines not until 1859. In the meantime, after the town and range lines had been run, the settlers employed surveyors at their own expense, and had the section lines laid off, which were afterward found to nearly correspond with the Government survey.

When the settlers first located, they selected claims in or adjoining the timber, and while professing to hold but a one quarter section, many of them staked off and held a square mile. As this was the most desirable land, it caused much trouble as the settlement progressed. The Territorial Legislature passed a law allowing 320 acres to each settler, 160 acres as a timber, and 160 acres as a prairie claim. This was contrary to the law of Congress allowing 160 acres to each settler, and caused trouble among the settlers. There was a great deal of quarreling, but except in few instances violence was not resorted to. The settlers organized a "squatter's court," which, though having no legal authority, did much to preserve peace among the contestants over land claims. The decisions of this court were prompt, generally just, and usually acceded to by the contestants.

The land difficulties kept up for several years, and there were many assaults, but only few of them resulted in bloodshed. One of these was the shooting of Anderson Wray by Anderson C. Smith. The latter had a claim on Martin Creek, which was bid off at the land sale at Fort Scott by Wray. Some neighbors returning, found Smith on his claim and told him of it. Though late in the evening, he at once started for Fort Scott, angry and swearing vengeance on Wray. About 4 o'clock the next morning he came up with the Wray party, who were camped on Turkey Creek. He at once sought out Wray and began firing at him. Two shots took effect in his body, but the wounds did not prove fatal. The difficulty was afterward settled between them.

A young man named Winn selected and occupied a claim a few miles west of Humboldt, but did not file on it at the land office. In 1860 he went to Missouri to secure work. In his absence a man named Harris went to Fort Scott and bought the Winn claim by private entry. When Winn returned and learned the state of affairs, he at once called on Harris and demanded that he give up the land, which he refused, and a serious quarrel at once arose. The two men finally started off together, but Harris did not return. The next day his body was found with a bullet-hole in the head. Winn was arrested on suspicion, and examined by a Justice of the Peace. He admitted the killing, but claimed it to be in self-defense. He was held to bail, but was never brought to trial. This was the first homicide known to have been committed in the county.

During the early political troubles between the Pro-slavery and Free-state men Allen County suffered but little. The Valley of the Neosho was separated from the counties on the east and north, where the strife was greatest by broad and uninhabited prairies. Both elements had settled in the county, with the Free-state men largely in the majority. The latter class were made up generally of Western men, who were moderate and conservative in their views, and were willing to allow the Pro-slavery men the right to their own opinion, so long as no open demonstration of violence was made. The headquarters of the Pro-slavery men were at Cofachique, and at one time a band of armed men were stationed there, which caused some anxiety and a feeling of animosity toward the residents of the town, but there was never but little danger on either side. No serious trouble took place, no lives were lost, and little or no property was destroyed, and not one cent of the Free-state relief fund of 1856 was expended in Allen County.

THE WAR RECORD.

As soon as the news of the breaking out of the Rebellion reached Allen County nearly all the able-bodied men hurried to enlist in defense of the Union. In 1861 the Iola Battalion was formed, and from the county were three companies, commanded by Captains Coleman, Flesher, and Killen, which served in the Ninth Kansas. In the Tenth Kansas Regiment were two companies, one commanded by Capt. W. C. Jones, and the other by Capt. N. B. Blanton.

The county being on the southern border of the State, it was considered in danger of invasion from the Missouri guerrillas and the hostile Indians of the Territory. The scene of most the military operations in the county were in and about Humboldt. In the summer of 1861 a company was organized there with N. B. Blanton, Captain; S. J. Stewart, First Lieutenant. J. H. Signor was afterward Second Lieutenant. Capt. Isaac Tibbetts organized a company of infantry, and Capt. I. N. Phillips a company of cavalry. During the same summer a regiment was organized in Allen and Woodson counties. Orlin Thurston was Colonel; James Kennar, Lieutenant Colonel; and N. S. Goss, Major. This was the Seventh Kansas Regiment, for the defense of Kansas, and was under command of Gen. J. H. Lane. While this regiment was with Lane in Missouri there were but very few men left at home to protect the settlements, and the most of the farming and other work for the maintenance of the families of the soldiers was done by the women and children.

Sacking of Humboldt.—While the Allen County soldiers were away with Lane, a raid was made on the unprotected settlement of Humboldt on September 8, 1861, by a band of Missouri guerrillas, Cherokee Indians, and Osage half-breed Indians, under command of Captains Matthews and Livingstone., Matthews had been a trader among the Indians, had married an Osage squaw, and lived where Oswego now is. He had great influence among the Osages and incited them to take sides with the Southern Confederacy. At Humboldt they sacked the stores and dwellings, carrying off all the money and valuables they could find without resistance, all the men being absent.

Burning of Humboldt.—At the time of the raid in September, Dr. George A. Miller was absent trying to obtain authority to organize a company of Home Guards. He succeeded in this, and on his return organized a company of infantry in the town, which was composed of old men, boys, and a few of the militiamen who had returned to Humboldt as soon as they learned of the raid, to help protect their defenceless families. A company of cavalry was also organized in the neighborhood, composed of farmers, and commanded by Capt. Henry Dudley. These companies accompanied by Col. J. G. Blunt, went in the pursuit of the guerrillas, and succeeded in overtaking them, when a skirmish took place, during which the outlaw, Capt. Matthews, was killed. The Home Guards returned, and for several days the cavalry was sent out regularly as a scouting party, it being feared that another attack would soon be made on the town. The infantry remained at home, and were always upon guard. Soon, however, there appearing to be no danger, the cavalry were allowed to return to their homes. Late in the afternoon of the 14th of October, 1861, a body of Rebel Cavalry, under command of Col. Talbott, dashed into Humboldt. The Home Guards, comprising less than 100 men, were taken completely by surprise, and it was impossible for Capt. Miller to get them together. The town was soon filled with armed men, who kept up a continual firing of guns and pistols. A few of the men by running succeeded in making their escape, but the others were soon captured and placed under guard. It was supposed that they would all be shot by the outlaws and the Indians who accompanied them. The only resistance offered was by Capt. Miller and Charles Baland. The captain finally gave up his arms, pleading that the women and children might be saved, even though he expected to be murdered. The town was then set on fire, but before this was done, the Rebel officer ordered his men to allow the women and children to remove their valuables and household goods from their dwellings, and even ordered them to assist. The rebel officers claimed that Humboldt was burned in retaliation for the burning of Osceola, by Gen. Lane, and the killing of Matthews. Nearly all the buildings were then set on fire. The churches were saved, also the Masonic Hall. Of the other buildings not set on fire was the house of Dr. Wm. Wakefield, who, when he saw that he was in the power of the enemy, invited the officers to take supper with him. Among them was Capt. Livingstone. A few other houses were saved where there were women too sick to be moved. Among these was the residence of Col. Thurston, whose wife was unwell, and Mrs. Goodwin, the wife of Hon. J. R. Goodwin, sent her to bed and told the rebels she was too sick to be moved. The land office and court house building was set on fire, but after the departure of the rebels the fire was extinguished, but not until many valuable papers among the records were destroyed. Coffey's store was set on fire, but the rebels had in their excitement poured out a barrel of black molasses, thinking it to be tar, and this did not burn very well, besides which Mrs. Coffey had just been washing, and the wet clothes were thrown over the burning portion, extinguishing the fire. The raiders did not stay long, departing early in the evening. The men they had captured were taken a short distance and then released. They returned in time to help save some of the burning buildings. During the entire trouble the women behaved nobly. By their coolness they succeeded in making the invaders believe that an armed force was on the way from Iola, therefore they hastened their departure. The land office had just been opened, with J. C. Burnett, Register. He managed to speak to his sister, Miss Kate Burnett, now Mrs. S. N. Simpson, telling her to save $25,000 in land warrants that were in the office. Obtaining permission to go to the office for a candle, she secured the warrants, and dropped them on the prairie in the high grass. Judge J. R. Goodin and his wife had been absent all day, gathering wild grapes, and were just approaching the town from the west. The judge jumped out of the vehicle and told his wife to drive away, but instead of this she went to Mrs. Thurston's residence and aided in saving it. Numerous other heroic acts were performed by the women. The better portion of the town was entirely destroyed. There were only a few buildings left, and some of these had been badly damaged by the fire. The only man killed was farmer Seachrist, who was running away trying to save his mules. He was ordered to stop, but not doing so, he was shot and fatally wounded. All the horses that could be found were taken by the rebels. Besides this but little property was stolen, and outside the town no damage whatever was done. The rebel force numbered 331 men, who were all well mounted and thoroughly armed.

After the burning of Humboldt it was considered to be in danger, and a military post was established there. There were no events of note until the Price raid in 1864. The militia of the county was organized into a battalion, known as the Allen County Battalion, and was composed of six companies, three from Iola and the northern part of the county, two from Humboldt, and one from the extreme southern part of the county. The officers were: C. P. Twiss, Colonel; Watson Stewart, Major. Among the Captains were J. M. Moore and G. De Witt, of Humboldt, and D. C. Newman, of the southern part of the county. This regiment comprised all the able bodied men of the county, between the ages of sixteen and sixty years. The militia forces of the entire Neosho Valley were commanded by Major General J. B. Scott, of Le Roy, and under him the Allen County Battalion was ordered to Fort Scott. At the military post of Humboldt a block house was built, and a small force of the Eleventh Kansas stationed there under command of Major Haas. Besides this force, Captains Moore, DeWitt and Newman, under command of Major Watson Stewart, were left to protect the town against invasion. All remained at Humboldt except Captain Newman's company, which acted as scouts and was stationed on Big Creek. Maj. Haas ordered this company to come to Humboldt, which Capt. Newman refused to do. This gave rise to considerable difficulty between the two officers. Maj. Haas had charge of the government supplies of rations, etc., which he refused to issue to the Big Creek company until it should remove to Humboldt. The stores were kept at the German Church, in charge of a Sergeant. Newman's company being out of rations Major Stewart made a requisition on the post commander for five days' rations for the company, which was refused. Major Stewart then ordered the Captain to help himself to the rations and to receipt to the Sergeant. This was done, upon which Major Haas ordered Maj. Stewart and Capt. Newman under arrest. It was impossible, however, to carry out this order as the militia all took sides with their own officers. After the militia disbanded, Capt, Newman was arrested but was released the next day. After the companies under Maj. Stewart had remained in camp for three weeks they were ordered to Fort Scott, leaving Capt. Newman and his company, and a few colored men under Capt. E. Gilbert at the Humboldt post. During the entire period of the war there were a great many loyal Indians scattered over the county, they having been driven from the Indian Territory by the Indians who were in sympathy with the rebels.

CALAMITIES.

Up to the year 1860 the county had been quite prosperous, but at that time the terrible drought came on. In September, 1859, light showers of rain fell, but for the next eighteen months there was no rain to wet the earth to the depth of an inch. During the winter of 1859–60 there was no snow, and in the spring the earth was perfectly dry. Notwithstanding this crops were planted, but during the summer hot winds swept over the dry and parched earth, burned to crisp all vegetation except occasional fields of corn in the valleys and ravines where a partial crop was raised. The population of the county was a little upward of 3,000, and with their crops all or nearly all destroyed, and the entire territory suffering from the same cause, the prospect for the settlers to escape starvation seemed small. Most of them had come in during the two preceding years and had not yet got their farms fairly open, while nearly all their surplus money had been spent. With suffering and starvation before them, a great many of the settlers, a majority, left the county, returned to the East, and only a few of them came back. The braver settlers remained, but many of them experienced much suffering. Their teams and stock were in a poor condition, for besides the ruin of the crops, the grass of the upland prairies was so scorched and dried up that but little hay was put up.

In the Eastern States aid societies were organized and provisions and clothing were contributed liberally. Most of these goods had to be obtained at Atchison, from S. C. Pomeroy, the distributing agent. The trip was a long one and many of the settlers had but ox teams, therefore it took some time to go, and considerable suffering was endured on the way, as the winter was severe with many cold storms.

Grasshoppers.—The first appearance of grasshoppers in any considerable numbers, after the settlement of the country, was in the fall of the year 1860. But little damage was done, as the drought had already destroyed most of the crops. Eggs were deposited, and in the spring of 1861, the young locusts hatched out in great numbers, and in some localities did considerable damage before their departure, which took place some time in June.

Again in September, 1866, the grasshoppers visited the county in immense swarms, and in a few days all vegetation yet green had disappeared from the face of the earth. Their eggs were deposited everywhere, but the winter being wet, and the ground alternately freezing and thawing, the greater number of them were destroyed. Those that hatched did some damage in the spring of 1867, but by the middle of June nearly all of them were gone, flying off toward the northwest.

The next visit of the grasshoppers was in August, 1874, when they appeared in myriads. The dry weather had already dried up the crops to some extent, and some of the corn was already too nearly matured to be injured, but all that was green was soon destroyed. As before, large numbers of eggs were deposited, and as the winter was dry, nearly all of them hatched out in the spring of 1875. So thick were the young grasshoppers that they destroyed all vegetation, in about two-thirds the area of the county. Before attaining sufficient size to have wings, they would hop from one field to another, and would sometimes pile up in drifts several inches in thickness. The greater part of the wheat crop was utterly destroyed, as well as the other small grains and vegetables. The first plantings of corn were destroyed, but early in June the pests began to fly away, and by the 17th of the month nearly all of them had disappeared. Corn was then re-planted, and the locusts having destroyed the young weeds, it grew very rapidly and yielded an abundant harvest, being one of the very best corn crops ever raised in the county.

So great a portion of the crop of 1874 was destroyed by the drought and grasshoppers, that in many parts of the county some of the settlers were left in a suffering condition. Aid societies were formed, and provisions, clothing and grain were sent by the citizens of other States for the needy settlers. On January 11, 1875, the County Commissioners appointed Isaac C. Cuppy and Robert Cook to go to Ohio and Indiana to solicit aid, and gave $25 to each to help pay expenses.

One cause of the destitution was the fact that large numbers of the settlers had lately located, spent all their money in opening their farms, and a partial failure of crops left them in a crippled condition. Thoroughly discouraged, hundreds of them left the country, never to return. Large quantities of grain, provisions and clothing were distributed among the settlers. It is probable that much of it went to those that could hardly be said to be in a destitute condition, yet it is true that the large numbers of people were so much in need that they were fully warranted in asking help. Had the settlers their farms opened, paid for, and a very little surplus grain and stock, this would not have been necessary. At the present time, a crop failure no greater than the one above mentioned, would produce no perceptible effect other than making strict economy necessary.

Lynching of Dalson.—On the night of June 27, 1870, a deed occurred which caused a great deal of excitement, and the indignation of most of the citizens. It was the lynching of E. G. Dalson, who was confined in the county jail, on the charge of having murdered his adopted son. Late in the night three men appeared at the jail and demanded admittance, claiming to have brought a prisoner from Neosho County for safe keeping. Sheriff John Harris opened the door, when several men rushed in, and demanded the key to Dalson's cell. This was refused, when the mob tried to overpower the Sheriff. The Deputy soon came to his aid, but the mob soon succeeded in disarming them and getting possession of the jail, after which they broke into Dalson's cell, placed a rope around his neck and dragged him out. The next day a search was made and the body of Dalson was finally found hanging in an old building at Cofachique. The old man had borne a good reputation in the southern part of the county where he had lived. It is said that before being hanged he confessed the crime, stating that he had had occasion to chastise the boy, and finding him hard to conquer, had thrown him down and placed his foot on his neck, with no thought of doing him a serious injury. On raising his foot he found the boy lifeless, and fearing the consequences, he hid the body where it was afterward found. The hanging of Dalson was generally deprecated by the citizens of the county as an unwarrantable crime and efforts were made to ferret out the participators and bring them to justice. A man named R. T. Stevens was arrested as having been a member of the mob, but he was afterward released on bail.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND FIRST ELECTIONS.

The first session of the Territorial Legislature, in July, 1855, fixed the boundary of Allen County as follows: Commencing at the southeast corner of Anderson County, thence south thirty miles, thence west twenty-four miles; thence north thirty miles; thence east to the place of beginning. It is said the name was selected in honor of Hon. William Allen, of Ohio.

The Legislature also passed an act providing for the speedy organization of the county, and appointed Charles Passmore Probate Judge; and Barnett Owen and B. W. Cowden, commissioners. These were to form a county court to appoint other officers and transact the business of the county. The Probate Judge was to be chairman of the board of commissioners, and as Judge, he had powers nearly equal to those of the District Judges at the present time. The Legislature also appointed William J. Godfrey, Sheriff, and designated Cofachique as the permanent county seat.

The first meeting of the county commissioners was held at Cofachique, May 7, 1856. B. W. Cowden and Barnett Owen were present and sworn in, and the commissioners' court declared open. J. S. Barbee, at whose house all the early commissioners' meetings were held, was appointed County Clerk, but beyond this, little business was transacted. The next commissioners' meeting was held June 2, 1856, and A. W. J. Brown was appointed Probate Judge in place of Charles Passmore, deceased. James Johnson was appointed Sheriff; H. H Hayward, Treasurer; H. D. Parsons, Coroner; and C. B. Houston, Surveyor. The county was divided into three precincts. Deer Creek comprised all that part of the county north of the mouth of the creek of the same name. Richard Fuqua and Hiram Cable were appointed Justices of the Peace; and William Sater, Constable Cofachique precinct comprised all that part of the county from the mouth of Deer Creek, south to the fifth parallel line. John Dunwoody and William Avery, were appointed Justices of the Peace; and Ozias Owen, Constable. Cole Creek precinct comprised all the southern part of the county. Thomas Bashaw and Elias Copelin were appointed Justice of the Peace; and James Brady, Constable.

A meeting convened at Topeka, September, 19, 1855, to consider the project of holding a Free-state Constitutional Convention. The delegates from the Sixth District, of which Allen County formed a part, were Hamilton Smith, James F. Brannan, and Thos. J. Addis. An election of delegates to a constitutional convention was ordered to be held on October 9th, following. There was an election precinct formed in Allen County, the voting place being designated at the house of Richard J. Fuqua. The judges of election were Richard J. Fuqua, William C. Keith, and H. W. Humphrey. The clerks were George W. Goodrich, and Jacob Sherlock. In this precinct William R. Griffith, John Hamilton, A. W. J. Brown, and William Saunders, were voted for. There is no record of the election, but each of these men is said to have received twelve votes. Besides the persons above mentioned, the following named are said to have voted at this election of October, 1855: Marlon Medlea, Gaston Reeves, Guilford Norris, James Johnson, Hiram Hayward, John Moberly, David Ward, Henry Bennett, David Dotson, Isam Prewett, Giles Sater, William Darden, William Sater, Hiram Cable, Augustus Todd, Thomas Owen, John Kyser, D. D. Brown, Edmund Henley, G. W. Jackson, Anderson Wray, H. D. Parsons, James Hertson, Hiram Ward, A. Jones, and A. H. Brown. The delegates who were elected from the district to the Topeka Constitutional Convention were James Phenis, T. H. Burgess and N. Vandever.

The first term of the United States District Court was held at Cofachique in 1856. Judge Sterling G. Cato presided, J. S. Barbee was Clerk, and James Johnson, Sheriff. There is no record of this term of court, and very little was done.

The second term of the United States District Court was held at the same place in October, 1858, Judge Williams presiding; J. B. Lambkin was Clerk, and J. E. Morris, Sheriff. The grand jury was as follows: L. E. Rhodes, Thomas H. Bashaw, Thomas Dean, J. B. Young, Jacob Buzzard, Moses Neal, Michael Kiser, Robert Culbertson, Simon Camerer, A. G. Carpenter, J. C. Redfield, William Pace, Charles Barton, D. Reese and Rufus Wood. There were a number of civil cases before the court, and indictments were found against Leonard Fuqua, for assault and battery with intent to kill Josiah C. Redfield and assault on P. P. Phillips, and several others on the same charge. Among the indicted were Homer C. Leonard, A. C. Smith, A. C. Spencer, Henry Spencer, Edward Cushion and William Fuqua. These were nearly all the result of disputes over land claims, and further than indictments the cases were not prosecuted.

EARLY COUNTY AFFAIRS.

The meetings of the Board of County Commissioners during the year 1856, seem to have been few. On June 16 the Board met, but no business of importance was transacted. The next meeting took place on August 8, a full Board being present. On this date a county tax of 23⅛ per cent* on each $100 was levied, also a poll tax of 50 cents upon each voter. An election of county officers under the "bogus laws" was to take place in October, and at this meeting the Commissioners appointed Election Boards. In Deer Creek precinct, Giles Y. Sater, James Parsons and William C. Keith were appointed Judges of Election, the place for holding which was designated at the house of Isam Brown. In Cofachique precinct, William Avery, G. A. Gideon and William Mayberry were appointed Judges of Election, which was to be held at the county-seat. In Cole Creek precinct the election was designated to take place at the house of W. G. Winburn, and Henry Bennett, Elias Copelin and Thomas H. Bashaw were appointed Judges.

There is no record of the election being held as appointed, in October, and as this was under the bogus laws, which the Free-state citizens, who were in a large majority, refused to recognize, it is probable that the election was not held, as it is found that some of the old officers held over till the election of 1857, Brown, Cowden and Owen managing the affairs of the county up to that time.

Allen County was in the Fort Scott district, which was represented in the Legislature elected in 1856, by Blake Little in the Council and B. Brantley and W. W. Spratt in the House.

On August 19, 1856, it was ordered that a court house should be built at Cofachique. Lots were secured, J. S. Barbee appointed Superintendent of Buildings, $210 appropriated to pay the expenses and levied an additional tax of fifteen mills on the dollar.

Though preparations had been made to build, the order and appropriation, together with the tax levy, was revoked by the Board of Commissioners on January 5, 1857. At the same meeting a county tax of 43⅛ per cent (according to the records) was levied on all taxable property, and a poll tax of 50 cents on each resident who owned property subject to taxation. A bounty of 25 cents each was offered for wolf scalps. Jacob Sherlock was appointed County Assessor, but he not qualifying for the office, Nimrod Hankins was appointed in his place, and at once proceeded to assess the property of the county, and at a meeting of the Commissioners on March 30, 1857, presented his list of the taxable property in the county, which made a total value of $34,515.50. The Commissioners then revoked the tax levy made on January 5, and instead levied a tax of one-sixth of one per cent, and allowed the Assessor $24 as his salary.

In April, 1857, preparatory to a new Legislative apportionment, a census was taken of the counties of Allen, Bourbon, McGee and Dorn which showed a total population of 2,622 for the four counties, of which 645 were legal voters. This gave the district four delegates to the Lecompton Constitutional Convention, and at the election in June Blake Little, H. T. Wilson, Miles Greenwood and G. P. Hamilton were elected. J. S. Barbee was a candidate, but was defeated. All the candidates were Pro-slavery men.

In the new apportionment Allen County in connection with seventeen others was entitled to two Councilmen. Allen was also one of the nineteen disfranchised counties which as a district was entitled to three Representatives. The election was held October 5, 1857. Gov. R. J. Walker had promised that there should be a fair election, therefore the Free-state men determined to vote in full force, instead of refusing to participate as before. The candidates for Delegates to Congress were M. J. Parrott, Free-state, and E. Ransom, Pro-slavery. The result in Allen County by precincts were as follows; Deer Creek, one Pro-slavery vote, and thirty-three Free-state. In Cofachique, sixteen Pro-slavery votes, and twenty Free-state. In Cole Creek, three Pro-slavery votes, and twelve Free-state. Total, twenty Pro-slavery votes, and sixty-five Free-state. At this election O. E. Learnard and C. K. Holliday were elected Councilmen, Christopher Columbia, John Curtis, and Samuel I. Stewart, Representatives. J. D. Passmore was elected Probate Judge; Jesse Morris, Sheriff; Elias Copelin and T. J. Dey, Commissioners.

The first meeting of the new Board of Commissioners was on January 5, 1858. J. H. Signor was appointed Clerk; Z. J. Wisner, Assessor; George A. Miller, Coroner.

On March 9, 1858, A. G. Carpenter was elected as a delegate to the Leavenworth Constitutional Convention from Allen County. At the election on the adoption of the Leavenworth constitution stood 134 for to 4 against.

On March 15th the Board of Commissioners met at the blacksmith shop of Layton Jay, at Cofachique, and proceeded to organize the county into townships. Deer Creek was a strip six miles wide across the northern part of the county. South of it was another six mile strip which was named Cofachique Township. Next south was Humboldt Township, which extended across the county and was six miles wide. The remainder of the county comprised the township of Cottage Grove. The Legislature had a short time before changed the county seat to Humboldt by request of the citizens of that town, without consulting the wishes of the voters of the county; therefore the Commissioners adjourned to hold their next meeting at the office of Orlin Thurston, at Humboldt.

On August 2, 1858, an election was held on the Lecompton constitution, under the English Bill, which resulted in 23 votes for, and 268 against.

On October 4, 1858, members of the Legislature and county officers were elected.

The Free-state Legislature in 1858 abolished the Board of Commissioners, and provided for a County Board of Supervisors instead, which was to be composed of the chairmen of the different township boards. This system was kept up until 1860, when the Commissioner system was again adopted. B. L. G. Stone was the first Chairman of the County Board of Supervisors.

On February 8, 1859, the County Board of Supervisors met at Humboldt. No business of importance was transacted.

The Board of Supervisors met at Cofachique on February 14, 1859, formed Geneva Township and called an election.

On April 5, the Board met at Humboldt and canvassed the vote of the election of March 28, for or against the formation of another State Constitution. The result was as follows: Geneva, 49 for, and 4 against; Humboldt, 70 for; Cottage Grove, 15 for. There were no returns from Deer Creek and Cofachique townships.

On June 7, 1859, a delegate to the Wyandotte Constitutional Convention was elected. There were 344 votes cast, of which J. H. Signor received 175, and Charles S. Clark, 169.

At the election of October 4, 1859, for or against the adoption of the Wyandotte Constitution, 403 votes were cast, of which 244 were for, and 159 against. On the homestead clause there were 201 votes for, and 152 votes against.

The first liquor license granted in the county was on August 22, 1859, to Thomas S. Neal and Weldon S. Main, of Humboldt.

Osage precinct was formed on August 23, 1859.

At the November election, 1859, there were 410 votes cast. Dr. John W. Scott was elected Representative; H. H. Hayward, Sheriff; Simon Camerer, Judge; S. A. Ellis, Attorney; J. H. Signor, Clerk; J. M. Perkins, Register of Deeds; William Doren, Treasurer; Merritt Moore, Superintendent of Schools; A. G. Carpenter, Surveyor; and Charles Fussman, Coroner.

On December 6, 1859, an election was held for State and County officers under the Wyandotte Constitution. At this election 310 votes were cast in the county. William Spriggs and P. P. Elder were elected Senators for the 10th District, composed of Allen, Anderson, and Franklin Counties; W. H. H. Lawrence, Jacob A. Marcelle, W. F. M. Arny, S. J. Crawford, B. L. G. Stone, and N. B. Blanton, as Representatives from the same counties. Stone removed from the Territory in 1860, and Dr. John W. Scott was elected in his place. George A. Miller was elected Probate Judge; J. H. Signor, Clerk of the District Court; Merritt Moore, Superintendent of Schools.

*Though it thus appears on the county records, it is probable that this tax was meant to be but 23⅛ cents on each $100. This tax was revoked at a subsequent meeting, January, 5, 1857.

On the fourth Monday in March, 1860, a special election was held, and resulted in the election of J. G. Rikard, Probate Judge; J. C. Redfield, Sheriff; H. W. Signor, Treasurer; H. Doren, County Assessor; G. E. Zimmerman, D. B. Stewart, and N. T. Winan, Commissioners. At the same election Humboldt was made the county seat.

At the election of November 6, 1860, the result was as follows: Henry Doren, H. D. Parsons, and D. B. Stewart, Commissioners; W. Y. Martin, County Assessor; C. P. Twiss, County Attorney; John C. Douglas, Superintendent of Schools; John W. Scott, Representative. The other county officers, as well as Watson Stewart in the Council, held over.

The first regular election after Kansas became a State took place in November, 1861. Following is the result of the vote in Allen County: D. M. Valentine was elected Representative; J. E. Childs, Probate Judge; J. C. Redfield, Sheriff; A. G. Carpenter, Surveyor; A. Stewart, Assessor; E. A. House, Register of Deeds; Z. D. Wisner, Superintendent of Schools; B. F. Pancoast, Clerk of the District Court; M. Simpson, County Clerk; John A. Hart, Coroner; Nimrod Hankins, Treasurer; Thomas Jackson, Commissioner.

COUNTY-SEAT CONTESTS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Before the organization of the county, the town of Cofachique had been projected by a company of Pro-slavery men from Fort Scott, and by their efforts the county was organized in July, 1855, by the first Territorial Legislature, and Cofachique designated as the permanent county-seat. This being the only Pro-slavery settlement in the county, this act caused some dissatisfaction among the Free-state men. Yet no great strife was stirred up, it being centrally located, until after the town of Humboldt was located in 1857. The founders of the last-named town numbered among them some influential men, who, unknown to the citizens of the county, appeared before the Free-state Territorial Legislature early in the year 1858, and secured the passage of an act locating the county-seat at Humboldt.

From the first there was a great deal of dissatisfaction among the residents of the central and northern parts of the county with the location of the county-seat at Humboldt, and on March 26, 1860, an election was held on its re-location. Iola, which had been started the year before, and Humboldt, were the principal contesting points. The result of the election was that 562 votes were cast for Humboldt, 331 for Iola, 72 for Vernon, 4 for Center, and 2 for Cofachique, the first-named town retaining the county-seat.

The people in the vicinity of Iola, and in the northern part of the county, were still dissatisfied, and for several years thereafter the county-seat question entered largely into every political campaign. Much strife and bitterness of feeling was thus engendered between the two sections of the county, and harsh accusations and recriminations were the order of the day.

After the strife had been kept up for a number of years, a county-seat election was again ordered, to take place on May 10, 1865. At the election of that date, 285 votes were cast, of which Iola received 248 votes, Geneva 35, Humboldt 2, and Vernon 2. Iola was therefore declared the county-seat, and the records and county offices removed there at once, since which time it has remained there, and the sectional strife has abated, until there is little bitterness of feeling between the two sections, and the county-seat is considered as permanently located.

When the county-seat was located at Iola, the town company donated 100 lots to the county, to aid in the construction of public buildings. In July, 1866, bonds were voted to help raise the necessary funds, and not long after a building was purchased of George J. Eldridge, and used for county offices and all court house purposes. In 1877 the present court house was purchased for $1,800, and the old one was sold to the school district to use for a schoolhouse, for $500. The court house is built of stone, has all the necessary office and court rooms, is well furnished, and is valued at $10,000.

The jail is a strong stone structure, and was built at a cost of $10,000, in county bonds, which were voted in August, 1868. The next year the building was erected by White & Hays, at a contract price of $8 400.

In November, 1871, a tax of $5,000 was voted, to purchase and fit up a poor-farm. On February 12, 1872, a tract of land comprising 175 acres was purchased of David Funkhouser, for $26 per acre, and J. W. Driscoll was appointed keeper of the poor-farm. With the buildings and other improvements that have since been made, the value of this property has increased to fully $10,000.

The affairs of the county have always been well conducted. There has never been a defalcation by any county official. The present officers are men of exceptional ability, and carefully guard the interests of the county. T. S. Stover is County Clerk; W. H. McClure, Treasurer; J. S. Fast, Register of Deeds; A. C. Scott, Clerk of District Court; W. G. Allison, Probate Judge; David Worst, Sheriff; J. L. Henderson, Superintendent of Schools; G. De-Witt, Surveyor; A. J. Fulton, Coroner; George A. Amos, County Attorney; A. J. McCarley, George W. Moon and Hiram Lieurance, Commissioners.

LAND LEAGUE AND RAILROADS.

On some of the lands in the county granted to and claimed by the L., L. & G. R. R. Co., many settlers have located, and claim the lands as belonging to the Government, and subject to pre-emption. They have therefore organized themselves under the name of a "land league," to contest the rights of the railroad company. The land in question is claimed by the railroad company to have been granted to them by the act of Congress of March 6, 1863, and lies between the ten and twenty mile limits of the above named company, outside the limits of the M., K. & T. R. R. lands, and mainly in Towns 23, 24, 25 and 26, and in Ranges 21 and 22, and comprises about 29,000 acres. There has been considerable trouble, which grew out of the contest over this land, and several deeds of violence have been committed. The question of ownership yet remains unsettled. The settlers claim that the lands outside the ten mile limit belong to the United States Government, on account of the road not having been completed to its intended terminus by the time agreed upon, and that the lands unsold by the State by March 3, 1873, reverted again to the United States Government.

The first railroads were built in Allen County in 1870, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad being completed across the southwestern part of the county in the spring, and the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Galveston Railroad across the county from north to south, on the east side of the Neosho River, in the fall of the same year. Bonds were voted by the county to aid in the construction of each of these roads.

In 1880, bonds having been voted by the different townships on the line, the Fort Scott & Wichita Railroad was built across the county from east to west, passing through Iola.

Besides the above roads, bonds have been voted to the Nebraska & Kansas Central Railroad, which will, if built, pass through the county on a line nearly parallel with the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad, formerly known as the L., L. & G. R. R.

STATISTICS OF GROWTH.

For the first few years in the history of the county it will be seen that it grew quite rapidly. In 1860 there was a population of 3,082. During the years of the war the country developed but slowly. From 1865 to 1870 there was a steady increase, the population then numbering 7,022. For the next three years the country settled rapidly, and numerous improvements were made, as well as thousands of acres of land brought under cultivation. This period was perhaps the most progressive one in the history of the county; money was plenty and nearly every one did business, or bought property to the full extent of his capital. The result was that with the financial panic of 1873, followed by the "grasshopper raid" of 1874, nearly all improvement stopped, value of property depreciated, and many of the settlers (nearly one-third) left the county. In 1875 the population numbered 66,38. The next year times began to look better, and by 1878 the population was 8,954. With the increasing prosperity of the country, the population numbered 10,436 in 1881, while improvements that were made kept pace with the settlement. In 1882 the population had increased to 11,098, with a total valuation of property at $2,331,576.72. The value of manufactures was $50,900, with the value of annual products $150,000. In the county were eighteen church buildings, having a seating capacity of 4,345, and valued at $39,700. There are sixty-nine school districts, besides those that join with other counties, all have good houses which are well seated, many of them supplied with improved apparatus, and conducted, generally, by an energetic and skilled class of teachers.

A glance at the figures below shows the agricultural resources and wealth of Allen County. There were in 1882, 120 acres of spring wheat, yielding 1,200 bushels; 3,359 acres of winter wheat, producing 64,725 bushels; corn, 57,698 acres, 2,598,410 bushels; rye, 53 acres, 954 bushels; oats, 5,965 acres, 208,775 bushels; barley, 5 acres, 140 bushels; potatoes, 716 acres, 57,280 bushels; sweet potatoes, 24 acres, 1,800 bushels; sorghum 374 acres, 33,660 gallons; castor beans, 1,394 acres, 14,346 bushels; flax, 4,990 acres, 49,900 bushels; broomcorn, 4,963 acres, 2,481,500 pounds; millet and Hungarian, 4,086 acres, 12,258 tons; timothy and clover, 148 acres, 327 tons; prairie hay, 33,829 acres, 50,743 tons; wool clip of past year, 28,216 pounds. The value of garden produce was $6,685; poultry and eggs, $7,946; milk sold, $265; of horticultural products, $1,393; animals sold for beef, $222,912. The number of pounds of cheese produced was 15,700; of butter, 219,555. The number of horses and mules in the county is 6,106; of cattle, 20,106; sheep, 4,769; swine, 10,981.

About one-fourth of the county is open to stock range, which with the numerous streams makes this industry profitable. There is good grasing for about six months. There being no herd law it costs about $1 per head for pasturage. Prairie hay costs about $3 per ton. Sheep and swine raising are attended with great success. Of the last, Berkshires and Poland-Chinas are the favorites.

HUMBOLDT.

This is a thriving business town, situated in the southwestern part of the county. The location is a desirable one, on the level valley lands on both the east and west banks of the Neosho River. The business portion of the town is on the east side of the river and about one half mile from its bank. Coal Creek forms part of the southern limits. The two railroads are the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas on the east side, and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas on the west side of the river.

The population of Humboldt is about 1,400, and the town is at present about at a standstill, though there are prospects of increased progress in the near future. There are here some of the best business houses in the county, and the town enjoys a large and prosperous trade. The Neosho River furnishes an abundant water power which is already being utilized for manufacturing purposes. The citizens are of a substantial class and progressive.

EARLY HISTORY.

In the fall of 1856 B. M. Blanton, a Methodist missionary, in making a trip through southern Kansas became impressed with the idea that this was an excellent point for the foundation of a town. He returned to Lawrence and told his brother, N. B. Blanton, and J. A. Coffey of this selection, advising them to locate a town site. In March, 1857, J. A. Coffey selected the site, and with the aid of a pocket compass made a temporary survey. He found an abandoned log cabin there; it had been built the spring before by some claimant who abandoned the country. In the fall of 1856 Charles Baland, who was sick, abandoned his claim near there and moved into the cabin, where he spent the winter, and in the spring, intending to leave the country, he presented the cabin and his claim to the land to Mrs. E. H. Young, but finally decided to remain, and located another claim where his farm now is. Coffey finding a claim on the land paid $20 for it to secure peaceable possession. He then returned to Lawrence, where he and Blanton met a German Colony, which was induced to help them form a town.

The German Colony was organized in Hartford, Conn., during the winter of 1856-7, and consisted of F. M. Serenbets, Jacob Schleicher, William Lassman, John Frixel, Franz Trontz, — Landerwasser, A. Senner, H. Zwanziger and N. Kemmerer. All of these with the exception of the last named, who did not come until a year later, arrived at Lawrence in March, 1857. There they were met by Blanton and Coffey, who induced them to locate on their town site. The Humboldt Town Company was organized and the town so named in honor of Baron von Humboldt. Among the members were J. A. Coffey, N. B. Blanton, F. M. Serenbets, J. H. & H. W. Signor, Dr. Hartman and A. D. Searle. The German portion of the colony arrived on May 10, 1857, and were soon followed by Coffey, Blanton and others.

The first house built was one of logs built for J. A. Coffey, at a cost of $25. It was located on Bridge street, on the east side of the river. The next house was built southwest of Coffey's in the summer of 1857, and was known as "Bachelors' Hall." It was occupied during the summer by Dr. G. A. Miller, R. M. Works, J. W. Sperring, J. H. and H. W. Signor, B. H. Whitlow and W. W. Pollock. During the same summer, a man by the name of Clark, built a two story log hotel. In June, J. A. Coffey opened a store in a cabin in the timber near the river. This store was soon after sold to W. C. O'Brien.

During the summer of 1857, Orlin Thurston, a young attorney, was persuaded to locate at Humboldt, and put up a steam saw mill. He soon began sawing lumber, and then building began on the prairie portion of the town site, where the business center now is. Before this most of the building was in the timber along the river.

In the spring of 1858, Charles Fussman opened a tin shop, in a log cabin, in the timber.

The first frame building erected was on the corner of Eighth and Bridge streets, which was a residence and store of J. A. Coffey. It was afterward part of the cigar manufactory of W. H. Holtschneider, destroyed during the fire of January, 1883.

In the spring of 1858, a steam saw and grist mill was opened by W. C. O'Brien. The mill was hauled from Jefferson City, Mo., and required the use of nine yoke of oxen and one span of horses. It took fifty-four days to make the trip both ways. The mill was in operation by May 1st, and had one run of buhrs. It was the first grist-mill in the county.

During 1858, the town grew quite rapidly. Prominent among the settlers of that year was John R. Goodin, who has since distinguished himself as a District Judge, and as a member of Congress.

The first physician to locate in Humboldt, was Geo. A. Miller, in 1857. His office was first in a tent, and his sign as "physician and surgeon" was nailed to a jack oak tree.

The postoffice was established in 1858, and A. Irwin appointed Postmaster. A postal route had been established from Lawrence, the same year. Before that time the mail was brought from Fort Scott by private carriers. Among them were S. J. Stewart and a young man named Dotson. The mail was weekly until 1865, when it was changed to tri-weekly, and not long after to daily.

The first brick was made at Humboldt, in 1859, on the place now owned by Capt. O. S. Coffin, adjoining the town on the south.

Prior to the year 1860, meetings of the town company were held at Lawrence, and some of the members never removed to Humboldt. On June 20th, however, the company reorganized and was incorporated under the name of the Humboldt Town Association, which was composed of N. B. Blanton, J. A. Coffey, J. H. Signor, H. W. Signor, Geo. A. Miller and W. C. O'Brien. The town site was entered on November 16, 1860, by J. G. Rickard, in trust for the Town Association.

In 1861, the United States Land Office was removed to Humboldt from Fort Scott. N. B. Blanton had been elected a member of the first State Legislature, and all his work had been in the interest of Humboldt. He voted for both Lane and Pomeroy for United States Senators, securing from them the promise that the land office should be removed to his town. J. C. Burnett was Register of Land Office, and Charles Adams, son in law of Lane, was Receiver. Senator Lane gave them orders to select a new location. Humboldt finally secured it, but the Town Association had to give 200 lots in order to obtain it. The removal was effected and the office opened for business, September, 23. 1861, in a building on Bridge street, the old red frame structure now used as a barber shop. It was then used as the court house as well.

From the foundation of the town, until the summer of 1860, its growth was quite rapid. There was then a population of perhaps 300, and there were about fifty buildings. The drought of that year had such an effect on the country that for the remainder of the year and early in 1861, the town progressed very slowly. During all its earlier history, Humboldt was more prosperous than most of the Kansas towns, having such a large trade with the Indian tribes on the south and west.

In 1861, the war broke out, and most of the able-bodied men having enlisted in the army, but little building was done. Then in September of that year, the town was robbed, and about one month later was burned by rebel raiders. Only a few buildings were left, and until the close of the war, but few new buildings were erected.

The first building of any consequence that was erected after the raid, was the "red store," on the corner of Bridge and Eighth streets, now a part of the store of Neal & Cunningham. The lower story was built by Col. W. Doudna, and the upper one by the Masonic fraternity. This was followed by a few more buildings.

In 1866, the town began to progress quite rapidly, and a number of fine structures were erected. Among them were the schoolhouse, Catholic church, the brick block on Eighth street, of which the Monroe House now forms a part, and a number of other good buildings. During the next three years the growth of the town was quite rapid.

In 1865, a treaty was effected with the Osage Indians which permitted actual settlers to enter 160 acres each, at $1.25 per acre. This land was sold in 1868, and the Land Office being at Humboldt, brought an immense trade to the town, which made it for some time one of the most thriving business places in the State.

On April 2, 1870, the M., K. & T. R. R. was completed to the town site. To secure this road, the city voted $75,000 in bonds. The citizens also bought for $1,300, 160 acres of land on the west side of the river, of which they gave to the railroad company ten acres for depot grounds and right of way, and the remainder was divided into lots, of which the railroad company received one-half.

In October, 1870, the L. L. & G. R. R. (now the K. C., L. & S. K. R. R.) was finished [illegible] Humboldt and the event was celebrated the following month.

The years 1870 and 1871, were marked by the rapid growth of the town. Large numbers of buildings were erected, some of them being constructed of brick and stone. Property greatly increased in value until it was almost impossible to buy lots. An iron bridge was built across the Neosho River by the Humboldt Bridge Company, which was composed of some of the leading men of the town and various other improvements were made.

In 1872, the improvements of the town was not so rapid, and the inflated prices of property began to decrease. In 1873, the great financial crash seriously affected the business of Humboldt, and this was followed by the general devastation of crops by grasshoppers the following year, which resulted very disastrously to the town, some of the merchants failing in business, while many of the citizens moved away. Then followed a dull period, but before it commenced the town had arrived to nearly its present proportions. For the last ten years, while it is true that at no time has there been any great progress, Humboldt has always held its ground as a prosperous business town, and if slowly, improvements have steadily been made and at the present time its future prospects seem more favorable than at any other period in its history.

The Fire of 1883.—Since the burning of Humboldt by the rebels in 1861, noted in the history of the county, there have been very few fires. The last one occurred on the night of January 11, 1883. About eight o'clock the fire was discovered in the brick building owned by Dayton, Barber & Co., on Bridge street. The lower floor was occupied by the grocery store of Charles Lehman, and the upper story by law offices, and the Independent Press printing office. On the same floor H. D. Smith and family and Mrs. Lydia Sniff resided. All had gone to church and left a lamp burning in the printing office and it is supposed it exploded. The building was soon in flames, and to prevent the fire spreading further, the cigar factory on the east was torn down. On the west was Curdy's double store, over which were law, insurance, and real estate offices, as well as dental rooms. This building was soon covered with men who, by hard work, saved the building. The greater part of the goods, furniture and fixtures, were carried from all these rooms, except Smith's private rooms and printing office, the contents of which were all destroyed. The damage to the goods, as well as to Curdy's building, was great, but most of the property, except Smith's, was insured for nearly enough to cover the losses.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

Humboldt was organized as a village on April 6, 1866, by an order from A. L. Dornberg, the Probate Judge. The trustees appointed were Orlin Thurston, W. Doudna, J. C. Redfield, George A. Miller and N. Kemmerer. Orlin Thurston was elected chairman, and Charles Baland, clerk.

In the spring of 1870, Humboldt was incorporated as a city of the third class. W. W. Curdy was elected Mayor; T L. Byrne, Clerk; and J. C. Redfield, Treasurer. The Council was composed of Moses Neal, Charles Fussman, William Rath, W. H. Andrews and N. Kemmerer.

At the present time the city can hardly be said to have an organized government. Some years ago bonds to a large amount were voted to the Fort Scott narrow-gauge railroad, which were to be paid when the road was completed across the townsite from the M. K. & T. to the K. C., L. & S. K. R. R. The track was laid for that distance, but the road was never finished. The city, feeling the claim for bonds to be unjust, dropped its leading city officers, that a suit could not be brought against the corporation. Therefore, there is now no Mayor, Clerk, Treasurer, or President of the Council. Yet to keep up some form of government, two members of the council are elected and perform the regular duties of a city board. The only other official is the City Marshall.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES, AND SOCIETIES.

The first school was taught in 1858, by S. W. Clark. The next teacher was Prof. Hand, who, in 1859 and 1860, began the erection of an academy. The drought coming on, this was abandoned. In 1860, the teacher was Miss Myra Pilcher; in 1861, William Hart; Miss Kate Burnett, 1862.

The improvement of the schools has kept pace with the progress of the town, and now there are seven departments, four being taught in one schoolhouse, and the other three in another. The old schoolhouse was built in 1866. The school is in a very prosperous condition and under charge of Prof. H. C. Ford.

In 1856, Rev. C. R. Rice, of the Methodist Episcopal Church Society, preached in the neighborhood of Humboldt, and was followed in 1857 by Rev. Mr. Thompson. The first sermon was preached in Humboldt in 1857, by Prof. F. M. Serenbets. He preached in both the English and German languages. During the years of 1859 and 1860, Rev. A. Coffey, a Baptist minister, preached in Humboldt and throughout the county. Among other early ministers were Rev. Messrs. Garrison Cable, S. M. Webb, I. Knott and W. W. Witten.

The first church erected was that of the United Brethren in Christ, began in 1859 and finished the following year. Among the leading members of this society were N. B. Blanton and family and Evart DeWitt and family. This church was for some years used as a union church for all denominations, also for a schoolhouse.

The first Sunday-school was organized in the Union Church on May 13, 1860, by Revs. I. Knott and S. M. Webb. It was a union school, and Dr. William Wakefield was elected the first superintendent. This school was kept up during the summer for every year except that of 1862, until April, 1867. It was then succeeded by the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school, of which Dr. William Wakefield was elected superintendent.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—This church was organized in the summer of 1860, with John Tripp, class leader, and Rev. Mr. Bukey, minister. The church was built in 1870. It is located on New York street. It has always been prosperous, and has a large membership. Rev. Mr. C R. Pattee is pastor.

The Evangelical Association.—In the year 1860, the Germans built a house of worship on Bridge street, east of the public square. The church was under the charge of Rev. Dubbs. Sometime afterward there was some difference of opinion among the members, and the Evangelical Lutherans withdrew, since which time the old society has been known as the Evangelical Association. The society is prosperous, with Rev. H. Toedman the present pastor.

German Evangelical Lutheran Church.—In the year 1863, this church society built their brick church with a stone front. William Lange was the first pastor. The church has always enjoyed prosperity. Rev. F. Karth is the present pastor.

St. Joseph's Catholic Church.—Many Roman Catholics located at Humboldt at an early date. In 1865 steps were taken to build a church in the northern part of the town. The citizens contributed liberally, and in due time their house of worship was completed. The church has quite a large membership, under charge of Rev. Father Charles L. Kearful.

The Presbyterian Church.—On July 12, 1868, this church society was organized by Revs. A. T. Norton and James Lewis. The first members were James Blyth, C. P. Ives, H. A. Curdy, Naomi Goodin, Emma Wakefield and Mrs. Eliza Savercool. Rev James Lewis was pastor until 1875. The society is prosperous, and Rev. W. B. Chamberlain is now pastor. The Sunday-school was organized in 1868, and has since been kept up.

The Baptist Church.—Services were held by this church denomination from the first year of the history of Humboldt. An organization was soon effected. Among the prominent members were Rev. H. K. Stimpson, A. L. Dornberg and family, and Dr. George A. Miller and family. Occasional services were held until the church was re-organized, on January 30, 1870. There were then eleven members, and Rev. A. Hitchcock was the first pastor. The church was built in 1872, being dedicated on May 19 of that year. It is situated on Ninth street.

The Christian Church.—This society has an effective organization, and services are held regularly. Rev. G. W. Taylor is the pastor. The church was organized at quite an early date, the prominent members being Elders Brown and Shaw, and the families of E. H. Young, O. B. Young, and Phineas Cox.

Neosho Lodge, No 919, K. of H.—Was instituted February 21, 1878, with sixteen members. Of the first officers, E. R. Russell was dictator, J. W. Patterson, reporter, and W. D. Brewer, financial reporter. The lodge is now in a prosperous condition, with forty members. J. Rath is D.; J. B. Torbert, Rep.; W. E. Wolfe, Treas.; E. C. Eldridge, F. Rep.; J. P. Brooks, V. D.; L. Allaire, A. D.; J. R. Lowey, chaplain; G. H. Fox, G.; E. F. Bailey, guardian; J. N. Uttersen, P. D. Since its organization there have been but two deaths, those of C. M. Watts and I. G. Smith.

Alpha Lodge, No. 258, Knight's and Ladies of Honor.—Was instituted March 17, 1880, with fourteen members. J. W. Patterson was protector; Mrs. N. M. Russell, V. P.; Mrs. E. F. Patterson, Sec.; E. C. Eldridge, F. Sec.; E. R. Russell, Treas.; Mrs. E. C. Eldridge, chaplain; G. H. Fox, G.; Mrs. E. A. Allen, guardian; R. H. Williams, sentinel; G. H. Allen, P. P. The lodge is in a prosperous condition, though the membership has increased but little since organization. J. W. Patterson is P. P., G. H. Fox, P. The other officers are the same as above, having all been re-elected.

Vicksburg Post, No. 72, G. A. R.—Was organized June 9, 1882, with thirty members. Its membership is now fifty, and is rapidly increasing. The first officers were G. A. Nicholetts, P. C.; G. W. Moon, Adj.; G. De Witt, S. V. C.; L. A. Garrett, J. V. C.; James B. Young, Q. M.; E. R. Russell. The present officers are the same.

Pacific Lodge, No. 29, A., F. & A. M.—Was chartered October 17, 1860, with I. N. Phillips, W. M.; A. W. J. Brown, S. W.; A. G. Carpenter, J. W. The other charter members were Drury Tye and J. R. Frost. The present W. M. is George H. Fox; secretary, H. C. Ford. The lodge is in a prosperous condition, and has fifty-four members.

Humboldt Lodge, No. 30, I. O. O. F.—Was instituted under a charter dated June 24, 1867. The charter members were Peter Long, J. L. Samson, J. C. Chambers, G. Wilson and I. N. Phillips. The lodge is now in a prosperous condition and has a large membership.

Valley Chapter, No. 11, R. A. M.—This chapter was chartered on October 19, 1869. The first officers were W. H. Andrews, H. P.; J. G. Fisk, king; J. S. Fletcher, scribe. The present membership is forty, and the condition of the chapter good. J. S. Webb is H. P.; D. McLeod, K.; J. H. Bales, S.; C. E. Blackmer, Sec.; Peter Long, Treas.; G. A. Amos, C. H.; G. H. Fox, P. S.

THE PRESS, BANKS, MANUFACTURES, ETC.

The Humboldt Herald was established on November 16, 1864, by Maj. Joseph Bond. J. H. Young soon became a partner, and Hon. J. R. Goodin was the local editor. This paper existed about one year and was then discontinued.

The Humboldt Union was established, April 16, 1866, with Orlin Thurston, editor, and W. T. McElroy, publisher. It was then a seven-column folio. On January 1, 1867, Needham & McElroy became proprietors, and on August 1, 1868, the entire paper was purchased by McElroy. On April 1, 1872, T. C. Sherman became a partner, and on the first day of the next October, W. R. Spooner was admitted to partnership, he having a one-third interest. The last named sold his share in the office to D. B. Emmett, on April 1, 1872, and he, one year afterward, sold to McElroy & Sherman. On June 1, 1874, Sherman retired, since which time W. T. McElroy has been sole editor and proprietor. The Union is Republican in politics, and is one of the largest and best papers in the county.

The Southern Kansas Statesman was established, October 27, 1870, by Berry & Campbell. It was discontinued in May, 1872.

The Southwest was the name of a weekly newspaper, established June 13, 1872, by Col. G. P. Smith & Son It only existed for a few months.

The Real Estate Reporter was established in 1870, by Emmert & McCullock, and was published for one year.

The Rural Kansan was established in 1873, by D. B. Emmert, and was published for one year, when it was discontinued.

The Inter-State is a six-column quarto, weekly newspaper, Democratic in politics, and is published by B. F. Burd. The paper was established, October 1, 1876, by A. D. Dunn. It is the only Democratic newspaper published in the county.

The Independent Press.—On January 1, 1882, H. D. Smith & L. A. Hoffman started this paper, which has always been Independent in politics. In July, H. D. Smith became sole proprietor. At the present time, W. E. Smith & W. O. Strandburg are publishers, and H. D. Smith, editor. The office was burned in January, 1883, but it is proposed to soon resume the publication of the paper.

The history of the banking institutions of Humboldt, is as follows: In 1869, Pratt & TenEyck founded a bank, and continued in partnership until 1870, when they dissolved. Pratt & Dayton then founded the Humboldt Bank, and Bacon & TenEyck, the Allen County Bank, which failed the next year. In 1875, the Humboldt Bank passed into the hands of Dayton, Barber & Co., who are still its proprietors.

The Humboldt Water Flouring Mill occupies the site of the old O'Brien grist mill. It was rebuilt by him in 1866. In 1875 O'Brien & Lindsay put in a dam, making a water-power mill. The entire property was afterward purchased by William Lindsay and improvements made until it is now one of the best mills in the State. Flour is manufactured by the new patent process, and the capacity of the mill is one hundred barrels per day.

Coal Creek Flouring Mill is a stone grist and flouring mill on Coal Creek, south of town. It is operated by steam. It was built in 1871 by Torbert, Dickinson & Co.; but is now operated by Greenfield & Co., and a good quality of flour is made.

Lander's Carriage Factory is operated by Charles Lander, and is located on Bridge street. Wagons, carriages, buggies, phætons, etc., are manufactured.

Redfield's Carriage Factory is located in the northern part of the town, and is owned and operated by W. A. Redfield, who turns out a good quality of work, making all kinds of vehicles.

Humboldt Furniture Factory is situated on the west bank of the Neosho River, on Bridge street, runs by water-power, and is owned and operated by Utterson & McLeod. The manufacture of furniture began in 1875, and has since been kept up. Eight hands are employed, and about $6,000 paid out annually. The value of the factory is about $4,000.

Humboldt Woolen Mill.—In 1882 E. Stickler purchased the old brewery on the east bank of the Neosho River, on Bridge street, and began work to construct a woolen mill. The building is to comprise two wings, one 30x45 feet, and the other 16x45 feet. The machinery is on the ground and the mill nearly ready for work. It is to be a one-set mill of six looms, and will require ten operatives. The capital is $10,000. It is proposed to soon add a machine shop.

The Neosho Valley Land Agency.—This is one of the institutions, not only of Allen County, but of all southeastern Kansas. It was organized in 1875, with George A. Bowlus, the former land broker, as general manager, and J. H. Richards as its attorney. Mr. Bowlus carried his already extensive business into the new concern. It advertised largely in almost every State and Territory in the United States. It has published books, papers, statistical information, circulars, corresponded, and by every fair means laid before home-seekers everywhere, reliable facts concerning that part of Kansas particularly known as the Neosho Valley. It has not therefore been local or altogether selfish, but has been a most important factor in all that part of Kansas within the radius of its labors and influence. It is hardly necessary to say that its immediate vicinity has been greatly benefited by it, and its population wonderfully multiplied. During its years of existence it has required the most of the time of one person to answer the numerous inquiries from all parts of the country and supply statistics asked for. They have carefully boxed and shipped to many commercial centers of the country samples of the various cerials, grasses, roots and fruits of this rich valley. In 1882 they sent a large selection of these samples to Hon. Frank Dundore of the Philadelphia Exchange, and were exhibited to the great satisfaction of the Stock Exchange and others of that city, until literally carried away piece-meal by the multitudes who came to wonder and admire. The following article is taken from the Philadelphia Evening Star, of July 3, 1882: "An agricultural fair in a broker's office; the wonderful display of fruits and cereals made by Kansas at the Centennial exhibition will be long remembered by those who saw it. That the things exhibited were not grown for an international exhibition has been proved repeatedly, by the exhibitions given since of the wonderful fertility of the soil of that State. One of the finest exhibitions of what the State can do, if not the finest, was seen this morning in the office of F. Dundore & Co., brokers, 38 South Third street. The stock board closed, and therefore the brokers had plenty of time on hand to view the exhibition in Mr. Dundore's office. They availed themselves of the opportunity so unanimously that when the reporter entered the place he thought he was attending an agricultural fair. Mr. George A. Bowlus, of Iola, Allen County, Neosho Valley, Kansas, a personal friend of Mr. Dundore, sent him by express a box containing specimens of the cereals, fruits and vegetables, that are raised in that vicinity, and could be seen on the farms at the time the box was expressed, June 29. There were in the box large apples, almost ready for eating, more than ordinary sized crab apples, on one, some of which would weigh a pound; Lima beans, the pods of which were fully three inches long; new potatoes, averaging two to a pound; large, luscious blackberries, peaches almost ready for picking, specimens of flax fifty-four inches in height, oats that had grown fifty-eight inches and were remarkably heavy, clover as full of the flower as an egg is of meat, three feet high; timothy thirty-eight inches high; wheat as thick, heavy and white as seen anywhere, and corn seven feet high, full of ears. Mr. Bowlus, in a letter accompanying the box, said that the corn was growing in that section at the rate of four inches a day, and if the weather was as good as it had been there would be the largest crop ever gathered in the State. The wheat, oats and flax had all been cut, and had yielded more than the most enthusiastic farmer anticipated. The exhibits are certainly remarkable, and go to show what the great West can do." But its work seems to be just begun. Its proprietors seem to never tire of their ceaseless round of toil. New features are to be added, a regular bureau of statistics and current information is to be established. A paper to be regularly published, not only as an advertising medium, but of general news. A traveling agent and correspondent to be put in the field. A land agency, as a rule, is a private enterprise, operated for making money in the ways characteristic of too many such, and altogether selfish in its plans and purposes, but the manner in which the Neosho Valley Land Agency of Iola is conducted, demonstrates that a land agency under the management of competent and conscientious men, whose lives and business have been worked into the very foundation walls of the community may rise to a dignity and office of an institution such as we have already declared this to be.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

H. B. ADAMS, farmer, Section 1, P. O. Humboldt, was born near Cleveland, Ohio, in 1845, and shortly afterwards his parents moved to Green County, Wis., where he was reared on a farm. In June, 1862, he enlisted in the Eighth United States Infantry, Company B, and served three years. After the war, he went to Stephenson County, Ill., where he was employed in farming and teaching school. In the fall of 1872, he came to Kansas, and located on his present farm in Allen County, east of the city of Humboldt. Mr. Adams has 240 acres of improved land, and since his arrival in this State, has also taught school in the county. In connection with his farming pursuits, he was for two years teacher in the public schools in Humboldt. During 1881 and 1882, he attended the Normal School at Paola, graduating in June of the latter year.

CHARLES F. BUCHHALTER, real estate, loan and insurance office, was born in Germany, January 20, 1852, and two years later his parents immigrated to Reading, Penn. There he learned the trade of hatter, and followed that occupation about six years. He came to Kansas in March, 1876, located in Allen County, and for four years followed agricultural pursuits. In March, 1880, he moved to Humboldt and engaged in real estate business, also making a specialty of loaning money for Eastern capitalists, and transacting a general insurance business. In June, 1882, he made a trip to Europe, remaining there several months, traveling through England, Ireland and Scotland, in the interests of immigration to this State.

EVAN CALLANTINE, contractor and builder, was born in Guernsey County, Ohio, in 1835, and learned the carpenter trade at Marion, Grand Co., Ind., where he followed it for three years, as an apprentice. In 1856, he moved to Champaign County, Ill., and worked at his trade. In 1859, he went to Douglas County, and in June, 1861, enlisted in Company D, Twenty-first Illinois Infantry; was discharged in April, 1863, and re-enlisted in First Mississippi Marine Brigade, serving until December 1865. He then worked at his trade in Illinois, Missouri and Montana. He came to Kansas in March, 1871; located in Humboldt and engaged in his present business, following it for two years; then in Chicago for about four years, returning to Humboldt in 1877. Mr. C. has quite a nice business. He is a good builder, having had some twenty-three years' experience.

JOHN B. CHARLES, dealer in live stock, was born in Rushford, Allegany County, N. Y., September 11, 1851. Removed to Fort Scott, Bourbon Co., Kan., in 1868, with his father, Jonathan Charles, from Churchville, Monroe Co., N. Y. Spent one year attending and teaching school in Fort Scott, one year in farming, in Vernon County, Mo., but made his start in the summer of 1871, by breaking prairie with the old-fashioned ox team, and bought a few calves with the proceeds; worked for the Howe Sewing Machine Co. one year. In January, 1874, in company with his cousin, Frank N. Bannister, who had just come from Monroe County, N. Y., commenced buying, bunching and selling young cattle, under the firm name of Charles & Bannister. The dry summer of 1874 drove them to Big Creek, Allen County, in search of feed, where they were located for four years. In 1879, he made headquarters at Humboldt, summering cattle in Allen and Woodson counties, where Mr. C. owns 720 acres of land, and wintering on straw and stalk feed in Neosho County. Business increased until they handled about 2,000 head yearly, selling to parties from Illinois, Nebraska and Missouri, as well as Kansas. Mr. Bannister withdrew January 1, 1882, Mr. C. continuing the business. He was married September 14, 1880, to Teresa Neal, daughter of Moses Neal. She was an early settler, being born at or near Humboldt. They have two children.

JOSEPH A. COX, carpenter and builder, was born in Madison County, Ky., February 22, 1846, and learned the carpenter trade in Bartholomew County, Ind., serving an apprenticeship of some three years. In 1866 he removed to McLean County, Ill., where he farmed and worked at his trade, and was also for a time in Champaign County. He came to Kansas in March, 1875, locating at Humboldt, and engaged in his present business. He has a nice trade, both here and in the country, where he has built several schoolhouses. Mr. Cox is a practical builder with an experience extending over twenty years.

ROBERT E. CULBERTSON, farmer, Section 19, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Hart County, Ky., July 2, 1832 and there he spent his youth on his father's farm. He came to the Territory April 30, 1857, and to Allen County May 29, 1857, and pre-empted his present homestead. During the late Rebellion he served in the Kansas State Militia. In the spring of 1864 he moved to Oregon, where he followed agricultural pursuits in Douglas County for some four years and returned to his farm in Allen County on November 14, 1878. Mr. Culbertson is among the largest farmers in this county; he has some 940 acres of land, 500 of which is under cultivation, and he is an extensive raiser and dealer in cattle, hogs, etc. He was married in Allen County, Kan., June 8, 1861, to Miss Adelia E. Smith; they have a family of five children.

WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM, of Neal & Cunningham, merchants, was born in Allegheny County, Penn., in 1837, was reared on a farm. He taught school for a time, was for five years principal of a ward school in Pittsburgh, and during two years of that period was also engaged in oil and mercantile business in the Oil Regions of Pennsylvania. He then traveled for a publishing house eighteen monthsand for two months in life insurance business. During the war Mr. Cunningham served three years in an independent Battery of Pennsylvania Artillery. He came to Humboldt in February, 1871, was for three years employed in lumber business; had a store at Kalida, Kan., for two years, after which he returned to Humboldt and was again employed in lumber and mercantile business. In May, 1880, he joined Moses Neal in general merchandise business. The firm have two stores, dry goods, etc., and groceries, the latter being under the management of Mr. Cunningham.

E. C. ELDRIDGE, of Eldridge & Dunbaugh, grocers, was born at South Deerfield, Mass., January 31, 1853. In 1856 his father, James Monroe Eldridge, emigrated to Lawrence, Kan., where he died a year later. The subject of this sketch was reared and educated in Lawrence. In 1870 came to Humboldt, was employed for two years in the real estate business, and for nine months as clerk in Pratt & Dayton's Bank. In 1873 he embarked in the grocery business. In 1866 he removed to Johnson County, Iowa, near Iowa City, where he built a mill and did a successful business for fourteen years, making all kinds of fine goods, such as have received several State diplomas together with numerous county diplomas. As the business increased and the water power was limited, he removed his machinery to Iowa Falls, Hardin Co., Iowa, where he did a large business, furnishing convict goods for Iowa, Nebraska, and Kansas prisons, and as there was not sufficient wool he had to import wool from Kansas. So he sold out and settled in Woodson County, Kas., and farmed till he could sell it, and then commenced building a sample woolen mill at Humboldt, Allen Co., in 1883, where he expects to remain and work up a large business in the midst of a good wool country. He also has two sons operating a fine business in Washington, Iowa. As a mechanic he is among the patentists, and has a recent patent on a windmill which he contemplates manufacturing in connection with the woolen mill. With thirty-six years experience success might be expected. He was an orphan boy sent out in the world at the age of ten years, in 1847.

ELIJAH STROSNIDER, stock-raiser, Section 20, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Monongahela County, W. Va., April 25, 1838. There his father carried on an extensive stock farm. In the spring of 1859 he moved to Scotland County, Mo., where he lived until April 25, 1860, when he came to Kansas and pre-empted 160 acres of land in Woodson County and turned his attention to improving the same. In the spring of 1861 he enlisted in the Tenth Kansas Infantry and served four years. Mr. S. was commissioned Second Lieutenant, but was not mustered, the war closing. Returning to his farm he resided there two years, and then moved to Humboldt, Allen County, where he engaged in the wholesale liquor business, which he carried on for about twelve years. In the spring of 1881 he moved to his present farm. He has 520 acres of land and is extensively engaged in raising stock, making a specialty of mules, of which he owns a large number. Mr. S. was married in Allen County September 20, 1868, to Mary Beck. They have a family of three children.

DR. GEORGE W. TAYLOR is a native of New York and a graduate of Syracuse Medical College. The doctor began the practice of medicine in his native State about 1846. In 1853 he moved west to Princeton, Ill., where he continued to reside until April, 1881, when he came to Humboldt, Kas., to reside. He has since the fall of 1853 been connected with the Christian Church, is now preaching, and has full charge of that church at this place. He also practices medicine and has a nice farm of about 160 acres.

HARMANN THOLEN, restaurant and confectionery, was born in Germany September 9, 1853. He was for four years employed as a sailor on the ocean, and in 1872 immigrated to Clinton County, Ill., where he was employed in agricultural pursuits. He came to Kansas in 1877, located at Humboldt, and engaged in grocery business, selling his goods in the country in exchange for butter, eggs, etc. In 1878 he purchased his present business from J. Hamberger, and has now the oldest established restaurant in the place. He is also engaged in manufacturing and bottling soda water, etc., in which business he employs three men. Mr. T. carries on an extensive trade in ice. He has two large ice houses, capable of storing some 2,000 tons.

There he learned the trade of cabinetmaker, and at the age of twenty-one years immigrated to Chicago, Ill., where for a few months he worked at his trade. In March, 1870, he came to Kansas, and a few months later located at Humboldt; was employed in the furniture store of A. Bush, and in July, 1871, purchased the business; in 1875 the manufacturing department was added, and in November, 1879, David McLeod was admitted to a partnership. The firm carry a fine stock of furniture, etc., and have a large factory where they manufacture furniture, undertakers' goods, etc., giving employment to six men or more. A description of the manufactory will be found in the county history.

JESSE J. VAN FOSSEN, Section 39, P. O. Humboldt, Kas., was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1830, and was reared on a farm in Shelby County. In 1853 he emigrated West to Eldorado County, Cal., where he followed mining pursuits for eight years, and farmed one on Grizzly Bend, Sacramento River, Butte Co., Cal. In July 1, 1862, he came to Allen County, Kas., and located on his present farm. Mr. Van Fossen has 552 acres in Allen County, Kas. His residence farm consists of 222 acres, all well improved, and he is an extensive raiser of live stock. During the war he served in the Kanas State Militia. He is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity: is treasurer of the lodge at Humboldt, and holds the office of scribe in the Chapter at that place. Mr. Van Fossen was married in Allen County, Kas., in March, 1863, to Amelia Bartels. They have a family of three children.

E. N. WERT, proprietor of the Humboldt Livery, Feed and Sale Stable, was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, January 20, 1839. Six months later his parents immigrated to Montgomery County, Ind.; there he learned the trade of carpenter, and worked at it till September, 1862, at which time he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Twentieth Indiana Infantry. Was mustered out June 20, 1865, after which he was employed as a carpenter in Indiana. He came to Kansas in November, 1867, and located in Allen County, and was for three years engaged in agricultural pursuits. Moving to Humboldt, he opened a real estate and law office with others, under the style of Gilbert, Suits & Wert. Three years later he sold out his interest, and was employed as a traveling salesman until October, 1880, when he engaged in his present business. He deals extensively in horses; has fine barns and good livery stock.

DR. M. E. WOLFE, dentist, was born in Fairfield County, in 1846. He was educated at Fairfield Union Academy, and studied dentistry at Lancaster, Ohio, with Drs. Scott & Urider; also attended lectures at Pennsylvania Dental College, Philadelphia. The doctor began the practice of his profession in 1869, at Philadelphia, but shortly after returned to Lancaster, Ohio. In December, 1870, he came to Humboldt, and at once opened an office for the practice of dentistry. He has also an office at Chanute. The doctor is also a member of the Kansas State Dental Association, and bears an excellent reputation as a skillful dentist. In connection with other pursuits, he is also interested in farming and stock-raising, and has a fine fruit orchard of fifteen acres.

JAMES B. YOUNG, capitalist, is a native of Morgan County, Ind., where he was reared on a farm, and also taught school in that locality for several years. He came to Allen County, Kan., May 9, 1857, and located near the present town site of Humboldt. He farmed for some two years and was also interested in a saw-mill. About 1859 he embarked in mercantile business as a clerk, and was employed in that capacity until September, 1861, when he enlisted in Company G, Ninth Kansas Cavalry, and was appointed Quartermaster Sergeant. He was mustered out, January 16, 1865. Returning to Humboldt he followed mercantile pursuits, for some years. In the fall of 1875 he was elected Treasurer of Allen County, and re-elected in 1877, serving in all four years. Mr. Young has considerable real estate and devotes his time principally to the management of the same.

SALEM TOWNSHIP.

CHARLES ADAMS, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Ireland in 1835, and four years later immigrated with his parents to Quebec, Can., thence to Detroit, Mich., and some years later to Illinois. He was for some years employed in steamboating on the Illinois and Mississippi rivers. In 1860 he settled in Miami County, Ohio, where he farmed for five years, then in Bureau County, Ill., engaged in the same capacity. He came to Allen County, Kan., in March, 1870, and located on his present farm, which consists of 100 acres of finely improved land, seventy-five of which is under cultivation, and he has a nice orchard of about five acres. Mr. Adams is quite an extensive stock-raiser. He was married in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1863, to Addie B. Hogan, and they have a family of ten children.

Humboldt, is a native of Ireland, and immigrated to the city of New York in 1858 where he was engaged in the wool business, carrying on a large trade until he disposed of the same and came to Allen County, Kan., in August, 1879, at which time he located on his present farm. Mr. C. is one of the largest land owners in this section of country. He has some 900 acres and is an extensive stock-raiser. His farm is finely improved, with a magnificent residence, good farm building and a nice orchard.

MILTON HAWLEY, farmer, Section 25, P.O. Humboldt, was born in Stark County, Ohio, February 2, 1834, was reared on a farm. In 1858 he moved to Cedar County, Iowa, where he followed agricultural pursuits for a time, then in the same capacity in Johnson County. In October, 1869, he moved to Saline County, Mo., and in 1870 came to Kansas, locating, in February, 1871, in this township, and has since been engaged in farming and raising stock. In 1876 he moved on to his present farm, which consists of 160 acres, all well improved, and on which there is a fine orchard of about four acres. Mr. Hawley is one of the enterprising men of his neighborhood. He has filled many of the local offices, and in 1875 was elected a member of the Board of County Commissioners, which office he filled two years.

LEONARD B. PEARSON, farmer, Section 30, Township 25, Range 19, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Belleville, Jefferson Co., N. Y., July 2, 1832; learned the blacksmith trade with his father. At the age of eighteen years he took to sailing on the lakes and followed that occupation off and on for ten years, during which period he educated himself. In 1861 he came west to DuPage County, Ill., where he was for a time engaged in company with his brother in the manufacture of edge tools, and also taught school. Mr. Pearson served his country during the late war. He enlisted May 10, 1864, in Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served some seven months. He came to Kansas November 22, 1870, and located in Allen County, since which time he has followed agricultural pursuits. He moved on to his present farm in November, 1873. He has 320 acres all improved, and raises considerable stock. He occupies the position of historian in the Old Settlers Association of his township. Mr. P. was married at Downer's Grove, Du Page County, Ill., March 25, 1867, to Jane C. Dixon. They have four children.

JOSEPH W. PINE, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Frederick County, Va., in 1830. He learned the trade of blacksmith in Berkley County, and worked at it there until 1856, when he moved to Muscatine County, Iowa, where for ten years he carried on a blacksmith shop. In May, 1866, he came to Allen County, Kan., and located on his present farm. He has a finely improved place consisting of some 400 acres, on which there are good stone fences, fine orchards and residence. He also to some extent follows blacksmithing in connection with agricultural pursuits, and is a large raiser of cattle and hogs. Mr. Pine is one of the representative men of his township; he is a staunch Democrat and is President of the Old Settlers Association of his township.

COTTAGE GROVE TOWNSHIP.

JOHN DAY, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Parke County, Ind., December 21, 1840 and reared on a farm. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, Thirty-First Indiana Infantry, and served three years, after which he followed agricultural pursuits in Parke County. He came to Allen County, Kan., in October, 1869, and located on his present farm, which consists of 160 acres, all well improved. He has a nice orchard and raises general farming stock. Mr. Day is one of the enterprising men of his township, and has filled many of the local offices.

JAMES A. GARRETT, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Humboldt, is a native of Highland County, Ohio. Moved to Polk County, Iowa, in 1847, where he owned a farm of 187 acres within five miles of Des Moines. In 1852 he went to California, where for four years he followed mining pursuits; in 1856 returned home. In 1860 went to Colorado and engaged in mining; returned in autumn of same year, and followed farming until 1867, when he sold his farm and bought ten acres near Kansas City, Mo., and engaged in horticulture. He sold out in August, 1879, and located on his present farm, which consists of 296 acres all improved—150 acres under cultivation, balance in pasture and meadow.

LYLE A. GARRETT, farmer, Section 23, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Highland County, Ohio, March 18, 1823, and was reared on a farm. At twenty-four years of age he moved to Polk County Iowa, where he was employed at farming, and in 1852 immigrated to California, and for four and a half years was engaged in ranching and mining pursuits; returning east to Polk County, Iowa, he again gave his attention to agricultural pursuits. On August 7, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, Twenty-third Iowa Infantry, was promoted to First Lieutenant in October, 1863, and served in all three years. In 1867 he came west to Missouri, locating near Kansas City, where he carried on a fruit farm of ten acres. Mr. Garrett came to Allen County, Kan., in May, 1879, and purchased his present farm; he has 345 acres, 165 of which are in cultivation and four in orchard, besides which he is an extensive stock-raiser, making a specialty of that business.

JOHN GEISSLER, farmer, Section 22, P. O. Humboldt, was born at St. Louis, Mo., in 1843, and reared in Madison County, Ill., where he followed agricultural pursuits. He came to Allen County, Kan., in the spring of 1866, and took up a homestead in this township; on which he resided for one year, then moved on to his present farm, which consists of 160 acres, seventy of which are in cultivation, and he raises considerable live stock. On his place is a nice stone residence, and he has two acres of fruit trees, grape vines, etc. Mr. Geissler was married in Allen County, Kan., in 1868, to Caroline Ott; their family consists of seven children, all born in this county.

IRA W. NOYES, farmer, Section 26, P. O. Humboldt, was born at Oxford, Mo., in 1849, moving with his parents to Sauk County, Wis., in 1855, from thence to Iowa, and then resided in Lawrence and Barton counties, Mo. In May, 1862, he came to Kansas, locating in Neosho County with his father, David B. Noyes, and in the spring of 1864 came to Allen County, since which time he has resided on his present farm, which consists of eighty acres, all well improved. He has served three years as Clerk of the township, and in the spring of 1880 was elected Trustee and re-elected in 1883. Mr. Noyes was married in Neosho County, Kan., in March, 1877, to Elmira J. Wheatley, and their family consists of four children.

JACOB M. PHEBUS, farmer, Section 24, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Carl County, Ind., in 1837, and reared in Madison County, Iowa, where his parents removed shortly after his birth; there he followed agricultural pursuits, and was also employed in same capacity in Cass County. In 1855 he moved to Otoe County, Neb., where he farmed until May, 1867, when he came to Allen County, Kan., and located on his present farm. He has in all 120 acres of land, sixty-five of which are in cultivation and four in orchard. He is also an extensive breeder of hogs. Mr. Phebus was Justice of the Peace in this township for two years. He was married in Cass County, Neb., in 1859, to Mary Lewis, they have a family of four children.

HON. SAMUEL J. STEWART, farmer, Section 33, P. O. Humboldt, was born in Miami County, Ohio, March 28, 1833, and ten years later his people moved to Champaign County, Ill., where he was reared on a farm. He came to Allen County, Kan., April 7, 1856, and located on his present farm. He has now 410 acres of land, all well improved, 300 of which are in cultivation, and five in orchard. His principal business is the manufacture of cheese, which he carries on quite extensively, and is the only one engaged in that line in this county. He was elected a member of the First Free-state Territorial Legislature of Kansas, in 1857. During the late war, he took an active part in raising men, and on August 7, 1861, enlisted in Company G, Fourth Kansas Infantry. He was appointed First Lieutenant at once. His company was afterwards consolidated into Company H, of the Tenth Kansas, and on February 2, he was promoted to Captain, serving until mustered out, August 18, 1864. The Captain was elected in November, 1882, to represent his district in the State Legislature. He has for many years been a member of the A. F. & A. M., at Humboldt. The subject of this sketch was married at Monticello, Piatt Co., Ill., in 1866, to Miss Emma Heath; they have six children, all born here.

IOLA.

This town is the county seat of Allen County, and is pleasantly located in the level valley of the Neosho River, on the west side of that stream, and on the north side of Elm Creek, nearly at the confluence of the two streams. The town is situated a short distance northwest of the center of the county. The railroad connections are by the Kansas City, Lawrence & Kansas Southern railroad, running through the county from north to south, and the Fort Scott & Wichita railroad extending across the county from east to west.

The population of the town, according to the census of 1882, was 1,070, but this has increased largely during the past year. The different branches of business are well represented, and a large trade is carried on. The buildings are of a very good class and compare favorably with those of other of the older Kansas towns.

The history of Iola begins with the year 1859. After the location of the county seat at Humboldt, by the legislature of 1858, there was a great deal of dissatisfaction, and a number of citizens of the county selected the present site of Iola, with the intention of ultimately securing the county capital.

On January 1, 1859, a large meeting of the citizens of the northern and central portions of the county, was held at the Deer Creek schoolhouse, near the residence of J. C. Clark. It was determined to organize a town company, which was immediately done. A constitution was then adopted and officers elected. J. W. Scott was president; John Hamilton, vice-president; J. M. Perkins, secretary; James McDonald, treasurer; A. G. Carpenter, B. L. G. Stone and H. D. Parsons, directors. The town company numbered between fifty and sixty members. Among them were Wm. C. Keith, W. H. Cochrane, J. C. Redfield, D. Horville, J. C. Clark, Simon Camerer, J. F. Colborn, L. E. Rhodes, James Faulkner, Eli Lawrence, W. M. Brown, N. Hankins, W. F. Brooks, John A. Hart, J. F. Cornell, Carlyle Faulkner, J. M. Faulkner, J. B. Lambkin, M. A. Simpson, J. C. Parsons, Rufus Perkins, H. D. Parsons, Wm. Lewis, A. Case.

The officers of the company after due consideration of different points selected a site for the proposed town, about two miles north of Cofachique, at the confluence of Elm Creek and the Neosho River. The site was owned in part by J. F. Colborn and W. H. Cochrane. The claims on two quarter-sections were bought, and were soon after surveyed into lots by A. G. Carpenter.

The town company worked hard to get the town started. A meeting was held to choose a name. Several were proposed, and the choice was determined by ballot. Some one had proposed the name Iola, which was the Christian name of the wife of J. F. Colborn. As a result of the vote, this name was chosen.

Meetings of the company were held every week during the first year and efforts made to induce settlement. By the close of the year a number of lots had been disposed of, several buildings erected, and other improvements made, as all who bought lots were required to make some improvements at once. The residents of Cofachique despairing of making their town a success, joined with Iola, and most of them moved to the new site, all working together in the endeavor to secure the location of the county seat at once.

The first building on the town site was a small log cabin owned by D. B. Bayne. He, afterward, late in 1859, built a frame house addition to it. It is now the residence of Wm. A. Cowan.

The first building erected after the town was surveyed was a dwelling completed early in June, 1859, by J. F. Colborn, who had lived on the claim of which the town site formed a part, since 1857. On the completion of the house, Mr. Colborn and his family moved into it, thus being the first settlers in the town of Iola.

The first birth in Iola was that of Luella E. Colborn, daughter to J. F. and Mrs. Iola Colborn, on June 29, 1859. She still resides in Iola, the wife of Wm. P. Northrup.

The first sermon was preached in the unfinished residence of J. F. Colborn, in May, 1859, by Rev. Mr. Hawley, a Methodist minister. He was soon followed by Rev. Nathan Taylor, a minister of the same denomination. In 1860, religious services were also held, under the leadership of Rev. E. K. Lynn, a minister of the Presbyterian Church.

During the year 1859, two stores were established by Aaron Case and James Faulkner, who had moved their buildings and goods from the old town of Cofachique.

The first hotel was opened in 1859.

The postoffice for the neighborhood had previously been at Cofachique, and Aaron Case was Postmaster, but in 1859, the office was removed to Iola, Case still being Postmaster, though James Faulkner attended to it, as his deputy, until he was appointed to the office a short time after.

In 1860, a number of buildings were erected, and the population increased to about one hundred and fifty. Two more stores were opened—1 dry goods store, by D. B. Bayne, and a grocery, by J. M. Cowan.

The improvements of 1860 were nearly all made in the spring and early summer. In the latter part of the year the effects of the drought were so badly felt, in addition to failing to secure the county seat, that business became very dull, and for a time all of the citizens were much discouraged.

In 1861 the war broke out, and as nearly every able-bodied man in Iola, as well as the county, had entered the army, there was no chance for improvement; and until the close of the war, in 1865, the town grew to be no larger than it was in 1860.

In 1865, after the return of the citizens from the army at the close of the war, the town began to improve steadily, and so continued until the year 1870, at which time it was incorporated as a city, and having secured the L., L. & G. R. R., rapid strides were made for the next two years in the improvement of the town. Several manufacturing establishments were in project, and some of them were built.

Among other heavy institutions at that time, was the King Bridge Manufacturing Company, which located the Bridge shops at Iola, in 1871. In January of that year, the city voted bonds of $50,000 to secure the location of the shops, which were built at once, and were large and substantial structures of stone, costing upward of $32,000, and by July of that year, work was commenced. For some time large numbers of men were employed, and a heavy business was done. But with the monetary panic of 1873, the value of bonds so depreciated that the company failed, and removed their machinery. They received bonds in payment, generally, for their bridges and work, and for this reason the "crash" ruined them. They afterward tried to collect the $50,000 in bonds voted by the city of Iola, but failed in doing so. The buildings and several acres of land on which they were located were sold at Sheriff's sale for $1,100, being purchased by several citizens of Iola. They are still unoccupied, though well adapted for a manufactory for almost any purpose.

During a period, from 1873 to 1876, business in all branches was very dull, and little improvement in the town was made. But since the last-named year, the city has steadily progressed until its present proportions have been attained. The greater number of the best business houses and residences have been built within the last three years. At the present time the town is growing very rapidly, and considerable building is being done by the wealthier and most substantial class of citizens, while several new manufactories of various kinds are in contemplation, and drawing a trade as it does for a radius of several miles, in a quite thickly settled agricultural country, Iola may be said to be one of the most prosperous of Kansas towns.

Iola was incorporated as a city of the third class in March, 1870. The early journal of the city disappeared during the trouble with the King Iron Bridge Company, relative to the payment of the city bonds voted to that company, which has caused some trouble regarding the legality of some of the ordinances and acts said to have been enacted by the first City Council. The city as a corporation is now in a prosperous condition, having no liabilities other than the $26,500 in bonds voted to the Fort Scott & Wichita Railroad. The present city officers are J. W. Scott, Mayor; Wm. P. Northrup, Clerk; A. J. Clark, Treasurer; T. F. Strickland, Marshal. The Council is composed of the following gentlemen: W. G Allison, J. T. Beatty, C. D. Elliott, W. H. Richards, and L. B. Roach.

The first school in Iola has been mentioned in another place. A public school was at once established, and has since kept pace with the development of the town, new departments being added from time to time as required. There are now eight departments, all in a prosperous condition and under careful and efficient teachers, of whom Prof. C. C. Robbins is principal. The school is kept in two buildings, one a large two-story stone structure, erected in 1868, and has an imposing appearance with its twin towers. The other building is a two-story frame, and situated just south of the stone schoolhouse.

THE PRESS AND OTHER LOCAL MATTERS.

The Allen County Courant was the first paper published at Iola, and was established January 5, 1867, by W. H. Johnson. July 27, 1868, Messrs. Talcott & Acers purchased the concern, and the name of the paper was changed to the Neosho Valley Register. On August 6, of the following year, Mr. Acers sold out to his partner. Mr. Talcott continued the paper until August 24, 1870, when he sold the same to M. M. Lewis. Lewis changed the name to Kansas State Register, and continued until December 10, following, when he retired. Talcott again assumed entire charge of the paper, and changed the name back to Neosho Valley Register. In March, 1871, he sold the concern to G. M. Overstreet, W. G. Allison, and H. W. Perkins, under the firm name of Overstreet & Co. They continued the paper until January 1, 1872, when Overstreet and Perkins sold out to Messrs. Allison and Walker. Louis Walker & Co. conducted the paper for three years, and on January 1, 1875, Messrs. Allison & Perkins took charge. They changed the name to the Iola Register, and continued its publication for two years. January 1, 1877, G. D. Ingersoll purchased Allison's interest, and September 16, 1878, H. A. Perkins bought Ingersoll's interest and became sole proprietor. The paper has been Republican under all its different names and proprietorships. H. A. Perkins continued the publication of the Register until October, 1882, when he sold it to the present proprietors, Scott Bros. & Rohrer, who are making it one of the largest and best weekly papers in the county.

The Presbyterian Church.—The first sermon by a Presbyterian minister was preached in Iola, by Rev. E. K. Lynn, in the fall of 1860, the services being held in the upper part of the old frame building, now known as "the old Colborn store building." Regular services were held by Mr. Lynn until the organization of the Society, June 24, 1864, by Revs. E. K. Lynn, Austin Warner, and Elder J. M. Evans. The original members were Rufus Perkins, John McClure, John N. Covert, Mesdames Jane E. Covert, Hannah J. Bostwick, Elizabeth Parsons, Susan Post, Sarah A. Terrill, Thrasher; Sarah Jones, Longstreet; Effie Twiss; Misses Mildred Terrill, Lizzie Case, and Nancy Terrill.

In 1868 the church was built, being dedicated in September of that year. It is a neat brick structure thirty-five by fifty-five feet in dimension. Since the organization of the society there have been added by letter 140; by profession, 83; dismissed by letter 87; deceased, 18; expelled, 4; removed, 19. The present membership is 115, of which number Sarah Jones and Susan Post are the only original members. Rev. E. S. Miller, the pastor, has had charge of the church since June, 1878.

The First Baptist Church was organized November 20, 1869, by Revs. A. Hitchcock and F. L. Walker, the first named being settled as the pastor. The members were W. D., Nancy and Zerilda Wilson, James Burns, Martha Duff, S. I. Stanher, Sarah E. Rutledge, Mary Stanher, Elizabeth Wilson, Anna Apple, Alfred Foults, and Sabina Weller. There are now eighty members. The erection of the church was begun in September, 1871, and it was dedicated September 1, 1872. Rev. T. C. Coffey, the present pastor, took charge in December, 1880. In 1878 there were over 100 members, which decreased to twenty-five in 1880. The society is now out of debt and in a prosperous condition.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, of Iola, was formerly a part of Deer Creek Circuit. The church was organized during the first year of the history of the town. In 1870 Iola was made a station under charge of Rev. E. A. Graham, and a church thirty-four by fifty feet in dimension was erected, and dedicated, with Rev. D. P. Mitchell, officiating. Then followed a few years of prosperity. In the year 1871, the pastor, W. W. Welsh, reported fifty members and seventy-three probationers and a Sabbath school of 120. In the year 1872, L. M. Hancock was pastor and reported good progress. The years of adversity which came upon the town and the country, affected also the prosperity and growth of the church, yet, at no period was the church without a pastor and regular services, and a Sabbath school was maintained and some degree of prosperity accompanied the work, and in 1880, under the pastoral labors of Rev. D. T. Summerville, the church building was enlarged and otherwise improved at a cost of $1,400, and was re-opened and dedicated November 28, 1880, by Bishop Bowman. There are at present 125 members and a Sabbath school of 100. The church has no debt to carry. It has a comfortable home for the pastor and a good degree of prosperity. Rev. S. S. Weatherby, A. M., is the present pastor.

The Christian Church has an organization in Iola, which is in a prosperous condition. The society has no house of worship, but meetings are held regularly at the court house. Rev. Thomas Bartlett is the pastor in charge.

Iola Mineral Well.—In the fall of 1872, a company was formed in Iola for the purpose of prospecting for coal on the Cochran farm, one-half mile southwest of the public square. Drilling was commenced, and a six-inch bed of coal was discovered at a depth of seventy-five feet. At the depth of 736 feet, a jet of gas and water was struck, which afterward proved of value for its medicinal and curative properties. From this well 10,000 feet of gas issues each day, and is of value for lighting purposes, and is also used for warming the baths that have been established. In the spring of 1874, the well and six acres of land were purchased by R. W. & N. F. Acers, who have made many improvements, opened a hotel, built cottages, and bath-rooms, and are making it a summer resort, which is visited by hundreds of invalids, annually, and the water is said to possess curative properties, equal to Eureka, or Hot Springs, of Arkansas. Following is an analysis of the water, by Prof. W. K. Kedzie, of Kansas Agricultural College.

Iola Water Flouring Mills are located on the Neosha River; are operated by water power, the site being one of the best on that stream. The mills are owned and carried on by the firm of W. E. Davis & Co., having a capacity of about 150 barrels of flour and feed each day.

Iola Steam Flouring Mills are located in the western part of town, east of the railroad track, near the depot; are operated by steam power. The proprietors are Thayer & Co., and care is taken in the manufacture of fine flour.

Smith's Novelty Works is a new factory established in January, 1883, for the manufactory of locks and other iron and brass works. The machinery, moulds and furnaces are well adapted to the work, and the new factory opens with excellent prospects for success.

Iola Carriage Shops are owned and operated by William M. Knapp and William Kinsley, and were established in 1882. The shops are in continual operation, and carriages, buggies, sulkies, spring wagons, all light and heavy vehicles are manufactured. This is the largest establishment of the kind in Southern Kansas.

The Banking House of L. L. Northrup is a private bank, which was established in 1869, by L. L. Northrup, who has since continued the business. It is the only institution of the kind in town, and is in a sound condition.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

NELSON F. ACERS was born on a farm in Kane County, Ill., on March 4, 1839. He is the son of Roswell W. Acers, now living at Iola. In 1855 he removed to Geneva with his parents, and there he had the advantage of the common schools of the town for four years. He then entered the Michigan University where he studied for some time, but before graduating he returned home to begin the study of law. After studying for one year in the office of Major J. H. Mayborne, at Geneva, he entered the law department of the Albany University where he graduated in the spring of 1862, and was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court. He then returned to Geneva and began the practice. He was married September 23, 1863, to Ellen A. Conant, daughter of Wm. Conant, a merchant of Geneva. In the spring of 1865 he came to Allen County, Kas., located at Iola, and began the practice of his profession, which he continued until August, 1876 meeting with good success. He was elected Attorney of Allen County in 1866, and re-elected in 1868. In the fall of 1874 he was chosen Probate Judge of Allen County, for one term. He was nominated on the Democratic ticket, in the fall of 1882, as Representative to the United States Congress, in opposition to Hon. D. C. Haskell, the Republican nominee. Mr. Acers made a strong race for the office, and was defeated by the small plurality of 3,485 votes. In July, 1868, he became associated with Judge H. W. Talcott in the publication of the Register, at Iola. In the fall of 1869 he sold his interest in the paper to his partner. In the summer of 1868 Roswell W. Acers followed his son to Kansas and settled in Iola. In 1872 a company was formed in Iola, for the purpose of digging for coal. Of this company, both Acers were members. While drilling for this purpose they struck a mineral spring, a description of which will be found in the general county history. In the spring of 1874, Nelson F. Acers and his father purchased the interest of the other stockholders in the well; also six acres of land surrounding it. On this they built a hotel, several cottages; set out trees for shade and ornament, and it is now quite a fashionable summer resort.

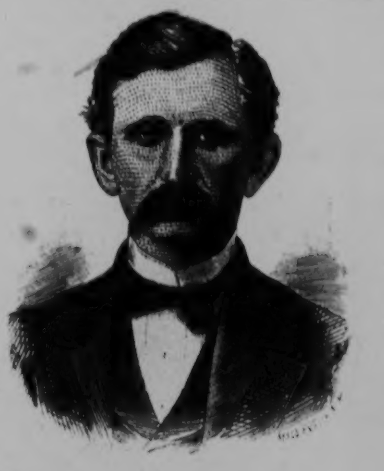
JOSEPH HARVEY RICHARDS was born near Gosport, Ind., April 7, 1844. His father, Resin Richards, and mother, Elizabeth Fane Richards, were brought to that State by their parents when children, in the first settlement in that part of the country. His paternal grandmother was a member of the Harlan family of Kentucky and Virginia, of whom Senator Harlan, of Iowa, is also one. His maternal grandmother was a member of the Newell family, of Kentucky, of whom Col. William Newell, of the Revolutionary army, was the sire. His paternal grandfather was a descendant of a prominent Welsh family, and died in early life. His maternal grandfather, Jesse Evans, was one of the very first settlers of Western Indiana, and though altogether self-made, was a grand character, and contributed much to the building up of that State and her splendid institutions. The subject of this sketch was reared on a farm until about the beginning of the War of the Rebellion, when his parents had just moved into the town of Waveland, Ind., the seat of Waveland Collegiate Institute, for the purpose of educating their children. Here he attended school until the spring of 1862, when, having got the "war fever," and being hardly old or large enough to enlist, wandered out to Carlyle, Allen Co., Kas., where he remained until the fall of that year, and thence went to Illinois, whither his parents had moved in the meantime. Here, after working for his father on the farm until the latter part of the year 1863, he enlisted into the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He served faithfully with his regiment from Vicksburg to New Orleans, from New Orleans to Mobile, and the siege of Spanish Fort; thence to Montgomery, Ala.; thence to Meridian, Miss.; and was in all the engagements of that campaign. At this point, his regiment's time having expired, he, with others, was transferred to the Thirty-third Illinois Infantry, and was finally mustered out with this regiment about the 1st of October, 1865. He then returned to his alma mater, Waveland College, for the purpose of completing his course. He graduated from this College in the class of 1866. Thence he went to the city of Crawfordsville, Ind., and pursued the study of law with Gen. Lew Wallace, who was then in the active practice at that place. Thence, early in 1868, he went to Lafayette, Ind., and completed his law course under the tutorage of Judge Samuel Huff, and in the fall of that year began the active practice of his profession with his uncle, Andrew J. Evans, at the Delphi bar. His health becoming much impaired about this time, he made arrangements to come back to Allen County, Kas. He married and brought with him to Kansas, Laura Lois Lakin, of Greencastle, Ind., a woman of much more than ordinary intellect, education and refinement, and a pupil of Oxford (Ohio) Female Seminary, and a graduate of the same class with him from Waveland College. Making his residence in Iola, Kas., his present home, in 1870, he directly entered into the practice of the law, and has gradually built up a large and lucrative business. He is a conscientious lawyer; makes it a rule of practice to discourage litigation, take no bad cases, but to fight to the last such as he does espouse. He lays no claim to either a dazzling brilliance on the one hand, nor great profundity upon the other; but he is fairly entitled to the well-earned reputation of being an able advocate, safe counselor, close reasoner, and ready debater. He is no politician, and has no political ambition or aspiration. He has never been a candidate for political honors, and has little faith in politics or political parties. If he has ambition it is in the line of his profession. When he first began the practice in Kansas he was defeated for the office of Probate Judge by five votes. He was a few years after that elected by an overwhelming majority to the office of County Attorney, which office he filled to the expiration of his term and declined to be a candidate for re-election. He has occupied the position of Alderman, Mayor, or City Attorney of Iola most of the time since his residence there. He is now assistant attorney for the St. L., Ft. S. & W. R. R., and general solicitor of the Nebraska, Topeka, Iola & Memphis R. R., which last road he organized, and is at this time, together with other citizens of Iola, and of Chicago and Philadelphia, engaged in constructing. He was also influential in building the first-named road and locating it upon its present route. He is officially connected with several other new railroads of Kansas and generally identified with the railroad interests of the State. He is one of the attorneys of the Historic Settlers' Protective Association, familiarly known as the "Land League" of Southeastern Kansas, and referred to in another part of this work. He is attorney for the famous Neosho Valley Land Agency, also referred to in another part of this work, which he and George A. Bowlus, who has been with him in all his enterprises, organized in 1876. He takes great pride in his town, county and State, and contributes freely to build them up. He is in every sense a builder and opposed to tearing down. He is a member of the Masonic order, and whilst that is probably the exponent of his religious creed, he is a believer in all the fundamental principles of the Christian religion. He has good law and literary libraries, and loves to read them. He wields a strong, swift pen and is fond of literary exercises, being prominent in all local literary exercises. His family consists of his wife, mentioned above, and two bright and promising children, a boy and a girl, Ralph and Rena. They have a cheerful, hospitable home, and their neighbors and friends often gather there to spend a pleasant hour.



J H Richards

CYRUS M. SIMPSON, Postmaster, was born at Rockville, Parke Co., Ind., December 9, 1844. In April, 1859, he came to Allen County, Kan., and located with his father, Prof. Mathew A. Simpson, on Deer Creek. In October, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, Ninth Kansas Cavalry, serving until January 16, 1865. During a portion of this period he was Company Clerk, and was also employed in the Quartermaster's office. After the war, he followed agricultural pursuits for three years, and in the fall of 1868, engaged in business at Iola, as dealer in general merchandise, continuing until the spring of 1871, when he sold out. Shortly afterward he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the District Court. In the fall of 1872, he was elected Clerk of the Court, and was re-elected in 1874, and 1876. During a portion of this period he read law and was admitted to the bar January 23, 1879, and practiced for two years in partnership with J. H. Richards. He was appointed Postmaster in March 7, 1877. He was elected to the City Council for three terms, Mayor of the city once, and was also City Attorney for nearly two years. He is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. and G. A. R.

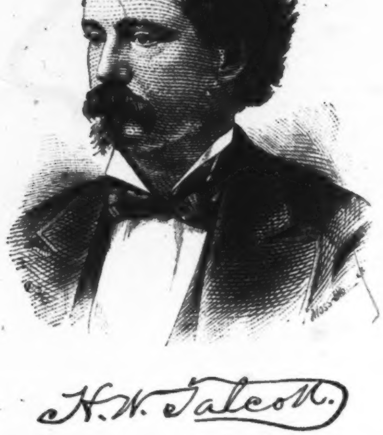
JAMES SIMPSON, contractor and builder (retired), was born in England, October 29, 1824; there he learned the carpenter trade, and followed that occupation as a journeyman. In 1849, he immigrated to Rochester, N. Y.; was for a year employed at his trade, then engaged in same capacity at St. Louis, Mo., for eighteen months; removing to Jacksonville, Ill., he carried on business as a contractor and builder for three years, and then in same business at Decatur, Ill. Mr. Simpson came to Kansas in July, 1869, located at Iola, and engaged in the boot and shoe business, which he carried on for about two years, since which time he has not been actively engaged in business. He owns considerable property in Iola, and his wife has for over ten years been carrying on a large millinery establishment. Mr. S. is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity; he is deputy district grand-master of the I. O. O. F., at this place, and has for several years been Street Commissioner for the city of Iola.

G. SMITH, SON & CO., proprietors of the Iola Lock and Novelty Works. George Smith, the senior member of this firm was born in Staffordshire, England. For seven years he worked as an apprentice to the trade of machinist and locksmith, after which he followed it as a journeyman in the principal cities of England. In 1861, he immigrated to America; was employed at his trade in New York, Connecticut and other States, and in 1869, opened a lock manufactory and brass foundry in New York City. On account of increasing the size of his works, he moved, in 1872, to Brooklyn. His business still enlarging, he moved, in 1874, up the Hudson River to Nyack, where he continued to carry on a very large business until burned out in 1879. Shortly after he moved to Kansas City, carried on a lock factory for two years, and in October, 1882, came to Iola. He at once established this business in partnership with his son Joseph. They have a large building and ample facilities to carry on an extensive lock manufactory and brass foundry. A description of their works may be found in the county history.

HON. R. B. STEVENSON, dealer in drugs, etc., was born in Guernsey County, Ohio, in 1843, and at the age of eleven years moved to Iowa, with his father, who conducted hotels in various parts of that State. In 1864, he was employed in the sutlers' department of the Forty-seventh Iowa Infantry. He was also employed for three years as clerk in the postoffice at Ottumwa, Iowa, and clerked in the mercantile business. In the fall of 1870, he came to Iola, and for fourteen months carried on a news stand in the postoffice. In the fall of 1871, he was elected Register of Deeds, and served two years. In 1874, he embarked in the drug business, and is now the oldest established druggist in the city. He carries a fine stock of drugs, books, notions, etc., and has an extensive trade. He was elected to represent his district in the State Legislature in the fall of 1880. Mr. Stevenson is an active, enterprising man, notwithstanding the fact that he is a cripple, having lost his left leg in 1858, by an accident in a steam grist mill.

TINDALL S. STOVER, County Clerk, was born in Hancock County, Me., January 18, 1844. His father was a sea captain, and he made several voyages with him. In February, 1863, he enlisted in Company D, Thirty-first Maine Volunteer Infantry, serving until the war closed. Mr. Stover came to Kansas, September 1, 1866, was for a year employed as a a clerk in mercantile business, at Leavenworth, then came to Allen County, locating in Humboldt; was employed in the capacity of clerk in a store, until in 1869, when he formed a partnership with W. W. Curdy, and embarked in the general merchandise business; this firm dissolved some two years later, and Mr. S. assisted in organizing the Humboldt Manufacturing Co., and occupied the positions of secretary and treasurer, until in 1873, after which he was employed in mercantile pursuits. In November, 1875, he was elected Clerk of the County, entering upon the duties of his office in January, 1876. He was re-elected in 1877-79, and in 1881. Mr. Stover is a prominent member of the Masonic order, and one of the leading men in G. A. R., McCook Post No. 51.

HON. HENRY W. TALCOTT, Judge of the Seventh Judicial District of Kansas, was born in Valparaiso, Porter Co., Ind., in February, 1839. His father, William C. Talcott, was proprietor of a weekly paper, and the subject of this sketch learned the trade of printer, and for some months published the Valparaiso Republican. His father was also a lawyer. Young Talcott studied under his guidance, and was admitted to the bar in 1860, after which he gave his attention to the practice of law. On June 19, 1861, he enlisted in the Thirteenth Indiana Volunteer Infantry and was assigned to a position as musician in the regimental band. Shortly afterward he was detailed by Col. R. S. Foster to perform a portion of the duties of adjutant, which position he filled until August, 1862, when he was mustered out with the band. On his return to Valparaiso, he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the Circuit Court of his district, which position he filled for five years. During about three years also of that period he was Deputy Collector of the United States Internal Revenues. During the time of the "Military Draft" he was enrolling officer for Porter County. The judge came to Kansas in March, 1868, locating at Iola, and at once opened an office for the practice of his profession. In partnership with Nelson F. Acers, in July of that year, he purchased the Allen County Courant. In 1869 the law firm dissolved and the judge purchased his partner's interest in the paper and continued to publish the same until the spring of 1871, when he disposed of it and gave his sole attention to the practice of law. In the fall of 1873 he was elected Railroad Assessor for the Seventh Judicial District; but the office was shortly afterward abolished. Judge Talcott was appointed to his present position by Governor Osborn in January, 1875, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the Hon. John R. Goodin, who had been elected Representative to the United States Congress. He was elected to the same office in the fall of that year, and re-elected in the fall of 1879.



H. W. Talcott.

E. J. THAYER, of Waters & Thayer, proprietors of the Elevator Mills, was born at Chelsea, Vt., in 1840. At the age of fourteen years he removed to Clinton County, Ohio, where he was employed in grist mills and at general farm work. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Thirty-ninth Illinois Infantry. He was promoted from Orderly Sergeant to Captain in 1864, and was mustered out January 16, 1866. In June of the same year he came to Kansas and located in Bourbon County, where he followed agricultural pursuits until 1878, when he came to Iola. He at once purchased a building and put in milling and elevator machinery. In September, 1881, he admitted his present partner, H. Waters. They do quite an extensive business in their custom flouring mills, and also deal in grain, coal, etc.

DR. S. TOZER, dentist, was born in Cheshire County, N. H., in 1832. There he learned the jeweler's trade and gradually merged into the practice of dentistry. In 1846 he moved to Pike County, Ill., where he engaged in the same business. Early in 1849 he moved to St. Louis, Mo., and there studied surgery. In the spring of 1850 he went to California, where he was engaged in ranching and also practiced dentistry. Nine years later he returned to Illinois, where he carried on an extensive farm in Macon County. The doctor came to Kansas in September, 1866, and six weeks later located in Iola, where he has since practiced his profession. He owns twenty-five acres of land near town, and raises live-stock. His wife has quite an extensive green-house and is widely known in the county for raising all kinds of flowers and exotic plants. The doctor is the oldest resident dentist in the place. He is a member of the Kansas State Dental Association, and was for several terms a member of the City Council of Iola.

KONRAD J. WEITH, blacksmith and wagon shop, was born in Peoria County, Ill., February 25, 1849. Learned the trade of blacksmith at Pekin, Ill., and followed that occupation for a livelihood. He came to Kansas in 1870, located at Iola, worked for a few months as a journeyman blacksmith, and in 1871 embarked in his present business. Mr. W. has the oldest establishment of this kind in Iola; he is an experienced blacksmith, having worked at the trade some seventeen years. In the wagon shop he employs an experienced mechanic, and is doing a large business.

HON. DAVID WORST, Sheriff, was born in Lancaster County, Pa., September 30, 1837, and reared on a farm. At the age of twenty-six years he removed to Ashland County, Ohio, and farmed for a year. Then two years in Seneca County, after which he moved west to Illinois, and for four years followed agricultural pursuits in Cumberland County. In 1871 he immigrated to Redwood County, Minn., where he was extensively engaged in farming, raising stock, etc. In the fall of 1876 he was elected to the Minnesota State Legislature. Mr. Worst came to Allen County, Kas., in September, 1878. He located in Elm Township, and has been engaged in farming. He has a good farm consisting of 160 acres. The subject of this sketch was elected to his present office in the fall of 1881, and entered upon the duties of the same in January, 1882.

A. E. WRIGHT, dealer in groceries, queensware, etc., was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, December 15, 1841, and was reared on a farm. During the war of the Rebellion he was in company with several others largely engaged in shipping live stock from Chicago, and after the close of the war carried on a farm in Huron County, Ohio, and also dealt in live stock. In the spring of 1869 he came to Allen County, Kas., and followed agricultural pursuits in Elm Township for about nine years. For three years he held the office of Township Trustee. In March, 1879, he purchased his present business from Messrs. Briggs & Thrall and is gradually building up a good trade. He is an active member of the A. O. U. W.

GEORGE W. ZIKE, dealer in general groceries, was born in Morgan County, Ill., January 7, 1850. In December, 1859, his parents came to Kansas, locating in Elm Creek Township, Allen County, where the subject of this sketch assisted them on the farm. In the spring of 1864 he enlisted in Company I, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, and served nineteen months. Returning home he took up a homestead adjoining his parents' farm, and followed agricultural pursuits till the spring of 1880, when he sold his farm and moved to the city of Iola. In January, 1881, he engaged in grocery business. He carries a stock of about $1,000 and has quite a nice trade. Mr. Zike was married in Allen County, Kas., July 18, 1875, to Mary E. Swap. They have one son, Luther William.

ELM TOWNSHIP.

JOSEPH D. CARTER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 28, P. O. Iola, was born in Rush County, Ind., May 30, 1835, where he followed agricultural pursuits. In November, 1866, he came to Kansas, located in Allen County, Elm Township, and has since followed farming and stock raising. In March, 1875, he moved onto his present farm. He has here forty acres and eighty acres in another farm. He has on his place a fine orchard and maple grove. Mr. Carter raises considerable live stock and is gradually branching out into breeding Short-horn cattle. He was married in Morgan County, Ind., November 7, 1854, to Lucinda Hamilton. They have three children.

GENEVA.

This town is situated in the northwestern part of the county, north of the Neosho River, and between Martin and Indian creeks. The location is a beautiful one, and the place is surrounded by a thrifty and enterprising class of citizens. The village contains a store, postoffice and blacksmith shop, and has a population of about one hundred.

The town of Geneva was founded in the summer of 1857. A colony was formed in New York under the leadership of Ephraim Fisk, and another in Michigan under the leadership of Merritt Moore. These united, forming the Union Settlement Association, among the prominent members in which were Dr. B. L. G. Stone, G. L. Wait, S. T. Jones, Rev. G. S. Northrup, I. A. Holman, P. P. Phillips, E. J. Brinkerhoff, J. H. Spicer, A. P. Sain, H. R. Somers, Frank Ureidenberg, J. C. Redfield and J. M. Mattoon.

The colony selected the northwestern part of Allen County for a location, and started out with great expectations. There were about 300 families engaged to settle at once. It was decided to locate and lay out a town comprising not less than 640 acres of land. The present site of Geneva was chosen on account of the fertile prairie land around, as well as the heavy timber so close along the banks of the streams. It was decided to at once begin the building of a large structure and to found a non-sectarian college and academy.

Plans having been made for so much building and so many families having promised to locate, the next thing was to erect a saw-mill. Therefore a contract was entered into with L. L. Northrup that he should build a steam saw-mill, and that the colony should, in turn, give him 160 acres of good timber land and furnish him all the sawing he could do, and pay him $15 per thousand feet. The mill was brought and set up on the bank of Indian Creek, in the summer of the year 1858. But the sawing was not provided in any great quantities and L. L. Northrup soon opened a store.

Though the settlement started with such brilliant prospects, the idea of building a large town was soon given up. Not one-fourth of the projected colony of 300 families ever came, and those who did were rather poor, and through the lack of money and settlement the college was not built, though an academy afterward took its place.

The settlers from the first were an intelligent and enterprising class of people, who regarded the moral and mental culture of the young as one of the first things to be looked to, after opening their farms, therefore churches and schools were established.

There was at first considerable controversy over claims, which resulted in occasional riots, but aside from this the neighborhood has generally been very peaceable.

Geneva continued to exist as a small town, and by the year 1869 it contained two stores, one blacksmith shop, a wagon shop, a hotel, a Congregational Church built of stone, and an academy. This building was a frame structure two stories high, and the school had been established in 1866, and was then as now, under charge of the Neosho Presbytery. The population was then about one hundred. From the above date until 1872 some improvements were made, and several business enterprises were undertaken that afterward fell through. It was expected that a railroad would be built through that part of the county, and when the town failed to secure it, it began to go down, and now it can only be said to be a thriving country village, surrounded by a prosperous settlement.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN J. BLACK, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Iola, was born in Licking County, Ohio, August 5, 1834, and was reared in Illinois. His father was a farmer. The subject of our sketch also resided for several years in Marion County, Iowa. He came to Allen County in the fall of 1857, and pre-empted 160 acres in the township, on which he resided some fifteen years, after which he moved on to his present farm, which consists of sixty-seven and one-half acres of fine bottom land, nearly all of which is cultivated. Mr. Black raises considerable live stock, making a specialty of Poland-China hogs. During his residence in this State he has been several times in Colorado, engaged in freighting, etc. During the late Rebellion he served in the Kansas State Militia. Mr. Black was married in Anderson County, Kan., February 14, 1864, to Sarah E. Stigenwalt, who died January 5, 1873, leaving one son. Mr. Black was married again at this place, April 2, 1874, to Emma C. Luyster. They have four children.

JOHN TRACY CORNELL, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Iola, was born in Fountain County, Ind., October, 1826, and reared on a farm. After reaching the age of manhood he carried on a farm of his own, of 173 acres. He came to Allen County in the fall of 1858, pre-empted 160 acres in Iola Township, where he resided some twelve years, and then moved into Geneva Township. About ten years ago he settled on his present farm, which consists of 130 acres of fine bottom land, all improved, and on which he has erected a handsome home and farm buildings. He is quite an extensive raiser of cattle, etc. During the late war he served in the Kansas State Militia, and was for three years deputy under Sheriff A. Brown. Mr. Cornell was married in Fountain County, Ind., in the fall of 1848, to Phoebe Jane Booe. They have a family of eight children.

EPHRAIM FISK, farmer, Section 23, P. O. Geneva, was born at Strafford, Orange Co., Vt., September 10, 1811, and spent his youth on a farm. In 1842, he moved to Wyoming County, N. Y., where he was employed in agricultural pursuits, and also worked in woolen mills in that and Seneca County. In March, 1857, he came to Kansas and located on this farm. He conducted the farm until lately, when he turned it over to his step-son, Alroy B. Curtis. Mr. Fisk took up 160 acres of raw land on his arrival here, and made a highly improved farm of it. He has been a deacon of the Congregational Church in this locality since 1858.

ALONZO W. HOWLAND, dealer in live stock, Section 29, P. O. Geneva, was born in Saratoga County, N. Y., in 1834, and reared on a farm in Calhoun County, Mich. He has earned his own livelihood since thirteen years of age. Mr. H. was employed for some time in grocery business, and also learned the trade of stone mason in Calhoun County. He came to Kansas in April, 1859; located in Allen County, pre-empted 160 acres in this township, on which he resided some five years. In 1864, he moved on to his present farm, Section 29, Township 23, Range 18. Mr. H. had very small means on his arrival in this State. He worked some at his trade, and farmed, and by industry and energy, has made himself one of the representative men of Allen County. He owns about 440 acres of land, and is an extensive raiser and dealer in live stock. On his place is a fine stone residence, which he built some fourteen years ago, and an orchard of about 500 fruit trees. Mr. H. was elected a member of the Board of Commissioners of Allen County, in 1872, and re-elected in 1874. He was married in Calhoun County, Mich., when twenty years of age, to Miss Eveline Gardiner, who died here in May, 1873, leaving three children. He was married again, in Allen County, Kan., in December, 1874, to Miss Emma Harlow.

REV. SALATHIEL M. IRWIN, Section 25, P. O. Geneva, was born at South Salem, Ross Co., Ohio, November 23, 1836, and received his preparatory education at the Presbyterian Academy of that place, after which he attended Hanover College, Ind., graduating in 1861, and then taught Hanover High School for two years. Mr. Irwin attended Princeton Theological Seminary for three years, graduating there in April, 1866. He was licensed to preach in 1865, and ordained a minister in the following year, at Little Osage, Mo., where he had charge of the Presbyterian Church for one year. In September, 1867, he came to Allen County, Kan., and has since resided at Geneva. He has charge of the Presbyterian Church here, also the Liberty Presbyterian Church, and the church at Carlyle. During his first six years' residence at this place, he was principal of the Presbyterian Academy. Mr. Irwin has a nice farm here of about 135 acres, and has also eighty acres in Woodson County.

CHAS. L. KNOWLTON, merchant, Geneva, was born in Clark County, Ind., June 23, 1849. His father was a doctor and also carried on a farm, and the subject of our sketch assisted him in the latter business. The doctor resided for four years in Cumberland County, Ill., and in April, 1867, moved to Allen County, Kan., locating at Geneva. His son, Chas. L. accompanied him, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits in this township until January 15, 1882, when he embarked in general merchandise business. He carries a nice stock of about $3,000, and is building up a good trade. He also has a small farm of fifty-three acres. Mr. Knowlton is a member of the order of A., F. & A. M., and is one of the trustees of Tuscan Lodge, No. 82, at Neosho Falls.

JONATHAN M. MATTOON, Postmaster, Geneva, was born in Jefferson County, N. Y., December 17, 1813, and worked on his father's farm until twenty-one years of age. He then learned the trade of machinist and worked at it in New York and Detroit, Mich. He came to Allen County, Kan., in the spring of 1857, located at Geneva, and was employed as a carpenter. He was Deputy Postmaster under Dr. Stone, from 1858 until 1861, when he was commissioned Postmaster, an office which he has filled ever since. He also carries a small stock of goods and has a small farm. Mr. M has been Justice of the Peace since 1859, and is also Notary Public. He served a two years term on the Board of Commissioners for Allen County, during the war. The subject of this sketch was married in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., in 1837, to Lucy Hancock, she died in 1859, leaving six children and two of these, sons died in the late war. Mr. Mattoon was married again in Allen County, Kan., in January, 1861, to Nancy Dickey. They have two daughters.

JONATHAN H. SPICER, farmer, Section 24, P. O. Geneva, was born in Plymouth, N. H., April 12, 1816, and reared principally on farms in the State of New York. His father Jabez Spicer was a medical doctor and a missionary of the Presbyterian Church, but also engaged in agricultural pursuits. The subject of our sketch was, during the years of 1851 and 1852, in the employ of the Panama Railroad Company, in charge of a body of men engaged in building a railroad across the Isthmus. In 1853, he went to California, where he remained one year engaged in mining pursuits. Returning east he carried on mercantile business at Wacousta, Clinton Co., Mich., for three years. Mr. Spicer came to Kansas, in the spring of 1857, and located on his present farm in Allen County. He has 167 acres of land all improved, has a nice orchard, and is quite an extensive raiser of cattle, horses, etc. On October 16, 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Ninth Kansas Cavalry, serving three years and three months. He was Quartermaster Sergeant of the regiment. He was for some years Justice of the Peace and Notary Public, at this place. Mr. S. was married at Watertown, Mich., September 3, 1839, to Miss Emily Phinney. They have one son, Duane D.

J. C. THOMAS, farmer, Section 17, P. O. Iola, was born in Shelby County, Ind., in 1842, and in 1858 came to Kansas, locating in Coffey County. He in company with others built a saw mill in Neosho City. About two years later he moved to Madison County, but remained only a short time. In 1861 he built a flouring mill at Burlington, Kan., and shortly afterwards returned to Indiana on a vessel; while there he enlisted in July, 1862, in the Seventy-sixth Indiana Infantry and served thirty days. Returning to his mill at Burlington he conducted the same until 1863 when he sold out and moved to Iola, where he ran a steam saw and grist mill. In 1865 he sold his interest, and in 1866 moved on to his present farm. He has 125 acres of fine bottom land and raises some stock, etc. In 1876 he purchased a saw mill which is now located on his farm on the banks of the Neosho River. This mill has a capacity of 2,000 feet of lumber daily and gives employment at times to five men. Mr. Thomas is a practical sawyer and machinist.

DEXTER L. WARNER, proprietor of the Geneva House, was born in Franklin County, Mass., March 12, 1842, and reared on a farm. He enlisted May 6, 1861, in Company D, Twelfth Massachusetts Infantry; was shot in left hip joint at Groveton, Va., August 30, 1862, and discharged May 26, 1863. Returning to Franklin he remained until 1871, when he moved to Worcester, where he was employed as a painter and also worked in boot factory. Three years later he moved to Oxford where he was engaged in the capacity of a clerk in general merchandise business. In July, 1879, he came to Allen County, located in Geneva Township and followed agricultural pursuits. In April, 1882, he engaged in his present business and also continues to farm some. Mr. Warner was elected Trustee of Geneva Township in February, 1882, and again in February, 1883.

DEER CREEK TOWNSHIP.

ROBERT B. ARNOLD, Superintendent of the County Poor Farm, P. O. Carlyle, was born in Gibson County, Tenn., August 6, 1839. He was reared on a farm, but at the age of eighteen years entered an apprenticeship to learn the carpenter's trade. This trade he followed in his own neighborhood until March, 1863, when he removed to Hadley, Ill., to keep from being conscripted in the Rebel Army. He remained there until 1866 when he returned to West Tennessee, where he followed his trade until 1874, when he removed to Reno County, Kan. In September, 1877, he located at Humboldt, Allen Co., Kan., where he continued work at his trade until the following January, when he established a grocery store at Carlyle, which he carried on for two years. On March 5, 1880, he took charge of the County Poor Farm as Superintendent, which position he has since retained. He was married February 23, 1868, to Miss Mary Eckley, of Kenton, Tenn. He was then employed in managing a mercantile business in Jersey County until April, 1867, when he once more engaged in live stock business. He came to Kansas in September, 1867, on a prospecting tour, and in April, 1868, located on his present farm in Allen County. He has, in all, some 340 acres, all improved, 220 acres of which are in cultivation and 11 acres in orchard. Mr. Close is an extensive feeder and raiser of live stock. He was Clerk of his School District for nine years, and served two years as Treasurer of the township.

ABRAM DONICA, farmer, Section 19, P. O. Ozark, was born in Vigo County, Ind., May 13, 1838, and reared on a farm. In 1856 he moved to McLean County, Ill., and engaged in agricultural pursuits. On September 5, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, Fourth Illinois Cavalry, was appointed Sergeant, and promoted to Second Lieutenant in November, 1862, to First Lieutenant October 9, 1864, and to Captain March 2, 1865, serving until discharged, June 18, 1866. Mr. D. came to Allen County, Kan., in September, 1866, and located on his present farm. He purchased at that time 153 acres, and has now 343, all improved. On his place is a fine residence and an orchard of two acres, and he raises considerable stock. He was Trustee of the township in 1874 and 1875, and has filled several other local offices. The subject of this sketch was married in Allen County, Kan., May 23, 1867, to Miss Tabitha Mann. Their family consists of four children.

EDWARD G. GILBERT, farmer, Section 21, P. O. Ozark, Anderson County, was born in Harrison County, W. Va., in 1832. In 1850 he moved to Champaign County, Ohio, where he was employed in general farm work. In the fall of 1860 he came to Allen County, Kan., and purchased his farm, but only remained a short time, returning to his home in Ohio. During the war he served in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Ohio National Guards, and was from the 2nd of May, 1864, until August 31, in the United States service. In December, 1865, he returned to Allen County, and has since resided in this township. He has 320 acres of land, one half of which are under cultivation. Also has a fine orchard, and is an extensive raiser of live stock, which is his main business. He was Treasurer of this township for three years. Mr. Gilbert was married in Allen County, Kan., August 19, 1866, to Mary E. Tucker, and they have a family of five children.

ABRAM F. HOFFMAN, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Ozark, Anderson County, was born in Somerset County, Pa., October 19, 1836. At sixteen years of age he moved to near Dayton, Ohio, and was employed in farming. During the war he served one hundred days in the Ohio National Guard. In October, 1870, he came to Kansas and located on his present farm. He has 320 acres, of which 100 acres are in cultivation and three acres in orchard. He is also an extensive raiser of live stock, and is one of the representative farmers of the township. Mr. Hoffman was elected Treasurer of Osage Township, in February, 1882, and again in 1883. He is also Treasurer of his school district.

WILLIAM RIGGS, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Ozark, was born in Warren County, Ill., September 20, 1838. Reared on a farm, and after reaching manhood farmed on his own account. He came to Kansas in March, 1873, and located on his present farm in Allen County, which consists of 320 acres, all improved, 150 of which are in cultivation. He has a good orchard on his place, and in 1882 built a very fine residence. Mr. R. is quite an extensive stock-raiser, and is one of the enterprising farmers of this county. In the spring of 1882 he was elected Trustee of the township, and served one term.

JAMES STAINBROOK, farmer, Section 33, P. O. Bronson, Bourbon County, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, August 26, 1832, and was reared on a farm. In 1867 he moved West, to Moultrie County, Ill., and October 1, 1869, came to Bourbon County, Kan. Resided for a short time near Uniontown, Bourbon County, and in March, 1871, came to Allen County and located on this farm. He has in all 240 acres, all finely improved, and is largely engaged in raising live stock. He has also a nice orchard of about three acres, and has built himself a good residence. His farm is divided off with stone fences, with a never-failing spring in his pasture.

ROBERT STANLEY, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Ozark, Anderson County, was born in Warren County, Ohio, November 8, 1829, and reared in Clinton County on a farm, where he also carried on quite an extensive farm on his own account. He came to Allen County, Kan., November 14, 1868, and located on his present farm, which he entered as a homestead in 1869. He owns in the county 640 acres, 240 are in his residence farm, which is finely improved, and on which there is a splendid residence and an orchard of about five acres. He is an extensive dealer in live stock, and is one of the leading men of this township.

EDMUND D. WOLF, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Xenia, Bourbon County, was born at Athens, Ohio, December 30, 1806; there he learned the trade of tanner. In 1833, he moved to Porter County, Ind., where he followed agricultural pursuits; there he also built large flour mills, and carried them on for six years. In October, 1866, he came to Kansas, and located in Woodson County, where he farmed for some four years, after which he moved to Allen County, and located on his present farm. Mr. Wolf is a large and extensive farmer; he owns in this county 400 acres of land, and 200 in Bourbon County. He cultivates 200 acres of his property, and raises large quantities of live stock. He is one of the leaders in this section of country.

ELSINORE TOWNSHIP.

S. S. KIRKHAM, carpenter and builder, P. O. Savensburg, was born in Van Buren County, Iowa, in 1843, and was reared and educated in Illinois, received his education at Rushville. At the breaking out of the war, he enlisted in Company G, Missouri Home Guards, and did service in it until January, 1862, was honorably discharged. He then re-enlisted in Company C, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, and did active service in that until the end of the war, when he was honorably discharged as Second Lieutenant, Company C. After the war he went to California, his people having located there in 1864. He carried on mining for a few years, returning to Kansas and marrying in 1870, when he returned to California and carried on mining until 1873, when he came back and located at Louisburg, Kan., and carried on contracting and building until 1878, when he located in Hepler, Kan., and carried on a lumber trade until February, 1883. He married in Paola, Kan., June 1, 1870, Miss Lizsie Miller, who was born in Cole County, Mo., and reared in Miami County, Kan. They have a family of four daughters—Minnie, Ethel, Flora and Fannie. The family are members of the Christian Church. He is a member of Hepler Post, G. A. R., No. 143. His farm contains 160 acres in Section 32, Elsinore Township, Allen County, of improved land, well fenced and watered, and stocked, good buildings, and an orchard of 350 trees of nicely assorted fruits, besides has 1,000 forest trees.

DICKINSON County is in the third tier of counties from the north line of the State, and in the sixth tier from the east line or about one hundred and thirty miles west of the Missouri river. Measured from north to south, the county is thirty-six miles, and from east to west, it is twenty-four miles. The county contains 544,640 acres, or 851 square miles. It is bounded on the north by Clay County, on the south by Marion County, on the east by Davis and Morris counties, and on the west by Saline and Ottawa counties. The north, south and west boundary lines of the county are perfectly straight, but the east line is somewhat irregular. From the point where the Smoky Hill River leaves the county to the northeast corner, is ten miles, and at this point the county widens two miles to the east. Running south from this point eight miles, it again widens two miles to the east, and four miles farther south it narrows two miles to the west, from which point the boundary line is due north and south. Commencing at the north line of the county and running south, the county for the first ten miles is only twenty-two miles wide; for the next eight miles it is twenty-four miles wide; for the next four miles it is twenty six miles wide, and thence to the southern boundary line, a distance of fourteen miles, it is twenty-four miles wide. The great stretch of territory embraced in Dickinson County, is divided into twenty-two civil townships, named and located as follows: The eastern tier includes, commencing at the northeast corner, the townships of Fragrant Hill, Noble, Liberty and Union. The next tier includes, Sherman, Hayes, Centre, Logan, Ridge and Hope. The next Cheever, Buckeye, Grant, Newbern, Jefferson and Banner; and the western tier comprises, Flora, Willowdale, Lincoln, Garfield, Wheatland and Holland.

Dickinson is strictly a prairie county, the surface of which is undulating There is little or no diversity of scenery, but a general sameness applicable to every portion of the county. With the exception of the northwest and southwest portions of the county, which are somewhat broken and bluffy, the face of the county is one vast expanse of beautiful prairie. It is not low and flat, but rises and falls in gradual undulations. Along the Smoky Hill River and the larger creeks, are beautiful valleys ranging from one-half to three miles wide, and along nearly all the streams are fine belts of timber, some much wider than others, ranging from less than one-fourth to a mile in width. The varieties consist, chiefly of ash, walnut, hackberry, elm, oak and cottonwood, although some other varieties are found in small quantities. The timber land embraces about three and a half per cent of the county, the heaviest bodies being along the Smoky Hill River and Lyon Creek. Chapman, Deer, Turkey and Holland creeks are also quite well timbered, but Mud Creek in the northwest portion of the county has but very little timber. Scattered over the face of the county are a great many artificial groves, and fine orchards which tend to break the monotony of the scene. A more beautiful prairie country would be difficult to find. There are neither low marshes, high bluffs, nor sudden declivities, except the irregularities in the surface of the northwest and southwest portions of the county. Streams of pure, clear water are found at intervals of a few miles, and while the surface of the county presents a rather monotonous scene, it is rather pleasing than otherwise.

First in point of importance is the Smoky Hill River, which runs through the center of the county in an easterly direction, entering the county at Solomon City on the west, and leaving it about a mile north of the southeast corner of Noble Township on the east. Its point of leaving is not quite five miles north of its point of entry. Its course is extremely serpentine, sometimes turning due south then directly north, then again bending to the west, when, making another bend, it runs eastward. It is a stream of great permanence, and no matter how long the drought or dry the season it always contains quite a flow of water. All the other streams and creeks in the county are tributary to the Smoky. Its southern tributaries are Holland, Turkey, Lamb, Deer and Lyon creeks. Holland Creek has two forks east and west, both of which rise in Holland Township, which is the southwest township of the county, and almost at the southern boundary line. The west fork runs almost due north and the east fork north by west, so that when they have traveled a distance of about ten miles they form a junction in Wheatland Township, and at this point Holland Creek proper begins. Still pursuing an almost due northerly course, it empties into the Smoky at the southwest corner of Grant Township. The length of the creek is about twenty miles, and it is well timbered. The next southern tributary of the Smoky is Turkey Creek, which has three branches known as the West, Middle and East branches. The West Branch rises in Banner Township, about three miles north of the southern boundary line of the county; the Middle branch rises in the same township just at the south boundary line: and the East branch rises in Hope Township, at the south boundary line of the county and about five miles east of the Middle Branch. The East and Middle branches are each about seven miles in length, and the former running north by west, and the latter north by east, both meet and form a junction in the northeast corner of Banner Township, from which point the stream takes the name of East Branch and continues its course due north. The West Branch is about twelve miles long, and after running due north about five miles it inclines to the east and pursues its course through the entire length of Jefferson Township and part of Newbern, where it forms a junction with the East Branch, and from thence its course is due north until it empties into the Smoky at the south of Grant Township and about three miles south of the city of Abilene. Lamb Creek is about twelve miles long and has its rise on Section No. 20, in Logan Township. It runs due north and skirts the town of Enterprise on the west, passing which it inclines slightly eastward and enters the Smoky in Center Township. Deer Creek is east of Lamb Creek a few miles, and while it is only some eight or nine miles in length, it is quite heavily timbered. Carrie Creek is quite a stream of some fifteen miles in length, which rises in the northern portion of Ridge Township, and flows in a northeasterly direction until it empties into Lyon Creek, a little north of Lyona at the eastern boundary line of the county. Lyon Creek has also three branches known as the East, Middle and West branches. The West Branch rises in Hope Township, and runs in a northeasterly direction, emptying into Lyon Creek at Woodbine on the south line of Liberty Township. This branch is about twelve miles long. The Middle and East branches form a junction in Union Township, about three miles northeast of Aroma at which point Lyon Creek proper begins and flows north by east until it leaves the county at its east line, two miles north of Lyona. The northern tributaries of the Smoky Hill are Mud Creek and Chapman Creek, both of which are fed by several streams of lesser note. Mud Creek rises in the northwestern corner of the county in Willowdale Township, and runs in a southeasterly direction, passing through Buckeye and Grant townships, skirting the city of Albilene on its way and entering the Smoky about two miles south of the town. Chapman Creek is the longest stream in the county next to the Smoky Hill River. The entire length of the creek is nearly, or quite, seventy-five miles. It takes its rise up in Cloud County, and enters Dickinson County at a point named Industry on the northern boundary line of the county. Its course is southeast, running across the northeast corner of Cheever Township, thence diagonally across the western portion of Sherman Township, thence south by east through Noble Township, until it unites with the waters of the Smoky at the east side of the town of Chapman. All the streams, except Mud Creek, are reasonably well timbered and some of them quite heavily so. There are no springs in the county of any note. Good well water, however, can be obtained at depths ranging from twenty to sixty feet.

Dickinson County has but very little waste land, and the acres are but few that are not susceptible of cultivation. No better soil can be found anywhere than in Dickinson County. It is all alluvial, upland as well as bottom land. It is subsoiled with limestone and clay. The soil in the valleys of the streams and creeks is of great depth and richness. Soil has been taken up from a depth of twelve feet which has produced wonderful garden crops, proving conclusively its almost inexhaustible nature. The upland soil is equally as good as that of the bottom, the only difference being in quantity. The soil is not quite so deep on the upland as it is in the valleys, although its average depth is from three to six feet. No matter how thriftless the farmer, or how shiftless the manner in which he cultivates the land, it will take many years before any impoverishment of the soil will be noticeable. The extent of the valleys has to be seen to be comprehended. They are not little narrow strips of level land bordering the margins of the streams, but wide, beautiful valleys of miles in width. Valleys of many of the Eastern rivers, such as the Connecticut and Mohawk, sink into insignificance compared with those of the Smoky Hill. In many places a man can stand on his own threshold in these valleys and view tracts of land three and four miles square, the soil of which is not only unexcelled but unexcellable. There is nothing known to agriculture that the soil is not capable of producing. All kinds of cereals are of easy production. Wheat, oats, corn, rye, barley, all can be successfully raised with the least possible amount of labor. If the adaptability of the soil excels in any one particular it is in favor of wheat. This crop is sown in the fall and is much more certain than corn. It is usually harvested in the latter end of June and beginning of July, and with anything like ordinary rains a good crop is always certain. Corn, however, is not as certain, but this is not owing to any fault in the soil. It is not that the soil fails to produce, or that the cultivation of corn is too expensive, because there is no crop that can be raised with greater ease, but the uncertainty springs from a different source. Frequently, not only Dickinson County, but the entire State is visited by simoons, or hot winds from the south, which usually last for several days. These hot winds generally come in the latter end of July or beginning of August, and before their coming is felt all the small grain is harvested and secured. Not so with corn, however, for this is the time when it has either begun to tassel or has tasselled. While in this advanced state the hot winds come along and in a few days not only the corn but all other vegetation is scorched and parched; and the years when these hot winds come the corn crop is a failure. Were it not for these Kansas would be one of the greatest corn growing States in the Union, and Dickinson would be one of the greatest corn raising counties in the State.

To show what Dickinson County soil is capable of doing in regard to wheat raising a statement made by Hon. J. S. Hollinger, of Chapman, will suffice. Mr. Hollinger said that between September 3 and 5, 1877, he sowed 100 acres of wheat on Section 27, Township 13, Range 4, which was harvested from June 15 to 20, 1878, with an average yield of forty-six and a half bushels to the acre. The soil was upland and theseed was drilled in, one and three-eighths bushels to the acre. The variety was Fultz, of which he had 500 acres in all, which averaged thirty-four bushels per acre. The soil is not only beautifully adapted to all kinds of agricultural pursuits, but is also well suited to horticulture and arboriculture. Apples, pears, peaches, plums, and all kinds of small fruit can be successfully and profitably cultivated. Forest trees grow very rapidly, and all the attention they require after being planted is to protect them from prairie fire. In 1858 one Mr. Bradfield settled on a claim close to where the town of Abilene now stands. In plowing the land he discovered that quite a large number of cottonwoods had sprung up the year before which he did not disturb, and owing to the foresight displayed then, is attributable the fact that on the same spot there is now a beautiful grove, with trees measuring two and three feet in diameter. In addition to the other adaptabilities of the soil is to be added that of stock raising. The wide ranges which the county affords, its numerous streams and creeks of pure, living water, and the superabundance of rich nutritious grasses, make it very desirable for stock raising purposes.

The climate and atmosphere of Dickinson County are not the least of its excellencies and attractiveness. The air is pure and dry, and the atmosphere clear and invigorating and free from all impurities. There is no trace of malaria, nor are there any low marshes, miry sloughs, or stagnant pools to impregnate the air with miasma and spread seeds of fever and disease. Pulmonary complaints are unknown to the natives, and where these exist among newcomers, unless strongly confirmed and of long standing, they soon disappear. Catarrhal affections are unknown, and persons affected with these and similar ailments on coming to the county, soon get rid of them after settlement The salubrity of the climate is due, chiefly, to the excellent system of natural drainage, by which all surplus water occasioned by heavy rainfalls is carried to the streams and creeks, so that there are neither marshes nor ponds to emit their poisonous vapors. The winters are short, and only on rare occasions do they approach severity. Very seldom does snow lie on the ground longer than a few days, at the farthest. In the summer season, although the mercury in the thermometer climbs away up into the nineties, there is generally a mitigating breeze, and no matter how excessively warm the day, the evenings and nights are always cool and pleasant.

No mineral has yet been discovered in the county to any extent. Several attempts have been made to discover coal, but the only success met with was the discovery of a few thin veins of very poor quality in the vicinity of Chapman's Creek and Holland Creek, which were not worth working, and gave no encouragement for further attempts at development. Large quantities of good limestone, suitable for building purposes, are found in various portions of the county, and chiefly in the neighborhood of Enterprise. Here, also, are found in large quantities deposits of potters' clay, which is not used to any extent. In the southwestern portion of the county are extensive beds of gypsum which might be profitably utilized both for fertilizing, building and making lime.

EARLY HISTORY.

Dickinson County has no pre-Territorial history, as the first settlement that took place within its borders, of which there is any authenticated account, took place on Chapman Creek in 1855, and was made by a family named Lenon. The following of this family was of a rather doubtful character, it being supposed that horse stealing was their chief business. How far these suppositions were correct has never been definitely known, but certain it is that in 1858, so strong was the suspicion against them, that they were driven out of the county. The next settler in the county was T. F. Hersey, who came in the fall of 1856, and located on a claim on Mud Creek, adjacent to where the city of Abilene now stands, and the following spring his family followed him and moved into the log cabin he had prepared for them. Dickinson County, like most all other counties in Kansas away from the bank of the Missouri River, suffered under that erroneous impression that it was a country unfit for human habitation, and as a consequence, settlers came in very slowly. At the time the county was organized, in 1857, there was not over a half dozen families in the county. The county was named after Daniel S. Dickinson, of New York, who, while United States Senator from that State, introduced in the Senate, in 1847, resolutions respecting Territorial government which embodied the doctrine of popular sovereignty. Prior to its organization, and for a long time subsequent thereto, it was attached to Davis County for judicial and municipal purposes, and occupied the position of a municipal township. In 1857, C. W. Staatz settled on Lyon Creek, being the first settler on this creek in Dickinson County. In 1858 quite a number of new-comers arrived, and settled in different portions of the county, on the various streams. Among these were A. J. Markley, who settled on Turkey Creek; William Lamb, who located at what is now Detroit, on the Smoky; A. Packard, on the Smoky, a little southeast of Detroit; John Irwin, the Pritchard brothers, G. W. Freeman, on Chapman Creek; J. F. and C. F. Staatz, William Brusson, on Lyon Creek, and E. W. Bradfield on Mud Creek. At that time no one thought of settling on the upland prairie, every new arrival seeking the bottom lands in the valleys of the creeks and streams, for the double purpose of securing better land and being close to timber. Green Lamb, John Nash, James Long, William Mulhagen, Dr. Gerot, Henry Long, John Long, Nicholas White, H. M. Rulison, and a few others were among the 1857-58 settlers. At that time, and prior thereto, and for some time subsequent, the wide valley of the Smoky and the extensive level plains of the prairie formed the choice hunting grounds of the various Indian tribes located to the north, south, east and west of what is now Dickinson County. From the south came the Kaws, whose chief village was at Council Grove, in Morris County; from the north and west came the Sioux, Pawnees and Cheyennes, and from the east came the Delawares and Pottawatomies. The country abounded in deer, elk, buffalo, antelope and all other kinds of wild game, and even for years after white settlement commenced, these kings of the prairie roamed the plains of Dickinson County in countless numbers. The early settlers, being located far apart, seldom saw any human being but the red man as he roamed the prairie with knife and rifle in quest of game, and the only sound that disturbed the silence was the crack of his gun. Even as late as 1860, the region of the Smoky was a favorite retreat for the Indians. Thus it was that in the fall of that year, Capt. Sturgis, of the United States Dragoons, then stationed at Fort Larned, after a futile attempt in pursuit of the Sioux, to punish them for some heinous depredations committed by them, after having been out-manœuvred by the Indians for weeks, he, supposing they had gone south, finally found them on the Smoky, where he attacked them, destroyed their camp, killed quite a number, and captured a good many more. The first prairie broke in the county for farming purposes was on the Lenon claim on Chapman Creek in 1857, and the next was by T. F. Hersey, close to where Abilene now stands. The year 1859 witnessed quite a good many new arrivals, many of whom took claims and settled in the county, whilst others, afraid to wrestle with the inconveniences and discomforts of frontier life, after viewing the beautiful valleys and wide prairies, turned their faces eastward and started back. Among those that remained was James Bell, who took a claim in the Smoky Hill valley, about a mile from the present town of Abilene, and upon which he continues to reside. The other settlers who came that year located in different portions of the county, some in one place and some in another, just as they were guided by fancy or judgment. To settle in Dickinson County at that early date was no small undertaking, but one surrounded with dangers and difficulties. In the first place, tribes of savage Indians were almost continually roaming over the country, and although they professed to be friendly, there was no telling at what moment, under some real or supposed injury, or the wild whim or caprice of some treacherous chief, an indiscriminate slaughter of the whites might commence. Experience had shown that when the savage thought there was anything to be gained by treachery, there was no dependence to be placed on him. Again, the necessaries of life were only to be had at great risk and inconvenience. In the days of 1857-58-59, there was scarcely a horse in the county, oxen being used almost entirely for farm work and travel. Statistics show that even in 1860 there were only twenty-three horses in the whole county. The early settlers found no difficulty in raising grain, the great trouble arose in finding a market for it and a mill to grind it. Kansas City and Leavenworth were the nearest points where they could have their grists ground or do their trading, but these were distant 160 to 170 miles, and to make the trip there and back with an ox team required about a month. These trips were not often made, probably once or twice a year, but when the "old man" went to market or mill, the whole family had to go, because the country being so sparsely settled, and settlers being so far apart, and Indians so plenty, it was not deemed safe to leave the family behind.

Under Territorial Law, a company that platted and laid out into town lots forty acres was entitled to 160 acres, and this accounts for the multiplicity of towns laid out in all new counties in territorial times. One of the requirements of the law was actual occupancy. This law was widely taken advantage of by parties who did not wish to comply with the pre-emption law. Hence, as early as 1857, shortly after the organization of the county, a party consisting of Nicholas White, H. M. Rulison, and Dr. Gerot, formed themselves into a town company and located what was known as the town of Newport. The place chosen for the town site was Section 3, Town 13, Range 3, about a mile east of where Detroit now stands. Forty acres of the section were laid off into town lots, and a log cabin was erected on each quarter section, besides a store, eighteen by twenty, built of hewn logs. The object of putting a log cabin on each quarter was to secure the entire section, but whether they succeeded in their object the record saith naught, although it is presumable from the evidence that they failed, from the fact that the company disbanded the following year and abandoned the site. Newport, however, became the first county seat of the county. The first officers appointed for the county were appointed by Governor Denver in 1858, who, at that time, was Governor of the Territory, and were as follows: Commissioners, William Lamb, James Long, and William Mullhagan; County Clerk, Dr. Gerot; Treasurer, John Lamb; Sheriff, Henry Long; and Register of Deeds, John Long. It was by this first board of County Commissioners that Newport was declared the county seat. Up to this time, and for some time subsequent, Dickinson was attached to Davis County for judicial and municipal purposes, and not until 1859 was there a voting precinct in the entire county, the nearest voting place being Kansas Falls, on the west line of Davis County. Unfortunately for this history, the records of the proceedings of the County Commissioners during Territorial times were destroyed in the great fire by which Abilene was visited in January, 1882. In 1859, however, a voting precinct was established at Newport, at which twenty votes were cast at the election held in November of that year. This closes the Territorial period, and early in the following year, 1860, Kansas became one of the States in the Union. The population of Dickinson County at that time was 378, and this included every man, woman, and child in the county. The first regular election held in the county was in the fall of 1860, after Kansas had been admitted as a State. The Smoky Hill River running almost through the center of the county from west to east, divides the county into nearly two equal parts; one north and the other south. To accommodate the voters on both sides of the river the County Commissioners established two voting precincts, one on the north side of the river at Newport, and one on the south side at A. J. Markey's, on Turkey Creek, or, as it was then called, Union City. At this election the following were the county officers chosen: Commissioners, E. W. Bradfield, William Mullhagen, and G. W. Danks; Assessor, J. F. Staatz; Treasurer, J. C. Abbott; County Clerk, T. F. Hersey; Register of Deeds, R. H. Hunt; Surveyor, Green Lamb; Probate Judge, Gotlieb Gugler. Scarcely had these officers qualified for their respective offices when the county seat question began to be agitated. At this juncture, one C. H. Thompson, who, in the spring of 1860, had moved into the county from Leavenworth, and located on a tract of land east of the farm of T. F. Hersey, conceived the idea of laying out a town, which idea he immediately carried out by having a portion of his land surveyed and laid off into town lots. The naming of this town in prospective was given to Mrs. Hersey, who named it Abilene. After the town was laid out and named, a few rude log cabins were speedily constructed, and Abilene entered the lists as a contestant for the county seat. The other contesting places were; Union City, Smoky Hill (now Detroit) and Newport. The voters were not many, but the contest was none the less lively for all that. Union City was on the south side of the river, and the other contesting places north of it. Newport had the advantage of whatever prestige was to be gained from being then the county seat. The settlers on the south side of the river were much less in number than those on the north side, but they had the advantage of being united, as there was only one place south of the river that aspired to the honor of becoming the county seat, and on this place they concentrated their voting strength. The chances of Union City were very encouraging, as the people on the north side of the river were divided between Abilene, Smoky Hill and Newport. Thompson and Hersey saw that unless a union could be made with the supporters of some of the other points, the county seat would not only be lost to Abilene, but to the north side of the river, and all their energies were bent to prevent this if possible. How it was accomplished is yet a mystery, but certain it is that they succeeded in getting the settlers on Chapman Creek to withdraw their support from Newport in favor of Abilene, and by this move they secured the victory. The election on the county seat question took place in the spring of 1861, and the canvass of the votes showed Abilene to be the choice. Besides the places mentioned as contesting for the county seat, there were towns, in name only, scattered all over the county. There was a piece of ground to which was given the name of London Falls. Then there was the town of Centreville, another named Arapahoe; the name of another town was given to a place about three-fourths of a mile west of Mud Creek; then a party from New York located and named a town adjoining, Sand Spring. Bruce City was the name given to a place at the mouth of the Solomon River, and White Cloud was located about a mile east of the present site of Solomon City. As if there were still a scarcity of towns, John Erwin located a town on his farm, and about the same time some one else located a town in the southeastern portion of the county, to which he gave the sweet sounding name of Aroma. How densely all these towns were peopled may be ascertained from the fact that in the 851 square miles embraced in Dickinson County, there were at that time but 378 souls, all told. The effects of the extreme drouth of 1860, by which Kansas was visited, were felt in Dickinson County as well as in all other portions of the State, not only in the destruction of crops, but in putting a stop to immigration. From 1860 until after the war closed, the new comers that settled in the county were very few, nor did they come in any great numbers for several years afterwards. A few would come at intervals, and if suitable locations could be found in some of the stream valleys, they would settle, but if not they would go elsewhere. All this time there was not a single settler on the prairie, and not until 1867 did any one venture to open up a prairie farm. The first to so venture were John Reeves and Edmund Kelly, who located in Newbern Township in 1867, and went to work turning over the virgin sod. It is questionable if the opening up of these farms by Reeves and Kelly did not do more for the advancement and development of Dickinson County than any other thing that could have happened. Prior to that time it was the universal belief that the uplands of the prairie were altogether useless for farming, and were fit only for grazing purposes. This delusion was soon dispelled and when it was found that as good farms could be made on the upland prairies as on the bottom lands in the valleys, the new comers increased, and at this date, 1882, some of the finest farms in the county are prairie farms. In the years of the early settlement of the county, several attempts had been made to raise fall wheat, but without success. This failure was not caused by any defect in the soil, but to other and quite natural causes. Fires had swept over the surface of the soil for a great many years before settlement, during which the soil nearest to the surface had undergone a process of baking, as it were. When the sod was turned over it would soon lose what little humidity it possessed and become perfectly dry. In those days grain was sown broadcast, and before it could take root, strong winds would come and blow, not only the seed out of the ground, but a good deal of the soil with it, consequently there would be no crop, and hence the sowing of fall wheat was discontinued. The attempt was not renewed until the fall of 1866, when it was undertaken by the Hodge brothers, who made a success of it, and since that time but very little spring wheat has been raised in the county, fall wheat having supplanted it. The year 1869 was rather a disastrous one for Dickinson County, owing to the floods that occurred in June of that year. Mud Creek and Chapman Creek overflowed their banks, and the entire country north of the Smoky Hill was submerged. Abilene was under water—cellars were flooded, and in most of the houses water stood two and three feet deep. People had to leave their homes, and as many as three hundred people were quartered in the "Drovers' Cottage," kept by Mr. Gore, for several days, and even there the water was a foot deep on the ground floor. What crops were in the ground were completely washed out, and twelve persons were drowned by the flood The year 1870 is chiefly remarkable for the number of new settlers that located in the county that year, and also for the county seat contest between Detroit and Abilene, in which the latter was successful. In February of that year, a party from Ohio who had come to Kansas to select a location for a colony, were so well pleased with Dickinson County that they concluded to look no farther. Lands were selected for the colonists, and on the 5th day of April following, the Buckeye Colony arrived in Abilene, where they remained until houses for their accommodation were built on the lands that had been selected for the colony. These lands are located in Township 12, Range 2 east, which is now one of the civil townships of the county, and is known as Buckeye Township. The colonists numbered about 200 in all, and among them were: M. P. Jolley, J. T. Stevenson, W. R. Moore, Lot Deming, J. T. Simmons, John Hummell, J. R. Wilson, W. S. Lafferty, A. K. Ruse, Stephen Winsler, George Purvess, Joseph Kennedy, Wm. Jackson, Joseph Underhill, followed shortly afterwards by a good many others. Mr. V. P. Wilson was the organizer of this Buckeye colony. In September of that same year a County Agricultural Society was organized, but after an existence of a few years, the property of the society passed into the hands of others, and now fairs are held under the auspices of a stock company. In that month, also, quite an accession was made to the population, by the arrival of Joseph Wilson and twenty others, who emigrated from Bureau County, Ills., and settled in Dickinson County. The first fair held in the county, was, on October 18, 1870, on the farm of James Bell, near Abilene. The year 1871 was one of large immigration into the county. As early as March, a colony of about forty persons arrived from Michigan, and settled in what is now Hope, but what was then part of Ridge Township. Among the colonists were: N. Thurstin, A. Hanquenet, D. Chartier, M. Chase, Mr. Robinson and others. In the spring of that same year, Rev. W. B. Christopher, of Illinois, with a colony of about fifty persons, located in the county, and selected Cheever, one of the northern townships, as their place of settlement. In March, 1872, quite a colony arrived in the county from Tennessee, under the leadership of W. E. A. Meek and A. L. Evans. The members of this colony numbered about sixty, and their place of location was in Ridge and Hope Townships in the southern portion of the county. About this time, also, quite a number of settlers arrived from Adams County, Pa., who selected Cheever Township as their place of settlement. The number of new settlers coming to the county kept increasing each year until 1879, when one of the most complete and perfectly organized colonies that ever entered a new country, arrived in Dickinson County. In point of numbers and equipment it far exceeded anything that had preceded it. All told, they numbered nearly three hundred persons. The leaders of the movement had been traveling through Kansas for some time seeking a location, and finally decided upon Dickinson County. When they had selected the lands for the colony, they immediately went to work and had a large frame building erected in Abilene, 28x80 feet, for the accommodation of the colonists upon their arrival, until suitable buildings could be erected upon their lands. On Friday, March 28, 1879, the first company arrived in Abilene, which consisted of thirty persons from Frederick County, Md., and on Saturday morning, upwards of two hundred arrived from Lancaster, Cumberland, Dauphin, Lebanon and Franklin counties, Pa., and these were followed later by others. In religion they are what is known as "River Brethren," and in order not to be deprived of their privilege of worship, they brought with them a minister, Rev. Benj. Gish, and a bishop, Rev. Jesse Engle, so that from the time they started, there was a perfect church organization in the colony. The colony divided on its arrival in the county, some settling north of the Smoky, and some south, in the vicinity of Belle Springs. They brought with them fifteen car loads of freight, and in noting their departure from Pennsylvania, the Marietta Times said that they took with them not less than $500,000 in money. In November, 1871, the cattle trade business was closed up in Abilene, and moved to counties farther West. From the commencement of the business to its close, it had been a source of a good deal of trouble to many of the farming community. Companies were formed to oppose the driving of Texas cattle through the county, which often led to serious disturbances between the cattle men and farmers, the latter being sometimes fought off and sometimes bought off. From that time forward the county advanced rapidly, each year adding hundreds to its population, and thousands of dollars to its material wealth; and now the position occupied by Dickinson County as an agricultural and stock county, is in the first rank.

ORGANIZATION OF TOWNSHIPS.

There was no division of the county into civil townships until 1867, when on April 3, of that year, the County Commissioners divided it into five townships, as follows:

The territory described as follows, constituted Newbern Township. Commencing at the southwest corner of the county, thence east on the south line of county to the southwest corner of Section 34, Township 16, Range 5; thence north to Smoky Hill River, thence west along said river to west line of county, and thence south to place of beginning.

Union Township embraced the following described territory: Beginning at the southwest corner of Section 35, Township 16, Range 3, thence east to southeast corner of the county, thence north to the Smoky Hill River, thence west along said river to the east line of Newbern Township, and thence south on said line to place of beginning. These two townships embraced all that portion of territory lying south of Smoky Hill River, which is more than half the county.

Grant Township commenced at the northwest corner of Township 11, Range 2, thence south on the range line to the Smoky Hill River, thence east along the river to the west line of Section 2, Township 13, Range 3, thence north on the section line to south line of Township 11, Range 3, thence west to east line of Range 2, thence north to north line of county, and thence west to place of beginning.

Sherman Township commenced at the northwest corner of Township 11, Range 3, thence south to north line of Township 12, thence east on town line to southwest corner of Section 35, Township 11, Range 3, thence south to the Smoky Hill River, thence east on said river to the east line of the county, thence north on the east line of the county to the northeast corner of the county, and thence west to the place of beginning.

Lincoln Township commenced at the northwest corner of the county, thence south on west line of county to the Smoky Hill River, thence east along the river to the east line of Range 1, thence north on said east line to north line of county and thence west to place of beginning.

By this division three townships were established north of the river and two south. Whilst the territory north of the Smoky Hill is considerable less than that south, yet at that time, the few settlers that were in the county were located, chiefly, north of the stream. Each of the three northern townships extended from the river to the north line of the county, and each of them had an embryo town, Chapman on the east, Abilene in the center and Solomon City on the west. A new township, to which was given the name of Lamb, was organized, November 6, 1869, embracing a part of what is now Cheever, Buckeye, Grant, Newbern, Ridge, Union, Liberty, three-fourths of Noble, nearly all of Sherman, and all of Hayes, Center and Logan. It was nine miles east and west, and twenty-six miles north and south, and completely spoiled the symmetrical proportions of all the other townships excepting Lincoln. On January 5, 1870, just two months after its formation, the boundary lines of Lamb Township were changed, and in changes that were made subsequently, it lost its identity altogether.

Ridge Township was organized February 20, 1872, and comprised Townships 15 and 16, Range 3, but subsequently it was subdivided, and 15 was made Hope Township.

Willowdale Township was organized February 21, 1872, and comprised Townships 11 and 12, Range 1, by which formation Lincoln was nearly obliterated.

On March 15, 1873, a general reorganization of townships took place, by which old boundary lines were wiped out, and new ones created.

Holland Township comprised Townships 14, 15 and 16, Range 1 east.

Buckeye Township comprised Township 12, Range 2 east.

Sherman Township comprised Township 11, Ranges 3 and 4 east.

Liberty Township comprised Townships 13 and 14, Range 4 east and that portion of 14, Range 5 east, belonging to Dickinson County.

Lincoln Township was made to comprise Township 13, Range 1 east.

Union Township was comprised of Townships 15 and 16, Range 4 east.

Newbern Township was composed of Township 14, Ranges 2 and 3 east.

Grant Township was cut down to Township 13, Range 2 east.

Center Township was created and comprised Township 13, Range 3 east.

Cheever Township was formed of Township 11, Range 3 east.

Noble Township comprised Township 12, Ranges 3 and 4 east.

Jefferson Township was made to consist of Townships 15 and 16, Range 2 east.

On April 10, 1877, other townships were created by changing the boundary lines.

Banner Township was taken from the south of Jefferson, and is composed of Township 16, Range 2 east.

Logan Township was taken from the east of Newbern, and consists of Township 14, Range 3 east.

Hayes Township was taken from the west of Noble, and comprises the west five miles of Township 12, Range 3 east.

Wheatland Township was created on January 9, 1878, by taking Townships 14 and 15, Range 1 east, from Holland.

Flora Township was established in 1879, by a division of Willowdale, giving Town 11, Range 1 to the former, and Town 12, Range 1 to the latter.

Fragrant Hill Township was created February 10, 1880, by dividing Sherman north and south, and giving the west half to the former.

Garfield Township was organized September, 1882, by dividing Wheatland east and west, and giving the north half to Garfield.

The foregoing is the history of the organization of the various townships in the county as at present constituted, of which there are twenty-two in all.

GROWTH IN POPULATION.

For ten or twelve years after the county was organized its population increased very slowly, and it could not well be otherwise. The county was then on the extreme west of civilization, and was part of that vast plain set down by some geographers as the "Great American Desert." Up until 1866 there was not a foot of railway in the county, and the long distances settlers had to go to mill and market were detriments to impede settlement. When it finally did take a start the population increased with wonderful rapidity, and although the ravages of the grasshoppers in 1874 gave it a temporary check, it soon recovered and grew more rapidly than ever. In 1860 the county had a population of 378; in 1870 it was 3,043; an increase in ten years of 2,665, or an average of 266½ per year. Fully three-fourths of this increase occurred after the completion of the Kansas Pacific Railway through the county, or between 1866 and 1870. In 1875 the population of the county was 6,841, being an increase in five years of 3,798, or 1,133 greater than the increase during the preceding ten years. In 1878 another census was taken and at that time the population of the county was 10,850, being an increase in three years of 4,009, or 211 more than the increase from 1870 to 1875, and this, too, notwithstanding the temporary check immigration received from the grasshopper raid of 1874. The United States census of 1880 gives the population of the county at 15,070, showing an increase in two years of 4,220, this being 211 more than the increase for the three preceding years. The census taken by the various assessors in the spring of 1882 sets the population down at 15,693, and now, November, 1882, it is estimated at not less than 16,000.

It is by the material growth of a county that the prosperity of the people can best be judged. The evidences of material advancement are to be seen on every hand, in beautiful, well stocked farms, fine houses and commodious barns; in thriving towns and villages; in mills and manufactories; in numerous schoolhouses and churches, and in the general prosperity that seems to accompany all branches of business. That Dickinson County has advanced wonderfully in material growth is best shown by statistics. Referring to these it is found that in 1860 all the live stock in the county was included in 23 head of horses, 3 mules, 7 sheep, and 105 head of cattle. Ten years later, 1870, the value of the agricultural products of the county alone amounted to $171,882. In 1872 the total acreage of field crops was 38,448; in 1873 it was 43,265.53; in 1874 it was 51,887. This was the year of the great grasshopper invasion, when the people of Kansas were rendered so destitute that a great many of the people had to receive aid and assistance from those of other States, but notwithstanding this, the acreage of field crops for the following year, 1875, exceeded that of 1874 by 19,124.12, the total for that year being 71,011.12. In 1876 it was 88,825.60; in 1877 it was 133,510.46; in 1878 it was 166,002.06; in 1879 it was 185,483.61, and in 1880 it had reached 217 197.74. A better understanding of how the county has grown in material wealth may be had by comparing the value of products of 1870 with that of 1880. In the former year it was only $171,882, while the latter reached to $1,832,537.64, showing an increase in ten years of $1,660,655.64. That the material wealth of the county is increasing largely each year may be seen by comparing the live stock in the county in 1880 with that of 1882.

Year.	Horses.	Mules & Asses	Cows.	Other Cattle.	Sheep.	Swine.
1882.	7,578	1,006	5,329	13,076	26,754	24,547

The large increase in cattle and sheep shows clearly that the people are becoming alive to how profitably stock-raising and sheep raising can be carried on where there is an abundance of rich pasture, pure water and wide ranges; and in all these Dickinson County excels. The number of acres in cultivated farms in 1882 was 385,749, valued at $4,014,473. There were erected 251 farm dwellings during the year ending March 1, 1882, valued at $74,329. The total acreage of field crops in 1882 was 241,450, an increase of 24,252.26 over that of 1880. The value of garden products sold in 1880 was $11,255; in 1882 it was $11,733. The value of poultry and eggs sold in 1880 was $14,443, as against $26,897 in 1882. The value of animals slaughtered, or sold for slaughter, in 1880, was $177,861, whereas, in 1882, they amounted in value to $286,147. The amount of wool clipped from sheep in the county in 1880, aggregated 25,368 pounds, whereas, in 1882, it reached 58,479 pounds. The vast increase in the two last items alone show with what gigantic strides the people of the county are marching to material prosperity. The product of butter in 1880 was 296,589 pounds, and in 1882 it was 400,176, an increase in two years of 103,587 pounds. There were cut in 1881 500 tons of tame hay, and 43,865 tons of prairie hay, representing a value of at least $221,825. Other evidences of the material prosperity of the county are shown in the advancement of arboriculture and horticulture. Forest trees have been planted to the extent of 4,220 acres, and over 100 acres are devoted to nurseries. The number of apple trees in bearing, according to the assessor's returns for 1882, was 13,760; pear trees 2,295; peach trees, 207,174; plum trees, 23,249, and cherry trees 9,296. The number not in bearing was: apple 37,185, pear 2,963, peach 130 697, plum 13,102, and cherry 23,723. Over 100 acres were devoted to the culture of strawberries, raspberries and grapes. Of fence there were in the county, in 1882, of board, 24,316 rods; of rail, 3,012 rods; of stone, 22,699 rods; hedge, 411,900, and wire, 100,191, or an aggregate of 562,118, representing a value of nearly three-fourths of a million of dollars, and $200,000 more is represented by the agricultural implements in the county. The foregoing statistics ought to be sufficient evidence to satisfy any one of the growth of Dickinson County in material wealth.

RAILROADS, SCHOOLS, CHURCHES, PRESS.

There is only one railroad in the county, the Kansas Pacific, which runs across the entire county from east to west. It follows the course of the Smoky Hill River, and runs along its north bank, some places touching the very margin of the stream and at others being two or three miles from it, owing to the windings of the river. It enters the county at the southeast corner of Noble Township, and passes through the towns of Chapman, Detroit, Abilene and passes out of the county on the west at Solomon City. The road was built through the county in 1866.

The educational interests of the county are in keeping with the general progress and advancement of the other interests of the county. The schoolhouses are all in good condition and the sites are fenced. Nearly all of the school buildings are located on the prairie, and although located in these exposed positions, but very few have taken any steps to ornament the grounds by setting out shade trees. Inside, however, the buildings are well seated, and well supplied with maps, charts, globes, dictionaries and other school apparatus. There are at present (1882), one hundred and twelve school districts in the county, and 114 schoolhouses, of which number, three are constructed of brick, eight of stone, and 103 of wood. The school population of the county in 1882, between the ages five and twenty-one years, was 5,503, divided as to sex into 2,833 males and 2,670 females. The number of pupils enrolled in the public schools during the year was 4,701, of which 2,397 were males and 2,304 females. The average daily attendance was 2,757, divided into males, 1,334, and females, 1,423. The total number of teachers employed during the year was 133, of which sixty-five were males and sixty-eight females. The average salary per month paid to teachers was, males $36, females $31.50. Besides the 114 public schools, in the county there are two private schools, giving employment to three male teachers, the pupils of which number 140. School bonds were issued during the year to the amount of $13,600, and the total bonded indebtedness of the various school districts in the county was $31,830. A tax of twelve and half mills was levied for all school purposes, and the estimated value of all school property in the county, including buildings and grounds, was $95,000. There was in the hands of the District Treasurer, on August 1, 1881, $4,959.45, and the receipts during the year amounted to $57,578.30 making a total of $62,537.75. The expenditures during the year amounted to $45,713.29, so that on August 1, 1882, the amount in the hands of the District Treasurer was $16,824.46. Whilst there are only 114 schoolhouses in the county, there are 130 schoolrooms, which arises from the fact that the school buildings in Abilene, Solomon City, Enterprise and Chapman, contain two, or more rooms. The schoolhouse in Abilene, which has just been greatly enlarged to meet the demands of the community, is a large, elegant brick building and would be an ornament to any city.

Aside from the churches already mentioned, there are two at Chapman, one Catholic and one Methodist, and also one Catholic about a mile south of Chapman. In Union Township there two, one German Lutheran, valued at $2,500, and one German Baptist, valued at $2,000. In Liberty Township there are two, one German Methodist, valued at $2,500, and one Methodist, valued at $4,000. In Center Township, aside from those in Enterprise, there are two, both Swede, one Lutheran, valued at $1,800, and one Free Church, valued at $1,600.

In Hope Township there is one, Catholic, valued at $800.

In Banner Township there is one, German Lutheran, valued at $2,500.

In Jefferson Township there are two, one Lutheran, valued at $2,000, and one Baptist, valued at $1,000.

In Wheatland Township there is one, United Presbyterian, valued at $1,200.

In Garfield Township there is one, Presbyterian, valued at $1,800.

In all, there are twenty-nine church buildings in the county, all of which are located south of the Smoky Hill River, excepting those in Chapman, Abilene, and Solomon City. In the territory north of the river there are a good many church organizations that meet for worship in the various schoolhouses. In addition to all these the River Brethren have two church organizations both of which are numerically strong.

There are four newspapers published in the county, of which the following is a history.

The Chronicle.—This is a weekly paper, published at Abilene. It was established February, 1870, by V. P. Wilson, and with him as sole editor and proprietor. Mr. Wilson was the prime mover in organizing the Buckeye Colony, and was chiefly instrumental in getting it to locate in Dickinson County. He continued to run the Chronicle until May, 1875, when he sold it to Henry & Lebold, at which time J. W. Hart became editor. Subsequently Henry & Lebold sold the paper to the Dickinson County Publishing Association, Mr. Hart still retaining the editorship. Some time later the paper was sold to Hart & Simpson, after which Simpson disposed of his interest to Hart, who is now sole editor and proprietor. It is published weekly, four pages, eight columns, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 1,000.

The Gazette.—Is published at Abilene, and was established December, 1874, by V. P. Wilson & Sons, who became, and continue to be, sole editors and proprietors. The paper is printed on a steam power Potter press. It is issued on Thursday of each week, four pages, nine columns, is Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 1,800.

Solomon Gazette.—Is published at Solomon City, and was established July, 1879, by J. Claude Hill, and with him as sole editor and proprietor, which he still continues to be. It is a weekly, four pages, eight columns, Independent in politics, and has a circulation of 700.

Enterprise Register.—Is published at Enterprise, and was established in March, 1882, by the Enterprise Publishing Company, with J. D. James, as editor, who continued to edit the paper until June, 1882, when he was succeeded by J. H. Brady, the present editor. The paper is a weekly, four pages eight columns, Independent Republican in politics, and its circulation is 900.

FIRST EVENTS.

FIRST SETTLERS.—Centre Township: Lenon family in 1855, but who left in 1858. The next were John Nash, William Lamb, A. Packard and W. H. Lamb, in 1856. Grant Township: T. F. Hersey, in 1856, James Bell and E. W. Bradfield, in 1858. Liberty Township: C. W. Staatz, 1857; J. F. Staatz, C. F. Staatz and William Brusson, 1858. Noble Township: G. W. Freeman, John Erwin and the Pritchard brothers, 1858. Union Township: The Kandt family, the Koepkes, and A. S. Blanchett, 1859. Ridge and Hope Townships: Settled by the Michigan Colony in 1872, among its members being N. Thurstin, D. Cartier, A. Henquenet, M. Chase, and others, about forty in all. Buckeye Township: M. P. Jolly and J. T. Stevenson, 1869, followed by the Buckeye Colony in 1870, numbering about 200 souls. Cheever Township: First permanent settler was M. H. Price, 1865. Several attempts at settlement had been made prior to this time, one as early as 1859, by a family named Hevington, from North Carolina, and by a family named Williams, in 1860. The Hevingtons took their departure in 1860, and the Williams followed in 1860. The next attempt at settlement in the township was made by two brothers named Murphy, in the spring of 1861. A few months satisfied them and they left in the fall of that same year. The next settler was Mr. Price, in 1865, followed by Robert Kimball and family, in 1866. Mr. Kimball lost his wife by cholera, in 1867, after which he left the county, leaving Mr. Price the sole settler in the township until 1869, when William Warnock and family settled on the claim abandoned by Kimball, and George Shry on the claim abandoned in 1861, by Murphy. Mr. Warnock was drowned that same year in Chapman Creek, after which his family moved out of the township, and Mr. Shry, becoming discouraged moved back to the State he came from, and thus again were Mr. Price and family left the sole inhabitants of the township. In 1870, Eli George, Rev. J. Lattimer and E. W. Dow, and these were followed in 1871, by a colony from Illinois, known as the "Prohibition Colony," organized by Rev. W. B. Christopher, and numbering about fifty souls. Flora Township: T. C. Iliff, and Harrison Flora, 1870. Jefferson Township: M. Rubin and C. Hoffman, 1860. Banner Township: H. H. Nottorf, 1860. Newbern Township: A. J. Markley and J. W. Shepard, 1859. Sherman Township: Daniel Jones, 1864, followed soon after by Kerby, Clemens, Smutz, Shields, Dever brothers, Bayless and others. Logan Township: J. G. Miller, William Hilcher, John Erick, D. J. Kimmerly and C. W. Abbey. Willowdale Township: W. G. Lewis, 1869, followed in 1869, by G. W. Garten and William Campbell. Hayes Township: L. K. Warnock, G. R. Smith and the Thisslers. Garfield Township: K. G. Fleming, A. R. Cormach and J. H. Carkhuff, 1870. Wheatland Township: Henry Baker and Orlando Bonner, 1870. Lincoln Township: H. Whitley and William Frost in 1859.

The first birth and the first death that took place in the county occurred in the family of C. F. Staatz, on Lyon Creek. The birth was that of C. F. Staatz, Jr., which occurred on the 24th day of June, 1857, and his place of birth was the emigrant wagon with which his parents had moved into the county, the log cabin into which the family afterwards moved, not being completed at the time. The first death was that of Julia Staatz, a child of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Staatz, which occurred in October, 1857. The first marriage in the county was that of David Beigart to Miss J. F. Staatz, in 1859, so that the Staatz family had the first birth, the first death, and furnished one of the contracting parties to the first marriage that took place in the county. The first school organized in the county was in Liberty Township, on Lyon Creek, in 1859, the first teacher being William Mueller, or Miller.

The first church built in the county was by the German Methodists, who erected one of logs on Lyon Creek early in the spring of 1861, and which served the double purpose of being used as a church on Sunday and a schoolhouse during the week. Of this first church Rev. Peter May was pastor. The first instrument recorded in the county, as shown by the books in the office of the Register of Deeds, bears date February 23, 1859, and is a deed from Samuel Shively to N. B. White, G. W. Churchill, and H. M. Rulison, conveying the northeast quarter of Section 3, Township 13, Range 3 east, of land in Kansas Territory, containing 165.55 acres, the consideration being $500.

The first store opened in the county was by "Old Man Jones" at Abilene in 1860, which was a kind of country store and saloon combined.

The first hotel built in the county was the Drovers' Cottage, by Joseph G. McCoy, in 1866, at Abilene, of which the first landlord was Col. Gore, who bought the house in 1868, and who continues to run the house still, under the name of the Cottage.

The first newspaper published in the county was the Chronicle, established at Abilene, February, 1870, by V. P. Wilson.

MANUFACTORIES AND MILLS.

The manufactories in the county are but few, although there are several good water powers in the county that might be profitably and advantageously utilized. The largest manufacturing establishment in the county, aside from the flouring mills, is the soap factory in the suburbs of Abilene. It is not a mammoth establishment, but it does quite an amount of business, and makes all kinds of soap, from choice toilet to the long yellow bar.

The Abilene Foundry and Machine Works is quite an establishment, and does an extensive business. The business was established in 1879, by Whitehurst & Co., but prior to that time Mr. Whitehurst had been engaged in carrying on a blacksmith shop and carriage manufactory, which, in addition to the foundry and machine works, he still conducts. Connected with the foundry establishment is a planing mill and several turning lathes. The combined business gives employment to quite a number of men.

In the summer of 1882, Mr. Jones & Son started an establishment, on a small scale, in the suburbs of Abilene, for the manufacture of wind-mills, in which they employ several hands. A similar institution is carried on at Enterprise, which was established, in 1882, by Teets & Bros., who are doing a good business. The Monarch is the name of the mill they manufacture. There are twelve flouring mills in the county, the greater portion of which run continually night and day. The mill at Industry, on the north line of the county, owned by J. C. Kesseburn, is a large frame building, with five run of stone, and does a large milling business. It is located on Chapman Creek.

Sutphen's Mill is also on Chapman Creek, about six miles north of Chapman Village. This is also a wooden building, and of small capacity, having only two run of buhrs.

The Woodbine Mill, erected in 1872, and owned by J. A. Gillett, is a wooden structure, with four run of stones, and does quite an extensive local business. It is located at the village of Woodbine, near the junction of the east and west branches of Lyon Creek.

L. Schleagle owns and operates a small two-run mill on Turkey Creek, in the south part of Newbern Township. The building is frame, and its business strictly local. It was erected in 1874.

The Enterprise Mills, owned by C. Hoffman & Son, are quite extensive. One is a frame building, with three run of buhrs, and the other is a stone building, which was erected in 1873, and run for several years as a woolen mill, after which it was converted into a flouring mill, with all the latest and most approved machinery. These mills do an immense business, and run nearly night and day the year round, except Sundays. The frame mill is 40x60 feet and fifty-four feet high. The stone mill is 40x80 feet and seventy feet high, having four stories and a basement. This mill has seven run of stones. They are among the finest mills in the State.

The Abilene Mill is a water-power mill, and is located on the Smoky Hill River, about two miles south of the city of Abilene. It was erected by Kiddoo Bros., in 1882, and has four run of buhrs.

The City Mills at Abilene were erected by Peter Marx in 1879. It is a frame mill, 35x40 feet, and three stories high, with a basement. The present proprietors are Stoddard & Humphrey. It is a steam mill, with four run of stones. The engine is of forty-five-horse power, and the capacity of the mill is seventy-five barrels per day.

The Dickinson County Mills are located in Abilene. They have just been completed, and are about starting into operation. These mills were built by a chartered company, known as the Johntz & Rice Mill Co. The main building is 40x60 feet, with an L, 16x24, and four stories high, irrespective of the basement. The mill has thirteen run of buhrs, and is supplied throughout with the latest improved machinery. Excepting the engine and boiler-room, which is of brick, the other portions are solidly constructed frame-work. The engine is of 125-horse power.

The Solomon Valley Mill, located at Solomon City, was erected in 1872 by William Smith. It is a water mill, and a better location for power could not be desired. It is built at the confluence of the Solomon and Smoky Hill rivers, is 40x50 feet, three stories high, has six run of buhrs, is supplied with the latest improved machinery, and manufactures 200 barrels of flour per day.

The National Salt Works at Solomon City constitute one of the finest manufacturing industries in the county. $80,000 have been expended on these works within the last two years, and though yet in their infancy, manufacture salt equal to that of Syracuse or Saginaw, and when fully developed, can produce it in endless quantities, as the supply of brine is inexhaustible.

There are many excellent water privileges, lying idle, which could be profitably utilized, and no better opening could be desired for the establishment of one or two woolen mills.

MURDER—LYNCHING.

So far as known there has been but one case of lynching in the county, and this occurred in 1872. The circumstances that led to it are as follows: At that time there were two men in Abilene who were partners in the business of tailoring. Their names were Kelly and Johnson, and their shop was a small frame house on First street. Here they cooked, ate, slept and worked, this style of living being much less expensive than boarding. At that time there was a man living in the northern part of the county named Elsizer, who made frequent visits to Abilene, and during these visits would usually stop at Kelly's, where he would have the free use of Kelly's cooking utensils and dishes, and also the privilege of making himself a bed upon the floor at night. One Saturday Elsizer came to town and, as usual, stopped at Kelly's. Johnson had a claim out in the country, and before Elsizer came in he and Kelly had divided what cash they had, about $600, Johnson taking his portion with him out to his claim. Elsizer made himself at home as he usually did, but it so happened while he was there that an agent, by the name of Grimes, who occasionally went to Kelly's to have a smoke and a chat, stepped in to pay his customary visit. While he stayed there Elsizer cooked his supper, and while he was doing this Grimes left. Sunday came, and though Kelly did not make his appearance there was not much notice taken of it. Monday came, but Kelly's shop remained closed all day. On Tuesday the neighbors began to suspect that there must be something wrong and broke open the door, when the first thing that met their gaze was the lifeless form of Kelly, with his head cleft open. Suspicion immediately fixed the deed upon Johnson. He had not been seen in town since Saturday, and Kelly's shop had not been open since Saturday night, and he must be the murderer. Johnson was arrested and found himself in a very critical position. Was he not Kelly's partner? Yes. Did he and Kelly not divide $600 between them on Saturday? Yes. Did he not know that Kelly had this money? Yes. Why should he go out to his claim at that particular time? Here was where the difficulty arose for Johnson, because nobody living on his claim, and there being no settlers in the vicinity of where his claim was located, to prove an alibi was impossible, and if ever an innocent man found himself in a tight place it was Johnson. At this stage of the proceedings Grimes made it known that he had seen Elsizer at Kelly's on Saturday evening, and saw him cook his supper there. There stood the table with one plate upon it and one cup and saucer, just as they had been used, and there was the frying pan with a little of the meat still in it that Elsizer had left. Suspicion now turned from Johnson to Elsizer, and the Sheriff started immediately for Elsizer's home. He found him gone, and then he pushed on for Junction City as fast as possible. Arrived there he gave a description of Elsizer to the ticket agent, and inquired if such a person had purchased a ticket. The agent told him that a man answering to that description had purchased a ticket for Cincinnati but a short time ago, and would possibly take the next train. The Sheriff waited, and just as the train pulled into the depot Elsizer came in a great hurry to get on board, but just as his foot touched the first step of the car, the Sheriff took him by the shoulder and said, "I want you." He was brought back to Abilene, where he had a preliminary examination, and the evidence against him was conclusive. All of Kelly's money was found upon him except what he had paid for the ticket. On Friday night he was taken from the jail by a mob, and conveyed to Harvey's old mill, on Mud Creek, in the western part of town, where he was hung in one of the mill sheds. Next day he was found and an inquest held on his body, the verdict rendered being death by hanging, at whose hands to the jury unknown. Thus in one week, less one day, from the time Kelly was murdered, Elsizer, his murderer, was hanging a corpse in the shed of the mill.

ABILENE.

The town of Abilene was laid out in 1860 by and on land belonging to C. H. Thompson. The town is situated about two miles north of the Smoky Hill River, and is located on Sections 16 and 21, Township 13, Range 3 east. As originally laid out, the town embraced only forty acres, and in the spring of the following year, 1861, it was made, by the vote of the people, the county seat, which it is now, and has continued to be since that time. Among the first to locate in this new town was —— Jones, commonly known as "Old Man Jones," who erected a log house which he turned into a store where, with many other things that were sold, was whisky. This was the first place in shape of a store that was opened in town. One by one, settlers kept dropping in and log houses commenced to be quite numerous. Shortly after Jones had opened his store, Dr. Moon built a more pretentious one, which was known for many years as the Frontier Store. The growth of the town was rather slow until after the advent of the Kansas Pacific Railway in 1866. From that time on its growth became quite rapid, and the erection of log houses ceased, giving way to neatly constructed frame buildings. About this time Joseph G. McCoy, the pioneer western cattle shipper, arrived in Abilene. Mr. McCoy was a gentleman of large means and wide experience, and he conceived the idea of making Abilene the shipping point for Texan cattle. Satisfactory arrangements having been made with the officials of the Kansas Pacific road, circulars were printed and distributed all over Texas, setting forth the advantages and benefits drovers would derive from driving their herds to Abilene. Not satisfied with this means of disseminating information in regard to the town, agents were sent down to talk up its advantages and desirability as a shipping point for cattle. Then the papers in the Northern and Eastern States were brought into requisition to acquaint buyers of the immense herds of cattle that would be at Abilene, for sale, at a certain time. All this gave the place a wide notoriety, and a great many people flocked to Abilene. Anticipating a rich harvest from the drovers, cattle-men, and cow-boys a class of people located in town, whose society could be well dispensed within any community. No sooner was Abilene established as a cattle point, than the town was surrounded by a crowd of cutthroats, black-legs, thugs, gamblers, and prostitutes. This class put up houses, fitted up gambling dens, opened up saloons, and had everything in readiness to carry on their nefarious practices, when the cattle trade commenced. Up to that time there was no regular hotel in town, and in order to accommodate the drovers and cattle-men it was necessary one should be built. To supply this demand, Mr. McCoy erected quite a pretentious hotel, for those days, to which he gave the name of the "Drovers' Cottage." This was in 1867, but now that he had the hotel, a difficulty arose in finding some one to run it. Mr. McCoy went to St. Louis to look up a landlord, and there he encountered Mr. and Mrs. Gore, with whom arrangements were made to take charge of the "Drovers' Cottage," and in less than a week from the time Mr. McCoy left Abilene, Mr. and Mrs. Gore were established in the "Cottage" as proprietors. The following year they purchased the property of Mr. McCoy, which they have continued to own ever since, and although the "Colonel," Mr. Gore, has experienced many vicissitudes since that time, he still acts the part of the genial Boniface. His experience with cattle men and cow-boys, properly written, would make quite a volume. Abilene was now fairly established as a cattle point, and became known as a cowboy town. Whilst the cattle trade made Abilene quite a business point, it did not add anything to the morals of the place, and many men who had embarked in business would not bring their families to locate where bad men, vile women, and gross immorality, prevailed to such a large extent. From 1867 until 1872, Abilene was an out-and-out cow-boy town. The cow-boy is a character of frontier life, and a very bad character at that. Away from all humanizing influences of civilization, and many of them fugitives from justice, when they strike a town and become half or three-fourths drunk, they give full license to all their base and evil passions. They have no regard for law, morals, or virtue, defying the first, deriding the second, and outraging the third. Roaming the wide prairies, mounted on a wiry mustang, with a huge pair of Mexican spurs on the heels of his boots, a great broad-brimmed white hat on his head, two or three revolvers strapped round his waist, and a bowie knife stuck in his belt, he follows his herds until the time comes to ship, when he starts with the cattle for the trading point. Usually, the cowboy is reckless, bold and daring, having neither respect for man, fear of God, nor dread of hell. When two or three hundred such characters congregate in a town it seems as if pandemonium was let loose. These, with those other male and female cancers, who make their living by gambling, killing, stealing and prostitution, are what the cattle trade brought to Abilene. This, however, was only a mixture of the bitter with the sweet, because the impetus that the cattle trade gave to business, sent Abilene far ahead of competitive points. The original town of Abilene was located on the north half of the northwest quarter of Section 21, Township 13, Range 2, east; but after it became established as a trading point for cattle, the town gave such promise of growth, that Thompson and McCoy's Addition was added in 1868, comprising the south half of the southwest quarter of Section 16, Township 13, Range 2, east; followed in 1869 by Southwick and Augustine's Addition; then Rice and Bonebrake's Addition; next Rice and Austin's Addition; next Fisher's Addition; next Kuney and Hodge's Addition, in 1870, and this put an end to the additions for several years. Excepting the "Drovers' Cottage," already mentioned, there were no frame buildings erected in town until 1868, when G. B. Seely built a frame store, with rooms above for a dwelling. After this, stores and residences went up quite lively, notwithstanding the regular visits of the cow-boys. In 1869 the town was incorporated as a city of the third-class, of which the first Mayor was Joseph G. McCoy. In 1870, a brick and stone court house was built at the corner of Broadway and Second street, and this was the first building in town of any other material than wood. That summer, James B. Hickok, known throughout the West as "Wild Bill," came to Abilene. The following year he was appointed Marshal of the city. He was a bold, bad man, and had no respect whatever for human life. He could draw a revolver in less time, and fire with surer aim than any other man in the West. Nor did he stand long upon the order of drawing. He was a terror to the cow-boys, he having caused several of them to bite the dust on short notice, and thought no more of killing a man than he would a dog. He was afterward killed himself by a cow-boy, in Deadwood. In 1872, Lebold & Augustine built the Mercantile Block, a handsome row of brick storerooms, with offices above. In that year the cattle trade was moved to a point farther west, and Abilene was rid of the cow-boys. Nor was the getting rid of these the most important feature, in a moral point of view, connected with the removal of the cattle trade; because with it went all the gamblers, cutthroats, blacklegs, and prostitutes, with which the place had been infested since the cattle trade had been established at Abilene. People now breathed a purer atmosphere, and they could walk the streets without fear of insult or molestation. Men who had been in business, now sent for their families, and a better class of citizens came and located in town. Up to that time there was but one church in town, a frame building erected by the Baptists in the year 1868. The first permanent bank in town was that of Augustine & Lebold, established in 1873. What is now the Merchants' Hotel was built in 1870 by Kerney & Guthie. It is a goodly sized frame building, and when first opened it was known as the Winnesheik House. It 1875 T. C. Henry built the Henry House. This is the only brick hotel in town and is a very fine building. The ground floor is divided into five compartments. In the center is the hotel office; in the east end is a large dining room and kitchen, and in the west end is a telegraph office, ticket office, and goodly sized waiting room for passengers. The building is three stories high, and the upper floors are all used for hotel purposes. In 1876 the Presbyterians erected a very fine stone church, but in 1881 it was so damaged by a wind storm as to necessitate the erection of a new building, which is now in course of completion, and when completed will be a magnificent brick edifice. In 1874 the Catholics built a brick church, as also did the Lutherans in 1878. The first regular schoolhouse in town was of stone and was erected in 1877, and the first teacher was W. T. Wiley. In 1878 the Kirby Bank was established, and in 1879 the Methodists built a very handsome brick church. So rapidly had the town grown and so bright were its future prospects that C. H. Lebold enlarged the limits of the city by adding an addition in 1876. Two years later another addition was added known as Lebold's Addition, and in that same year the city limits underwent further enlargement by having added Lebold & Fisher's Addition; and in the following year, 1879, the boundary lines were further extended by taking in Bonebrake & Bidwell's Addition; so that the original town site of eighty acres, as located in 1860, had grown to such an extent by 1880 as to include nearly a section and a half of land, or 960 acres. In 1875 the town was greatly improved by the Johntz Brothers, who had located in Abilene in 1869, erecting a handsome brick block with four rooms on the ground floor and rooms for offices above. This was followed in 1876 by T. C. Henry putting up an elegant brick building, being that in which the Kirby Bank is now located. In 1879 Northcraft & Parent added a very neatly finished brick block to the improvement of the town. In order to keep pace with the times Berry Brothers in 1880 put up a very fine brick building, having a double storeroom below, which they occupy for their business, the upper floor being used for county offices and a court room. In that year, also, a handsomely finished two-story stone building was erected by the First National Bank. The erection of the Opera block by Mr. Bonebrake, gave Abilene a building that would be a credit to a much larger place. It may be said that this great improvement was made in 1879, although it was not completely finished until early in 1880. It is a brick building, having a frontage of 120 feet on Second street, by eighty-five feet deep, and is three stories high. The ground floor is divided into four store rooms; on the second floor is the opera hall, with a seating capacity for 1,000 persons, and two or three rooms used for different purposes; the third story is used as a storeroom, and therein is placed a tank of 100 barrels capacity, which supplies the boilers with water, and which can also be used in case of fire. The brick block in which J. B. Case now carries on business was erected by Mr. McCurdy in 1881. It is what is called a double building, two stories high, all of which is occupied by Mr. Case. While these substantial improvements were being made, many of less note also took place. Between 1870 and 1880 three frame elevators were built, not, however, on a very extensive scale. One was built by Johntz Bros., one by Gordon & Giles, and one by a combination of farmers, which was named the Grange Elevator. Besides these, quite a number of one-story frame stores were built, but the most important improvement prior to 1880, outside of those already mentioned, was the erection of the City Mills, erected in 1879 by Peter Marx. While all these great improvements were going on in the business portion of the city, many very handsome dwellings were being erected in the resident portion. The resident portion of the city is fully up to, if not in advance of, the business portion. Some of as handsome residences as are to be found in all central Kansas, are in Abilene, and the surroundings of all display a taste for neatness and cleanliness.

January, 1882, will be a month long remembered in Abilene. About 1 o'clock on the morning of the 17th of that month the court house, situated at the corner of Second street and Broadway, was discovered to be on fire. Broadway runs north from the railway track, and was, at that time, the principal business street in the city. "Fire! fire! fire!" rang out in the stillness of the night, and soon the bells of the city spread the alarm, and in a short time people from all quarters of the town were hastening to the scene of conflagration. It was but a short time after the alarm was given, when the flames burst forth from the windows of the court house and soon reached the roof. All efforts to extinguish it were unavailing, and a good, stiff wind blowing from the southwest soon carried the flames to the adjoining wooden buildings on the north of the court house. In a short time the fire was beyond control, and, leaping across the street, the wooden buildings on the east of Broadway were soon in a blaze. Two entire blocks, which constituted the chief business portion of the city, were entirely consumed, with nearly all their contents. The loss occasioned by the fire amounted to $100,000. Nearly all the county records were burned up, excepting those of the Register of Deeds, whose office was in another building. All the court records, those of the Probate Judge and County Clerk, Treasurer, and Superintendent of Public Instruction, with many others were all consumed. The loss occasioned by the fire was severe, but the people went to work bravely, cleared away the rubbish, and before the summer had closed beautiful brick business blocks stood where, before the fire, had been nothing but wooden buildings. A $30,000 court house is now, November, 1882, nearly completed. It is a magnificent brick building, and stands in the centre of a plat of ground nearly opposite the depot, or Henry House. Among the improvements of 1882 is a large and magnificently constructed $25,000 brick schoolhouse, which stands at the head of Broadway, and which contains twelve class rooms. Besides this, there is a very fine schoolhouse on the south side of the railway track, which may be termed a primary, or preparatory department, as there is no class there above the Second Reader. Another of the 1882 improvements is the mammoth flouring mill just finished, and about to be started, by the Johntz & Rice Mill Company. This mill is to be known as the Dickinson County Mills. The main building is 40x60 feet, with an L 16x24 feet, and all sixty-five feet high. The mill is located on the west side of the town and will be operated by steam power. The engine is of 125 horse power. The mill is fitted up with all the latest improved machinery, and has thirteen run of buhrs. The water works, Holly system, is not the least of the improvements that have been made during the year. Church improvement has not been neglected, and the Episcopalians have just completed a very neat and comfortable frame edifice in which to worship. Abilene is located in one of the finest valleys of the State, that of the Smoky Hill, and is well situated for both the Eastern and Western markets. It is about 165 miles by rail from Kansas City, and is very near the extreme limit of the great agricultural region of Kansas, so that the town occupies a good position to supply the Colorado and mountain markets. It is one of the best grain points on the line of the Kansas Pacific Railway. The town has eight churches, two large schoolhouses, two steam flouring mills, one foundry and machine shop, one soap factory, several blacksmith and wagon shops, three newspapers, three banks, three lumber yards, and houses representing all branches of business. The population of the city is now estimated at 3,500, and, situated as it is, in the centre of the great wheat belt, is destined to be as progressive in the future as it has been in the past, and seated as the town is, in a valley unsurpassed in richness and beauty, surrounded with the choicest agricultural country under the sun, inhabited by an energetic, progressive, and industrious people, well may Abilene be named "The Beautiful City of the Plains."

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

Presbyterian.—Was organized May 11, 1873, with a membership of fifteen. In 1876 they built a very fine brick church, and in 1879, a parsonage. In September, 1881, this church was so injured by a wind-storm, as to render it unfit for further use as a house of worship, and it was torn down. In the following year, a beautiful stone church edifice was erected on the original site, which is a very handsome building. From the organization of the church until now, 1882, it has had but one pastor, who is the Rev. W. H. Snyder. The present membership is 100, and the church property is valued at $11,000.

Lutheran.—This church was organized, Oct. 22, 1870, with a membership of thirteen. The first pastor of the church was Rev. Wm. E. Creus. The membership of the church kept gradually increasing until 1878, when it was decided to build a house in which to worship. Early in that year, they erected a beautiful brick edifice, which was dedicated on August 13, Rev. Mr. Crouse, of Bucyrus, Ohio, preaching the dedicatory sermon. The church has now a membership of 120, and is under the pastoral charge of Rev. George A. Bowers. The value of their church property is $6,000.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—An organization of this church was formed in Abilene, in 1871, by Rev. J. S. Kahar. The membership at that time was fifteen. A complete organization, however, was not effected until 1872, at which time Rev. John Curts became pastor. In 1879 the membership was large enough to enable them to erect a commodious and well finished brick house of worship. The present membership of this church is 200, and the present pastor is Rev. E. W. Van Deventer. The church property is valued at $6,000.

Baptist.—This church has the oldest organization in town, an association having been formed in 1868, and in that same year they erected a very neat frame edifice in the south part of the town, which they continued to occupy as a house of worship until 1880, when it was sold to the United Brethren. This church organized with only seven members, and their first pastor was Rev. J. R. Downer. They have recently purchased a beautiful piece of ground upon which they will build a $10,000 church next year (1883), and for which preliminary steps are now being taken. The present membership of the church is sixty, and the present pastor is Rev. George Mariam.

Catholic.—Prior to 1874, the members of this church had no house of worship in Abilene, the nearest being at Solomon City. In that year, they erected a brick church in the southern portion of the city. It is quite strong in membership, and includes all Catholic families for miles around Abilene. The church has no resident pastor, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Father John F. Lary, who resides at Solomon City.

Episcopalian.—The members of this church do not exceed twenty-five in number. Until this year, they have had no regular place of worship. They have just completed, however (1882), a very neat and comfortable frame edifice, at a cost of $2,500. This church divides territory into parishes, and the parish to which Abilene belongs is St. Johns', of which Rev. Joseph Young is pastor, whose residence is at Salina. The number of communicants is twenty-five, although the number baptized into the church is many more.

Universalist.—In 1870, the members of this church in Abilene organized themselves into an association, and built a small, but neat, frame church. They had no regular minister, but yet services were held regularly in the church, which were chiefly conducted by Mr. V. P. Wilson. In 1873, Mr. Wilson moved away from town, after which the building was closed up until 1876, when it was sold to the Campbellites, or Christians. The members still kept up their organization, however, and in 1881, erected another house of worship. Numerically, the church is rather weak, having only about twenty members, and being without a regular pastor.

United Brethren.—Organized in 1880 with thirty members. Shortly after organizing, they purchased the church building owned by the Baptists, and which was erected by them in 1868. The church has now a membership of forty-five, and has been under the charge of its pastor, Rev. H. D. Herr, since its organization. The church property is valued at $2,200.

Christian.—This church has had an organization in Abilene since 1874. In 1876, the members purchased, of the Universalists, the small frame church that they had erected in 1870, in which they still continue to meet for worship. At present, the church has no pastor.

Western Home Lodge, No. 60, I. O. O. F., of Abilene, was organized September 14, 1870, with five charter members. The first officers of the lodge were: J. G. Northcraft, N. G.; W. H. Eicholtz, V. J M Hodge

HON. JOHN M. HODGE was born in Carroll Co., Ohio, February 4, 1825. He was educated in his native State, studying medicine in Willoughby Medical College and at the medical college of Cincinnati, by which last institution he was graduated a doctor of medicine in 1850. For fourteen years he was associated in the practice of his profession with the eminent Dr. Alden I. Bennett. Early in 1861, at the solicitation of Governor Dennison, he accepted the position of Quartermaster of the Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Colonel Stanley Matthews commanding. He acted as Quartermaster of Camp Jenkins, near Louisville, Ky., under General O. M. Mitchell. At Camp Wickliffe, Ky., he acted as Quartermaster of the Brigade commanded by Brig.-General Jacob Ammon, of the Twenty-fourth Ohio. In July, 1862, he became Acting-Brigade Quartermaster of the Twenty-third Brigade, Army of the Ohio, Colonel Stanley Matthews commanding. Colonel Matthews says of Dr. Hodge: "In all these different positions, most of which he served under my eye, he discharged his duty in all respects perfectly, showing untiring zeal, great faithfulness and complete knowledge of his business. In my opinion he is the best officer in the Quartermaster's Department that I met with in the service." Although the condition of his health almost precluded the possibility of active service, he struggled on, however, kept up by a highly patriotic nature, doing splendid work until after over two years of arduous duty, he was compelled by an aggravated sickness to resign. His record in the army is an enviable one, as numerous official and private documents, emanating from the highest authority, attest, all of which confer upon him a degree of loyalty and administrative ability second to no one. Dr. Hodge was a presidential elector at the early age of thirty-one on the Fremont ticket, a rare honor in that period of American politics. After partially regaining his health he located in Mendota, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile pursuits until his removal to Abilene, Kan., in the spring of 1870. Since his arrival in this State he has borne a prominent part in politics, always having been an uncompromising Republican, and has represented his county in the Legislature twice—in 1874-79. He has repeatedly been elected a delegate to various conventions—county, state and congressional—of the dominant party. In the summer of 1874 Dr. Hodge was appointed Receiver of the United States Land Office at Cawker City, and with it removed to Kirwin, Phillips County, in January, 1875; he remained there until 1878. In 1880 he was appointed Register in the Salina Land District. Dr. Hodge, since his location in Dickinson County, has taken an active part in the development of the wonderful resources of Central Kansas. He was married August 22, 1847 to Miss Olive M. Tinker, of Bolivar, Ohio. Dr. Hodge has a beautiful and cultured home at Abilene, where he has also two sons in business. Highly respected all over the State for his ability and integrity, he may be classed, without any attempt at affectation, one of her prominent public men.

JOHN JOHNTZ, President of the First National Bank of Abilene. The above bank was opened for business June 2, 1879; capital equals, $75,000; surplus, $8,660; deposits equal $60,000. A. W. Rice is vice-president, W. R. Dryer, cashier. During the life of the above bank it has discounted 6,200 notes, amounting to $1,350,000, without the loss of a dollar. Mr. Johntz is also engaged in a general stock of merchandise, under the firm name of Johntz Bros. They opened the business in the spring of 1870 and carry a stock of about $10,000, and employ five clerks. Mr. John Johntz first came to Abilene, Kansas, in the fall of 1869. He has been City Treasurer a number of years. He was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, September 8, 1840. He was raised and educated in his native State, and was married in 1870 to Miss Hettie Lebold, of the same county, Ohio. They have a son and a daughter: Edward and Carrie. Mr. Johntz is a member of Askelon Commandery, Knights Templar, and Masonic order of Abilene, Kansas. He is also largely interested in the extensive Johntz & Rice Flour Mills, just completed, located here. He was elected State Senator from this, the thirtieth district, this fall, 1882.

C. H. LEBOLD, banker, was born July 12, 1844, near Bolivar, Tuscarawas County, Ohio. The name is a corruption of Leopold, and is of German origin. His parents were Frederick and Anna Lebold. No special records of the family have been preserved. The grand-parents of both his father and mother were landlords or land-owners in Germany, and were possessed of considerable wealth. His father was an extensive farmer in Ohio. C. H. Lebold attended the common schools of his neighborhood in the winters, and assisted in the management of his father's farm during the summer, until seventeen years old. After that time, also, he attended Greensburg Seminary during the summer, and conducted a school during the winters to provide means for his academic course. This he continued until twenty-two years of age, receiving a very thorough education and being well grounded in the rudimentary branches. This independent and self-reliant course is an index to his character, and to the success which he has subsequently achieved. In 1866 he bought a good and well-improved farm of one hundred and sixty acres, near Bolivar, Ohio, and entered vigorously into the practical business of farming. At the end of two years he sold his farm, and spent considerable time in travelling, and looking for an eligible location for his future home and business operations. The States of Illinois, Iowa and Kansas particularly engaged his attention, and, after comparing the advantages and disadvantages of the soil, climate, production and prospective development of each, he formed a decided preference for Kansas. In 1869 he, in partnership with Jacob Augustine, bought from Hon C. H. Thompson and J. G. McCoy, the town-site of Abilene, Dickinson Co., Kas., and also Thompson and & McCoy's addition to that place. They immediately opened an office for the sale of town property, and in connection with it established the "National Union Land Office." This business they conducted very successfully for about three years, and in 1872 sold the books and good will of the office to T. C. Henry for $5,000. Prior to this, however, they had bought the banking house of Kellogg, Newman & Co., and one year later, that of W. B. Clark & Co., thus uniting in one establishment all the banking business of that young and thriving city. In the fall of 1873 Jacob Augustine withdrew from the banking business, and was succeeded by J. M. Fisher, the firm name being changed to Lebold, Fisher & Co. Besides the above banking business, Mr. Lebold is largely interested in real estate in Abilene and vicinity, consisting of lots 4, 6 and 8 on Broadway, Abilene, on which large brick stores were erected in 1882, at a cost of $15,000. Also, 240 acres of fine land adjoining the city on the west, all cultivated, etc. He is also owner of the town-site of Hays City, Ellis Co., Kas., where he has a large amount of real estate, consisting of some of the finest farms in Ellis County. He is also proprietor of the town-site of Bunker Hill, in Russell Co., Kas., and various farms in that vicinity. Mr. Lebold has erected the finest dwelling house west of Topeka. It is built of cut stone, and in full view of passing trains on the K. P. R. R., western part of Abilene City. He was elected Treasurer of Dickinson County in 1873, and re-elected in 1875, serving two full terms, to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. In 1880 he was elected a member of the State Legislature He is a member of the Masonic order, and a communicant in the Evangelical Lutheran Church. He was married October 25, 1866 to Miss Amanda Nixon, of Tuscarawas County, Ohio, who died October, 19, 1875. He was married to his second wife, Miss Fannie H. Urie, of Cannonsburg, Pa., November 7, 1877.

SOLOMON CITY.

In 1865 H. Whitley, John Williamson and Lutner Hall, organized themselves into a Town Company, and conceived the idea of laying out a town at the mouth of the Solomon River on land belonging to H. Whitley. For this purpose the southwest quarter of Section 18, Township 13, Range 1, east, and the east half of the southeast quarter of Section 13, Township 13, Range 1 west, was surveyed and platted in 1866 by Daniel Mitchell. The town site contains 234 acres and is located on the west line of the county, part of it extending into Saline County. The built-up portion of the town, however, is on the east side of the line in Dickinson County. The Solomon River coming down from the northwest enters the Smoky Hill River at this point, and it is at this point of confluence the town is situated, being nine miles due west from Abilene. The town is surrounded by a very fine agricultural country, consisting of wide stretches of beautiful rolling prairie, and along the Solomon and Smoky there is considerable timber. The growth of the town has not been very rapid, and the business houses erected have, like those of all other new western towns, been of rather inferior order, being, in most part, rather small wooden buildings. Within the last two years there have been signs of a change for the better, and more substantial improvements are now being made Among the first to start in business in town were H. Whitley and Lyman Field, the former having built the first residence in town and also the first store, and both in 1867. Either that year or the one following G. B. Hall built the Hall House, which was the first hotel in town. The building of the Kansas Pacific Railway that year, which crossed the Solomon River just above its mouth, decided the location of the town. Impressed with the importance of the point the town site was enlarged in 1871 by Geis' Addition being added. The Baptists having formed an organization a year or two previous, in 1870 built a very neat frame church, but ante-dating this three years the Catholics had erected a frame house of worship. In 1866 a company was organized under the name of the Continental Salt Company, who commenced boring about three-fourths of a mile west of town. At the depth of sixty feet a good vein of brine was struck, upon which the company erected works and commenced the manufacture of salt. In 1871 the Presbyterians built a very fine frame church of goodly size and elegant finish. The place by this time was commencing to assume quite an urban appearance with its churches, stores, hotel and residences. The water power at Solomon is excellent and capable of turning a vast amount of machinery, but until 1872 it was allowed to go to waste, when William Smith erected a very fine grist mill at the confluence of the two rivers. This mill improvement helped the town wonderfully in regard to drawing trade there. The town by 1871 had grown sufficiently to enable it to be incorporated, and that year it became a city of the third class, of which G. B. Hall was the first Mayor. Thinking the town site not sufficiently large to enable the young city to grow to what it gave promise in the future to be, Hall and Whitley did in 1874 enlarge the limits by another addition, which were still farther extended by the same party in 1878 by an additional addition. At that time great hopes were entertained by the people, from the fact that the Solomon Valley Branch of the Kansas Pacific Railway was commenced to be built that year, with Solomon City as its initiative point. In 1876 the Solomon Valley Bank was established by John Legrange, but subsequently passed into the hands of E. G. Clark. Stores kept gradually going up, residences were becoming more numerous, a better class of buildings were erected, and business transactions were largely on the increase. A second hotel was added to the town in 1877, which was built and opened by Mr. McCloud. In July, 1879, the Solomon Sentinel was established in town by J. Claud Hill, which gave to the people and the city an organ, through which they could make known the beauties and advantages of Solomon. In 1881 a new salt works company was organized, or rather, new works were commenced under the operation and management of the National Land Company. This company sank a well adjacent to that operated by the Continental Company, and at a depth of sixty feet, tapped a vein of strong brine. They then went to work and erected buildings, into which they put the necessary machinery for the successful manufacture of salt. The new works are quite extensive, and were put up at a cost of between $50,000 and $60,000. After being in operation a short time, the new company purchased the old works of the Continental Company, so that both are now owned and operated by the National Company. They manufacture about 10,000 barrels of salt yearly, the greater portion of which is shipped to the mining regions. They supply nearly all the local trade, and make a very excellent article of table salt. The year 1881 witnessed the establishment of another bank in town under the name of the "Citizens' Bank," and which was established by Rogers, Wilson & Co. As yet, not a brick or stone business house had been erected in town, but early in 1882 the Dewar brothers completed a large, magnificent brick building, with a storeroom on the ground floor and offices above. A short way from the Dewar brothers' building, the Wall brothers have erected a large brick building somewhat similar to that of Dewars'. This building is not yet completed, but will be by the close of 1882. A new brick schoolhouse is also in course of construction, and while it is not going to be very large, containing only four rooms, it will, doubtless, be large enough to meet the demands of the community at present and for some time to come. The cost of the building is to be $6,000. In this year of 1882, also, the Catholics have erected a very fine brick church, at a cost of over $7,000; so that 1882 may be set down as the year of brick improvements in Solomon City. While the Catholic, Presbyterian and Baptist are the only church buildings in town, the Methodists are not without a place in which to meet for worship. As early as 1868, the Methodists had an organization in town, but instead of erecting a church they put up a building with a storeroom below and a hall above, and in this hall they meet for worship. Benevolent societies are represented in town by the Masons and Odd Fellows having a lodge each. The first school in town was organized in 1867, with Miss Blair, now Mrs. A. P. Collins, as teacher. The first Postmaster in town was H. Whitley. There are thirty places in town where goods are sold, representing almost everything usually kept in stores. There are three small elevators in town, with a fair representation of blacksmith and carpenter shops. There is no uniformity in the buildings, and the town is scattered over a good deal of territory. There are some very fine residences, and ample space for the erection of more.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

Presbyterian.—An organization of this church was effected in 1870, with fifteen members. In 1871 they built a very fine frame church, neatly finished, and with good seating capacity. Their first pastor was Rev. J. L. Jones. The present membership of the church is sixty, and the present pastor is Rev. George Pearson. Their church property is valued at $2,500.

Catholic.—This church was organized in 1868 by Rev. Father De Mautier. At that time it had a membership of between forty and fifty, and that they might have a place in which to worship, they erected a small frame church. The membership is now several hundred, and they have just completed a very elegant brick edifice. The present pastor is Rev. Father Lary. The property of the church is valued at $8,000.

Baptist.—Organized 1868, with less than ten members. In 1870 they put up a very neat frame house of worship. The first Pastor of the church was Rev. J. R. Downer. The church has now a membership of about forty, and the officiating pastor is Rev. George Mariam. The property of the church is valued at $1,200.

Methodist.—Organized 1868, with ten members. The first pastor was Rev. Mr. Phillips. They have no church edifice, but own a building, the lower part of which they rent, and the upper part is a hall in which the congregation meets for worship. The church has a good membership at present, and the pastor is Rev. W. A. Saville.

Solomon Lodge, No. 73, I. O. O. F., of Solomon City, was organized 1873, with five charter members. The first officers were G. Garten, N. G.; S. Baldwin, V. G.; W. P. Witken, Sec.; T. L. Garten, P. S., and Job Lee, Treas. The present membership is thirty, and the present officers are L. B. Rogers, N. G.; James Barr, V. G.; F. Crowell, Sec., and J. L. Galbraith, Treas.

Solomon Lodge, No. 105, A., F. & A. M., of Solomon City, was instituted in 1871, number of charter members not given. The first officers were B F. Willey, W. M.; S. L. Choate, S. W.; J. S. Sutherland, J. W., and Dr. Searle, Treas. Present membership, thirty-five. Present officers are F. F. Marvin, W. M.; C. W. Adams, S. W.; N. F. Follott, J. W.; L. J. Quantrell, Sec.; L. Field, Treas.; A. Sutherland, S. D.; G. G. Griffin, J. D., and E. Z. Butcher, tyler.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

GEORGE B. HALL, farmer and stock raiser, P. O. Solomon, Dickinson County, first came to Junction City, Kan., in 1860, on a prospecting tour; located in July, 1863. He was transient for two years. Went into the hotel business in 1865. In 1866 he erected the Hall House, at a cost of about $7,000. Had to haul the material by teams from Leavenworth, a distance of 172 miles. He then kept the hotel until the fall of 1877, after which he engaged in farming. He owns a farm of 800 acres adjoining Solomon City, 150 acres of which is cultivated. His hotel was the first building of the kind erected in Solomon, and the second frame building. He has been Mayor and member of the City Council several years. Has been County Commissioner of Saline and Dickinson counties a term in each, and Town Trustee. Born in Ontario, Canada, December 19, 1828. He was raised in his native country, and lived there until he came to Kansas. He was married in 1866 to Miss Electa Robacker, a native of Pennsylvania. They have four sons and two daughters—Ada Mary, George, Kate, Newman, Robert and Fred L. Mr. Hall has participated in several Indian campaigns.

WALL BROTHERS, dealers in a general line, dry goods, boots and shoes and groceries, also agricultural implements of all kinds, opened trade in March, 1880. They carry a stock of about $12,000, not including implements. They erected a brick store, 25x100 feet, thirty-two feet high, at a cost of $5,000, in the fall of 1882, and occupy the same in their business. They employ four men in the store. The firm is composed of three brothers, Philip M., James S., and Michael A. James Wall first located in Delphos, Ottawa Co., Kan., in 1871, where he engaged in stock-raising and farming until May 1, 1881. He was born in Ireland in 1842, and came to America, with parents, 1850. He was married in 1874, to Miss Bridget Hodge, a native of Ireland. They have five children—Nathaniel, Edward, Benjamin, Katie and Mary. Michael A. Wall was born in LaSalle, Ill., July 29, 1857. He was raised and educated in his native city, came with his brothers to Delphos, Kan., in 1872, and moved with them to Solomon. He was married, in 1880, to Miss Jennie Hare, of Delphos. They have one daughter—Alice. He is a member of City Council of Solomon. Mr. Philip Wall, the senior member of the above firm, first came to Delphos, Kan., in 1872, and engaged in farming and stock-raising, which he continued until coming to Solomon City in the spring of 1880. He has taught twelve terms of school in Saline and Dickinson counties. He was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, May 6, 1844, came to America 1850, with parents. He studied for a Catholic priesthood in the Seminary of The Lady of Angels, at Niagara Falls, N. Y., about four years, taking also a course in classical studies. He also attended St. Vincents Seminary for the Lazarist Order of Priesthood, as a novice, but finding his vocation was not that for the priesthood, left there and came to Kansas. He was married, April 13, 1873, to Miss Katie A. Harrington, of Newport, R. I. They have three children Nathaniel, Timothy, and Augustine. Mr. Wall is at present a Justice of the Peace. He has not aspired to any public office.

D. W. WILSON, Postmaster, took charge of the office in April, 1881; first located in Solomon in February, 1872, and engaged in teaching school five years, being principal of the Solomon City schools. He was appointed County Superintendent of Public Instruction for Dickinson County, and served out the unexpired term, then became traveling agent for a New York City publishing company two years, and then took charge of the postoffice. He was born in Marion County, Ohio, January 31, 1836. Left his native place when a small boy, and lived for twenty years in Scioto County, Ohio, and there learned carding and spinning. Married in Ohio, in 1858, to Miss Aronine Evans, of Lebanon, Ohio. They have two children—Amos E., and Nena May. He moved to Mason City, Ill., in 1866, where he engaged in merchandising until coming to Kansas. He is a member of the Masonic Order, K. of H., and the Methodist Episcopal Church. Amos E. is now the cashier of the Citizen's Bank of Solomon, and part owner of the same. He is also a graduate of Kansas Agricultural College of Manhattan. Was for three years cashier of the Solomon Valley Bank, Solomon, Kan. Is a member of Masonic Lodge, and Methodist Episcopal Church. Nena M., was married in May, 1880, to Albert Marter, a graduate of Emporia, Kan., Normal School, now (1882) resides in Davis County, Kan.

HENRY WHITLEY, dealer in all kinds of household furniture, also collection agent. He first located where Solomon City now is, June 4, 1859. His nearest neighbor was at Mud Creek, now Abilene City, nine miles off. Nearest postoffice was then Junction City, thirty-five miles away, and the nearest grist mill, was Council Grove, sixty miles across the country. His main market was Leavenworth, Kan., 170 miles by wagon road, which with only a yoke of oxen, was tedious business and quite lonely for Mrs. Whitley who often remained in their lonely shanty for days alone, when Mr. W. was at mill or market. After over a year they were pleased to welcome a neighbor who settled two miles away, but many of the new comers soon starved out and were obliged to leave, so that at times prospects looked gloomy for settlement. For meat they subsisted chiefly on buffalo and wild turkeys which were then very plenty, but in the winter of 1859-60, buffalo meat grew very scarce, when Mr. W. and wife feasted on only rabbits and corn meal, with parched corn coffee. Mr. W. through well directed efforts soon made the wild prairie blossom as the rose, with the rich golden grain, which of course soon drove the wolf from their door, never again to return. He broke up the land where Solomon City now stands, for a farm, in the spring of 1860, and planted it with corn. But the simoons of the great plains seemed to decide the question for no crops that year, for everything in the shape of crops was withered and dried up with the intense heated winds, which prevailed in July and August. The following year they were blessed with a bountiful crop, which seemed to instill new life and vigor into the almost disheartened pioneers. His first grist of wheat he took to Council Grove, sixty miles by wagon road, leaving his wife alone for ten days, at the end of which time, he returned with the proceeds 150 pounds of flour. The whole time occupied in threshing the grist and taking it to mill and returning with the flour, took up twenty days. This is a good illustration of what the early pioneers in that county were obliged to contend with. He was elected Justice of the Peace in the fall of 1860, and by re-elections has held the office eighteen years. Was elected Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners. He carried all the records of the county in a carpet sack. Born in England September 14, 1830. Came to Canada with parents in 1840; lived at home until twenty-one years old, then went to Minnesota Territory, to seek his fortune, landing in St. Paul, penniless; he finally found work and remained two years, then returned to Canada, and was married in the fall of 1858, to Miss Catharine Hall, a daughter of deacon Jabez Hall, near Toronto, Canada. They had three children—Charles, Nellie and Lulu; Charles is a student in the Normal School of Toronto, Canada. Mr. W. is a member of the Masonic Order, I. O. O. F., and Baptist Church. He was the first Postmaster of Solomon City, being appointed in the fall of 1860. He opened the first store in the fall of 1863; opened the furniture business, of which he is now a partner, in the fall of 1865.

ENTERPRISE.

This is the name of a town situated on the south bank of the Smoky Hill River, six miles east of Abilene. The name is very appropriate, because, although a small place, the people are full of enterprise and energy. The town-site was surveyed and platted in 1872 by G. R. Wolfe, at that time, County Surveyor. In January, 1873, a town company was organized, of which V. P. Wilson was president; John Johntz, vice-president; C. Hoffman, treasurer, and T. C. Henry, secretary. The plat of the town and the necessary certificates were duly filed in the office of the Register of Deeds, and Enterprise took its place as one of the towns of Dickinson County. The town is beautifully located. Between it and Abilene the Smoky Hill River makes a very sudden turn to the northeast, and after flowing in this direction about two miles turns almost due south for a half or three-fourths of a mile, when it again bears to the east. It is on the south bank of the river where this second bend occurs that the town is located. Opposite the town, on the north side of the river, the bank is low and heavily timbered, but on the south side and west of the iron bridge that spans the river at this point, the bank is about forty feet high, and south of this is all beautiful rolling prairie. Some 200 or 300 yards east of the bridge, on the north side of the river, is a large elevator, erected in 1882 by C. Hoffman, the capacity of which is 50,000 bushels. Directly across from the elevator, on the other side of the river, is a frame grist mill, and between this and the bridge the dam is built. This mill was built by Mr. C. Hoffman in 1868, four years before the town of Enterprise was started. Its dimensions are 40x60 feet with an L 12x16 three stories high and a basement. It has three run of buhrs, and its capacity is 100 barrels of flour per day. The river here makes a curve, and contiguous to the frame mill, and only a few feet from it, is a large stone mill. This is one of the finest mills in the State. This also was built by Mr. Hoffman, in 1873, but then it was the purpose of the owner to use it as a woolen mill, and it was used as such until 1881, when it was remodelled and refitted for a flouring mill, and supplied with all the latest improved mill machinery. The dimensions of the mill are 40x80, and four stories high. It has seven run of stone, and its capacity is 200 barrels of flour a day. The first person to erect a building in town after the site was surveyed and platted, was John Latto, who put up a building on Factory street, one part of which he used for a store and the other for a dwelling. This was in the spring of 1873. Prior to this, however, in 1869, the year after Mr. Hoffman erected the frame mill, a store was built and opened by Senn & Ehrsam, but this was before there was any such town as Enterprise. Two miles north of Enterprise, on the K. P. Railway, is Detroit, a village containing a few houses, a store, and a small depot. In 1878, the railway company built a switch from Detroit to Enterprise, and this switch constitutes all the railway facilities of the town. It is the mills that give vitality to the town as they draw trade from a large stretch of country, and so excellent is the water power, that no matter how dry the season there is always an abundant flow to keep the mills running the year round. In 1878, a very handsome brick schoolhouse was erected in town at a cost of $7,000. The building stands on quite an elevation at the head of Factory street, and can be distinctly seen from Abilene. There are two church buildings in town, one Methodist and one Lutheran. Both are frame, the former of which was built in 1877, and the latter in 1881. The town has two hotels, the Pacific and Travelers' Home, both frame. The former was built in 1873 by Edward Parker, and was then known as the Central House, and the latter was built shortly after by Jacob Schneider, and was opened under the name of the Union House. For a town located away from the main line of a railway, it gives evidence of wonderful enterprise and progress. There are eighteen stores of one kind or another in town, five of which are built of brick. The first brick stores in town were erected in 1878 by C. Hoffman and G. R. Lamb, on the east side of Factory street, and these were followed in 1880 by C. F. Staatz, J. F. Buhrer and A. J. Logback, who erected similar buildings on the west side of the street. The business of the place is divided into seven retail mercantile houses, one furniture store, one drug store, two millinery shops, two harness shops, one boot and shoe store, two tin shops, one book and stationery store, one paint shop and one carpenter shop. Besides these there are two lumber yards, one wagon factory, a cooperage in which are employed several men, two good livery stables and a printing office. In the manufacturing line, aside from the flouring mills, there is the machine works of J. B. Ehrsam, where steam engines and mill machinery are manufactured. The building of these works is 20x80 feet, located on the bank of the river and operated by water power. From ten to twenty men are constantly employed in the shops. Then there is the establishment of Teats Bros., or the "Monarch Windmill Company," but recently established. In this establishment is manufactured the "Monarch Windmill," the making of which gives employment to thirty men. This institution is also located on the bank of the river and is operated by water power. It is a live, prosperous, thriving town with a population of 500, who seem to be determined by their energy and go-ahead-ativeness to make the place in reality, what its name indicates, one of Enterprise.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

Methodist.—This church was organized in 1872, with a very small membership, by Rev. Mr. Eichenberger. In 1877, they built a very handsome frame church in which to worship. The church has now a membership of sixty, and the pastor is Rev. E. Eberhart. The church property is valued at $1,800.

Lutheran.—Was organized in 1880, by Rev. Albert Vogel, with about thirty members. In 1881, they erected a small frame church. It has now a membership of forty-five, but at present is without a pastor. The property of the church is valued at $700.

Enterprise Lodge, No. 140, I. O. O. F. of Enterprise, was organized in 1875, with seven charter members. The first officers of the lodge were, V. P. Wilson, N. G.; John Wagner, V. G., and R. S. Holesworth, secretary. The present membership is twenty-five, and the present officers are, O. C. Price, N. G.; J. Woodward, V. G.; F. R. Price, secretary, and S. Holesworth, treasurer.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

J. F. BUHRER, merchant, born in Switzerland, December 20, 1846; was reared and educated in his native country. In 1863, came to America and settled in Fulton County, Ohio, where he engaged in boring artesian wells for five years. In 1871, he came to Kansas and settled in Dickinson County, where he engaged in farming for some time. His landed estate consists of 320 acres of fine farming land. In 1877, he came to Enterprise, where he engaged in the hardware and grocery trade. He carries a stock of $3,000, and does a business of $13,000 per year. He has been twice married, first in Fulton County, Ohio, April 20, 1871, to Miss Harriet Weckerly; she was a native of Ohio; died in Dickinson County, this State, November 17, 1879; to Miss Sophia Staatz, she is a native of Kansas, born April 8, 1862. They have two children—Charley and Harriet.

They have six children—Carrie H., Paulina A., Augustus L., Sophia E., Adolf J. and Emil.

C. HOFFMAN, miller, born in Switzerland, August 1, 1826, where he was educated, and soon after learned the art of milling, which he pursued in his native country until 1855, when he came to America, and first located in Washington County, Wis., where he worked at the carpenter's trade for some time. He came to Kansas in 1857, and settled in Leavenworth, where he pursued the trade of carpenter for three years, when he came to Dickinson County, and engaged in farming until 1868. He then moved to Enterprise, and erected a mill, four stories, 30x50 feet, propelled by water, which is now used for custom work. In 1881, he began operations in the Enterprise Mills, a stone building, five stories, 38x80 feet, propelled by water, capacity 200 barrels per day, with elevator capacity for 40,000 bushels. He was married in Switzerland, April 30, 1850, to Miss Elizabeth Senn, born in Switzerland, November 30, 1830. They had two children—Christian B. and Leonhart. Leonhart died in 1855. Christian B. is now Representative of the Seventy-fifth District. He was County Treasurer for Dickinson County a number of terms, and represented his county in the Legislature in 1870 and 1871.

WILLIAM LAMB, retired, born in Randolph County, N. C., December 28, 1806. He was educated in his native State, and soon after learned the trade of wagonmaker, after which he moved to Butler County, Ohio, where he worked at his trade for sixteen years. In 1855, he came to Kansas and located in Shawnee County, where he engaged in various pursuits for two years. He then returned to Ohio, where he remained for one year, when he returned to Kansas and settled in Dickinson County, where he engaged in farming for a number of years. In 1869, he represented Dickinson County in the Legislature. He was County Commissioner for nine years, and Postmaster for twelve years. He was married in Butler County, Ohio, December 31, 1830, to Miss Jane Wilson, a native of Ohio, born in Butler County, October 3, 1811. They have seven children—Nancy A., John W., A. H., Greene R., William H., Jane and Charles W.

CHARLES LEWIS, merchant, born in Hernford, England, March 29, 1849. He was educated in his native country, after which he engaged in the mercantile trade until 1870, when he came to America and settled in Dickinson County, Kan., where he turned his attention to farming and milling for quite a while, when he engaged as traveling salesman for three years. In 1881, began merchandising at Enterprise, where he is doing a good business. Married in Enterprise, Dickinson Co., Kan., Miss Amelia G. Myer. She was born in Jefferson, Kan., September 10, 1855. They have three children—Amelia, J. Llewellyn and Halian. Mr. Lewis is a member of the A., F. & A. M.

J. F. STAATZ, merchant, is a native of Germany, born April 5, 1837. Was reared in his native country until fourteen years of age. In 1851, came to America, and located in Watertown, Wis., where his time was occupied, as engineer, for six years. In 1857, he came to Kansas, and settled in Dickinson County, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits for about fifteen years. In 1868, was elected County Treasurer, and was the first County Assessor of Dickinson County. He located in Enterprise, in 1874, where he is engaged in general merchandise. Carries a stock of $12,000, and has a trade of $20,000 a year. He has been twice married; first to Miss Catherine Biegert, April 8, 1861. She was born May 16, 1840, and died March 28, 1871. By this union they had four children—Sophia C., William H., Llewellyn and Edward J. The second marriage occurred in Dickinson County, Kan., October 7, 1871, to Miss Mary Gantenbein. She was born in Switzerland, March 1, 1847. By this marriage they have four children—Anna W., James H., Adelaide and Olivia.

CHAPMAN.

This is the name of a small town on the Kansas Pacific Railway, and situated on the north bank of the Smoky Hill River. It is two miles north and ten miles east of Abilene, and about one-half mile west of the point where Chapman Creek empties into the Smoky Hill River. The town site comprises the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter, and lot No. 2, in Section 32, and a part of lot No. 1 in Section 31, Township 12, Range 4 east. The land thus described belonged to James Streeter and S. M. Strickler, who, in 1871, had it surveyed and platted into blocks, lots, streets and alleys, the surveying and platting having been done by E. C. Smeed. To the place thus described and platted was given the name of Chapman. During the eleven years of its existence its growth has been exceedingly slow, the present population not being more than between two and three hundred. It is surrounded by a beautiful and well settled country, but in a business point of view its location is bad. Twelve miles west of it is Abilene, the county seat of Dickinson County, and the same distance east is Junction City, the county seat of Davis County, with other smaller towns about midway between these points. The place, however, has several stores, and, considering the number of competing points surrounding it, does a very fair business. About three-fourths of a mile northeast of this town, on Chapman Creek, and about a mile and a half from the mouth of the creek, there is a grist mill, known as Jackman's mill, which was erected in 1868. If a good surrounding country makes a good town, then Chapman ought to be a good one, because there is a splendid country north, south, east and west of it, the trade of which is contended for by other points. Before the present town of Chapman had an existence, there was a place known by that name, although to give it a definite location is difficult, as the name applied to all the territory bordering on the creek of that name. Evidence, however, seems to establish the fact that the name applied to the high ground north of the present town-site, as there were a few houses there, and in fact, a small store, the present town not having been located until some years after the advent of the railway. This town has four mercantile retail stores which do a general business, neither of which is confined to any one particular line of goods. It has also a drug store, a hardware store, a lumber yard, one hotel, and one good livery stable. It has an elevator with a capacity of about ten thousand bushels. About three years ago a very fine stone schoolhouse was built in town at a cost of about $4,000, and while it is not a large building, it is sufficiently commodious for the wants of the community. In the town proper there are two churches, one Methodist and one Catholic, the latter, however, not yet quite finished. In 1880 the Methodists erected a church which was blown down and completely destroyed in the spring of 1882, with considerable other property in town. They lost no time, however, but immediately commenced to erect another which has been very recently completed, and was dedicated on Sunday, November 26, 1882, Rev. E. W. Van Deventer of Abilene preaching the dedicatory sermon. The Catholics have nearly completed a magnificent stone church, which will be ready for occupancy early in 1883. It is a grand edifice and a great improvement to the town and has been erected at a cost of $20,000. The place never could have been very pretentious, because in all the contests that have taken place for the county seat, the records fail to show among the contestants the name of Chapman. While the place is known as Chapman by the people of the county, and is always referred to by this name, it is not the name given to it by railway officials, and when announcing the place on the trains, conductors and brakesmen call out Hazleton, but no such place as Hazleton appears either on the map or the records of the county.

SALINE COUNTY.

SALINE County is situated almost in the center of the State. Let a map of Kansas be taken and folded once from west to east, and then once from north to south, and the point where the fold-marks cross each other will be just three miles west and one mile south of the southwest corner of Saline County; so that were a line drawn through the center of the State from north to south, the west line of the county would be only three miles east of said central line. The county is bounded on the north by Ottawa County, on the south by McPherson County, on the east by Dickinson County, and on the west by a portion of Ellsworth and Lincoln counties. The county contains 460,800 acres, or 720 square miles. This territory is divided into twenty civil, or municipal, townships. The line of the sixth principal meridian passes between Dickinson and Saline counties, so that the eastern tier of townships of Saline County is in Range 1, west of that meridian. The formation of the county is square, being twenty-four miles north and south, and thirty miles east and west. This square formation is uninterrupted, excepting one point in the northeastern portion of the county, where Dickinson County by some legislative invasion has acquired a small piece of territory about a mile long and one-half mile wide, which constitutes part of the limits of Solomon City. Saline County is about 180 miles west of Kansas City, or the Missouri River.

The surface of the county may be classified into: first, level or flat land; second, rolling or undulating; and, third, high or upland, each of which bears about the same proportion to the whole as the other. The level land is confined, chiefly, to the creek and river bottoms, which vary in width from three to ten miles. These vast stretches of bottom land, while they appear perfectly flat, possess excellent drainage, but the gradations of the surface are so gradual as to be almost imperceptible. The center of the county seems to be one great basin, with the city of Salina located in its center. This basin extends for miles, when the land rises and forms the sides. The tops of these sides are not uniform in height, but break off into waves, dipping here and rising there, but still maintaining their circular form. North of Salina, the country is much more uneven, and the land much higher than it is south. Away to the north, and almost on the northern boundary line of the county, rises up far above all the other elevations in that locality, what is known as "North Pole Mound." To the east, plainly visible for many miles before it is reached, looms up "Iron Mound," which is distant from Salina about eight miles. A little south of west, jutting away up from surrounding altitudes, rises what is known as "Soldier Cap," this name having been given it from the resemblance it bears to a soldier's head dress. South from Salina about fifteen miles, and close to the southern boundary line of the county is a range of very high hills which loom up in the distance like mountains. To this range of hills is given the name of the "Smoky Hill Buttes." On the outer edges of the county the surface is considerably broken, but on the uplands, between the valleys, it is undulating. A good deal of the high land in the county is altogether unfit for agricultural purposes, and fit only for grazing. The county is almost exclusively prairie, and what little timber there is, is confined to narrow strips along the margin of the streams and creeks, the aggregate area of which does not exceed one per cent of that of the county. These timber belts seldom reach a half mile in width, and very frequently not one-fourth. The varieties of timber are ash, oak, elm, and cottonwood, the latter kind being by far the most plentiful. The county is well supplied with streams of pure clear water, and along these streams are beautiful valleys, varying from three to ten miles in width. The lands included in these valleys embrace about thirty per cent of the entire land of the county.

Very few counties in the State are better supplied with water courses than Saline County. First in importance is the Smoky Hill River, which enters the county from the south, at the southwest corner of Smoky View Township, and runs almost due north for a distance of about eighteen miles, until it reaches Salina, when its course becomes nearly due east, which direction it maintains until it leaves the county at its east line about one mile south of Solomon City. The Smoky is not a wide river, but the permanency of its flow is never interrupted by drouths, no matter how long or how dry the season. Next in importance is the Saline River, which enters the county from the north, twelve miles from the northwest corner, and flows in a southeasterly direction across Elm Creek Township, part of Cambria, and empties into the Smoky Hill at the northeast corner of Greeley Township. Mulberry Creek and its branches, flow in a south easterly direction from the northwestern portion of the county, while Spring Creek and its branches flow in a northeasterly direction from the southwestern portion of the county, both creeks uniting about four miles west of the city of Salina, from which point the course of the stream is northeast until it empties into the Saline River at the southwest corner of Elm Creek Township. The east and west branches of Dry Creek have their rise at the south line of the county, and run in a northeasterly direction until they reach Solomon Township, whence its course is due north, skirting Salina on the west on it sway, and empyting into Mulberry Creek about two miles north of the city. Gypsum Creek and its branches constitute the water courses of Solomon, Eureka, and Gypsum townships, these being the three eastern townships of the county lying south of the Smoky Hill River. Gypsum Creek is a stream about forty miles long and has it rise in McPherson County. It has, however, several branches in Saline County, and among them are Hobb's Creek, East branch of Gypsum, Middle branch, and West branch, with two or three other lesser branches, all of which empty into the Gypsum proper on its way north to join the waters of the Smoky. Some five or six miles of the Solomon River run in a southeasterly direction across the northeastern corner of the county, the mouth of the river being at Solomon City, where a junction is formed with the Smoky Hill.

There are several very excellent springs in different parts of the county, the largest of which is on Dry Creek. The creeks, with the exceptions of Dry Creek, which occasionally goes dry, are as permanent in their flow as the rivers. Mulberry Creek is a stream about twenty-five miles long, and Spring Creek is about twenty miles in length. There is no scarcity of good water in any portion of the county, the streams and creeks being so distributed as be only a few miles apart. Good well-water can be obtained at depths ranging from thirty to seventy feet.

CLIMATE.

The climate of a country may be such, notwithstanding its richness of soil and other natural advantages, as to render it a very undesirable locality in which to reside. This, however, is not the case in Saline County, because one of its greatest attractions is beauty of climate and healthfulness. Were there no counteracting influences, the heat in summer would be rather excessive, the thermometer often indicating ninety degrees and upwards. In an atmosphere heavily charged with humidity, this would be almost intolerable, because the heat, if not regulated by moisture, is, nevertheless, subject to its influence, and in cases where the air is deeply impregnated with moisture, the heat is felt to be much more oppressive than in places where such humidity does not exist. Thus it may happen that the heat may be more oppressive in places where the thermometer indicates eighty degrees of heat, than it is in others where it indicates ninety. Now, while the thermometer in summer may indicate in Saline County ninety or ninety-five degrees of heat, it may be more easily borne then in other places where it indicates ten or twelve degrees less, and this owing to the humid condition of the two atmospheres. The atmosphere of Saline County being dry and clear, considerably modifies the heat, and brings it to a temperature which enables it to be borne without being oppressive. This is one compensatory influence, or condition, to counteract the excessive thermometrical heat. Another is to be found in the fact that there is always a constant current of air in circulation, and calms but seldom take place. Another feature about the climate is that no matter how warm the day, the nights are cool and pleasant, without any of that sultriness or oppressiveness as to render sleep impossible. As a rule the winters are open and seldom severe. Snow rarely falls at one time to a greater depth than six inches, and seldom lies long on the ground. The winters vary, however, as to severity, and also as to duration, but generally they are mild and open. There are no ponds or pools of stagnant water to impregnate the air with impurities, nor are there any sloughs or marshes to breed and spread malaria. The atmosphere is dry and clear, and the air invigorating, and bronchial and pulmonary affections are unknown unless where the person coming to locate brings the seeds with him, and these, unless too deeply rooted, soon become eradicated under the influences of the reviving and health imparting climate, by which this section of country is characterized.

The nature of the soil is that which chiefly characterizes that of all central Kansas. It is a very dark loam, composed in most part of decomposed vegetable matter and sedimentary deposits left upon the surface as the waters receded. In the formation of the soil a certain amount of alkali was added from time to time by the ashes created from the tall rank grasses and other vegetation consumed by prairie fires. The soil is very rich and very deep, both on upland and on lowland, in many of the valleys reaching to a depth of fifteen feet. This, however, is not the case on what may be set down as highland, a distinction being made between high and upland. The land included in the latter classification is that embraced in the ridges of rolling prairie dividing the streams and the valleys thereof, while the high land is that on the outer edges of the county in the neighborhood of "Smoky Hill Buttes," "Iron Mound," "North Pole Mound," and "Soldier's Cap." The soil of this latter class of land is very far from being equal to that of the upland or valleys, and for agricultural purposes is next to worthless. It affords good pasture, however, and for grazing purposes is quite valuable. The soil is well adapted to the cultivation of all kinds of cereals, and all kinds of tame grass can be cultivated to great luxuriance. There is probably no soil anywhere that requires so little labor to produce abundant crops. Roots of all kinds are of easy production. Fruit culture, both large and small, can be successfully and profitably conducted, and with any degree of reasonable care and attention large fruit crops can be realized. Trees grow with surprising rapidity, and the wild grasses of the prairie grow to great luxuriance. The quality of the soil is such as to afford the husbandman rich rewards for the smallest possible amount of labor. The county is, strictly, one adapted to agricultural pursuits, and its wide stretches of prairie, covered as they are with rich and nutritious grasses, with an abundance of pure, clear water, makes it a very desirable locality for stock raising.

No mineral deposits have yet been discovered in the county. Several borings have been made in quest of coal, but none has yet been found. A good quality of sandstone can be found in almost any part of the county. A very excellent quality of fire and pottery clay has been found to exist in considerable quantities in several portions of the county and also extensive quantities of pure gypsum. At the mouth of the Solomon River are very fine salt wells which are being extensively and successfully operated. These works are close upon the limits of Solomon City, in Dickinson County, in which place the company offices are located. In writing the history of Dickinson County, the Salt Works are set down as being located at Solomon City, leaving the inference that this extensive manufacturing enterprise is located in Dickinson County, whereas, in reality, the works are in Saline County.

Tree growing has lately received a good deal of attention, and there is no soil on which tree culture can be carried on with greater success. This branch of industry cannot only be successfully followed, but profitably. People are commencing to realize this, and much more attention has been given to arboriculture within the last two or three years, than in all the years preceding. Necessity, no doubt, had a good deal to do in bringing the people to a realization of the necessity of devoting a good deal of care and attention to tree culture. The scarcity of timber, and dearth of coal, rendered fuel extremely high, and this doubtless, brought the people to see the necessity for tree planting. In 1880, the aggregate number of acres in the county planted to forest trees was only 430. In 1882, however, the number of acres devoted to this industry had reached 1,721, which goes to show the increased interest that is taken in, and attention that is given to, arboriculture. Aside from the acres devoted to forestry, a goodly number are given to wind-breaks, shade and ornamental trees, of which there is scarcely a farm in the county but that has more or less. The varieties planted are chiefly soft maple, honey, locust and cottonwood, and box-elder, cottonwood largely prevailing, and box-elder next.

EARLY HISTORY.

More or less uncertainty usually hangs around the question as to who was the first settler in the county, and while the question is one of but little, if any, importance in the multiplicity of transactions and incidents that make up the history of a county, yet it is one upon which men are more tenacious in their opinion than upon almost any other. The first attempt at settlement in what is now Saline County, of which there is any authentic account, was that made by P. B. Plumb, now United States Senator from Kansas, Major Pierce, now a resident of Junction City, and one Mr. Hunter.

This party, as early as 1856, came as far west as the mouth of the Saline River, where they projected a town on the south side of the river, to which they gave the name of Mariposa. The name sounds very nicely, and why it was not named Plumbville, or Piercetown, or Huntersburg, is yet a mystery. The selection of the site showed their good taste, because the place chosen was a delightful spot. The town grew to the dimensions of one log house above ground, and a well underground, when it was abandoned, and Saline County was left without an inhabitant. Col. Plumb went to Emporia, and afterward became United States Senator, another verification of Shakespere that "there's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will." The attempt of the parties mentioned, can not be called a settlement in any sense. The second session of the Territorial Legislature, chartered, in 1856, a company that had been organized under the name of the "Buchanan Town Company," taking its name from the individual who, in that year, was elected to the office of President of the United States.

This company was granted wonderful powers. They could build cities, construct railways, improve water privileges, and erect salt works, and to aid them in doing all these things, they were to have several thousand acres of land. No use of being niggardily over a few acres of land, especially as it was not theirs to give, the whole being the property of the United States Government. However, acting under the powers conferred, during the summer of 1857 a settlement was attempted to be made at a point near the mouth of the Solomon River, in Saline County. A large tract of land was selected, a portion of which was set apart for a public square. Eight log cabins were erected by the company, two on each side of the square, and the town of Buchanan was now established. The name, however, had no attraction, and only two of the cabins were ever occupied.

The head of this enterprise was Richard Mobley, who resided at Ogden, in Riley County, and who was a member of the Lecompton Constitutional Convention. He occupied one of the cabins with his wife and child, but the latter dying soon after, Buchanan was abandoned, and once more Saline County was left without a settler. The log houses were, some two or three years afterward, destroyed by prairie fires, so that the last vestige of Buchanan perished in the flames.

In the spring of 1857 W. A. Phillips, who for some time previously had been traveling through the settled portions of Kansas, conceived the idea of making a tour on foot through a portion of the unsettled territory with the object of selecting a town site. To accompany him on his tour he engaged the services of an Englishman named Smith. Providing themselves with blankets, arms, ammunition, and stowage for several days provisions, they started out, taking conveyance as far as the vicinity of Fort Riley. From there they stated out on foot, following up the Smoky Hill River as far as the Saline, the course of which they followed for a short distance when they crossed to the Solomon, which they partially examined for a town site. By that time their rations were becoming quite low, and as there was no place nearer than fifty miles where they could replenish their store they struck for the Republican. They followed the Republican and Kaw until they reached Manhattan. Here they renewed their stock of provisions and started out again, following up the Blue till they came to the forks, where a few stakes were driven to indicate that the claim was marked. Following the West branch of the Blue they came to the Military Road, and turning into this they followed it until they reached Marysville. From Marysville they struck out for Richmond, a distance of fifty-one miles, which they accomplished in one day. Their journeyings extended over a period of two weeks and the average distance traveled each day was forty miles. To this trip is to be attributed the first permanent settlement in Saline County, because after thoroughly examining the grounds over which he traveled for a town site Col. Phillips determined to locate on the banks of the Smoky. In accordance with this determination in February, 1858, he returned to the Smoky Hill Valley in company with A. M. Campbell and James Muir, three sons of "Auld Scotia," although somewhat degenerate or they would have given some name to the town they located to indicate in the far-off future that the founders of it were Scotchmen by birth alough Americans by choice. On their way up the Smoky they passed through what had been established as Buchanan, where they found the log cabins still standing but vacant. On arriving at the Saline they found that some one had put up a log cabin on the northeast bank of the stream, not far from the Government bridge, and close to the cabin was a haystack at which some buffaloes were eating. On going up to the cabin they found it deserted and not a living thing of a domestic nature was to be seen around the premises. From the Saline they pushed on up to the Smoky until they reached that point where the river turned due south and here they drove their stakes, located a town site, to which they gave the name of Salina, and this was the first permanent settlement made in Saline County. In March, 1858, John and Goothart Schipple, brothers, being the party who had erected the log cabin on the bank of the Saline, returned and settled upon their claim, which they had only temporarily abandoned during the winter of 1857-58. At that time all the country west of the 6th principal meridian was unorganized territory, known as the Arrapahoe district. What is now part of Colorado was embraced in this district, and any person from this region, in a convention or other like assemblage, would be addressed as the "gentleman from Arrapahoe." Saline County was included in this unorganized territory, but in February, 1859, the Legislature passed a bill organizing and defining the boundary lines of five counties west of the 6th principal meridian, among them Saline County. The first stock of goods that was ever brought to Saline County was brought by George Pickard in 1858. The great floods that occurred in that year, washed away all the Government bridges on the Smoky, Saline and Solomon rivers. On reaching the Solomon, Mr. Pickard found the bridge gone and in order to get his goods across the river he had to construct a raft of wood and buffalo robes, on which he succeeded in getting them over, but in a somewhat damaged condition. The washing out of the bridges necessitated the laying out of a road on the south side of the river from Salina to Wyandotte, which was a very difficult and arduous task. Before starting for his stock of goods, which was not very large, Mr. Pickard had erected a small log house on Iron avenue, where the Opera House now stands, and here he deposited his stock and opened up for business. He had not been in the business but a few months when he sold out to W. A. Phillips, who increased the stock and established A. M. Campbell as salesman. In 1859 another store was started by H. L. Jones, making store number two. In 1858, quite a number of new settlers arrived, most of whom located in Salina or its immediate neighborhood. Among these was one Dr. Graw, a German, who came from Illinois. The doctor had two great passions, one for the violin and one for speculating in town sites. His great desire was to lay out a town that should stand as a monument to his name, and in order to accomplish this he selected a piece of land on the banks of the Saline. At that time none of the lands west of the sixth principal meridian had been surveyed, but the doctor resorted to the primitive method of measuring with a string. To assist him in the survey, he took with him A. M. Campbell and A. C. Spillman, and when they had measured off what the doctor supposed to be a mile square, he gave the prescribed limits the name of Grawville, and promised Campbell and Spillman four lots each for their services. The doctor having located his town, immediately left, since which time nothing has been heard of him. In the spring of 1859, a great stream of fortune seekers passed through Salina on their way to the newly discovered auriferous fields of Pike's Peak. Salina, at that time, was the westernmost station on the Smoky Hill route to the Far West. They passed through with every conceivable idea of conveyance. Some went] on foot, some on horses, some on mules, some on ponies, some with hand-carts, and some were furnished with good teams and outfits. It was in that year that W. A. Phillips built the first hotel in Salina, at the corner of Santa Fe and Iron avenues, he having hauled the pine lumber used in its construction, and the doors and windows from Kansas City. This building he afterwards sold to H. L. Jones, who occupied it as a store and hotel, Mr. Jones attending to the store part of the business, while Mrs. Jones, highly qualified by education and training, attended to the hotel part. During that year also, Israel Markley, a man of good business tact and a great deal of energy, erected two or three houses, and Salina commenced to make quite an appearance. The Legislature of 1859, as already stated, passed a bill organizing the county and defining its boundaries, and by the same act created A. C. Spillman, Israel Markley and Charles Holtzman, a Board of County Commissioners, and the men so nominated became the first Board of Commissioners in the county. This Board met for the first time on the 26th day of April, 1860, and organized by electing Charles Holtzman, chairman and A. C. Spillman, clerk. The Board was sworn by Hugh M. Morrison, a Justice of the Peace. The following is a copy of the entry of the oath administered as taken from the Commissioner's journal:

> TERRITORY OF KANSAS, SALINE COUNTY.
>
> Personally appeared before me, a Justice of the Peace in and for Saline County, Charles Holtzman, Israel Markley and A. C. Spillman, created County Commissioners under an act entitled "An act to organize the county of Saline and define the boundaries thereof," and were duly sworn to a faithful performance of their duties.

> HUGH M. MORRISON.
> Justice of the Peace.

On May 5, 1860, the Commissioners divided the county into two municipal townships, named respectively Elm Creek and Spring Creek. An election was also ordered at the same meeting to take place on the first Monday in July, for the election of county officers, the voting place to be at the house of W. A. Phillips. At that election D. L. Phillips, Israel Markley and Charles Holtzman were chosen Commissioners, Jacob Cass, Treasurer, and L. F. Parsons, Sheriff. The records do not show that any other officers were chosen, at that election, but in October, 1861, the Commissioners appointed R. H. Bishop, Clerk and Register of Deeds. In the spring of 1860, another crowd of gold seekers passed through the county, bound for Pike's Peak, and with them was one Dr. Cobb, who had come from Virginia. On reaching Salina, the doctor concluded he would go no farther, and leaving the party, he selected a claim on the river, a few miles below town, on which he located, and in the fall of that year he died, and was buried in a coffin, or box, made of two-inch plank. At that time the great need of the county, and Salina especially, was a grist and saw-mill, as there was none nearer than about fifty or sixty miles and no pine lumber for building purposes could be had nearer than Kansas City, and to make the trip there and back required from two to three weeks. Plenty of good native timber was to be found along the streams of the county, but to prepare it for use required a saw-mill. In order to supply this want, W. A. Phillips, whose knowledge of the milling business scarcely enabled him to distinguish a millstone from a hopper, went to the eastern portion of the State and purchased a grist and saw-mill, and a lathe, which he hauled to Salina by team. They were set up on the Smoky, and for a time the old saw was kept buzzing at a lively rate. As a paying investment, Mr. Phillips asserts that he might as well have thrown his money into a furnace in full blast; but it helped the town, if it did not help him.

When Kansas was admitted, as a State, into the Union, in January, 1861, the population of Saline County, all told, did not exceed, if it reached, 150 souls. All the settlers in the county were located either in Salina or within a few miles of it. Little, if any, immigration had yet ventured into the county. What the population of the county was at that time may reasonably be concluded from the fact that, in the fall of 1861, there was not over thirty voters in the county, H. L. Jones, who was elected to the Legislature that fall, receiving only twenty-four votes in the county, with no opposing candidate against him; and to Mr. Jones belongs the honor of having been the first member of the Legislature elected from Saline County. The war commencing in less than three months after the admission of the State, put a stop to immigration, and seriously threatened the existence of Salina. Of the few men in the county at that time capable of bearing arms, nearly three-fourths went into the Union army, and among them, W. A. Phillips, who rose to the rank of Colonel. If the settlers of Saline were few, they were loyal almost to a man, and did not hesitate in leaving the homes they had made for themselves through hardships and difficulties, when their duty called them to the field. Among those who went to the war from Salina, was L. F. Parsons, who went out as Second Lieutenant, and came out as Captain; and D. L. Phillips, who enlisted as a private and was mustered out as First Lieutenant.

The first election that took place in the county, under the State law, was held in November, 1861. A full county ticket was nominated, and the officers elected were: Commissioners, Henry Whitley, G. Schippel, and R. H. Bishop; Probate Judge, A. A. Morrison; Sheriff, John McReynolds; Treasurer, Ransom Calkin; County Clerk, H. H. Morrison; Register of Deeds, H. H. Flagg; Assessor, Robert McReynolds; Surveyor, James R. Mead; Coroner, Robert Crawford; Justices of the Peace, Daniel Alverson and Peter Giersch. In those days there stood in the center of the intersection of Santa Fe and Iron avenues, a tall flag pole, from which, on certain occasions, the Stars and Stripes would be unfurled. It so happened in 1861 that one Col. Lynde, with his command, was stationed in New Mexico, and, being more in favor of secession than the Union, he, with the officers under him, surrendered the command to the rebels, who, after taking their arms, paroled them. In marching eastward they followed the Smoky Hill route, and, in course of time, reached Salina, which, at that time, was the most western point on that route. Just as they were entering town, A. M. Campbell ran up the Star Spangled Banner on the flag-staff, and let it float out on the breeze, as an indication that they had set their feet upon loyal territory. The sight of the old flag brought forth a cheer from the men, that Lynde and his officers could not restrain, which showed plainly that, if their officers had proved treacherous, the men were true. During the existence of the war Saline County had very little to excite either the avarice of bushwhackers or the vengeance of the Indians, but yet what little there was seemed to be sufficient to attract the attention of both. The first visit was from the Indians, who, in the early part of 1862, concluded to chase out or kill every white person in the Smoky Hill Valley. West of Salina were a number of ranchmen whom the Indians attacked first, several of whom they killed. The alarm soon spread from ranch to ranch, and being too weak to offer any organized resistance, those who had escaped hastened to Salina, where a stockade was erected and every preparation made to give the savages a warm reception, which caused the Indians to change their course without attempting an attack. The next hostile visit the people received was in the fall of that same year, from a gang of about twenty bushwhackers. So suddenly was the dash made into Salina, and so unexpectedly, that the people were altogether unprepared to meet it, and from the very moment the gang entered, the town was at its mercy. Meeting with no resistance, they attempted no personal injury, but houses were entered, stores ransacked, and wherever any powder, ammunition, arms or tobacco were found, the marauders appropriated it. The firearms they could not carry off with them they destroyed. Everything thought to be of service to the people in case of pursuit was destroyed. On leaving they took with them twenty-five horses and six mules, the property of the Kansas Stage Company. After they had gone, it was discovered that they had overlooked one horse, and this was mounted by R. H. Bishop, who rode to Fort Riley, and covered the distance, fifty miles, in five hours. A party of soldiers was sent from the Fort, but, of course, the bushwhackers did not wait for their arrival, but had gone to more inviting fields. This was the last visit of the kind that the county had during the war.

At the meeting of the Board of Commissioners, held April 7, 1862, the county, which, for some time prior, had constituted two townships, was thrown into one, by abolishing that of Spring Creek. At the meeting of July 7, 1862, a poll tax of $1.50 was laid on every white male inhabitant of the county. On August 16, 1862, the county was divided into three Commissioner Districts. The following is a copy of an entry made in the Commissioner's journal: "Salina, Saline County, October 6, 1862. This being the time for the regular meeting of the board, but W. W. Morrison being the only member present, no business could be transacted, it was decided to adjourn to meet on Saturday, the 18th October, 1862."

The years of the war were years of little or no progress in the county, and, in truth, things were rather retrogressive than progressive, and in 1865, when those who had gone to the war from Salina returned, they found the town in a sadly dilapidated condition. New life and energy, however, were instilled into the people, and in a short time the place once more became prosperous. Few settlers, however, came to the county, but one by one they commenced dropping in. The first to come after the war was Ernst Hohneck, who located about nine miles southwest of Salina, at what is now Bavaria, where he opened up a ranch and started a little store. For years he was out there solitary and alone, without a neighbor within miles of him. At as early a date as 1867, it was deemed necessary to build a jail, and on the 13th day of April, in that year, the County Commissioners ordered one built at a cost not to exceed $2,500. In 1868 mounted messengers came dashing into Salina with the alarming news that the Indians were up on the Republican, perpetrating terrible deeds, outraging women, killing children, and murdering and scalping every white man they found. The people became greatly excited, and telegraphed the facts to Gov. Crawford at Topeka. The first train from Topeka west brought the Governor to Salina, where he instantly called for volunteers to go out to the scene of the troubles. All the time it took to raise a company of sixty men, was just that required to arm themselves and get mounted. The Governor took command of the company, and that day they rode as far as Churchill, in the southwest corner of Ottawa County. Learning there that there were no Indians between the Saline and the Solomon rivers, they rode as far as Minneapolis, and from there they pushed on to Delphos, on the northern boundary line of Ottawa County. At that point they camped for the night, and a party of six was sent out to scout as far north as Lake Sibley, in Republic County. M. J. Mills and M. D. Sampson, of Salina, constituted two of the party. They reached Fort Sibley that night, but met no Indians on the way. Next day the scouting party started southwest for Asherville, on the Solomon River, to which point the main body of the company had ridden from Delphos. The people within several miles of Asherville had collected there, both for protection and defense. Two of these men, who lived only a short way out from Asherville, started out to their homes to get some milk, but before they reached there a party of Indians rushed down upon them from the bluffs, killed them and scalped them, and rode off before the company had time to mount. Several dead bodies were found—some men, some women, and some children. The men had all been scalped, the women outraged, and the children fastened to the ground with arrows. The dead were buried, and, after performing this painful duty, the company returned to Salina, where it disbanded.

In 1868 the tide of immigration turned towards Saline County, and a great many settlers located in the county during the year. They came by families and they came by colonies, and a great many came singly and alone. A company of Swedes was formed in Chicago, who sent out an agent to select lands for a colony, and, being pleased with Saline County, he purchased 20,000 acres of land in the southern portion of the county of the railroad company. Soon thereafter, a colony of Swedes, numbering seventy-five, came out and located on a portion of these lands. That colony was followed soon after by another from Galesburg, Ills., under the leadership of Olof Thurstenburg, numbering about sixty, who located in Smoky View and Smolan townships. After that a constant stream set in, and settlers began to locate in nearly every portion of the county. The following year a large colony from the Western Reserve, Ohio, under the leadership of D. E. Fuller and T. J. Thorpe, came to the county, arriving on the first day of April, 1869. This colony numbered over two hundred souls The lands they selected were around Bavaria, at that time known as Hohneck, in what is now Ohio Township. They came supplied with tents and a complete outfit. At that time there was not a house in the entire township but Hohneck's Ranch, and another one that had been built by Hohneck as a brewery, but which was then unused. About fifty of the colonists quartered themselves in the old brewery, and the remainder lived in tents until their claims were located, and buildings erected. This colony took up all the even sections of land in Ohio Township within a radius of two miles. With this colony came Warren Cooley, E. S. Cooley, Charles Cooley, Asa Case, A. F. Shute, A. W. Hawley, A. L. Patch, O. Hubbard, Charles Culp, E. W. Ober, J. B. Hamilton and many others. All that were married of the colonists, brought their families with them. These accessions enabled Saline County to take a wonderful step to the front. In 1870 another colony came from Henry County, Ills., under the leadership of Eric Forse. There were about seventy-five, all told, in this colony, most of whom located in Falun Township. From that time until now, the immigration has been more gradual, but every year since has added its number of new comers to the population; some years more, some less, but every year some. The court house was built in 1870, Rev. Wm. Bishop donating to the county a block of ground for the purpose. The first couple in the county to get married was A. M. Campbell and Miss Christina A. Phillips, who were joined in matrimony in 1858. At that time there was neither a minister of the gospel nor a Justice of the Peace in the county, and they were constrained to make a trip to Riley City, in Davis County, in order to be united. The distance they had to travel was about sixty miles, so that their wedding tour was equally divided, one-half being accomplished before the ceremony, and the other half after they had become twain in one flesh. To this couple was born the first child to whom was given birth in Saline County, Miss Christina Campbell, who was born on the 25th day of October, 1859. The first death in the county was that of the child of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mobley, which occurred in 1857, in what was laid out as the town of "Buchanan," and the next was that of Doctor Cobb, in the fall of 1860. The first store opened in the county was by George Pickard, in the spring of 1858, who sold out to W. A. Phillips, in the summer of that year, A. M. Campbell becoming his salesman. The first postoffice established in the county was at Salina, in November, 1861, with A. M. Campbell as Postmaster, which position he now holds, and has held, uninterruptedly since that time, covering a period of twenty-one years. The county is, at this time, December, 1882, in a very prosperous condition. It is well supplied with good roads; the rivers and streams are well bridged; both country and towns are well supplied with schools and churches. The farmers, as a general thing, live in good houses and are surrounded with everything to make their homes pleasant, comfortable and happy.

The first deed of conveyance that appears on record in the office of the Register of Deeds, is one from L. F. Parsons to Ransom Calkins, conveying the western half of the northwest quarter of Section 12, Township 14, Range 3 west, the consideration being $130. The same quarter section could not be purchased now for less than $7,000. The instrument was dated September 18, 1861. The first case docketed for trial in court was "J. R. Allen vs. Hamilton & Tyler," the date of docketing being July 7, 1865. The suit was brought on account, and the amount involved was $119.50.

GROWTH.

When Saline County was organized in 1859, there was not over one hundred people in the county, and these were all located in and adjacent to Salina. What the population of the county was in 1860 is not shown by the census of that year, which, doubtless, is attributable to the fact that the county was not, in reality, organized until July, 1860, when the first county officers were elected; but those residing in the county at that time say that in 1860 Saline County did not contain more than one hundred souls. Settlers to any extent did not commence to locate in the county until after the close of the war, although between 1860 and 1865 there had been a few isolated cases of settlement in different parts of the county. The first authenticated report of the population of the county to be found is the census report of 1870, and by this the county is given a population, at that time, of 4,246. That most of this number settled in the county between 1865 and 1870 is very evident, because in nearly all of the townships there are no settlers to be found whose date of settlement antedates the former year. The fact that the Kansas Pacific railway was not built through the county until 1867, also supports the supposition, and statements of settlers, that the increase in the population reported in the census of 1870, took place during the last half of the decade. However, it is fixed beyond dispute that the population of the county in 1870 was 4,246. The State census of 1875 gives the population at 6,360, an increase in five years of 2,114, or within a fraction of an average of 423 each year. The years of 1874 and 1875 were those in which the people of Kansas were thrown into destitution by the grasshopper raid; but notwithstanding this, the census that was taken in 1878 sets the population of the county down as being 9,530, being a gain in three years of 3,170, or something over 1,000 per year. Seventy per cent of the population at that time was rural, and thirty per cent urban, which would indicate that the great majority of the new settlers located in the country. The United States census of 1880 gives the population of the county as being 13 880, thereby showing an increase in two years of 4 350, or an average of 2,175 for each year. This is, certainly, a wonderful increase in so short a time, and speaks well for the natural advantages of the county. Those competent of judging, estimate the population of the county now, December, 1882, at not less than 16,000.

The rapid growth in the population of the county is not any more wonderful than its material growth, and is not quite so surprising, when the drawbacks consequent upon grasshopper raids and drouths are considered. The total acreage of field crops in 1874, including wheat, rye, corn, barley, oats, buckwheat, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, sorghum, castor beans, cotton, flax, hemp, tobacco, broom corn, rice corn, pearl millet, millet and hungarian, timothy meadow, clover meadow, prairie meadow, timothy pasture, clover pasture, blue-grass pasture, and prairie pasture, was 54, 740 acres. In 1875 the total acreage was 65,569.79, and in 1876 it was about the same, the acreage that year being nine acres less than the year preceding. The cause of this was the terrible depression that followed the destruction by the grasshoppers in 1874-75, and the uncertainty created as to future visitations from such destructive pests. In 1877, however, the acreage of field crops reached 107,549 acres, and kept increasing each year until 1880, when the total number of acres in the county devoted to field crops was 162,842. Such an increase in acreage is indicative of increased material wealth. In 1874 the acreage of fall wheat was 12,804 acres, whereas in 1880 it was 89 918 acres, or 35,178 more than the total acreage of all field crops in 1874. A comparison of a few years will suffice to show how the county is advancing in material wealth in other respects. In 1879 the value of the live stock in the county was $637,563, and in 1880 it was $710,125.50. In the former year the number of horses in the county was 4 938; mules and asses, 724; milch cows, 3,150; other cattle, 5,445; sheep, 3,962; swine, 13,934. In 1880 the number of horses was 5,332; mules and asses, 860; milch cows, 3,462; other cattle, 6 188; sheep, 5,257; swine, 15,502. While this increase is not strikingly large, it shows a steady and encouraging advancement. By turning to stock, which is rapidly becoming the leading industry of the West, and comparing the value of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter for the years 1879-80-82 a better understanding may be reached as to how the county is advancing in material prosperity. The value of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter during the year ending March 1, 1879, was $62,939; in 1880 it was $144,233, and in 1882 it was $163,845, being an increase in three years of $100,906, showing conclusively that the farming community is taking much greater interest in stock raising than heretofore. The returns of the various Township Assessors as returned to the County Clerk in the spring of 1882, and not yet published, show that the number of acres in the county included in farms was 273,677, the assessed valuation of which was $2,873,012. The number of farm dwellings erected in the county during the year was 102, valued at $27,738. The acreage of winter wheat, sown in the fall of 1881, was 70,540 acres; rye, 3,995; spring wheat, 1882, 1,483; corn, 55,247; barley, 274; oats, 10,951; Irish potatoes, 657; sweet potatoes, 28; sorghum, 914; flax, 49; tobacco, 13; broom corn, 1,487; millet and hungarian, 1,379; pearl millet, 300. Of grasses in cultivation and under fence there were of timothy meadow 128 acres; clover, 50; prairie, 2,812; other tame grasses, 32. Of pasture there were of timothy 39 acres; clover, 10; other grasses, 256; and prairie, 19,934; making a total acreage of field crops of 170,578 acres. In 1881 there was cut of tame hay 345 tons, and of prairie hay, 26,911 tons. Garden products were marketed to the amount of $3,349, and poultry and eggs were sold to the amount of $23,237. There was sold of milk, other than that sold for cheese or butter, to the amount of $4,316. Of cheese there was manufactured 14,470 pounds, and of butter 282,926 pounds. The wool clip for the year was 36,712 pounds. Aside from the increase in cultivated acreage, in live stock, and in the various other productions that properly belong to the dairy and farm, there are other evidences of material prosperity which indicate that great interest is being awakened in other industries which will tend greatly to advance the material wealth of the county, and also add greatly to the comforts of home. Horticulture of late years has been receiving considerable attention, and now instead of importing apples from other counties and States, sufficient are raised in the county for home consumption with some to spare. The number of apple trees in bearing in the county is 8,499; pear trees, 551; peach trees, 67,349; plum trees, 10,746; and cherry trees, 3,214. There are not in bearing, apple trees, 41,088; pear trees, 4,280; peach trees, 68,561; plum trees, 11,422; and cherry, 9,916. These numbers are being increased yearly, and there are very few farmers in the county but that have young orchards set out. Farms in the county, generally, are well fenced, the Osage orange thorn being mostly in use. The fences in a county, representing as they do an average cost of about $1 25 per rod, are indicative of material wealth. This class of wealth is represented by 10,202 rods of board fence; 3,325 of rail; 4,390 of stone; 218,124 of hedge; and 68,477 of wire, making a total of 304,518 rods, representing a value of $380,647. Another item of wealth is represented in the agricultural implements in the county, the value of which, according to the various Assessors' returns, amounts to $87,956. The true valuation of all property in the county in 1880 was $4,708,232.11, which, since that time, has been greatly increased. The indebtedness of the county at that time, including that of county, township, city, and school, amounted to $134 329, so that in a material point of view the progress of the county has been such as ought to satisfy her most enthusiastic and sanguine admirers.

RAILROADS, SCHOOLS AND MANUFACTURES.

The first railway to enter the county was the Kansas Pacific, which was built in 1867. It enters the county about two and one-half miles south of the northeast corner, and crosses the Solomon River a little way above its mouth at Solomon City. It crosses the county diagonally in a southwestern direction, the principal stations in the county being Salina, Bavaria and Brookville. In 1878 the Solomon Valley Branch was built, but only a small portion of this passes through the county. Starting at Solomon City it follows the east bank of the Solomon river, and runs diagonally across the northeast corner of the county, a distance of about five miles, when it enters Ottawa County. The next road built in the county was the McPherson branch of the K. P. This branch was constructed in 1879, and is thirty-five miles in length. The road starts at Salina and runs south to McPherson, which is the seat of justice of the county of that name. About half the entire length of this branch is located in Saline County, the stations being Assaria and Bridgeport. The Topeka, Salina & Western Railway has been located through the county, and on this work is being pushed as rapidly as possible, and which, it is expected, will be completed as far as Salina some time in 1883.

The first school taught in the county was at Salina, in 1861, the teacher being Miss Thacher. Her pupils were few, and a very small room accommodated them. This, in fact, was the only school in the county for a number of years, and even that, small as it was, answered the purpose until 1867, when a two-story frame building was erected at the corner of Santa Fe avenue and Ash street, which has since been converted into a stable. There are now, however, in the county, seventy-six schoolhouses, which contain ninety schoolrooms. Of these, six are built of stone, sixty-eight of wood, and two of brick. The school population of the county, between five and twenty-one years of age, in 1882, as shown by the annual report of the County Superintendent for that year, was 4,808, of which 2,395 were males and 2,413 females. The number enrolled, however, was 1,245 less than the population, being 1,839 males, and 1,724 females, or a total of 3,563. The average attendance was still less, being only 2,243, or 1,141 males and 1,102 females. To teach this number of pupils, ninety-five teachers were required, of whom forty were males and fifty-five females. The total number of months of school taught in the county during the year was 600, the male teachers averaging 5 19-20 months, and the female 6 32-55. The average salary paid was, to males, $33.75, and to females, $25.40. Besides the public schools, there are in the county four private schools, with a pupil enrollment of 205, and which employ four teachers. The estimated value of school property in the county is $95 000, and the bonded indebtedness is $23,285. It required for all school purposes during the year a tax of one and one-third per cent. of the assessed valuation of the property in the county. The number of teachers examined during the year for certificates was 102, of whom ninety-three were granted certificates and nine were rejected. The average age of applicants was twenty-one years, and of those who received certificates the average age was twenty-two years. Of the certificates granted ten were first-class, fifty-three second class, and thirty third-class. There was in the hands of the District Treasurer, on August 1, 1881, the sum of $6,264.36, and the receipts from other sources during the year amounted to $36,815.77, making a total of $43,080.13. The expenditures during the year for all school purposes amounted to $32,955.57, leaving a balance in the hands of the District Treasurer on July 31, 1882, amounting to $10,124.56 But very few of the grounds surrounding the schoolhouses are ornamented with shade trees, and a good many of them are not even fenced. Some of the schools are well supplied with maps, charts, and other apparatus, some only reasonably well, while others are rather deficient in these articles. The schools in Salina are graded, and in the city, in 1882, there were 1,196 persons of school age, of whom 519 were males and 647 females. The number of pupils enrolled was 875, of whom 426 were males and 449 females. The average daily attendance was 584; males 280, and females 304. In the city schools there were thirteen teachers employed, two males and eleven females. Nine months school were taught during the year, and the average salary paid to teachers was, males, $80.50 per month, and females, $37.63. The total amount paid teachers in the city for the year was $5,528.75, and the current expense account for the year was $7,272. These figures speak of a wonderful change since 1861, when one small room, about 12x14 feet, was amply sufficient for school purposes. The city schools are under the charge and management of a superintendent, who is denominated Principal. All the schools in the city are under his supervision, and for his services he receives a salary of $1,000 per annum.

A good deal of interest is taken in manufacturing enterprises, and those who have embarked in them have, so far, found their investments to be quite profitable. According to the statistical record in the County Clerk's office for 1882, the amount invested in manufacturing enterprises in the county was $294,800. Of this the greater portion was invested in flouring mills. Of the flouring mills four are operated by water power and two by steam. Three of these mills are located at Salina, one of which was built by Gower Bros. in 1878. This is a water power mill and the amount invested in it is $20,000. In 1878 also, F. Goodnow & Co., erected a large steam mill near the depot in which the capital invested is $75,000.

Another large flouring mill was erected in 1875, by C. R. Underwood & Co., at a cost of $40,000. This is a water mill and stands on the west bank of the Smoky, a litte north of the bridge that spans the river at Iron avenue.

At Bridgeport, in the southern portion of the county, there is a very good grist mill, owned by Hopkins & Mills. This mill is operated by cable power derived from the Smoky Hill River. It was built at a cost of $12,000.

At Brookville, on the K. P. Railway, about eighteen miles west of Salina, the City Mills of George Marshall & Co., are located. The mill is operated by steam and was built at a cost of 8,000.

At Solomon City, but located in Saline County, is the water flouring mill of Newmiller & Wooley, the cost of which is $20,000.

The works of the National Solar Salt Company, at Solomon City, are also located in Saline County, the estimated cost of which is $75,000.

In Bavaria Syrup Works have been erected by Crawford & Denton in which the capital invested is $7,000

In Salina there is a carriage and wagon manufactory owned by A. B. Dickinson in which from ten to fifteen hands are constantly employed. Andrew Muir & Co., have quite extensive agricultural implements and Plow Works on Iron avenue, which give employment to quite a number of men.

Eberhardt & Co., have a factory on Iron avenue where from ten to fifteen men find constant employment in making bed springs and woven wire mattresses.

Until lately a broom factory in Salina did a thriving business, and gave employment to quite a number of hands, but for some time past it has ceased operating, but is now about being revived.

Attention has been directed of late, to dairying and cheese making, and several creameries and cheese factories are now in existence in various portions of the county.

COUNTY SOCIETIES.

Agricultural, Horticultural and Mechanical Association.—This association was organized on the 3d day of May, 1881, with a membership of ninety-six persons. The association was organized to take the place of the old agricultural society which had become disorganized and dismembered. The purposes for which the association was formed, include all those sought to be accomplished by the separate existence of an Agricultural and Horticultural Society. The main object of the association is to advance the agricultural, horticultural and mechanical interests of the county, and to encourage and promote those industries that will best advance the development and progress of the county. To accomplish these objects, fairs are held annually, at which liberal premiums are offered, and paid, to those having the best exhibits in the different classes in which they are entered. The first fair of the association was held in the fall of 1881, and was a grand success in every particular, as was also the one held in September, 1882. There are no prettier fair grounds in the State than those of the association. These, however, belong to the county, but the association has free use and control of them so long as it shall hold fairs thereon. These grounds are known as Oak Dale Park, and are situated on the bank of Smoky Hill River, in East Salina. The enclosure contains forty-five acres, and a more delightful spot for holding fairs could not be selected. Around the outer edge of the park is a beautiful grove of large trees, which afford ample shelter from the sun, while there is neither a shrub nor a bush to interrupt a full view of the track and the center of the grounds. Good stalls, sheds and stables have been erected for horses, cattle and other animals, and no expense has been spared to make the park one of the most delightful resorts in the State. It is open the year round, so that the people of Salina have a beautiful retreat in summer. The officers of the association are, A. P. Collins, president; W. H. Wheelock, vice-president; J. M. Greeley, secretary; M. M. Briggs, treasurer. In addition to these there is a board of directors consisting of nine members.

Gypsum Creek Farmers' Club.—This club was organized in 1872, by the farmers living along Gypsum Creek, hence its name. Three townships are included in the organization—Gypsum, Eureka and Solomon. These are the three townships that form the eastern tier in the county, south of the Smoky Hill River, and it is through these that the Gypsum Creek runs. The membership of the club, however, is not confined exclusively to the residents of these three townships, as farmers of other townships may be admitted. It is strictly non-political in character, its only object being to create a sociability among the farming community, and to bring them together for the purpose of discussing those subjects in which they are most deeply interested, and from which mutual benefits may be enjoyed. When the club was first formed, its meetings were held weekly, but after some years they were held monthly, and are so held now. There is no regular place of meeting, but, like church sociables, are held at appointed places. The meetings unite pleasure with business, and are in the nature of basket sociables. At these meetings, essays and papers are read, and opinions exchanged on those subjects most interesting to farmers, including agriculture, horticulture, arboriculture, stock raising and kindred topics. The club has a membership of 200, the present officers of which, are—F. H. Van Eaton, president, and Ed. Gillum, secretary. The first officers of the club were—Jonathan Weaver, president; H. E. Grider, secretary, and C. A. Kingman, treasurer.

POST OFFICES.

SALINA.

The city of Salina, as originally surveyed and platted, was located on the southwest quarter of Section 12, and northwest quarter of Section 13, Township 14, south, Range 3, west of the sixth principal meridian. The founder of the town was W. A. Phillips, who succeeded in organizing a Town Company, of which he was president, and composed of the following members: W. A. Phillips, A. M. Campbell, James Muir, Robert Crawford and A. C. Spillman. The survey of the town was commenced in March, 1858, and was continued at intervals, until March, 1862, when it was completed. On March 30, 1859, the company was granted a charter by the Sixth Territorial Legislature of Kansas. After the company was organized, additional members were added from time to time, and on the 14th of February, 1862, Robert H. Bishop, Ransom Calkin and Rev. William Bishop were added as members. The plat of the survey was filed for record on the 14th day of April, 1862, and Salina takes its place on the map as one of the towns of Kansas. The town is beautifully located, and stands in the center of a rich and fertile valley, on the banks of the Smoky Hill River, just where, coming from the south, it makes a bend to the east. The town is located on both sides of the river, the greater part, including all the business portion, being on the west side. It is somewhat in doubt as to who built the first house in town, but from the statements of the earliest settlers, it will scarcely admit of a doubt that W. A. Phillips put up the first house ever erected in the city. It was a large log house and stood on what is now Iron avenue, between Santa Fe avenue and the river. Whatever doubt may exist as to who put up the first house, there is none as to who opened the first store; the credit for this being attributed to George Pickard, who opened a kind of general store, on a small scale, in a log house in the summer of 1858, and this was followed a few months after by another which was opened by A. M. Campbell in a small house on what is now Iron avenue. In 1859 another store was opened by H. L. Jones, and these three, Pickard, Campbell and Jones, were the pioneer business men of Salina. At that time the county was almost without settlement; what few settlers there were being located in and about what is now Salina. The chief trading of these stores was with the Indians, who came from all directions to the Smoky Hill valley to hunt. Robes and skins were the chief articles the red men would bring to trade, and these they would give in exchange for provisions, ammunition, and, occasionally, a little poor whisky. These robes and skins received from the Indians would be loaded up in wagons by the traders and hauled to Leavenworth or Kansas City, where they would be sold, when the merchants would load up again with goods and start back for Salina. About a dozen families included all the settlers in the county prior to 1860, and these were mostly located at Salina. Among these were W. A. Phillips and his brother, D. L., George Pickard, A. M. Campbell, James Muir, Robert Crawford, A. C. Spillman, H. L. Jones, John and Gothart Schipple, Mrs. Link, Israel Markley, Thomas Coonrad, Charles Holtzman and Simon Garlitz In 1860, a few additional settlers located in the town, and among these were Rev. William Bishop and his brother Robert, and Ransom Calkins. Settlers came in very slowly, and the war commencing early in 1861, immigration to the county virtually stopped, although a new comer would occasionally drop in at long intervals. The first attempt at anything like manufacturing in the county was a saw-mill erected at Salina on the Smoky, by W. A. Phillips, which was kept pretty busy for some time sawing the native timber into lumber for building purposes. In 1862, the people of the town were thrown into a state of great consternation by a too well founded report that hostile Indians were approaching from the west, massacreing all the white people they found. Some were inclined to pooh-pooh the idea, but when the ranchmen came into the town, after several of their number had been butchered, and confirmed the report, they discovered that it was a matter that required other action than mere pooh-poohing. The consternation became general, and a regular panic seized the community. Those who had settled east of Salina made for Junction City and Fort Riley, and those west and in the immediate neighborhood of Salina hastened to town. Seeing the danger that threatened them, and knowing the terrible results of an Indian massacre, which was likely to take place, they immediately set to work and built a stockade 50x150 feet, on the north side of what is now Iron avenue, nearly opposite where the Metropolitan Hotel now stands. These preparations were made none too soon; for the Indians, meeting with no opposition on their way, came on with a whoop; but seeing that the people of Salina were prepared to give them a warm reception, they gave the place a wide berth; and thus Salina escaped a massacre.

The town made but very little progress during the years of the war, and until the Kansas Pacific Railway was built in 1867 its growth was extremely slow. With the coming of the railroad came a stream of immigration and Salina pushed rapidly ahead. Prior to the advent of the railroad there was neither a schoolhouse nor church edifice in town, although there were several church organizations. A school had been taught, however, since as early as 1862, the first teacher being Miss Thacher, who taught in the small frame house on Iron avenue. Anticipating the railway, which was then being pushed towards Salina as rapidly as possible, W. A. Phillips, in December, 1866, had surveyed and laid off into lots "Phillips' Addition to Salina." Ante-dating this by a month, "Jones' Addition" was added, and in April, 1867, "Calkins' Addition" was added, followed in May of the same year by the "Depot Addition." In 1867 a two-story frame schoolhouse was built on the corner of Santa Fe avenue and Ash street, being the building now owned by C. T. Hilton, and by him used as a livery stable. The first teacher that taught in this school was Philip Wickersham. Now that a good schoolhouse was erected, churches soon followed, and in that same year, 1867, the Methodists built the first church in town, a small frame on Ash street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, being that now owned and occupied by the colored Methodists. With the coming of the railroad, a better class of buildings commenced to spring up, and instead of the original log cabins and board shanties, neat frame residences were erected. The first frame residence put up in town was by B. J. F. Hanna in 1868. From 1867 to 1869 the town advanced very rapidly. In 1867 C. R. Underwood built a grist and saw mill on the Smoky, at Salina, which was operated by both steam and water power. In 1869 the Baptists erected a very neat frame church, and many comfortable residences were put up, besides several very good stores. In 1870 there was a lull in immigration, but a great many very fine improvements were made in town, among which was the erection of quite a large and handsome Presbyterian Church. The business of the town increased rapidly, and as the country settled up, north, south, east and west, trade was greatly augmented. By 1871, Salina was quite noted as being one of the most flourishing towns in the State. The town was all life and everything in the business line was in the most flourishing condition. The town had grown to considerable proportions and could boast of some very fine buildings. The first building in town that can be said was used for hotel purposes was a frame building erected by W. A. Phillips, who occupied it for some time as a residence, when he sold it to H. L. Jones, who used it in the double capacity of a store and hotel for some time, when he in turn sold it to Hamlin & Wooley. The first building erected in town expressly for hotel purposes was the "Planters' House," which was built by T. L. Webster in 1866. As a hotel it has long since ceased to exist. In 1867, after the coming of the railroad, one Mrs. Emma Bickerdyck built a large frame hotel close to the depot, which still stands, but being about half a mile from the business portion of the city, and the railroad failing to draw business that way, its hotel career was short. In 1870, the people having previously voted bonds to erect a court house, a very fine stone county building was erected on the square, bounded by Elm street on the north, Park street on the south, Ninth street on the east, and Tenth street on the west. The building stands on a beautiful plat of ground, surrounded by a nice artificial grove of maple trees of seven or eight years' growth. The ground floor of the building is divided into county offices, and the upper floor is used for a court-room.

After the completion of the court house, J. M. Postlewait, in 1871, erected the Pacific House, at the corner of Ninth and Park streets. It is a large frame building, with a frontage of eighty-six feet on Park street, and 130 feet on Ninth street. It stands just across the street from the court house, and three blocks from the business heart of the city. The building and furnishing of this house was a great improvement to the city, and also of vast convenience to the traveling public. While these improvements were being made, others of less importance were going on, but none of a substantial character, excepting the two-story brick building erected on the west side of Santa Fe avenue, for a bank, now used by the First National Bank, and which was built in 1871 by John Geis & Co. The year 1871 had been one of great prosperity for Salina, and on Christmas day of that year everybody was feeling happy over their own individual prosperity and that of the city. In the midst of their felicity, however, just as they were about sitting down to partake of their Christmas turkey, the town was startled by the cry of "Fire!" The cry was taken up by people as they ran, and "Fire! Fire!" passed rapidly from street to street. The bells rang out the alarm, and many a Christmas dinner was left untouched. The fire originated in a saloon on the west side of Santa Fe avenue, and spread rapidly from building to building until it was checked by Geis' bank building, constructed of brick, and which had only been erected a few months previously. Some of the frame buildings south of the bank building were torn away to prevent the spread of the fire, but before it could be extinguished, several business houses, with the greater portion of their contents, were destroyed, entailing a loss of about $20,000, which was quite a blow to the young and prosperous town. Salina at that time was a city of the third class, having been so created in 1870, C. H. Martin being the first Mayor. An effort was made by the City Council to pass an ordinance, prescribing fire limits in the city, and to prohibit the erection of any buildings within said limits, except those constructed of either brick or stone, but, for some cause or other, the ordinance failed to pass. Although 1871 closed so disastrously, it was a prosperous year for Salina, and one of great improvement. Besides those buildings already mentioned as having been put up that year, four very elegant churches were erected, the Catholic, Methodist, Christian and Episcopalian. Of these, the two former are brick, and the two latter frame, but all are handsome edifices. The fire of December, 1871, had one good effect, in that it caused many of those who put up business houses afterwards, to use other material in their construction than wood. Thus in 1872, Hamlin & Wooley put up a fine stone building on the southwest corner of Iron avenue and Santa Fe avenue, which was the best improvement to the town up to that time, and is among the best buildings in the place yet. About the same time Oscar Seitz, who had been doing business in the town for a number of years, erected a two story brick building on Santa Fe avenue, nearly opposite to that erected by Hamlin & Wooley, the lower room of which he continues to occupy as a drug store. Adjoining this, to the north, and simultaneously with the Seitz building, the Ratcliffe Bros. erected one of a similar character, and both together make quite a fine appearance. During that year another church edifice was added to the number already built, by the Swede Evangelical Lutherans, a very neat frame structure. As indicative of the extent to which it was supposed the town would grow, it may be well to state that, in addition to the additions already mentioned, Bishop's was added in February, 1870, and Holland's in May of the same year. In June, 1872, the corporate limits were further enlarged by Geis' Addition, and in November of that year, they underwent further enlargement by the accession of Carrol's Addition. Bishop & Blodgett's Addition was added in June, 1874; Oak Dale Addition in August, 1878; Bube's Addition and Phillips' Second Addition in October, 1878; Berk's Addition in November, 1878; and Prescott's Addition in April, 1879. These are the additions to the city of Salina, as shown by the county records, and if there are any more the records fail to show them. The limits of the town are now sufficiently extended so that, so far as room is concerned, its growth need not be stinted.

In 1872 Salina became a cow-boy town, or a cattle trading point. The business men of the place had expended a good deal of money to secure the trade that would be derived from the town being made a trading point for cattle, but having secured it, the people soon discovered that it was not such a desirable thing to have after all. The trade in itself was good enough, and the business of the merchants in town was greatly increased thereby, but the town became infested with such a crowd of disreputable characters, both male and female, that whatever advantage was gained in trade was more than counterbalanced by loss in morals, and when the cattle trade moved westward two years afterwards, the citizens of Salina were more rejoiced at its departure than they were at its coming. The year 1873 was one of rapid advancement, and many good residences were put up, but the chief improvement that year was the erection of a large brick schoolhouse. The town had grown so rapidly that the frame schoolhouse erected in 1867 was totally inadequate to meet the demands of the community, and the people voted to issue $30,000 in bonds to erect a school building that would not only be sufficiently commodious, but would also be an ornament to the town. The building is among the finest in central Kansas, and not the least feature about it is the ample and beautiful grounds that surround it. The rooms are large and well ventilated, the halls and stairways are wide, affording excellent means of exit in case of fire or other disaster. It is substantially built, neatly finished, and the style of architecture is beautiful. In 1874, the residence of W. A. Phillips was destroyed by fire, and the Colonel was obliged to take up his abode in less pretentious quarters. He, however, the following year, erected a large brick residence, which, with its surroundings, is the finest in town, so that if he was the loser by the fire the city was the gainer. In 1875 also, C. R. Underwood & Co. built a large flouring mill, at a cost of $40,000, which is run by water power. In 1878, F. Goodnow & Co. erected a large steam flouring mill near the depot, at a cost of $75,000; and while these improvements were going on, Whitehead brothers, John Underwood and John A. Nelson erected a brick block, on the south side of Iron avenue, a little west of the bridge, containing three storerooms below, with office rooms above. More money was expended in improvements in 1875 than any year that preceded it. If 1875 was a year of great improvement, it was also one of some disaster. The effects of the grasshopper raid in 1874 were felt in all branches of business, and a good deal of uncertainty existed as to the future. In that year also another disastrous fire visited the town, by which a great deal of property was destroyed. Several buildings on the west side of Santa Fe avenue were wiped out by the conflagration, and likewise a large livery stable, in which thirty horses perished. The loss entailed was about $25,000. This fire had the effect of awakening the City Council and business men to a sense of the constant danger they were exposed to by having wooden buildings in the business portion of the city. An ordinance was passed prescribing fire limits, and forbidding the erection of any wooden buildings within said limits. In the following year, being 1876, a very handsome brick block was erected by Schwartz brothers, on the south side of Iron avenue, a little west of Santa Fe avenue. On account of the year in which it was built, it was named the Centennial Block, and about the same time a building similar in character was erected just beside it by the firm of Markland, Dodge & Moore. Nearly all the improvements made in the centennial year were confined to dwelling houses, of which a goodly number were erected, and among them many of the better class. The grandest improvement in town was made in 1877. This was the erection of the Opera House, a magnificent three-story brick building on the southeast corner of Seventh street and Iron avenue. The dimensions of the building are 48x100 feet; the ground floor being fitted up as a double store-room, the upper portion being finished off in opera house style, with stage, scenery and gallery. It is a magnificent building, and was put up and finished and furnished by a joint stock company, composed of the citizens of the place. The city, in 1878, advanced a grade, and was created a city of the second class, of which A. W. Wickham was the first Mayor. Up to that time the Pacific House was the only first-class hotel in town, but as already stated, it was located about three blocks from the business portion of the city. John Ericson conceived the idea of putting up a hotel more convenient to the business center, and the result of this conception was, that, in 1878, he erected a brick hotel on the west side of Santa Fe avenue, a little south of Iron avenue, to which he gave the name of "Grand Central." The following year witnessed the construction of the McPherson branch of the Kansas Pacific Railway, a branch that runs from Salina to McPherson, a distance of thirty-five miles. The construction of this branch road gave quite an impetus to building in town, and many brick buildings were erected during the year. Miller, Haggard & Peterson put up the "Commercial Block," a neat row of brick buildings, directly opposite the "Grand Central Hotel." Eberhardt & Sudendorf, and Briggs & Gebhart, erected together two brick buildings, side by side, on the east side of Santa Fe avenue, and opposite to these, two more were erected by A. F. Shute and J. C. Rash & Son. Another good improvement of that year was the erection of the Metropolitan Hotel, which was put up by W. P. Thacher. It is a neatly constructed brick building, and is located on the southwest corner of Seventh street and Iron avenue, on the opposite corner from the Opera House. At the close of 1879 the business portion of the city was commencing to make a very fine appearance, with its numerous brick stores and large plate-glass windows, while at the same time, the resident portion, especially in the southern part of town, gave evidence of rapid improvement in a number of very fine residences. The year 1880 kept pace with the one preceding it, and that year witnessed the erection of a large stone business house on the nrothwest corner of Santa Fe and Iron avenues. The building was erected by G. C. Kothe and Oscar Seitz, and is now occupied by the firm of Ober & Hageman as a dry goods and grocery house. Opposite to the "Centennial Block," on Iron avenue, Dr. Daily erected a brick block containing three store-rooms and apartments above. The church improvement that year was greatly advanced by the erection of a large brick edifice by the English Lutherans. It is a building that would be an ornament to any city, and is of beautiful design. From the time the large brick schoolhouse was built in 1873 the population of the city had increased so rapidly that, notwithstanding the spaciousness of the building, it was found to be too small to accommodate the number of school children in the city. To supply the demand for more room, bonds to the amount of $10,000 were voted, and with the money realized from these bonds a very neat two-story six-room brick schoolhouse was erected in the northern part of town almost opposite to the courthouse. The year 1880 was the one in which Salina reached its climax in the line of improvements, and since that time, little, if any, improvement has been made. Salina is a beautifully laid out town, with wide streets and avenues, and can boast of one of the handsomest parks in the State of Kansas. The park is named "Oak Dale," and is located on the east side of Smoky Hill river. It contains about fifty acres, the western boundary of which is formed by the river. The center of the park is a clear, open space, on which a half-mile track has been built, where horses can test their speed. Outside the track and all the way round, is a beautiful grove of large shade trees, and take it for all in all, it is one of the neatest parks in the State. The business of the place is represented by two auction and commission houses, five dealers in agricultural implements, three in boots and shoes, two in books and stationery, four bakeries, three banks, one store, exclusively clothing, four drug stores, two furniture stores, seven general merchandise, ten groceries, six hotels, two, the "Pacific" and "Metropolitan," being superior and the others inferior, four hardware, three jewelry stores, four bakeries, and four restaurants. The manufactories of the place are represented by two large flouring mills and one smaller one, a bed spring and wire mattress manufactory, a carriage and wagon factory, a foundry and agricultural implement works, and two cigar factories. There are six grain elevators in town, three lumber yards, two marble works, five blacksmith shops, four livery stables, and two wagon shops. There are ten church edifices in town, a courthouse, an opera-house, and two good school buildings. The press is represented by the Journal, Herald and Independent. The population of the city is estimated now, 1882, at 3,500.

CHURCHES, PRESS AND SOCIETIES.

The church growth of the county has kept pace with its progress in other directions. The first church organization in the county was effected in 1860, when Rev. William Bishop and Rev. A. T. Rankin perfected an organization of the Presbyterian Church. From this small beginning the church interest has grown until now there are seventeen church edifices in the county, and several organizations that hold service in schoolhouses or in halls. The church history of the county commences with the organization of the Presbyterian Church in 1860.

Presbyterian.—When this church was first organized it had but six members and the pastor was Rev. William Bishop. The church received but few accessions until after the close of the war, but all through that trying period it preserved its organization. With the growth in population its membership increased, and in 1870, they erected a very handsome frame edifice. The church has now a membership of 230, and its present pastor is Rev. W. A. Simkins. Its property is valued at $6,000. A large Sunday school is conducted in connection with the church, of which F. Robb is superintendent.

Methodist.—This church was organized in 1865, with twenty members. The first pastor was Rev. E. C. Chilson. In 1867, the organization erected a small wooden church building on Ash street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, which they used for worship until 1869, when it was sold to a number of individuals. Possession was not given for some two or three years afterward. Steps were immediately taken to erect a larger and more substantial building, and in 1873 a fine brick edifice was erected on Eighth street, the first service in which was held on Christmas Day of that year. The church has, at present, a membership of 290, and its pastor is Rev. J. A. Antrim. The property of the church is valued at $8,000. Its Sabbath school is largely attended, of which the superintendent is J. O. Wilson.

Catholic.—Was established in 1866, by Father De Mauritier, while engaged in missionary work in the West. Its beginning in Salina was very small, not exceeding twenty families in the entire county, most of whom resided in, or close to Salina. The first regular pastor was Rev. Father Fogarty, who was resident Father at Solomon City. They had no regular house in which to worship until 1871, when they built a brick church on the northeast corner of Iron avenue and Eighth street. The church has now a membership of 850, in which is included the Catholic families in nearly every township in the county. The present resident pastor is Father Maurer. The property of the church is valued at $11,500.

Episcopal.—Was organized in April, 1870, at the store-room of R. T. Watson. The membership was not large, by any means, but steps were immediately taken to erect a church, and in the following year a very neat frame edifice was completed on Ninth street. This church has now a membership of ninety, and the resident rector is Rev. J. W. Young. The property of the church is valued at $2,000.

English Lutheran. Was organized in 1868 by Rev. J. C. Young. To trace the early history of this church is somewhat difficult. The citizens who had purchased the frame church on Ash street of the Methodists, after the latter had surrendered possession, offered the free use of the building to any Protestant church organization that would furnish a minister who would conduct services in the German language. After some delay, the services of J. C. Young were secured, who preached alternately in German and English. After a time, the party who owned the building donated it to the German Lutherans. Mr. Young was continued as pastor, until succeeded in 1877 by Rev. A. J. Hartsock, and in the course of a few years the church became known as the English Lutheran. They occupied the little church on Ash street until 1880, when a much larger edifice was required, and during that year they completed one of the handsomest brick churches in Central Kansas. Having no further use for the little frame church on Ash street, it was sold to the Methodist Episcopal Church, colored. The membership of the church at present is 125, and the pastor is Rev. Mr. Kissle. The church has a good Sunday school, of which F. A. Smith is superintendent. The property of the church is valued at $10,000.

Baptist.—Was organized in the spring of 1868, with fifteen members, by Rev. J. R. Downer. In the following year, they built a very neat frame church in which they still continue to hold service. The church has a membership now of seventy, and the present pastor is Rev. A. M. Steward. The church property is valued at $3,000. The Sabbath school connected with the church is under the superintendency of L. Austin.

Swedish Lutheran.—Was organized in 1870 by Rev. Mr. Dahlsten. Two years afterwards they erected a fine frame edifice on Seventh street. The church has now a membership of fifty, and the pastor is Rev. A. M. Le Vean. The property of the church is valued at $2,000.

Lutheran Missionary.—This church organization was effected in 1877, by Rev. H. Blom organizing a little band of thirty members. The organization has had no regular pastor, the work being missionary, but in 1878 they erected a brick edifice on Seventh street. It now has a membership of forty. The property of the church is valued at $2,500.

Methodist Episcopal (colored).—Organized 1878, by Rev. W. Wright. They purchased in 1881 the small frame church on Ash street, built by the Methodists in 1867, where they still continue to worship. The church has a membership of forty, and continues under the pastoral charge of Rev. W. Wright. The church property is valued at $1,000.

The foregoing churches are all located in Salina, but, besides these, there are several others located at different points over the county. At Brookville the Methodists have a very fine church building and strong membership. In Dayton Township the Catholics have an organization and building. The Methodists in Walnut Township have an organization of sixty members, and a good church building valued at $1,500. In Smolan Township there is an organization of the Swedish Evangelical Church that numbers fifty members, and who own and occupy a small frame edifice for service. In Smoky View Township there are two church buildings, one, a small one, belonging to the Swedish Evangelical organization, and the other a magnificent frame building that was erected at a cost of $6,000, and which is the property of the Swedish Lutherans, the membership of which numbers 450. At Assaria the Evangelical Lutherans have a very fine church building, which they erected in 1878. This church has a membership numbering 160. There are also in the county several church organizations that hold service in school buildings and halls. The progress of the Church has kept pace with the other interests of the county. The aggregate church membership in the county is 3,265, being equal to about one-fifth the entire population.

Salina Herald.—This is the oldest newspaper in the county, and was established at Salina in 1866, by B. J. F. Hanna, who remained sole editor and proprietor until the 25th of March, 1882, when T. G. Nicklin, having purchased the paper and office two weeks previously, took possession, and under whose ownership and management the paper is at present conducted, he being sole editor and proprietor. It is a weekly paper, and under Mr. Hanna's management was an eight column folio. After Mr. Nicklin came into possession of the office, the paper was changed to a nine column folio, only two pages of which were printed in the office, the inside being what is known in newspaper parlance as "patent." In politics the paper is Republican, and has a circulation of 800.

Saline County Journal.—This paper was established in February, 1871, by W. H. Johnson and M. D. Sampson, who were sole editors and proprietors. It remained under this management until June, 1872, when Johnson sold out his interest to L. E. Sampson, brother to M. D. Sampson. The paper remained under the management of the Sampson Brothers until December 9, 1880, when L. E. sold his interest to M. D., who, since that time has been, and is at present, sole editor and proprietor. It is a four page, eight column, weekly paper, all the work upon it being done in the office. It is Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 1,500. In connection with the office, Mr. Sampson conducts a book and job printing establishment, where all kinds of book, job and blank work is executed.

Salina Independent.—This sheet has been but recently launched in the newspaper world, having been established in October, 1882, by W. H. Johnson, who is sole editor and proprietor. It is a four page, seven column weekly, with patent inside. It is Independent in politics, and has a circulation of 400.

Odd Fellows, Salina Lodge, No. 28, I. O. O. F., was instituted June 3, 1867, with ten charter members. The first officers of the lodge were—B. J. F. Hanna, N. G.; A. B. Chapman, V. G.; E. L. Norton, R. S.; Willis Kesler, P. S., and C. W. Tressin, treasurer. The lodge has now a large membership and the present officers are—G. F. Supple, N.G.; Ed. Smith, V. G.; L. O. Wight, R. S.; J. H. Gibson, P. S.; E. L. Norton, Treas.; R. H. Bishop, W.; Wm. Cole, Con.; F. Ferlin, O. G., and F. A. Smith, I. G.

Sinai Encampment, No. 18, I. O. O. F., was instituted July 25, 1871, with eight charter members. The officers were—H. N. Leonard, C. P.; B. J. F. Hanna, H. P.; E. L. Norton, S. W.; J. W. Sullivan, J. W.; and A. S. Norton, scribe. The present membership of the encampment is thirty-five, and the present officers are—L. M. Tuttle, C. P.; J. H. Gibson, H. P.; J. L. Norton, S. W.; J. R. Chapman, J. W.; E. L. Norton, scribe, and R. H. Bishop, treasurer. The Odd Fellows own the hall and building in which they meet.

Masons, Salina Lodge, No. 60, A., F. & A. M., was instituted November 19, 1866, with seven charter members. The first officers of the lodge were—G. G. Lowe, W. M.; R. D. Mobley, S. W.; B. S. Robinson, J. W. The lodge has now eighty-three members, the present W. M. being D. Whitehead and A. Bondi, secretary.

Salina Royal Arch Chapter, No. 18, A., F. & A. M., was instituted October 16, 1872, with fourteen charter members. The first of the chapter were—C. R. Underwood, H. P.; B. J. F. Hanna, E. K., and Oscar Seitz, E. S. The present membership is forty-four and the present officers are—J. D. M. Conrad, H. P.; Samuel Gradwohl, E. K., and T. S. Garver, E. S.

Askelon Commandery, No. 6, K. T., A. B. Dickinson, E.C.; D. Whitehead, recorder.

G. A. R., Salina Post, No. 27, G. A. R., was instituted September 11, 1882, with fourteen charter members. Officers—L. M. Tuttle, C.; Ed. Wittmann, S. C.; M. D. Sampson, J. C.; L. C. Hussey, O. of D.; Sweetland, O. of G.; F. A. Smith, Adjt.; D. Addison, S. M., and Enochs Lincoln, chaplain.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

D. J. ADDISON, Mayor Salina, was born March 17, 1848, in Randolph County, Ill., was a private in Company E, Thirty-eighth Illinois, was discharged February 7, 1865; came to Kansas 1867. WILLIAM A. PHILLIPS, is of Scottish birth, but immigrated with his father when a boy to Randolph County, Ill. On reaching man's estate he practiced law and edited a newspaper in Chester, Ill., and at the same time contributed to many newspapers and magazines. He wrote several books, among them "Scenes and Characters of Backwoods Life," "Paul Persimmon," and the "Conquest of Kansas." In the spring of 1855, he became a member of the New York Tribune staff, for which paper he had contributed for several years. In that year he went to Kansas as their Kansas correspondent and for several years after, and has often written editorials and other articles for it and other papers since. In 1857, he conceived the idea of founding a colony, and made a journey of many hundred miles, early in the spring of that year with a Mr. Smith, for a companion. He examined the valleys of the Smokey Hill, Solomon, Republican and Blue rivers, and from these observations determined on the location near where Salina now stands. In February, 1858, he made the location of the town site and it was surveyed and building at once commenced. His first two companions in fixing the town site were A. M. Campbell and James Muir. These were reinforced by many other colonists. The original town company as first organized was composed of Messrs. William A. Phillips, A. M. Campbell, James Muir, A. C. Spilman, Robert Crawford and David L. Phillips, to these were added Rev. Wm. Bishop, Ransom Calkins and Dr. Lull. The title of the town site was obtained in 1864. Col. Phillips, in addition to being the general business agent for the company, met the greater portion of the expense incident to its early history. In 1858 he had a large double log house built for a hotel. It stood on the southwest corner of Iron avenue and Fifth street. He also placed the first store or stock of goods in town. There was no store nearer than Junction City at that time. In 1859 he purchased and hauled to Salina a grist and upright and circular saw mill. In that year he built a frame hotel building on the northwest corner of Santa Fe and Iron avenues, hauling the pine lumber, doors, window sash, etc., from Kansas City and Leavenworth. He at different times has erected many other buildings in town, and has constantly, by money influence and labor striven to build up the town he had founded. When the war broke out he at once enlisted, raised the Third Kansas and tendered it to President Lincoln and it was accepted. On its consolidation he was appointed by President Lincoln, Major of the First Indian Regiment which he accepted as the command was marching immediately to the front. In July, 1862, he was promoted to Colonel of the Third Indian, a Cherokee Regiment. A month later he had command of the Indian Brigade. That command was composed of civilized Indians, who were uniformed and drilled like white troops. It contained two regiments of Cherokees, one of Creeks, with battalions and companies of Seminoles, Uches, Natches, Shawnees, Delawares and Osages. At the close of 1862, Colonel Phillips under instructions from Washington, reorganized the Indian command on a more thorough and intelligent plan. January 5, 1863, he received from General Schofield, command of a division in the field, including the Indian troops, parts of the Sixth and Ninth Kansas, Hopkins' Battery, the First Arkansas Battery, the First Arkansas Cavalry, and First and Second Arkansas Infantry, the Tenth Illinois and Third Wisconsin and other commands. In the same year he received command of two Districts, the western half of Arkansas and the Indian Territory. He continued in command of a separate army in the field until the war closed, and took part in nearly all the engagements that were fought in that country; the command fighting its way down through south and west Missouri, Arkansas, and the Indian Territory, until ordered to hold the line of that river. He made several expeditions from that point south, and was generally successful as a Commander. He received three slight wounds, none of which forced him to leave the field, and had four horses killed under him in battle. At the close of the war he returned to build up Salina, which at that time looked somewhat dilapidated. The building of the Pacific Railway was secured and from that time Salina grew steadily. Col. Phillips has held several public positions of distinction. He took part in all the early conventions in the State, was a member of the Legislature, spokesman of the Kansas Delegation in Chicago, in 1860, was elected to the Forty-third Congress, having received the nomination of the Republican party by acclamation; was re-elected to the Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Congresses, serving with distinction. The most notable public measures supported by him were amendments to the land laws, timber culture, postal savings banks and postal telegraphy, the retention of legal tender and restoration of silver coinage.

BROOKVILLE.

The above caption is the name of a thriving, prosperous town containing about 600 inhabitants, and which is the last station west in Saline County on the Kansas Pacific Railway. The town was laid out and surveyed by the Kansas Pacific Railway Company in April, 1870. It is located in the south part of Section 3, Township 15 south, Range 5, west of the sixth principal meridian. In June, 1870, the limits were enlarged by adding a small addition, and in September following quite an extensive addition was added. It was made the western terminus of the second division of the road, and among the first buildings erected was the round house and shops of the company. The land on which the town is located being the property of the railway company all the assistance the company could render in building up the place was given. With this assistance, and supported by a good surrounding country, the town had for a time a pretty rapid growth. It is a smart, neat looking little town, but aside from its growth there are not very many striking incidents associated with its history. The fact of its being the end of a division of the road attracted a good many people to the place, but to John Crittenden is due the credit of being the first bona fide settler in town. During the first year of its existence the town had grown so rapidly that in the second year it became a city of the third class by operation of law. The records of the place do not show who had the honor of being the first Mayor, but all agree in saying that it was William Brownhill. Aside from the necessary buildings erected by the railroad company the first house in town was put up by M. P. Wyman, and the first store in the place was opened by George Snyder. Nothing of a very startling nature occurred to excite or agitate the people until December, 1874, when on the third day of that month a tragedy took place that horrified the entire community. At that time one Barney Bohan kept a saloon in the town, and on the day mentioned two brothers, William and Thomas Anderson, who were engaged in business in the place, were in Bohan's saloon, but what passed between them to lead to the tragedy will never be known. Whatever it was, however, or what was the nature of the provocation that Bohan had, if any, certain it is that he shot and killed the two Anderson brothers in his saloon. Excitement over the double murder ran very high and loud threats were made of lynching, which would have been put into effect but that Bohan was hurried off to Salina, where he was lodged in jail. The placing him in jail did not prevent an effort from being made to lynch him, and one night a large party came to the jail with ropes already prepared to carry out the mandates of Judge Lynch, but the Sheriff having been informed of what was going to take place took the necessary steps to prevent the prisoner from being lynched, which he succeeded in doing. Bohan was tried at the following term of court for the murder of William Anderson and convicted, but an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, where the case was reversed. He was next placed upon trial for the murder of Thomas Anderson, found guilty and convicted. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for life, but after being there about four years he went insane and is now in tne State Insane Asylum. Brookville is a live, prosperous town, whose people are enterprising and energetic. The business of the place is represented by four general merchandise stores, one furniture store, one hardware store, one jeweler, one millinery, one wagon shop, one boot and shoe store, one drug store, one flour, feed and produce, one cigar and tobacco store, one elevator, one restaurant, one flouring mill, two hotels, one livery and feed stable, and two lumber yards; while the Transcript looks after the interest of all and the community in general. The Methodists have a very neat church building in town, and the Congregationalists quite a strong organization but no edifice. For a small town Brookville has a schoolhouse far superior to many in larger cities. It is a handsome brown stone building, neatly finished, elegant furnished with seats, desks, etc., and well ventilated. The town gives evidence of life, energy, and progress; and, though modest in its claims, does a much greater business than many places much more pretentious.

Brookville Transcript.—This paper is established and published at Brookville, a thriving town, located on the Kansas Pacific Railway, in the west part of the county. The paper was started in November, 1879, by Albin & Tupper, under whose joint management it was conducted for a short time, when Aldin retired, leaving Tupper as sole editor. In 1880 Tupper was succeeded by F. E. Jerome, who issued but three or four numbers of the paper, when Iams & Simons took possession. In 1881 Simons withdrew from the management, and Iams continued in charge until the latter end of the year, when the possessorship was transferred to W. L. Evans, where it still remains, with F. J. Ulsh as sole editor and publisher. It is a four page, seven-column, weekly, republican in politics, and has a circulation of about 600.

BAVARIA.

This is the name of a small place on the line of the Kansas Pacific Railway, nine miles west of Salina. The place was originally known as Hohneck, a man by the name of Ernst Hohneck, who settled in that locality in 1865, having, in February, 1871, surveyed and laid out a town to which the name Hohneck was given. This place was afterwards vacated, and in October, 1877, E. F. Drake had twenty-five acres of the east half of the northwest quarter of Section 34, township 14, surveyed and laid off into town lots, and to this place was given the name of Bavaria. In 1879 the town site was enlarged by adding Hohneck's Addition. The place has not grown very rapidly, and does not contain more than 150 inhabitants at the utmost. It is without either church building or hotel, although the Congregationalists have a strong organization. The nearest approach to a hotel in the village is a boarding house kept by Mrs. S. Terry. There is one drug store in the place and one general store. The general store is owned by John Geissler, who also runs a coal and lumber yard. Two grain elevators, a wagon shop, a blacksmith shop, a schoolhouse, and a few dwelling houses make up the village. A syrup factory has been recently established at the place by Denton & Geissler, which adds considerably to the importance of Bavaria.

ASSARIA.

Assaria is the name of a small village on the McPherson branch of the Kansas Pacific railway, about twelve miles south of Salina. It is surrounded by a fine farming country, which is occupied by thrifty farmers. The village was laid out by a town company in June, 1879, and is located on Section 12, Township 16 south, Range 3, west of the sixth principal meridian. The president of the company was Highland Fairchild. The village contains one church, one schoolhouse, one hotel, two general merchandise stores, one drug store, two grain elevators, one lumber yard and a blacksmith shop. The population of the place does not exceed 125.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOSEPH DUNCAN, merchant, was born in Cleveland, Ohio, September 18, 1851; was reared and educated in his native State, gaining considerable mercantile experience. Came to Kansas in 1870, and located at Brookville, and was Assistant Postmaster for two or three years, under Leslie and Hogan, the first Postmasters at this point. In 1874, started the lumber and coal business, and in 1875 was put in as manager, with full control of the large store here, called Beebe & Co., though still retaining the lumber business, which he hired some one to take charge of for him. In 1878, bought a livery barn near the store, and still continues that business in connection with the store and lumber yard. In 1882, he took in a partner and bought out the firm of Beebe & Co., and moved the stock to the City Hall building, where they carry a stock of general merchandise, under the firm name of Duncan & Cary. BROWN COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

BROWN County is situated in the northeastern portion of Kansas, being located in the first tier of counties, from Nebraska. Doniphan County lies to the east, Atchison and Jackson counties to the south, and Nemaha County to the west.

Brown County has, according to the Government survey, two per cent. of bottom land and ninety-eight per cent. of upland. It is also divided into eight per cent. of forest and ninety-two per cent. of prairie. The average width of the bottom lands along the line of streams is one mile.

The varieties of timber found in the county are: Walnut, oak, hickory, cottonwood, elm, linn, box elder, soft maple, sycamore, willow, mulberry, cherry, hackberry, buckeye, honey locust, crab apple and plum. The average width of natural timber belts does not exceed one mile.

The principal streams of the county are the Walnut, running in a general northeasterly course and emptying into the Nemaha River, the Delaware, running southeast into the Kansas River, the Wolf River southeasterly into the Missouri, Roy's Creek northeast to the Nemaha, Gregg's southeast into the Delaware, Little Delaware southeast to the Delaware, Spring and Mulberry creeks run southeast into Walnut Creek, Pony Creek northeast.

Water is found at various depths but rarely at more than forty or less than twenty feet depth.

Coal is found in thin veins at different points, but has never as yet been successfully worked.

Stone is abundant throughout the county, both limestone and sandstone appearing frequently. As a rule this stone crops out of the surface and can be obtained without great trouble or expense. It is used for foundations, and in many instances for entire buildings.

Geo. W. Bubach, of Hiawatha, states that the change in the climate of Brown County during the past thirteen years has been marked in several particulars. First in the formation of dew; whereas the absence of dew in the months of February and March formerly proved detrimental to the growth and luxuriance of evergreens—arbor-vitae (red cedar), Norway spruce, etc., and also to small shrubbery, there is now a heavy form[illegible]f dew through those months. Th[illegible] also are less violent than d[illegible] earlier years of settlement, an[illegible]ifference between the climate and that of States farther east is noted in regard to spring frosts. In the more eastern States a cold raw day in spring is usually followed by a heavy frost the next morning, but here at the close of a cold day, as the wind goes down, the temperature generally rises, and the fruit is saved from destruction by frost. Mr. Bubach is confident that Kansas will eventually be one of the finest fruit growing States in the Union.

NAMING THE COUNTY.

The first Territorial Legislature of 1855 districted a large part of the new territory into counties, and assigned names for all. In all places where the name of the county appears that year, it is spelled Browne. In the report of 1875 of the Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, the statement was made that the county was named in honor of Hon. Albert G. Brown, of Mississippi, who was a United States Senator at the time of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. This statement was backed by a letter from Judge F. G. Adams, an old resident of Kansas, who says:

> "I furnished you the information for the item in your report upon the authority of Hon. John Martin, of Topeka, who was a clerk in the Legislature during which the county was originally established and named—the session of 1855—the first territorial session, held at Shawnee Mission, in Johnson County.
>
> Mr. Martin's recollection was quite clear on the point, and his information was so explicit that I had no doubt of its correctness. Since seeing Major Morrill's letter to you, I have made further inquiry on the subject of Mr. Alex. S. Johnson and Mr. H. D. McMeekin, of this city, both of whom were members of that first Territorial Legislature. They fully agreed with Mr. Martin, that the county was named in honor of Albert G. Brown, of Mississippi, as stated in your report. In respect to the orthography of the name, I have examined, and find the following facts:
>
> The act of 1855, 'defining the boundaries of the counties of Kansas,' gives the spelling Browne. It is so in the published statutes and journals, and so in the enrolled bill preserved in the Secretary of State's office.
>
> But it does not so occur in the enrolled bills of the second session of the Legislature, held in 1857, commencing at Lecompton, January 4 of that year. In the enrolled bills of that second session the final e is dropped from Brown County. This is so in an act redefining the boundaries of the several counties of the Territory, and the same is true as to all of the enrolled bills of that session, including one redistricting the Territory for legislative purposes. But in the published statutes of that session, 1857, the name is invariably printed with the final e—following the statutes of 1845.
>
> The enrolled bill is the highest authority of variance like this. It was then the Legislature of 1857 that changed the orthography from Browne to Brown. The latter orthography has since been followed in Kansas statutes.
>
> Major Morrill was a member of the House of Representatives at the third legislative session, and the first page of the House journal of that session shows that he appeared as the member from the Fourth and Fifth districts, embracing Brown and Nemaha counties—the final e being omitted in the journal as in all the laws and proceedings of that session.
>
> Albert G. Brown's name was not spelled with a final e. If, then, Messrs. Johnson, Martin and McMeekin are correct, as they doubtless are, in their recollection, that the Legislature of 1855 intended to honor the Mississippi Senator, by giving his name to the county, a clerical error was made in the enrollment of the bill—an error which went into the printed statutes of that and the succeeding sessions, and so into the early records of the county. There was no member of the Legislature from Doniphan named Brown, nor from that part of the Territory, during these early sessions. Brown was attached to Doniphan at the first session, and detached at the second. In the act detaching, it was named Brown, without the e.
>
> The Legislature, at its second session, was Pro-slavery, and could not in dropping the e have made the change for the purpose of honoring old John Brown. No formal act in regard to the name was ever passed, other than those of the two Pro-slavery Legislatures. The succeeding Legislatures in acts in which the same occurs have simply followed the orthography fixed by the acts of 1857.
>
> It is not singular that Major Morrill should have fallen into error in this matter. Doubtless he had not at the time taken notice of the precise facts, John Brown's 'trail' crossed Brown County. It is a settled tradition in that section that the county was named after the old martyr. It gives me no pleasure to dispel the error."

This theory seems improbable for many reasons, but chiefly from the fact that the final e appears in the records of the first two Legislatures, and not at a later date. It is hardly to be believed that the law makers did not know the old hero's name to a letter. Among a large class of the early settlers, the opinion that the county was named in honor of Hon. O. H. Browne, was very generally received. Browne was a member of the Legislature in 1855, when the counties were laid out and named, and that body designated the new counties by the names of its own members. From a letter of Dr. J. H. Stringfellow, now of St. Joe, Mo., and a member of the Legislature of 1855 from Atchison, is taken the following extract, which seems to be conclusive:

> "There is an error regarding the name of Brown County which should be corrected, as it is likely to become a part of the future history of Kansas. I am not surprised that the facts have become confused, as so long a time has elapsed, and such tremendous events have intervened since their occurrence.
>
> The name of the county was originally Browne, after a very brilliant and very eccentric member of the House at the time, O. H. Browne, of the then Third Representative District, and a resident of what is now Douglas County, where he died some few years since. There were several counties named after members of the one or the other of the two houses, viz: Johnson, after Rev. Thomas Johnson, a member of the Council; Lykins, after Rev. David Lykins, of the Council, an ex-Indian Missionary; Coffey, after A. M. Coffey, of the Council from Kentucky; Anderson, after Joseph C. Anderson, of the House; Marshall, after F. I. Marshall, of the House.
> Of the above gentlemen, I think only two are now living—F. I. Marshall, now of Colorado, an enterprising, intelligent man, and highly respected; and J. C. Anderson, now, I think, of Kentucky, a very intelligent lawyer, and all of them men of unblemished personal character."

In addition to this, there have been published letters from various members of the first Territorial Legislature, and all agree that O. H. Browne, who died a few years ago, was the godfather of the county. The reason for the dropping of the final e has never been satisfactorily explained, but as it appears in all the records of the Pro-slavery Legislature, and in none of those of the Free-state body, the presumption that some long forgotten political project was at the bottom of the change is by no means improbable.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

Prior to the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill there was, as far as is known, no settlement of whites in this county. Wandering hunters had passed through on their excursions and may have been enticed by the abundance of game in the neighborhood and other favoring circumstances to halt for a considerable length of time, yet permanent settlement was unthought of. Long trains of "prairie schooners" winding along the divides over the old California trail passed near where Hiawatha now stands and the Indian bands scoured the level prairies and pitched their taipes at innumerable points, yet none thought of continuous residence.

The earliest records state that Thurston Chase and James Gibbons staked claims on Wolf Creek on May 11, 1854, and made some small improvements, but returned to the East in less than a month. Two weeks later a party composed of C. H. Isely, Peter and Christ Luginbuhl left St. Joseph for an exploring trip through this part of the country. The second day's travel brought them to a point a few miles east of the site of Hiawatha, where they camped near a small stream just before nightfall. With night came a storm which pelted and drenched them to a disheartening extent. To add to their troubles the discovery of a band of mounted Indians was made by the gleam of the lightning. In the morning the Indians had disappeared but the party were more than willing to abandon their venture, and made good time back to St. Joseph. In June of the same year W. C. Foster came to Brown County, but passed through and settled in the eastern part of Nemaha County, having been informed that this section was a part of the Indian Trust Lands. On learning his error he removed the same fall to Brown County where he still lives.

From this time forward the tide of pioneers poured into the fertile country and before the close of 1854 the farms of the newcomers dotted the land in every direction. From Major E. N. Morrill has been obtained a partial list of those who came to Brown County during this period. E. R. Corneilison and Wallace Corneilison August 3; Thomas Brigham, Henry Gragg, Isaac Sawin, Marcellus Sawin, John, William and King Belk, J. L. Wilson, William and Thomas Duncan, B. F. Partch, Jacob Englehart and Benjamin Winkles.

The fall and winter of 1854-55 was one of those rare, genial seasons which occasionally come to Kansas, and the tide of immigration was unchecked. From this time dates the erection of the residences of many of the substantial settlers of the county—Amasa Owen, J. K. Bunn, Henry Smith, Stephen Hughes and his wife (who is said to have been the first white woman in Robinson Township) and a host of others whose claims to the remembrance of posterity have been forgotten.

In the spring of 1855 a Settler's Protective Association, or Claim Club, was formed by the settlers on Walnut Creek for the purpose of enforcing the rights of those who had staked out claims and were bona fide settlers. This was, it will be remembered, in the year of the border ruffian or bogus legislature excitement, when armed Missourians took possession of the polls and elected a legislature to suit the views of themselves and Pro-slavery friends in Kansas. Such proceedings aroused, as they well might, a sense of insecurity in the possession of claims, and the natural determination to make, by a sense of innate justice, laws of their own. Matters, however, never came to a serious head, and beyond quiet enforcement of the law, there was no incident worth preservation. Coupled, however, with the law relative to claims, was one relative to the sale of "fire water" to the Indians, which brought about an incident strongly characteristic of the times and the men. The story, as related by Hon. E. N. Morrill, is as follows:

> The first trial for violating this code took place at the house of Jesse Padon—a small log-hut which all the settlers prior to 1862 will remember as standing on the banks of the Walnut, near Schmidt's saw-mill. Complaint was made that Robert Boyd and Elisha Osborn had been selling whisky to the Indians. The settlers, sixteen in number, had gathered with the firm determination to enforce their laws at all hazards; but one in the whole settlement was absent, and he was too ill to attend. When they were ready to proceed, E. R. Corneilison called their attention to the fact that the accused were not present, and asked that they be sent for. This was summarily overruled, and the trial went on. Witnesses were examined; the testimony was brief and to the point, and after a very short deliberation a verdict of guilty was rendered, and it was decided that the stock of liquors of these men should be destroyed, and that they should pay a fine of $20 and leave the county at once. Padon was appointed to carry out the sentence, and the others all went along to assist in enforcing the law. The house in which Boyd & Osborn kept their liquors stood at the edge of Pilot Grove, about three miles from Padonia. When the squad arrived at the house of the accused they were called out and informed that they had been tried, convicted and sentenced, and that the officers of the law were then and there prepared to enforce the order. They replied that they would cheerfully give up their liquors and pay the fine, but begged not to be forced to leave their homes. They also promised faithfully that they would never again be guilty of a like act. After the party had duly considered the matter and taken a "snifter" all around, they concluded that it was too bad to waste such valuable property; so the parties paid the fine of twenty dollars, promised to sell no more to the Indians, and were allowed to retain their liquors and remain at their homes. The twenty dollars were equally divided among the posse, each receiving $1.25 for his day's work, and all returned to their homes.

Two years later a claim club was formed at Hiawatha. This year (1857) saw an influx of great numbers of speculators who took claims, and after hiring the erection of a shanty and the breaking of a few acres of land, returned. These men were sometimes not over nice in choosing their lands with reference to the right of predecessors, hence arose the need of a body with power to make good its claims. It was no uncommon thing in this year to see as many as fifty speculators hanging about the Benton House, the only building in the town, awaiting for the completion of work on their claims.

The first business house erected in this county, was a cross-roads store, built in 1857, by M. L. Sawin, near the old Carson schoolhouse. The first recorded marriage was that of Hiram Wheeler and Eliza E. Root, which took place on July 30, 1857. This was followed in September by that of J. Roberts and Miss Sarah McCready, and of Captain John Schilling and Miss Susan Meisenheimer.

The first child born in the county was Isaac Short, who saw the light in August, 1855.

The first fourth of July celebration in the county, took place in 1857, on the farm of John Roe, on Mulberry Creek. Speeches were made by W. C. Foster, D. McFarland, W. G. Sargent and others, and the crowd of about two hundred had a highly patriotic and very good time.

The same summer religious services were held on the farm of E. H. Niles, and a Sabbath school was organized by Mr. David Peebles. A school was taught near Robinson the same year by David Guard, of Indiana.

The first postoffice in the county was that at Claytonville, established August 8, 1858, with George E. Clayton as Postmaster. Prior to this time there had been postal service of a private character, established in the summer of 1857, to supply the pressing need of news from the East, felt by all the settlers. Iowa Point, in Doniphan County, was the nearest postoffice, and Philip Weiss was hired by the settlers to go there weekly with a requisition for their letters. For this duty two dollars a trip was paid, and the carrier eked out his income by carrying passengers and freight. A postal route from St. Joseph to Marysville, Kan., had been ordered in 1855, and this would have supplied Highland and Hiawatha, but it was not put in operation until 1858.

The rapid growth of the county in 1857, led to the establishment of a number of postoffices, of which the following is a list: Claytonville, George E. Clayton, Postmaster, August 8; Mount Roy, Shelton Duff, Postmaster, September 2; Padonia, Orville Root, Postmaster, October 20; Hamlin, Edward H. Niles, Postmaster, December 5; Carson, M. L. Sawin, Postmaster, December 9. The following year, Poney Creek, Robinson and Hiawatha, were established, after which the war broke out, and no postoffices were created until 1864.

INDIAN LANDS.

The Iowa Trust lands, held in trust for the Iowa tribe of Indians, embraced several thousand acres of the best lands of Brown County. Early in 1857, as the tide of immigration began to pour into the county, it became evident that a portion, at least, of these lands must pass to the possession of the whites. They were therefore condemned by the order of the Secretary of the Interior, and advertised for sale at public auction. On June 4, 1857, they were put upon the market, and, owing to a sort of furor which had arisen for their possession, brought very high prices. Little immediate settlement ensued from this sale, as the buyers were largely speculators. On the other hand many who had squatted upon them previously under the impression that they were free government lands, left at once. It was several years before the lands were permanently occupied.

The original reservation of the Kickapoo tribe occupied parts of Brown, Atchison, and Jackson counties, and included a territory of about the space of a full sized county. It now embraces about eight congressional townships. The treaty with the tribe by which they gave up part of their possessions was made June 28, 1862, and was ratified on May 28, 1863. By this act, the Central Branch, Union Pacific Railway, obtained possession of something over 125,000 acres of land, lying principally in Brown County. For this the Kickapoos received the government price of $1.25 per acre. During 1866 the lands were advertised for sale, but it was not until April 13, that the first sale was made. Then came a rush for this part of the county and rapid settlement followed.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

As early as 1860, an effort to secure a railway from St. Joseph, Mo., through the northern tier of counties was made, and four miles of track was built between Ellwood and Wathena, in Doniphan County. Work was stopped the following year by the breaking out of the war, and for five years the scheme lay in abeyance. In 1866 a bill granting 125 000 acres of land to the Northern Kansas Railway passed the Legislature. On May 12th of the same year a meeting was held at Hiawatha, and Samuel Lappin was elected president, F. H. Drenning, secretary, W. B. Barnett, treasurer, and D. E. Ballard, land agent of the company. The following gentlemen were elected Directors: E. N. Morrill, Samuel Lappin, F. H. Drenning, W. B. Barnett, D. E. Ballard, Thomas Osborn, Samuel Speer, George Graham, J. E. Smith, J. D. Brumbaugh, and E. C. Manning.

Three days later an election to decide the question, "Shall the people of Brown County subscribe $125,000 to the capital stock of the Northern Kansas Railway?" was held, and resulted in the defeat of the proposition. On June 16, 1866, an amended proposition asking for bonds to the amount of $100,000 was carried by a majority of 102. Shortly after the Northern Kansas was merged in the St. Jospeh & Denver City Railway. This railway company was not, however, ready to build at once, and the matter lay in abeyance until several years later. On January 5, 1869, a request was received by the County Commissioners for a slight modification of the contract, so that the bonds of the county might accrue to the railway as the road was constructed and not be reserved until its completion. This proposal was submitted to the people at the general election of the same year, and resulted in a vote of 422 for, to 288 against the measure. In accordance with this vote Hon. E. N. Morrill, then County Clerk, was ordered on April 14, 1870, to subscribe $100,000 to the capital stock of the railway company, which was done. The road was completed the following year, trains running to Robinson in February, and to a temporary depot near Hiawatha in March.

It is of rare occurrence that a railway in a single year makes all arrangements for right of way, for its relations with cities and villages en route, and completes its track of more than a hundred miles in a single year. Yet this has been done by the Missouri Pacific. In July, 1881, the project of running an extension from Atchison, Kan., to Omaha, Neb., was first broached. On July 31, a petition signed by two-fifths of the resident taxpayers was presented to the County Commissioners, calling for a special election to determine whether the county should subscribe for the $10,000 of the stock of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company. In accordance with this petition an election in the several townships was ordered for August, 1881. On August 20 the election was held simultaneously in Mission and Padonia, and a week later in Hiawatha and Washington townships. This resulted in favor of the proposal in all but Padonia Township, and it was accordingly ordered that the County Clerk for the county subscribe the required amount to the Railway Company, issuing to pay therefor ten bonds of $10,000 each, having twenty years to run, and payable at the fiscal agency of the State of Kansas in New York City.

In the latter part of May, 1882, the new line was completed from Hiawatha to Omaha, and the link between Atchison and the former place was nearly finished. It then was decided that a freight division should be made either at Hiawatha or Falls City, and Col. Everest, attorney for the railway, made overtures to both places looking toward the location of the round house and shops of the road. Meetings were held at Hiawatha, and the demands of the railway in return for the location of these buildings stated. They were in brief the relinquishment of the stock of the company, and the donation of a long and narrow strip of ground suitable for side tracks and buildings. After some discussion of this proposal it was acceded to and a committee appointed to draw up a contract for the county. Land to the amount of twenty acres, lying north of the old depot was purchased at a cost of $2,200, and a deed of the same transmitted to the officers of the Missouri Pacific. The land will be at once put in shape, and the construction of the buildings be begun. It is hard to estimate the amount of benefit accruing to the town from this action, which brings an immediate increase of population of at least 200 and sets afloat each month a large amount of money. With the increase of the business of the road will come more workmen and more trade for the merchants of the town, and it would not be surprising to see, ten years hence, a population of railroad men only of a thousand people.

THE GRASSHOPPERS.

"The year we were grasshoppered" is a stock reminiscence of all who lived west of the Missouri as early as the close of the war. In this county these pests failed to put in an appearance prior to 1866 In August of that year, however, the rumor of their approach was freely circulated, and on the seventh of the next month the van of the great army touched the western line of the county. Three days later the grasshoppers reached the vicinity of Hiawatha, and a day later passed beyond it. Behind them stretched the bare, blistered earth denuded of vegetation and parched in the summer sun. In the cornfields were seen the stripped corn stalks with the pendant ears nibbled and oftentimes half eaten; green leaves, grasses and everything of that nature had vanished. Luckily the ears of corn were so far advanced as to present less attractive food than in the milk stage, and, although injured, the crop was by no means totally destroyed, and the farmers had the consolation that it might easily have been far worse.

The damage of the fall was but a tithe of the mischief done, for the eggs, which had been deposited in every convenient spot, produced in the spring a countless host of young which foraged for about a month, and then left en masse to be seen no more that year. This exodus took place in June, and those who had lost their crops were enabled to replant in time to yet realize a good harvest.

Two years later these pests made a second appearance but did no great damage either in the fall or in the succeeding fall.

For five years thereafter the county saw nothing of the "Pride of the West," as a local paper dubbed these voracious destroyers. But in 1874 they reappeared from the West and made a clean sweep from the Rockies to the Missouri river. This had been a very dry season, and barely half a reasonable crop could have been harvested, but none of the farmers were called upon to go through the formality of harvesting. The work of devastation did not stop here, but was continued on the orchards, special attention being given to apple and peach trees. Leaves of any sort seemed to be fish in the net of these things of universal appetite, but in some cases, as recorded by a writer of the time, the fruit was also destroyed or badly eaten. The bark of the trees was sampled, and in some instances so thoroughly as to completely girdle the tree and destroy it. Major Morrill says: "Tomato plants, onions and even tobacco plants were utterly destroyed. Again they laid their eggs in immense numbers, the ground being literally perforated by them. Heavy freight trains on the railroads were frequently delayed for hours by their gathering on the track in large numbers, the wheels crushing them and forming an oily, soapy substance." This picture it must be remembered is drawn, not by one who has made a failure of his life in Kansas, and wishes a valid excuse for leaving, but by one who can safely be called the most successful man of the county, or even of this part of Kansas.

The farmers of the country do not seem to have very fully understood the modus operandi of their foes, for the following spring they planted large fields of grain without the least apprehension of danger from grasshoppers. With the coming of spring and sunny days came a change that altered the velvety green of the fields to a plain dirt color and swept away the young wheat as clearly as a tornado could have done. Before the first of June the loss of all grain was nearly completed, and shortly after the grasshoppers took wing and disappeared. The work of replanting was at once begun, although the hope of getting a full crop was small. It was Hobson's choice, however, and a large acreage was put under cultivation. How anxiously the farmers watched the weather may be imagined. But when the months swung around and harvest time showed a plentiful supply, the hardships of the early summer were nearly forgotten.

COUNTY MATTERS.

The order for the first Territorial election was issued at a meeting of the County Commissioners held September 17, 1855, in Doniphan County. Browne was organized as a municipal township with provision for the election of a delegate to Congress. William C. Foster, William Parket and E. W. Short, were appointed Judges of Election, and the place of holding the same was at the house of W. C. Foster, on the South Fork of the Nemaha. The election took place October 1, 1855, and resulted in the casting of four votes—all for J. W. Whitfield as Delegate to Congress. A year later Whitfield received sixteen votes as delegate and X. K. Stout, B. O. Driscoll and T. W. Waterson, seventeen votes each, as members of the Territorial Legislature, although all the latter three resided in Doniphan County. The third election held in the county took place on June 13, 1857, and was called to select delegates to the Constitutional Convention at Lecompton. At this election the counties of Brown and Nemaha formed an election district, and Cyrus Dolman receiving forty-four votes against thirty-six cast for Henry Smith, was chosen delegate. The growth of the county, was, according to this showing, very slow, but it must be remembered that the fierce fight between the Pro-slavery and Free-state forces was in progress; that the Free-state or Anti-slavery party refused to vote, and that this vote of eighty ballots, was no criterion of the actual number of legal voters in the county. At the regular fall election of this year, held on October 5, the Free-state men were out in force and brought out a full vote of all in the county. The total vote at this time was two hundred and eight; of which the Free-state party had one hundred and thirty-six, and the Pro-slavery seventy-two. This vote was divided as follows:

Free-state.—Walnut Creek, forty six; Lochnane, ten; Irving, forty-three; Claytonville, thirty-seven.

Pro slavery.—Walnut Creek, three; Lochnane, eleven; Irving, twenty-three; Claytonville, thirty-five.

This was a final defeat for the Pro-slavery party, and they never afterward played any noteworthy part in the politics of the county. Democracy seems to have ever been in sympathy with the Southern element, and to have shared its fortunes, for at this time Brown and Nemaha counties elected a representative, and the Republican candidate, Maj. E. N. Morrill, received two hundred and eighty-three votes; his opponent obtaining but little more than one-third of that number.

On July 22, 1856, the County Surveyor was directed by the County Commissioners of Doniphan County to survey the joint boundary line between Doniphan and Brown counties. This was done, and Brown County was separated from Doniphan by an act of the Legislature of 1857. The Legislature of the following year transferred Township 5, Ranges 15 and 16, to Jackson County. This left the county in its present shape; an exact square, twenty-four miles on each side.

The first County Clerk was James Waterson, who was appointed in 1857, but did not fill a full term, and was followed by David Peebles, who continued to hold the office through the following year. Those who have succeeded to the office are W. B. Barnett, 1859; Henry Graves, 1860; H. R. Dutton, 1860; E. L. Pound, 1860-62-64; E. A. Spooner, 1864-65; J. G. Kelsey, 1866; E. N. Morrill, 1867-69-71-73; Henry Isley, 1874-76-78; John E. Moon, 1878-80-82.

The following have held the office of County Treasurer: John Dunbar, 1857; Richard L. Oldham, 1857; Moses P. Proctor, 1857; S. Wade, 1858-60; G. J. Englehart, 1860-63; E. L. Pound, 1863-65; W. B. Barnett, 1865-67-69; A. McLaughlin, 1869-71-73; H. Seburn, 1873-77; J. F. Roehm, 1877-79; William Welcome, 1879-81, and to the present time.

The first Register of Deeds of whom the records make any mention, was D. Peebles, who was elected in 1861. He was followed by J. W. Oberholtzer, 1863-65-67; J. H. Klinefelter, 1867-69; J. W. Oberholtzer, 1869-71; A. R. Platt, 1871-73; F. D. Houlette, 1873-75; E. D. Benner, 1875-77-79; James R. Allison, 1879-81-83.

The first Probate Judge was W. W. Guthrie, elected in 1861. E. A. Spooner was elected in 1864, and held office until 1868. He was succeeded by D. K. Babbit, 1868-70-72; T. B. Dickason, 1874-76-78-80-82.

The Clerks of the District Court have been J. G. Kelsey, elected in 1862; E. N. Morrill, 1866; H. J. Aten, 1870; Henry Anderson, 1872; J. W. Oberholtzer, 1874; L. H. Eilely, 1876; W. M. Welcome, 1878; S. Wilson, 1880.

On page eighty-four of the laws of 1857 is an act approved in February of that year, and reading as follows: "* * * That Claytonville be the temporary seat of justice of Browne County. * * *"

At the election of October 6, 1857, three Commissioners were chosen to make a selection of a permanent County Seat. At a meeting of the Board, held on December 14, the duly elected Commissioners, I. P. Winslow, Isaac Chase, and I. B. Hoover, organized and proceeded at once to take a vote for the new County Seat. This vote resulted in the casting of one vote each for Hiawatha, Carson and Padonia. Manifestly there was no probability of a choice, and, to aid in making one, the Commissioners the following day, visited the towns already voted for, and also Hamlin. At this time Mr. Carson offered one-half the building lots of the town and $1,500; Hiawatha each alternate building lot, and a court-house twenty by thirty feet; and Padonia a square of ground, and a $3,000 court-house, for the preference. Having received these propositions the Board held a meeting, and took a fresh vote. This resulting as before, a third ballot was taken with the result of two votes for Carson, and one for Padonia. A fourth ballot resulted in the casting of three votes for Carson and its consequent selection. This, it will be remembered, was in December, 1857. In the January following, the work of the Commissioners was upset by the passage of an act of the legislature authorizing an election to be held on April 5, for the purpose of submitting to the people the final location of the County Seat. At this election the vote, as returned, showed irregularities in four precincts, and they were thrown out. The vote was then announced as follows: Hiawatha, 128 votes; Carson, 37; Hamlin, 25; Claytonville, 20; Washington, 13; Prairie Springs, 4; Padonia, 2. Hiawatha having received a clear majority was then declared the County Seat.

The first County Court House was built at Claytonville, in accordance with an order of the County Commissioners made at their meeting March 31, 1857. In this order it was specified that the building should be thirty by twenty feet, and be enclosed by June 1, of that year. A tax of one-sixth of one per cent. was levied to defray the expense of this work, and R. L. Oldham appointed Building Commissioner. At the August meeting of the Commissioners, Mr. Oldham reported that the building had been completed by Mr. A. Heed, at a cost of $ 00, and was satisfactory. The same year this structure was sold to Samuel A. Wade for $100. After the brief County Seat location at Carson where no court house was built, and the final removal to Hiawatha in April, 1858, the County Commissioners ordered the expenditure of $2,000 for a Court House and Jail, and appointed Joseph Klinefelter as special commissioner to supervise the work. On the death of Mr. Klinefelter, shortly after, H. R. Dutton was appointed Commissioner of Public Buildings. At the November session the Commissioner reported that he had contracted with S. W. Wade to build the Court House, and that it would be completed by August 1, 1859. This building, from the time of its completion until the erection of the present fine Court House in 1878, occupied the center of the public square. When room was needed for the work on the foundations of the new structure, the old court house was torn down and the heavier portions used in the construction of two small dwellings near the residence of H. M. Way.

In the fall of 1877 it was decided to hold an election to determine whether a new court-house should be built by the county. The proper notices having been posted by the County Commissioners the election took place at the time of the regular fall election in November, and resulted in the polling of 798 votes for public buildings and 655 against. On February 12, 1878, E. P. Carr, of the firm of Roper & Carr, of St. Joseph, Missouri, was appointed architect of the new structure and ordered to draw up plans and specifications. For this work there was to be paid three and one-quarter per cent of the cost of the building. On April 12 of this year the County Commissioners ordered that bids for the construction of the new court house be advertised for. It was stated in the advertisement for bids that the cost of construction would be paid in four installments of equal amount, due on December 20, 1878, June 20, 1879, December 20, 1879, and June 20, 1880. Bonds in double the amount of the cost of construction were also required from the successful bidder. In response to the notice of the County Commissioners bids were received from the following parties: G. Amann, of Hiawatha, $19,625. H. A. Day & Co., of Nelson, Nebraska, $19,630; Randell Hickox, of Omaha, Nebraska, $19,438; Anderson & Liddell, of Leavenworth, $18,790; J. A. McGonigle, of Leavenworth, $18,743. These bids were opened on June 5, 1878, and the contract awarded to J. A. McGonigle, of Leavenworth, bonds being fixed at $38,000.

To secure funds for meeting this new obligation a special tax of three mills was levied for the years 1879 and 1880.

On December 11, 1879 the County Commissioners at their regular meeting voted to accept the new court house and at once placed $16,000 insurance upon it; $4,000 in each of the following companies—Phenix, of Hartford, Connecticut; Aetna, of Hartford, Connecticut; Home of New York; North British and Mercantile, of London and Edinburgh. The County Clerk was then directed to proceed to St. Joseph and contract for furniture for the new quarters. This done at a cost of $1,605, the county had as neat and beautiful a structure as need be wished for.

On the lower floor are the offices of the County Clerk, Recorder of Deeds, Probate Judge, Treasurer, Superintendent of Instruction. On the second the office of the Prosecuting Attorney and the county court room.

WAR RECO

(The history of the Thirteenth Volunteer Infantry of which Company I of this county formed a part, is given in the General History.)

The Brown County Guard was raised in 1861 by Capt. Ira J. Lacock, and at once proceeded to Atchison to join the First Kansas Infantry. Finding it impossible to be attached to this regiment, as it was already full, the Guard proceeded to Leavenworth, where they were again disappointed. Being unable to become attached to any force destined for the front the company returned to Hiawatha and disbanded. On October 13, 1864, Brigadier-Gen. Sherry sent the following letter to Lieut. H. M. Robinson, of the Brown County Militia: "Dear Sir:—You will notice from the within order that the entire militia of the State is ordered into actual service for thirty days, unless sooner discharged; and that the militia of this District are ordered to report to me at Atchison forthwith. You will attend to the matter in your county. Very respectfully, Your obedient servant,

BYRON SHERRY,
Brigadier General."

The enclosed order to which Gen. Sherry referred bore date of October 9th, and issued from the headquarters of the Kansas State Militia at Topeka. The order for Brown, Nemaha, Doniphan and Marshall counties required an immediate rendezvous at Atchison. In obedience to this command, Brown County sent a force, which as reported at Atchison, consisted of: Hiawatha Company, composed of sixty-five men; James A. Pope, Captain; John Walters, First Lieutenant; Jacob Sparr, Second Lieutenant. Walnut Creek Company, composed of forty-one men; I. N. Speer, Captain; Levi Morrill, First Lieutenant; William Belk, Second Lieutenant. Robinson Company, composed of 100 men; Samuel W. Swayze, Captain; L. Slagel, First Lieutenant; William Gear, Second Lieutenant. Roys Creek Company was not at this time reported.

The departure of the militia for the front was immediately followed by the organization of the Home Guard, which in twenty-four hours secured an enrollment of seventy-nine, "including the colored men and a few boys who wished to be enrolled." Lieut. Perkins was made captain of this force, and perfected a plan for meeting and repelling any attack, by the rapid concentration of the force spread over several miles. That the sudden departure of the militia was a great loss to the county is proven with the utmost clearness by stray items which appear in the county paper of the time. Women were reported as gathering corn left standing in the field, as loading wood and acting as teamsters, and, at a pinch, as millers. In one instance, Mr. Livermore, of the Hamlin Mills, was ordered upon "detached duty," this being nothing less than hurrying to his mill and turning out a stock of the staff of life for those whose lot at home was as rugged, in many ways, as that of the "boys in blue" at the front.

This force served at the front and on guard duty until the close of the war, when it was disbanded and returned home. Many of its members moved to other points, but a good number are still within a few miles of the county seat, and have reared a second generation, who, should their country call, would probably turn out with all the fire and patriotism of their sires, and re-enact the brave deeds of twenty years ago.

In 1860 the population of this County was 2,607; in 1870, 6,823; in 1875, 8,928; in 1880 12,819. This included Hiawatha and Robinson, the former of which had 1,376 population and the latter 210

COUNTY SCHOOLS AND SOCIETIES.

Private or subscription schools were taught in the county from nearly the date of first settlement, and records of this work have been found as early as 1856. There was, however, no regularly organized district prior to the Carson District organized on March 11, 1859, by County Superintendent J. A. Stanley. The first School Board was elected on the 21st of the following month, and was as follows: Noah Hansen, Director; I. B. Hoover, Clerk; A. M. Kendall, Treasurer. The report of the County Superintendent of Public Instruction for this year shows an enrollment of 204 children of school age, and an attendance of ninety-five in the two schools (Carson and Myers Districts) There were that year four regularly organized school districts, but there was no teaching in two of them.

In 1879 Brown County had seventy school districts; in 1880 this number had increased to eighty-one.

The number of pupils enrolled was, in 1879, 3,161; in 1880, when the biennial report was issued, 3,623; and in 1881, 4,067; with an average attendance of 2,349.

During this period the number of teachers employed had increased from eighty in 1879 and eighty-five in 1880, to 125 in 1881, when the amount of yearly salaries paid was $23,749.

The total expenditure for all school purposes in 1880 was $24,461.89; the assessed valuation of all school property, $8,300.129.

The Brown County Agricultural Association was organized in 1864, and purchased a fine site for a fair ground at the southeast of the town. This was a portion of the lands of W. B. Barnett and covered twenty acres. On this was laid out a half-mile track, said to be one of the best in the State, and in the center was a floral hall about forty by eighty feet. After a few years, however, the society fell into neglect and was practically disbanded. The Brown County Agricultural, Horticultural and Mechanical Company then took control of the grounds and buildings, and retained them up to 1880, when the Brown County Exposition Association was organized as a joint stock company under the State law In 1880 the managers of the society decided to still further improve its facilities, and a strip of ground on the north of the old space was purchased of Maj. E. N. Morrill for $400. This last purchase covers ten acres. Upon adding this ground the Floral Hall was removed from the center of the track to a space northeast of the judges' stand, and near the main entrance. Stables have been fitted up, on the south side of the track, for the convenience of training blooded stock, and ample stalls furnished for other classes of domestic animals. On the north of the judges' stand is a row of seats for the accommodation of those who attend trials of speed. These will be extended the coming season and form a convenient amphitheater. The society has expended, thus far, not less than $6,000, but it stands ready to do as much more as may be necessary to make its grounds worthy of the attendance of the best classes of stock and stock fanciers. The present officers of the society are J. M. Boomer, president; T. L. Brundage, secretary.

The Brown County Improved Horse Association has its headquarters at Hiawatha, and is composed of some of the best breeders of blooded stock in the county. Its organization dates from February, 1882, when the following officers were elected: J. Besty, president; S. Detwiler, secretary; John Walters, treasurer. The live stock now owned by the association consists of four thorough-bred draft stallions, three of whom are located at Hiawatha. These animals are all from Illinois, where they were imported from France and England. The infusion of new blood from this foreign stock can not fail to be of great value to the farmers of the entire county.

STATISTICS.

The following statement of the amount of land devoted to the production of the various staples of the State and County from 1874 to 1880 inclusive is of great interest as exhibiting an actual example of the growth of this section: In 1874 Brown County had 17,547 acres of winter wheat; in 1880, 31,645 acres; in 1874, 855 acres of rye; in 1880, 1,859. Spring wheat covered 13,978 acres in 1874; 12,224 in 1880. Barley was raised on 5,789 acres in 1874; on 2,485 in 1880. Oats were planted on 8,233 acres in 1874; on 9,571 in 1880. Potatoes increased from an acreage of 587 in 1874 to 1,176 in 1880. Pearl millet was first planted in 1880. A glance at these figures shows that while the winter wheat area nearly doubled in six years, spring wheat decreased as did barley. Corn meanwhile nearly doubled its acreage, and potatoes showed the largest proportional increase of all products of the soil. The total value of products for 1880 was $1,844,711.66.

HIAWATHA.

Hiawatha, the county seat of Brown County, is located in one of the most beautiful plains of this prairie country, and not far from the geographical center of the county. From the upper floor of any large building can be seen a magnificent amphitheater of twenty square miles of gently undulating prairie, which seems to so melt in the distance that the eye is scarce able to discern where earth ceases and the "cape flyaway" of the clouds begins. Spread over this space are the substantial houses and well-kept fields which show long residence and careful tillage. Within the city, grouped around the public square and on Oregon street, are the chief business houses. Radiating in every direction are neat residences with trim, well-kept yards, and here and there the costly buildings which indicate that individual wealth has already been acquired from the growing trade of the yet new country.

The first house erected in Hiawatha stood on the northwest corner of Sixth and Oregon streets, and was occupied by Partch and Barnum as a hotel, and later by A. Sellig, who managed it until the building of the old Hiawatha House. This was in the early summer of 1857, and claims in the county were constantly being taken by speculators from other States, who, after making slight improvements and erecting claim shanties generally departed, either to return another year or to sell their claims. It was no uncommon sight to see these men, who rarely did their claim work personally, lounging about the old hotel to the number of forty or fifty. The first term of the District Court was held in this house.

The second building was built by a Mr. Partch, and stood on the east side of Sixth street, opposite the Court House. It was occupied as a general store by H. R. Dutton and B. L. Rider. In 1858 it was sold to W. B. Barnett, afterwards of the banking firm of Barnett, Morrill & James, now a prominent citizen of Hiawatha. In 1857 there were but two buildings on the town site.

The first postmaster of Hiawatha was H. R. Dutton, who was appointed July 13, 1858, and held office four years. He was followed by Joseph Pascal, who also retained the office for four years. In 1866 H. Graves received the appointment W. B. Barnett was Postmaster from 1870-74, and yielded to H. Graves, who, however, failed to fill the full term and was succeeded by N. E. Chapman on April 5, 1878. Mr. Chapman was in turn succeeded by J. D. Blair on May 8, 1882.

During this time the postoffice had been located successively at the store of H. R. Dutton, on lot 77, Oregon street; in Pascal's drug store, on the east side of the square; on lot 79, on Oregon street, and finally in the Opera House building, on Sixth and Oregon streets, where it is at once centrally and commodiously located.

On April, 1871, Hiawatha elected a full corps of city officers as follows: Mayor, J. Schilling; Clerk, H. J. Aten; Treasurer, James A. Pope; Marshal, J. B. Butterfield; Assessor, F. J. Heller; Police Judge, J. W. Oberholtzer; Attorney, C. W. Johnson. The Councilmen were J. W. Pottenger, B. F. Killey, G. Amann, H. M. Robinson, H. C. Wey.

The Mayors who have served since Mayor Schilling are as follows: A. McLaughlin, 1872-73; George Amann, 1873-74; H. J. Aten, 1874-75-76; A. A. Holmes, 1876-77-78; A. R. May, 1878-79; W. M. Welton, 1879-80; C. H. Lawrence, 1880-81; J. D. Blair, 1881-82; G. Amann, 1882-83.

The City Clerks since 1872 have been: W. C. Maxwell, 1872-73; D. M. Reed, 1873-74; A. N. Ruley, 1874-75; Charles Wolf, 1875-76; H. M. Waller, 1876-77; A. T. McCreary, 1877-78-79; C. N. Welcome, 1879-80-81; T. L. Brundage, 1881-82-83.

The City Treasurers have been as follows: J. W. Oberholtzer, 1872; A. R. Platt, 1872-73; Charles Wolf, 1873-74-75; G. T. Woodmansee, 1875-76; Charles Wolf, 1876-77; Harvey Seburn, 1877-78; J. E. Moon, 1878-79-80-81-82-83.

The earliest record of the public schools of this place bears date March 25, 1870, and records the election of E. Bierer as Director; B. F. McCoy, District Clerk, and Gregory Amann, District Treasurer. The next record is a year later, and records the election of Mr. C. D. Lawrence, as Director—a position he has ever since held. It was at this time decided to purchase two lots on Miami Street in the northeast part of the town as a site for a schoolhouse. In 1873, what is now known as "the old schoolhouse," was built on these lots at a cost of $6,000. This structure was of native stone, and was fifty by thirty-two feet, and two stories in height. On April 4, 1873, the appointment of three teachers was recorded. These were L. S. Herbert, Principal; and Miss Albee and Miss Welcome, Assistants.

Doubtless the stone schoolhouse was considered a commodious building and suited to the needs of the school for a number of years to come; but it is evident that the estimate of the city's growth fell far below the realization; for in 1874, only a year later, it was found necessary to obtain better accommodations. At a meeting held on April 10, 1874, it was decided to build a new "permanent schoolhouse," not to exceed in cost $35,000. One-third of this sum was to be expended in the first year, and the remainder during successive years. In the fall of 1875 Miss Mary A. P. Cracraft and Miss Mary Maxey were added to the force of teachers, and, the school room proving utterly insufficient, a room was hired of D. C. Swayze, and used for the primary department, taught by Miss Liggitt.

On February 22, 1875, the board having received the petition of more than one-third of the legal voters of the district, praying for a special election to determine the question of issuing bonds in $15,000 for building a new schoolhouse, set an election for March 6 of the same year. These bonds were to have ten years to run and were coupled with the condition that none should be sold for less than ninety-five per cent of their par value. At the special election of March 6 the vote stood 146 for and 58 against the bonds. The issue of bonds having been decided upon it became necessary to choose a building site. At a meeting held March 8, 1875, an election to decide which of a number of eligible localities should be selected was called for March 20. At this later meeting the present site known as "site four" and the property of Mr. Bowers, received fifty-four votes and a clear majority over all.

A call for plans and specifications was next in order, and after examination of a number submitted, those of Steiger, Boetner & Co., were accepted. The contract for erecting the structure was then offered and finally awarded to Mr. G. Amann at $13,000.

The school building thus obtained has seven rooms and a large department for each. Its teachers are L. D. Whittemore, principal; Misses Lizzie Herbert, Lizzie Isles, Jennie Isles, Lou Chance, R. D. Kiner and Mrs. Eliza M. Cook. With an enrollment of over 400 scholars it can readily be seen that ere long the "permanent" quarters which six years ago seemed sufficient for a long time to come will shortly be too small. As long as practicable the schoolrooms, which in addition to the original heavy outlay have received numerous improvements, will be used. During the year 1881-82 steam heating was introduced throughout the building at a cost of $1,400.

Hiawatha may well be at once proud of her attractive school, its efficient teachers and the rapid growth which necessitates a constant increase of both.

FIRE DEPARTMENT AND FIRES.

The fire department of Hiawatha was organized in 1874, with a membership of thirty, and H. M. Waller as Chief. After running in this form till 1876, Mr. Waller resigned, and E. Allendorf took charge of the department, where his name still appears as Chief. At the time of the organization, in 1874, a truck, with hooks and ladders, was purchased. In 1876 a Babcock Fire Extinguisher was added to the apparatus. In 1877 the hook and ladder truck was repaired and new ladders procured. The apparatus is placed in a building west of the new National Bank Block. The department meets on the first Monday of each month.

The city has but one cistern for fire purposes. This is located on the northeast corner of the square, and is supplied by a well close to it, water being raised by a wind-mill. It is proposed to place two more fire cisterns at the northwest and southwest corners of the square, where, owing to the slope of the land, they could readily be filled from the conduits of the court house roof.

On Thursday, November 30, 1871, the most destructive fire which has ever visited the city broke out in the drug store of Mitchell & Zehrung, on the east side of the Public Square. The flames were discovered about 2 A. M., and had made such headway as to preclude all idea of saving the building. Attention was then turned to saving the household effects of Mr. Mitchell, the senior partner of the firm, who occupied the upper story as a tenement. After various courageous attempts, the firemen were beaten off by the dense smoke and suffocating fumes from the burning drugs, which added, by constant explosions, to the danger of the situation. Abandoning their apparently futile work on the drug store, the citizens turned to the adjoining structures, which were all of wood and consequently in imminent danger. On the north was a residence, but as it was about twenty feet from the burning building, and the wind blew fiercely from that quarter, it was comparatively safe. On the south the boot and shoe store of J. B. Butterfield, the boot and shoe shop of F. Zimmerman, and the hardware store of A. M. Blakesly. These were all of wood and with the inadequate means at hand it was manifestly impossible to save them. Attention was then turned to the removal of their contents, and the stock of the two nearest merchants made a hasty exit. In the third building was a large stock of shelf and heavy hardware and a number of stoves which, spite of incessant labor, could not be rescued. Next to the south stood the jewelry store of Mr. T. B. Dickason, and the fine residence of Mr. I. Boker. To save the latter it was decided to tear down the jewelry store, and having removed all the stock, the firemen made short work of the building, which was a small one. The removal of this connecting link checked the advance of the fire, and it was from that time readily managed.

The total loss by this fire was about $12,000. Of this Mitchell & Zimmerman lost $3,000—well insured; Butterfield, $1,000; Zimmerman, $400 or $500; Blakesley, about $6,000; and Dickason, about $500.

On Sunday morning, October 5, 1879, watchman Huff, in making his two o'clock round, discovered fire in the upper part of the Hiawatha House. This hotel, which was built nearly twenty-two years before, was in 1879 of an extremely composite order of architecture. The older portion of this was of brick, but a large frame addition had been made to it, and it was on the upper floor of this part that flames were discovered. A large crowd of citizens turned out in response to the alarm of the watchman, and were soon actively engaged in fighting the flames; but though burning slowly, the house was evidently doomed. Attention was then given to rescuing as much as possible of the furniture of the house and the personal property of its inmates. Mr. Ellis T. Carey, who was running the hotel, was fully insured. The hotel proper was also insured to the amount of $2,000, which nearly offset the loss. The destruction of this hotel was a loss to the town for the time only, the erection of its namesake more than compensating for any divergence of trade through lack of hotel facilities.

PROHIBITION AND THE HIAWATHA CLUB.

One of the most exciting events that has occurred in the history of Hiawatha was the suppression of the Hiawatha Club. In 1875 the City Council denied all applications for licenses to open saloons or drinking places of any description. For a time this suddenly enforced prohibition was effectual. Sundry bibulous individuals, under the pressure of uneasy cravings for spirituous elevation, may have experienced symptoms calling for the aid of the druggist, and been granted relief; but there is no record of their manœuvers. In October, however, a new factor appeared upon the scene, in the formation of the Hiawatha Club. There was no doubt of the aim of this organization, but if kept strictly in accordance with its avowed plan, the city authorities could take no legal cognizance of its workings. It was indubitably a clever scheme. The object of the circular gotten out by the club and numerously signed by the people of the neighborhood was as follows: "We the undersigned hereby agree to and with each other to form and arrange a club for the purpose of social enjoyment, said club to have its rooms in the city of Hiawatha and to be known as the Hiawatha Club. Dated this seventh day of October, 1875."

On the same date F. W. Rohl and H. Stauff opened the club rooms in a building owned by J. W. Pottenger and located on lot ninety-one, Oregon street. Business was very brisk from the day of opening, and the crowd exchanging pasteboard checks for the irrigating fluid was constantly renewed. To all appearance the purchase of beer and whisky checks was all that was needed to acquire membership. On October 13th the club, as additional safeguard against the enforcement of the prohibitory law, adopted a regular constitution and by-laws, and elected a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, who, with five trustees, formed the board of managers. Provision was also made for annual elections and monthly meetings, and also for the due proposal of persons desiring membership, and the payment of a small entrance fee. To overcome any delay in refreshing the tired of other places who might be in need of liquid support, it was added that "any member may invite gentlemen to the rooms of the association for a single day on registering his own name with that of the visitor in a book kept for the purpose."

At this meeting several rules for the conduct of the club were adopted, among them one reading: "This house shall be open from nine o'clock in the morning, daily, for the reception of members, and close at twelve o'clock (midnight)." This did not involve the enforced departure of members of the club then in the house.

Two days later Mayor H. J. Aten issued an order for the closing of the club room for two days, ending on Saturday, October 16th, at midnight. This order was at once enforced by City Marshal G. T. Woodmansee. On the following Monday, however, the Hiawatha club was again in full blast, and for two days the flow of beer and the ardent was unchecked. On the 20th the Marshal, by order of the Mayor, made a second attempt to close the club rooms, but was met by Rohl and Stauff and a delegation of members and unceremoniously hustled into the street. Nothing daunted, the preserver of the peace made at brief intervals other fruitless efforts to gain possession of the rooms, and finally called to his aid Thomas McLaughlin, J. K. Klinefelter and G. E. Selleg, with whom he succeeded in bursting the door and ousting the club party. The doors were then locked and the posse separated. Soon after the club party proceeded to the office of W. J. Richardson and procured a warrant for the arrest of the City Marshal, G. T. Woodmansee, and his assistants, on a charge of riot. They then returned to the club room, broke in and resumed business. Matters were getting serious and the feeling of the citizens was at fever heat when the suit brought by Rohl on behalf of the club was called before W. J. Richardson, Justice of the Peace. The Marshal and his party were defended by the City Attorney, A. R. May, Ira J. Lacock and C. E. Berry; the State appearing by the county attorney and Hon. James Faloon. A verdict for the defendants was rendered and the cost of suit taxed upon the plaintiffs.

These proceedings had brought considerable odium upon the club, and the better portion of the citizens who had at first patronized it, began to withdraw. Rohl & Stauff, however, continued the sale of beer and whisky and the place became the scene of the most disgusting debauches. This went on until November 18th, when the worthy pair who ran the business were arrested for violation of the city statute in regard to selling liquors. Convicted on the 22d before J. P. Mulhollen, the defendants appealed to the District Court and continued business. Again arrested on the 27th and tried on December 2, Rohl & Stauff pursued the same course. On December 14 the Mayor issued a writ to the City Marshal ordering the abatement of this nuisance. This was the signal for the fiercest battle of this notorious contest. The Marshal armed with the writ of abatement presented himself at the club room, only to be met by the proprietors with drawn revolvers, and the warning that an attempt to interfere with their business would have fatal results. Yielding to superior force the Marshal retreated and made preparations to meet force with force. Raising a posse of twenty men he again appeared at the club room and made a forcible entry early on Christmas morning, 1875, capturing the books and papers of the society, destroying all the stock, and barricading the doors of the room with billiard tables and furniture, the posse went into camp. Guards were placed at the outside of the building, and within the room, and for nearly two weeks the conquerors held the captured citadel. A large part of the members of the club and personal friends of Rohl & Stauff, lived in the country, at some distance from Hiawatha, and when the news of the capture of the club room spread, gathered in a large crowd near the building. No attempt was made to retake it, however, though there was much loud talking, and sanguinary threats were made.

This was practically the end of the business of the Hiawatha club. Petitions and counter petitions, and actions for ejectment were indulged in by various parties, and numerous and uninteresting processes gone through, with the final result of the surrender of Rohl & Stauff and their confession of inability to pay their fines. Confined in the city calaboose, the prisoners were one night rescued by their friends, but they were shortly after returned. Shortly after (April, 1876), a compromise was effected through the efforts of two pastors of the city. Rohl & Stauff withdrew their suits against the city and its officers and on payment of the costs of suit were liberated. It is stated that a large part of the funds raised to meet these expenses were raised by the temperance party, Rohl & Stauff being bankrupt.

This ended the practical discussion of the temperance question in Hiawatha and it has never been revived.

CHURCHES.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church, was not the only first Methodist Church in the city and county, but the first church of any denomination. In 1857, Hiawatha formed part of the White Cloud and Sabetha Mission, which was under Rev. W. E. Butt, presiding elder. In the following year Rev. J. Shaw was appointed presiding elder, and a year later Rev. James Lawrence became preacher in charge of the work on this circuit. He was followed in 1860, by Rev. Mr. Green, and in 1861, by L. D. Price, and William Buffington, the latter of whom continued his work through 1862. O. H. Mitchell served in 1863, and in 1864, the Hiawatha class was organized by L. D. Price, presiding elder, and J. Shaw preacher in charge. In 1865, E. S. Arrington supplied the church and through his efforts and those of the presiding elder, D. P. Mitchell, a subscription for the purpose of building a church edifice was set in circulation. This resulted in securing $1,135, which was increased the following year by $791 secured by the earnest efforts of Rev. J. M. Titcomb, the preacher of the year. Encouraged by so favorable a financial showing, the society commenced work on the building and the corner stone was laid July 4, 1866, by Rev. W. K. Mitchell of Atchison. The same year the walls were raised and building was then stopped, as $1,800 above the amount subscribed had been expended and the society were unwilling to run further in debt. In April, 1867, work was resumed on the building, under the agreement that the indebtedness of the society should not be increased At the same time an additional subscription of $200 was secured. In September, 1868, the church extension society donated $68.65 and in March of the following year $221. During this time the Ladies' Mite Society donated various sums aggregating $300. The structure was completed late in 1868, and dedicated on December 13th, by Rev. A. B. Leonard. At this time an effort to raise the entire church debt, then amounting to $1,800 was made, and $50 more than that sum subscribed. It was found however that interest to the amount of $300 had accrued and this was taken care of by the trustees.

Slightly prior to this time the Hiawatha class numbered (1867) eleven members and the preacher in charge, Rev. J. A. Simpson, supplied also Padonia, Claytonville, Carson, Terrapin and Robinson.

In 1869-70, Rev. P. M. Buck, now a missionary in India, was in charge of the church. He was followed by Rev. Mr. Dudley, September, 1870 to March, 1871. Revs. J. Amos and Blackstock, who worked together in 1871; J. P. Shackelford, in 1872-73; S. P. Jacobs, in 1873-75; C. L. Shackelford, in 1875-77; J. A. Simpson, in 1877-79; William Friend, in 1879-82; W. H. Underwood, in 1882. During 1873, the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of Hiawatha, was organized and in 1877, during the pastorate of C. L. Shackleford, $1,200 was raised and in June of that year, the entire debt removed.

In 1878, it was decided to build a parsonage and almost the entire amount necessary was subscribed. The building was begun in October, and finished, at a cost of $1,200, on January 1, 1879. The society now holds $7,000 worth of property, free of debt. The membership is 241.

A Sabbath school was organized at an early day and now has twenty-two teachers and 244 scholars. It is under the superintendence of T. J. Wagstaff.

The First Baptist Church of Hiawatha was organized on August 18, 1860, by Rev. H. S. Tibbitts, assisted by Rev. P. Frink, and Rev. E. Alward. At the time of organization the society numbered but fifteen, but it has grown finely during the twenty eventful years of its existence, and now has enrolled 150 members. The pastors who have held successive charge are: H. S. Tibbitts, Nelson Alvord, A. F. Willard, G. Gates, A. Alward, George Mitchell, W. R. Connelly and J. F. Howard, who is the present incumbent. A church edifice was erected in 1871, at a cost of $3,200. It stands on Eighth street, near Utah.

The Sabbath school was organized in 1871, with a membership of thirty and was under the superintendence of William Scull. At the present time its membership has increased to 125. It is under the superintendence of M. S. Smalley.

The First Congregational Church of Hiawatha, was organized June 5, 1869, with a membership of fifteen, under the charge of Rev. G. A. Hoyt, who remained connected with the society until his death, in May, 1870. On May 1, 1870, Rev. D. W. Comstock was installed as Pastor and held the position until September 9, 1871, when he was succeeded by Rev. H. P. Robinson. Rev. J. D. Liggett began his pastorate on August 12, 1873, and retired nearly five years later, when, on May 22, 1878, Rev. George W. Skinner became Pastor. Rev. J. B. Richardson, the present Pastor, was installed August 31, 1880. A church building was begun in 1873, and dedicated in January of the following year, but was not at that time fully completed. The total cost of this structure was $4,000.

A Sabbath school was organized on February 22, 1874, with E. N. Knapp as superintendent. Mr. Knapp was followed by Major E. N. Morrill, who now holds the position. An active and successful school of over 200 is now in regular attendance.

The First Presbyterian Church of Hiawatha, was organized on April 10, 1870, by F. E. Sheldon, who, while stationed at Troy, Doniphan County, preached once in six weeks at Hiawatha for more than two years, ending his labors at this point on July 7, 1872. At the commencement of this work the membership of the society was five: Mrs. Jane Pricer, Mrs. Susan M. Adams, Eugene Adams, Edward C. Work and William B. Brown. In 1872 it had crept to seven, and a year later to thirty-nine. Mr. Sheldon was followed by Revs S. T. Davis, S. F. Farmer, S. T. Davis, D. R. Todd, S. F. Farmer and S. G. Strange, who still holds the pastoral office.

The church edifice which since its erection in 1873, has been the constant care of the society is 30x40 feet on the ground floor, and cost as stated in the records, $2,938. The first services held in this building took place on August 17, 1873, and shortly after the dedicatory services were held. Original members of the little band that by zealous work achieved the task of building this church, and dedicating it, free of debt, to the service of God, may well feel proud of their record. The society now has enrolled 110 members and is in an active condition.

A Sabbath school was established in September, 1872, but the earliest record bears date nearly a year later and it is supposed that the record of the first year was lost. It is known that W. S. Brown was the first superintendent and that John E. Moon was the first secretary. In 1873 the school had an average attendance of thirty-two scholars, and had as teachers four gentlemen and two ladies. The school now numbers seventy, and has nine teachers. Its officers are W. S. Brown, superintendent; S. A. Fulton, assistant; Mrs. G. T. Pricer, [illegible] retary and Mrs. D. M. Reed, treasurer.

The African Methodist Church, of Hiawatha, was organized by Rev. Robert Kay, in 1872. Following the custom of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the service at this point has been conducted by new preachers yearly. The list of incumbents is as follows: F. M. Dale, 1873; J. Myers, 1874; J. B. Wallace, 1875; C. H. Brown, 1876; Mr. Carr, 1877; I. W. Reed, 1877; A. H. Daniels, 1878; William Webb, 1879-80-81; J. H. Walton, 1882. The society has a church building in the southeast part of the town, in which services are held each Sabbath. This structure, which is twenty by thirty feet, was erected at a cost of four hundred dollars.

The Christian Church was started in the spring of 1876, by Rev. James McGuire, who came to Hiawatha, and, although located at Padonia, preached occasionally at the former point in the old court house. His last sermon was delivered in the Presbyterian Church, on the last Sabbath of March, 1877. Rev. J. F. Berry preached occasionally during 1877, and in December of that year, Rev. A. Williams preached twice. On September 13, 1877, a verbal contract was made for the old stone schoolhouse, now owned by the German Reformed Church. Services were held in this place until about the close of the year, when a misunderstanding having arisen between the school board and the church society, the place of worship was moved to a room occupied for court purposes in the Knapp Building, north of the public square. On April 14, 1878, the society was organized by J. F. Berry, assisted by Elder A. Williams, of Iowa, and had a membership of twenty-six. On May 16, 1878, lots 81 and 83, on Kickapoo street, were purchased at an outlay of three hundred and twenty-five dollars, and a building committee, consisting of J. E. Davis, H. M. Waller, W. B. Patrick, R. J. Young and L. H. Eddy, was appointed. Upon the resignation of two members of this committee shortly afterward, A. H. Thomas and P. W. Hull were appointed to take their places. Money for building purposes was pledged to the amount of two thousand dollars, and subscriptions were made due August 13, 1878. Without waiting for the maturing of the subscriptions, work was begun on the building, and by August, the foundations were completed. From this time the progress of the work was very rapid, and on October 19, when it burned, the work on which two thousand five hundred dollars had been expended, was nearly complete. To a numerically weak society this loss was a very serious one, yet, on the Monday, October 21, following the fire, the building committee met and devised means for rebuilding. Work was begun at once, and on the anniversary of the day which saw the destruction of the first, the second structure was dedicated. The expense of this latter building was two thousand dollars. The present membership of the church is sixty-two, and the total enrollment from the beginning, ninety. Pastors who followed Mr. Berry have been J. T. Williams, C. H. Pierce, Professor O. C. Hill and W. D. Swain, who still has charge of the church. The Sabbath school of this society was organized on April 4, 1880, with Prof. R. S. Iles as superintendent, and Miss Ida Waller as secretary. The first enrollment numbered nearly fifty. Mr. A. H. Thomas succeeded Prof. Isles, after one year, and still holds the position. The present officers of the school beside the superintendent, are W. D. Swain, assistant, Miss Lizzie Punchon, secretary. The attendance has increased to fifty-seven.

The United Presbyterian Church of Hiawatha was organized on October 28, 1876, with a membership of seven. This work was by Rev. Marion Morrison, a missionary of the Presbyterian Home Missionary Society. Rev. D. M. Galvin supplied the society at this point for eighteen months. To him succeeded Rev. J. A. McCalmont, who preached for three months and was followed by Rev. M. M. Brown. Mr. Brown was relieved after six months' labor and in July, 1879, Rev. J. P. Black was settled as stated supply. In this position Mr. Black labored with so much zeal and success as to considerably increase the church membership and in April, 1881, was duly installed as Paster. The society now numbers fifty-two and has services each Sabbath in New Hall in Thomas' Block. A project is now on foot to secure building lots and erect a church. A Sabbath school was organized in April, 1880, under the superintendence of C. M. Williamson, who held the office one year and then yielded to William Bachelder who still holds it. Beginning with an attendance of twenty the school has risen to an average of forty-six.

The First German Reformed Church of Hiawatha was organized in 1872. Rev. John Beck, Pastor. In 1869 there had been a church organized called The German Evangelical Church, and for a number of years the two little congregations struggled along, neither of them being able to build a church or maintain a Pastor. In the fall of 1876 the two churches united, reorganized and employed Rev. E. Richards as Pastor until September, 1877, when the church called Rev. Abraham Balliger, who has since that time been Pastor. At this time the society numbered thirty-eight. Services were held in the county courthouse until March, 1878, when the old school building in the northeast part of the town was purchased and fitted up for church purposes. At the time it was sold to the society the house was in very poor repair and mainly on this account was disposed of for $1,200. Immediately on its acquisition the upper portion was fitted with seats and a pulpit and neatly finished, and the lower converted into a parsonage. It is now valued at $3,000. The society now has a membership of sixty and has services every second Sabbath.

A Sabbath school was organized in January, 1878, under the superintendence of Mr. H. Isley, who held the office until 1880 when he removed from the town and was succeeded by Mr. F. Lemly. The school which started with an enrollment of forty has still about the same average attendance.

The Evangelical Church, or perhaps more properly, the Evangelical Association of Hiawatha was organized in April, 1881, under Rev. Philip Fricker, who remained its Pastor for one year and was followed by Leon C. Schnacke, the present incumbent. At the time of organization the society numbered fifteen and in the year of its life has nearly doubled, having now more than twenty-five members. A church was begun in the summer of 1881, shortly after the formation of the society, and completed the same year at a cost of $2,300. Its dimensions are thirty-two by fifty-two feet and its seating capacity 400.

A parsonage eighteen by twenty-four feet and two stories in height has been contracted for and will be erected during 1882 on the lot adjoining the church. It will cost about $1,000.

A Sabbath school was organized on April 10, 1882, and has an attendance of nearly eighty scholars. It is under the superintendence of J. M. Lapiey.

THE PRESS.

The first newspaper published in this county was the Brown County Union, which first appeared in the spring of 1861. In these early days of the county, and during the excitement of the civil war the publication of a country paper was an unprofitable and laborious task, and Dr. P. G. Parker, the father of this pioneer infant, may have even felt a sense of relief when it went up in a furnace of fire the winter after its birth. No attempt was made to revive it.

Volume 1, No. 1 of the Union Sentinel appeared on August 20, 1864, under the editorship of Mr. H. P. Stebbins. The prospectus gives a ringing definition of the aim of the paper and its policy suitable to the time—the closing year of the war in these words: "'The Union Sentinel' is the title chosen—'Union' indicating not a mere name—a sentiment—but that we shall stand by and advocate the cause of the Union in no dubious terms or equivocal language." This issue also contains the particulars of the massacre of the overland trains of Niles, Constable, Varney and Young at a point nearly two hundred miles west and closes with the statement that "Not a ranch is inhabited between Fort Kearney and Denver, or this side of Kearney, the inhabitants having fled." The same paper flies the National ticket of Lincoln and Johnson, and under the caption of "the latest news" gives notes from the battle field where "heavy fighting near Petersburg" is followed by "Gen. Sherman is also battering away at Atlanta with heavy shells," and other brief mention of things which stir strangely memories overlaid with the dust of twenty years. The next column details briefly the abrupt demise of one Bennet, who had acquired an unsavory reputation as a horse thief, and was caught red-handed. Taken to Wathena, in the next county, Bennet attempted to run away but sixteen shots were fired, five taking effect and wounding him severely. The third page contains notices of a Camp Meeting to be held near Padonia, the first fair of the county to be held the coming October, and the law relative to drafted men.

In the second issue of this paper under date of August 27th is the call for a Teachers' Institute to be held at the Carson schoolhouse, five miles west of Hiawatha, on September 22d and 24th, 1864. This order is signed by Noah Hanson, County Superintendent, and makes the hearty announcement: "The people of the neighborhood will welcome strangers and friends who may attend to the hospitalities of their homes." Under the head of "New Arrangement," the editor congratulates the town on the fact that the proprietor of the old Hiawatha House, Mr. Sellig, has taken the contract for carrying the mail once a week between Padonia and Atchison, and will leave Hiawatha each Friday, returning on Saturday.

A little later is found a notice of the introduction of sorghum culture in the county and the manufacture of syrup from it.

In the Sentinel, of September 30, 1864, appears a record of the first teachers' institute of the county and of the forthcoming first annual exhibition of the Brown County Agricultural Society, which was stated to have a membership of over one hundred.

Two months later appears a notice of a movement to build a church to be open to any Evangelical minister. In the same issue appears the notice that Robinson parties had raised one thousand dollars and were using it in boring for coal.

On August 16, 1866, Mr. Stebbins sold the paper to Ira J. Lacock and J. W. Oberholtzer, who made several improvements in it and finally sold it on November 7, 1867, to David Downer. In his hands publication was continued for nearly three years, when, like the wonderful "one horse shay" of Dr. Holmes, it returned to dust without the least warning.

The Hiawatha Despatch was started April 30, 1870, by A. N. Ruley, and from that date to April 4, 1878, the publication continued under the same control. For the first two months of its existence the Despatch was a seven column folio, but was then enlarged to an eight column sheet, and as such ran to the end of its race. Upon the retirement of Mr. Ruley the paper passed into the hands of W. T. Stewart, who conducted it until March 1, 1882.

The first number of the Brown County Advocate was issued on June 25, 1874, by Davis & Watson, E. A. Davis, editor. Like many another literary bantling, the new paper devotes a large amount of space to its aims and personal explanations. Cutting loose from both the old parties and extending his hand to the anti-monopoly grange element, then just becoming prominent, the editor says, "The old Democratic is dead, and the Republican party stinks with corruption." This emphatic, but impolitic announcement, is followed by an expressed preference for Charles Francis Adams and Lyman Trumbull as President and Vice President. In a column a little further on he says, "In getting the first number of the Advocate to press we have labored under the disadvantage of having a boil on the little finger of the right hand which has been so intensely painful that we have had but little rest or sleep for a week; notwithstanding we have worked steadily and unceasingly to give the people a paper which we hope will win their applause and merit their patronage." This is upon the editorial page and just opposite it in another column is a later bulletin about the finger. Following this is the announcement "Lack of news in the Advocate this week must be attributed that we are yet without exchanges." The paper at this time was a nine column folio of large size. In the second issue is given the text of the law then recently adopted, relative to free distribution of newspapers in the county where published. Mr. Davis retired from the editorial chair after a few issues of the paper and with Mr. S. L. Roberts formed the firm of Davis & Roberts. The paper continued to be published by this firm until February, 1875, when Mr. Davis' connection with the paper finally ceased and Mr. D. L. Burger took his place. In the following October the name of the publication was changed to the Kansas Herald.

At this time A. T. McCreary purchased an interest in the business but after a trial of a few months retired and the firm was as before Burger & Roberts. On August 14, 1876, M. S. Foote purchased a half interest in the paper and Mr. Burger retired from the cares of business. Up to January 1, 1878, the paper had been a four page one, 24x36 inches, but upon that date it was enlarged to 25x38. In the latter form it was run up to January 1, 1882, when a still greater addition was made, the new size being 32x46 inches.

On May 15, 1882, Mr. Foote retired from the position he had so skillfully held and Mr. T. L. Brundage bought his interest, Mr. Roberts still retaining the editor's chair and the attendant shears.

In politics the Herald has been "every time and always" Republican. It has also been fortunate in the constant guidance of an editor skilled in his profession and thoroughly conversant with the needs of his town and county. April 1st, 1883, Mr. Roberts sold his interest to his partner, T. L. Brundage, and retired from the business, locating at Tekamah, Neb., in the mercantile business. On Mr. Roberts retiring Mr. Brundage secured the services of Mr. G. M. Wellman, a man of long experience, who took charge of the editorial work. Through a persistent, thorough and careful business management the paper has acquired a circulation of full 2,000—a fact creditable to both editors and readers.

In September, 1877, the North Kansas Sun began to irradiate the surface of Brown County. The new luminary was fathered by W. F. Gordon, was of the Democratic order, and was a "patent outside," twenty-six by forty inches. Democracy does not seem to have been very profitable in those days, as the Sun, after a weary existence of three months, died in December, 1877. In January following Mr. Charles B. Ellis, of Robinson, published the Sun for three weeks. In the spring of 1879 George Christie and George B. Moore started the Hiawatha Sun. In the fall of this year Christie purchased Moore's interest, and continued publication until the fall of 1880, when he leased the office to Mr. A. N. Ruley, in whose hands it remained up to the spring of 1881, when the office was purchased by L. G. Parker, of Missouri, who removed it to Highland, Doniphan Co., Kan., where it is now owned by Mr. George E. Moore.

The Weekly Messenger was started on December 10, 1881, by Wharton Bros. It was at first a three-column, four-page paper of small size, but was enlarged with the March 11, 1882, issue to an eight-page paper. It has already attained a circulation of 450 copies, and bids fair to develop into a successful newspaper. It is issued on Saturday of each week.

The Hiawatha World was started as the successor of the Despatch by the World Printing Company, March 1, 1882. The Company consists of D. W. Wilder, John B. Campbell, and Cyrus B. Bowman. The paper is an eight-column folio, twenty-six by forty-eight inches, and has a circulation of 300 above the list purchased from the Despatch, and estimated at 1,200. It is issued Thursdays.

SOCIETIES.

Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A. F. & A. M., was organized under a dispensation, July 3, 1860, and chartered on October 16, of the same year. The first officers of the lodge were W. B. Barnett, W. M.; J. G. Kelsey, S. W.; James Round, J. W. The other charter members of the lodge were, W. W. Guthrie, S. W. Wade, H. R. Dutton, J. A. Vaughn, I. B. Hoover, Benjamin Watkins, J. C. Scott, Joseph F. Babbit. Meetings are held every Saturday on or before the full moon. The present membership of the lodge is 102. The following are the present officers: L. R. May, W. M.; C. H. Lawrence, S. W.; E. Hoye, J. W.; G. Amann, treasurer; J. Sherret, secretary; S. M. Pratt, S. D.; A. D. Brown, J. D.

Masonic Hall, which is used by the subordinate lodge, the chapter and the commandery, was built in 1880-81, and dedicated in May of the latter year. Its cost to the society was $3,700.

Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, R. A. M., was organized under a dispensation by E. T. Carr, September 10, 1879. The first officers of the chapter were as follows: L. R. Yates, H. P.; P. W. Hull, K.; E. Hoye scribe; E. N. Morrill, treasurer; A. R. May, secretary; T. McLaughlin, C. H.; A. H. Lawrence, P. S.; J. Schilling, R. A. C.; J. M. Hillman, 3d vail; G. H. Cake, 2d vail; H. M. Robinson, 1st vail. In addition to these officers the chapter had the following members: J. W. Oberholtzer, A. Schilling, G. H. Adams, N. F. Leslie, A. W. Hoyt, and A. J. Liebengood. The present membership of the chapter is seventy. The following is a list of the present officers: E. Hoye, H. P.; A. R. May, K.; C. H. Lawrence, scribe; E. N. Morrill, treasurer; J. Sherret, secretary; T. McLaughlin, C. of H.; S. M. Pratt, P. S.; A. D. Brown, R. A. C.; W. W. Beemer, 3d vail; G. H. Cake, 2d vail; A. Schilling, 1st vail. Meetings are held in Masonic Hall each Wednesday after full moon.

Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13, Knights Templar, was organized under a dispensation June 18, and the organization perfected July 16, 1878, with a membership of fifteen, and the following officers: John L. Philbrick, E. C.; W. Brown, generalissimo; R. M. Williams, C. G.; John Schilling, S. W.; C. H. Lawrence, J. W.; G. W. Skinner, prelate; John M. Hillman, warder; A. R. May, recorder; Robert Tracy, treasurer; A. Schilling, sentinel. At the present time the commandery has a membership of sixty and the following officers: J. Schilling, E. C.; E. Hoye, generalissimo; T. McLaughlin, C. G.; C. H. Lawrence, prelate; A. R. May, S. W.; H. M. Robinson, J. W.; E. N. Morrill, treasurer; S. M. Pratt, recorder; A. Schilling, standard bearer; S. C. Hall, sword-bearer; G. H. Cake, warder; N. E. Chapman, sentinel. Meetings are held in Masonic Hall on the third Tuesday of each month.

Hiawatha Lodge, No 83, I. O. O. F., was chartered on October 8, 1872, with the following members: J. W. Oberholtzer, R. S. Fairchild, A. N. Ruley, W. R. Scull, Bennett Hicks, Samuel Slater, W. Slater, C. V. Pyle, Jeremiah Slater, H. L. Bradley and J. Slater. The first officers of the lodge were: J. W. Oberholtzer, N. G.; C. V. Pyle, V. G.; A. N. Ruley, R. S.; J. E. Anten, P. S.; R. S. Fairchild, treasurer; S. S. Hill, warden; J. D. Blair, conductor; G. S. Weathers, I. G. Since its organization the membership of the society has enjoyed a steady growth, and in 1882 numbers an even hundred. The present officers are: John E. Morris, P. G.; J. C. Thomas, N. G.; J. N. Davis, V. G.; G. H. Wheeler, R. S.; R. E. Hickox, P. S.; J. E. Moon, treasurer; John V. Rollins, warden; H. J. Albee, I. G.; William Pierce, O. G.; W. Frazier, conductor. Until 1881 the lodge rented a room for lodge purposes, but when the building of the First National Bank was being erected contracted for an additional story, which was built. The lodge now has a suite of four large rooms measuring as follows: Main lodge room, thirty-five by sixty-five feet; dining room, twenty-five by thirty-five feet; kitchen, fifteen by twenty feet; reading room, fifteen by twenty feet. These rooms are owned and used in common by Hiawatha Lodge and Horeb Encampment, and have cost the two orders $4,000. In addition to this heavy outlay, regalia and personal property to the value of $1 200 are stored in the dress and committee rooms. Although begun in 1881, these rooms were not occupied until the spring of 1882.

Mt. Horeb Encampment No. 83, I. O. O. F., was organized in February, 1880, and had as charter members H. J. Aten, J. D. Blair, John E. Moon, James Falloon, J. K. Klinefelter, H. F. Macy, A. A. Holmes, W. S. Hall, J. W. Beits, H. M. Waller and J. E. Morris. The first officers of the encampment were H. J. Aten, C. P.; H. M. Waller, H. P.; J. E. Moon, S. W.; James Falloon, J. W.

Hiawatha has maintained, nominally, two lodges of Good Templars, but practically the latter was simply a revival of the older body. Prairie Flower Lodge No. 104 was instituted in 1868 with a membership of twenty-six and the following officers: R. C. Chase, W. C. T.; Mrs. W. S. Bristol, V. T.; J. K. Klinefelter, secretary; W. S. Bristol, L. D. During the active agitation of the temperance question the lodge had an enrollment of over one hundred, but when the main fight was over the attendance dwindled, and finally, in 1875, the lodge passed quietly out of existence.

Hiawatha Lodge, which was instituted in 1878 by J. B. Campbell, G. W. C. T., had at the time of organization thirteen members. The following officers were the first and only ones of the new lodge: J. K. Klinefelter, W. C. T.; Mrs. W. S. Bristol, V. T.; Thomas Grant, secretary; Miss Minnie Robinson, treasurer; W. S. Bristol, L. D. This organization lapsed before the completion of the first three months term.

Star of the West Division (Sons of Temperance) No. 38, was organized in October, 1877, with a membership of nearly 100. At one time the numerical strength of the Society had increased to nearly 150. The first officers of the Society were: R. C. Chase, W. P.; J. K. Klinefelter, S.; Mrs. T. L. Brundage, treasurer. In the winter of 1879, the Society having accomplished its chief aims, died a natural death. Its last officers were: R. C. Chase, W. P.; Mrs. M. W. McLaughlin, A. A.; Arthur Macy, C.; Miss L. Robinson, A. C.; C. Chase, secretary; Mrs. L. Brundage, treasurer. During its existence the Society met on each Friday evening in Odd Fellows Hall.

Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1,338, (K. of H.), was organized on January 14, 1879, with a membership of fourteen and the following officers: R. C. Chase, D.; S. M. Pratt, P. D; A. McLaughlin, V. D.; J. C. Thomas, A. D.; A. Carruthers, chaplain; A. Lawrence, reporter; A. O. Dickason, F. R.; Charles Wolf, treasurer; Thomas McLaughlin, guide; B. F. Partch, guardian; Eli Allendorf, sentinel. The Society now has a membership of seventy-seven and the following officers: J. S. Henry, D.; J. C. Thomas, P. D.; T. G. Wagstaff, V. D.; C. George, A. D.; J. B. McNamara, chaplain; T. Daniels, guide; T. L. Brundage, reporter; Charles Wolf, F. R.; J. E. Moon, treasurer; G. M. Blair, guardian; Henry King, sentinel. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Mondays in each month in Odd Fellows Hall.

The Hiawatha Library Association was organized on February 11, 1870. Donations were made by citizens of the town, and a number of books, including some valuable editions of standard works gathered together. A room in the stone building now occupied by Dr. Yates' drug store was secured and opened to the public, and later a room in the old court house. The library did not, however, flourish as it should have done, and the Association died out about 1873, the books still on hand being transferred to the public school building, where they now remain the property of the city.

The Morrill Public Library was opened on Monday, May 29, 1882. The sum of $2,000 was donated by Maj. E. N. Morrill on condition that the city would furnish adequate rooms for library purposes, and also bear the expense of lights and attendance. This proposition was accepted by the City Council, and Maj. Morrill at once paid the sum offered to the City Treasurer. Five Trustees were then appointed, two by Major Morrill and three by the city, to have charge of the purchase of books and the subsequent conduct of the library. These trustees were as follows: E. N. Knapp, president; Mrs. H. B. Wey, corresponding secretary; Capt. J. Schilling, treasurer; Dr. S. M. Pratt, recording secretary; and R. C. Chase. Subsequent to the donation of Maj. Morrill, Mr. Charles Janes offered $500 and a yearly donation of $100, and also presented a set of the Encyclopædia Brittanica, valued at $160. A cozy room over the bank of Morrill & Janes was at once fitted up, and all the latest appliances for comfort in reading or consultation put in it. The first installment of books was received May 25, and the opening followed as soon as the necessary work of cataloguing and arranging could be done. The present rooms will probably be enlarged upon the completion of the new L building adjoining, and when that is done the books, for which there is now no room, will be purchased. Such an institution has long been needed in the city, and the citizens owe much to the public spirit of the man who has assumed the burden of its creation.

The Hiawatha Cornet Band was organized on January 1, 1882, and consists of fourteen members and a drum major. The band is under the leadership of W. B. Kingsley, who in a drill of three months has brought them to a very creditable condition. Instruments to the value of a little more than $350 have been purchased by the organization for its members, and others of a nearly equal value belong to individual members. Meetings are held in the County Court House each Monday and Thursday.

The Kansas Mutual Life Association (Home office, Hiawatha, Kas.), was chartered under the (benevolent) laws of the State of Kansas, January 16, 1882. It was organized by and with the following named persons as its officers, viz., J. P. Davis, president; Henry Graves and Samuel C. Davis, vice-presidents; E. N. Morrill, treasurer, and John E. Moon, secretary. Directors chosen for the first year, E. N. Morrill, J. P. Davis and John E. Moon. The Trustees are, J. P Davis, E. N. Morrill, Henry Graves, S. C. Davis and John E. Moon. The plan of Life Insurance adopted being the mutual, wherein members insuring one another, paying a stipulated sum to the association annually for transacting their business. The cost of carrying a policy outside of the sum charged for expenses, being governed by the actual losses experienced, the assessments for death losses being made only upon the death of a member, and the member paying in proportion to the amount of his policy, and his age at joining. The association also offers an inducement to its members, in what it appropriately terms its "Expectation Indemnity," viz., any member living to the age estimated according to American mortality table, that he will live, may if he chooses, surrender his policy and be repaid the amount he has paid into the treasury on death claims, and expectation indemnity, together with four per cent interest on such amounts. Giving the member a chance (if necessity demands) to have the benefit of the saving during his own life.

BANKS, ELEVATORS, MILLS, ETC.

First National Bank of Hiawatha.—This institution was chartered in October, 1881, and began business on November 22, in the new building, corner Oregon and Seventh streets. The capital of the bank is fifty thousand dollars. Its officers are, M. S. Smalley, president; S. A. Fulton, cashier. D. K. Rabbit, vice-president. The board of directors contains, besides the above officers, E. Moser, Col. E. Bierer, J. C. Thomas, J. Beaty. The elegant three-story building which contains the bank, was erected in 1881, at a cost of seventeen thousand dollars. It is fifty by ninety feet on the ground floor, and is of St. Louis brick, with stone trimmings.

Morrill & Janes' Bank.—This firm was formed on January 1, 1871, under the title of Barnett, Morrill & Co. and transacted business in a room over the stone drug store on Oregon near Sixth street.

In 1872 the present bank building was erected at a cost, including the lots, of $8,500 Its size is twenty-five by fifty feet. It has two stories, but only the first is in use for banking purposes. In 1882, an L shaped building was built around the bank, making the whole structure fifty by one hundred feet. This bank is a private one and makes no statement of capital or assets, but is universally considered one of the most reliable in the State.

The Speer Elevator.—The Speer Elevator was built in 1873, at a cost of $10,000. The main building is twenty-six by forty feet and two stories in height. The ground space covered by the building and additions is twenty-six by ninety feet. The capacity of the elevator is 15,000 bushels. Power is furnished by an engine of fifteen horse power. The shipments of the past season (1881-82) were a trifle in excess of 250,000 bushels. The elevator has always been under the management of its builder, Mr. I. N. Speer, although since 1879, the style has been I. N. Speer & Co.

Hiawatha Elevator.—The Hiawatha Elevator was built in 1873, by Mr S. P. Gaskell, at a cost of $12 000. The storage capacity of the elevator is 12,000 bushels. Shortly after the completion of the building the firm became Gaskell & Welcome, and under this style ran till 1879, when Mr. J. H. Smith, its present owner, purchased it. During the past season (1881-82) this elevator handled in round numbers 250,000 bushels of grain. Power is furnished by an engine of fifteen horse power.

Hiawatha Mill.—The Hiawatha mill built in 1868, by Covode & Snively, at a cost of $14,000, and stands near the tracks of the St. Joseph & Western and the Missouri Pacific Railway. The building is 75x35 feet, and two stories and a half in height. The machinery of the mill consists of four run of buhr-stones, three of which are used for wheat and one for corn. Power is furnished by a boiler of eighty and an engine of forty-horse power. The mill has a capacity estimated at the reduction of 140 bushels of wheat and eighty bushels of corn daily. It furnishes employment to four hands when running on day time, and to six when employed night and day. The property was purchased in 1882 by Mr. P. D. Tobie, who now operates it.

Hiawatha House.—The Hiawatha House was built in 1880-81, by the Hiawatha Hotel Company, which came into being for the sole purpose of erecting, what the town had long needed, a first-class hotel building. The hotel stands opposite the public square and on the corner of Fifth and Utah streets. It is constructed in the most substantial manner of brick; has three stories on the north and two on the south and east sides and contains forty rooms. It is under the management of Mr. J. Q. A. Jeffers.

The Opera House Building.—In the summer of 1880, a company styled the Hiawatha Building Company, was organized for the purpose of erecting a large building on the corner of Oregon and Fifth streets. The capital stock of this new company was $25,000. Work was begun immediately after the organization of the company, and the building completed the following season. The ground space occupied is seventy-five feet on Fifth street and eighty feet on Oregon street. On the ground floor are three stores, each twenty-five feet front and eighty feet deep. On the second floor is the Opera House, 80x50 feet, with a stage 20x15, and on the third floor the hall of the Masonic fraternity.

The Second Floor.—The Opera House which, as the only place of its sort in the town, deserves special mention, is very neatly fitted up with folding chairs for 300 spectators, but has room for half as many more. The scenery consists of four sets of "flats," very neatly painted. At each side of the stage are dressing rooms of convenient size. The entrance to the house is by a broad, straight stairway leading from Oregon street.

The Third Floor.—The lodge room of the Masons embraces the entire third floor, and was built for them by the building company, at a cost of $3,500. Its size is the same as that of the Opera House—80x50 feet.

The First Floor.—The corner store of this building is occupied by the postoffice. The second by S. C. Hall, and the third by the drug store of Hulse & Kinsey.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN L. ALLEM, gardener, was born in Bucks County, Pa., November 1, 1845. He was a graduate of the State Normal School, of Millersville, in 1870, after which he engaged in school teaching. In April, 1880, he came to Kansas, locating in Hiawatha, and in the fall of the same year, began teaching. During the spring of 1882 he started gardening in a small way, but being very successful at it, and finding it profitable, has purchased twenty-five acres of land one-quarter of a mile north of the city, which he is fitting up with all the improvements pertaining to a first-class garden. He has also facilities for irrigating a number of acres during the dry season, which is the only improvement of the kind in Brown County. Mr. Allem was married in his native State, December 24, 1874, to Miss Minnie Trexler, of Lancaster County. Their family consists of a son and daughter—Walter and Edna. The subject of this sketch is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, of the I. O. O. F., and is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city.

JAMES H. ALLISON, Register of Deeds, was originally from Illinois, was born October 9, 1836, in McDonough County. After attaining a common school education, he attended Mount Pleasant High School. During the spring of 1861 Mr. A first came to Kansas, and located in Doniphan County. He removed to Brown County in 1864, where his time was divided between agricultural pursuits and school teaching. He served four terms as Trustee of Walnut Township, and in 1879 was elected Register of Deeds, being re-elected in 1881. Being a gentleman of tact and decided ability, he is admirably adapted to fill this position, discharging the various duties in a faithful and competent manner. He is a member of the Congregational Church of Fairview.

STEPHEN W. ALDRICH, Surveyor of Brown County, was born in Tioga County, N. Y., in 1837. His education was acquired in the High School of Lonsdale, R. I., where he was a student a number of years. He then for a time studied and practiced civil engineering, which he quit in June, 1861, to volunteer with Battery A, of the First Rhode Island Light Artillery. This battery figured extensively in the battles of the Potomac and took an active part in all the engagements from Bull Run to Cold Harbor, Va. After serving his country three years, he returned home and at once began a thorough course at Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College at New York City. Here he continued until 1866, his instructions including telegraphy. At the expiration of that time, he came West to Brown County, Kan., and made school teaching his vocation. In 1869, he was elected County Surveyor for two years, and during the fall of 1881, was re-elected to the same office, which he is thoroughly able and competent to fill. As a teacher, Mr. Aldrich has no peer in the State, meeting with the approbation of scholars and parents wherever his field of labor has been.

GREGORY AMANN, carpenter and builder, and Mayor of the city, made his first advent in Kansas in 1855. He only remained a few days, however; then returned to Holt County, Mo. In 1857, he came again to this State, and took up a claim on Mulberry Creek, on the southeast quarter of Section 13, Walnut Township, but worked at his trade, which was that of carpenter, in Hiawatha. During the year following, he located permanently at Hiawatha. In 1861, Mr. Amann entered the great rebellion as a private in the Twenty-fifth Missouri Regiment, enlisting at St. Joe. After serving six months, he returned to Kansas, and in 1864, was enrolled among the State Militia for the suppression of the Price raid. Mr. Amann was born at Wurtemberg, Germany, November 17, 1835, and learned his trade in native country. In 1853, emigrated to the United States, and for a time worked at bridge building on the railroads in Kentucky. Mr. Amann was the first person initiated in the Masonic Order at Hiawatha, Lodge No. 35, and is also a member of Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, and Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13. He is the oldest citizen living in Hiawatha, and was one of the original councilmen of the city. In 1873, he was elected Mayor of Hiawatha, filling that position one term, and in 1882, was re-elected to that office. He does the most extensive carpenter and builder business in Brown County, employing from eight to twelve men in the season. Was married, in 1867, to Miss Ella Warnake.

HOMER E. AUSTIN, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Addison County, Vt., and was born November 21, 1851. He is the son of Andrew Austin, deceased, who came to Brown County, Kan., in the fall of 1867, and located on the same place where his family still live. He also was born in Addison County, Vt., in December, 1819; was reared on a farm, and during his entire life was devoted to that occupation. In the spring of 1866, he removed to Howard County, Iowa, where he lived until his emigration to Kansas. He was a member of the Baptist Church of Hiawatha, and died in April, 1873, aged fifty-nine years. Since then, his son, Homer E., has run the farm, which consists of 180 acres, eighty of which belong to his mother, the remainder to Homer E. It is all fenced and cultivated, forming a very fine farm, excellently improved. He is a member of the same church as his father was.

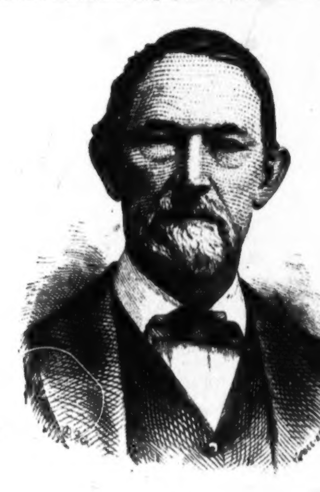
SETH BARNUM, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Addison County, Vt., January 17, 1806. He is the son of Elihu and Tabamer Barnum, who were both of Scotch Irish descent, and related to the Hon. P. T. Barnum, the great showman; his mother's maiden name being also Barnum. After receiving a practical education, he chose farming as his vocation, and followed the same in Vermont until 1850, then removed to Crawford County, Pa., where he farmed extensively up to the time of his emigration to Kansas. This occurred in 1860, when he drove through from Pennsylvania, with five yoke of oxen and a span of horses, settled on the farm where he now lives, which has been his home ever since. He owns 188 acres of land in Brown County, 160 of which are in the home farm, and all is under a high state of cultivation, nicely improved with farm building, choice fruit trees, and in fact every thing pertaining to a prosperous, well regulated farmer's home. Mr. Barnum has always taken an active part in the building up and settlement of Hiawatha and the surrounding country, and his influence was felt in the location of the county seat at that city. He was one of the original members of the Universalist Church Society, of Hiawatha and has always contributed liberally for the support of the cause of Christianity. Mr. Barnum has been married twice. His first wife was Miss Polly Parch, whom he married in Vermont State, October 25, 1829, and who died November 8, 1873, leaving six children, of whom four are boys, and two girls. His present wife was Miss Rachal Ramsey, a native of Cookville Parish, Tenn., to whom he was married March 13, 1874.

JACOB BAUM, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 2, P. O. Hiawatha; is a native of Ohio, born May 13, 1828, in Crawford County, subsequently removed to Holt County, Mo., where he worked on a farm with his parents, until 1858, he then removed to Kansas, and settled first at Council Grove, Morris County. Here he improved a farm and lived until 1864, when he moved to Brown County, and has since resided on his present farm. He is the possessor of eighty acres of as fine farming land as is to be found in the county, all under cultivation and well improved. Mr. Baum has been a member of the School Board of his district. His wife was formerly Miss Amanda Harden, born in Ohio. They are the parents of four children, one of whom is dead, Cornelia. The other three are James E., Malvina and Cyrene.

GEORGE W. BERRY, farmer, Section 16, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Brown County, Kan., during the fall of 1870, locating on Section 10, Hiawatha Township. Here he broke prairie and improved a farm and in 1872, removed to the place where he now lives. This was partially improved, and contains 160 acres, and by careful attention and industry, he has made it one of the best yielding farms, for the size, in this section of the country. Mr. Berry was born in Montgomery County, Ill., November 14, 1848. In the fall of 1862, he enlisted with Company G, of the Thirty-first Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and served in all engagements of his regiment, of any note, until the close of the Rebellion. He then returned to Green County, Wis., to which State he had removed previous to the war, and pursued farming. He was married September 29, 1867, to Miss Esther S Miller, of that State. Both are original members of the Christian Church, of Hiawatha. They are the parents of two children—Nellie M. and Jesse J.

W. W. BEYMER, of the Hiawatha Nursery, was originally from Ohio; was born in Washington, Guernsey County, February 13, 1834. He went from Washington, Ohio, to Bellevue, Huron Co., Ohio, while yet a young man, worked at the saddle and harness business several years, and about the closing of the rebellion, moved to Hiawatha, Brown Co., Kan. Sold nursery stock until 1875, when he started in the nursery business for himself. Was eaten out by the grasshoppers two years, but being a man of perseverance, he kept right along, and to-day, has one of the largest stocks of fruit, shade and ornamental trees, small fruits, etc., west of the Missouri river. He employs several men as canvasers to sell his stock, and is meeting with decided success. He is a gentleman who throughly understands his business, and in apples alone, has at the present time 185,000 growing in in his nursery, and keeps adding to his trade every season. Mr. Beymer is connected with the Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, and Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, of the A. F. & A. M., was also one of the charter members of Bellevue, Ohio, and has been a member of the encampment and subordinate lodge of the I. O. O. F., for a quarter of a century. He was married in Bellevue, Ohio, in 1862, to Miss Isadore C. Sheffield, of that city.

COL. EVERHARD BIERER, attorney-at-law. The Bierers, or Behrers, according to the German orthography, were a numerous, influential and wealthy family in Wurtemburg, Germany, where they held various honorable positions in the civil and military service of the State. George Bierer, a grand uncle of the Colonel, commanded a regiment in the Austrian army during the middle of the eighteenth century, and was created a Baron for distinguished military services, particularly at the siege of Belgrade, Servia, in 1788-89. Col. Bierer is of pure German lineage, his parents being both born in Wurtemburg, the father, Everhard Bierer, born at Wiernsheim, January 6, 1795; the mother, Catherine M. Ruckenbrodt, at Malmsheim, October 28, 1798, and both emigrated with their parents to America in 1804 and settled in Pennsylvania. Everhard Bierer and wife were members of the Lutheran Church, and passed their married life in Uniontown, Fayette Co., Penn., where the subject of this sketch was born January 9, 1827, and where his mother died July 15, 1858, and his father August 2, 1876. He received a liberal education in the private schools and at Madison College in his native town, where he graduated in 1845, having completed a special course, embracing the higher mathematics, natural and mental sciences, the Latin language and English literature. Leaving the college he entered the office of Joshua B. Howell, Esq. (afterward Colonel of the Eighty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and who was killed before Richmond in 1864), and was admitted to the bar in March, 1848. He practiced his profession successfully until April 23, 1861, when he left his office and raised a company of volunteers and entered the military service of the United States as Captain of Company F, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Corps. He served in the Army of the Potomac, and was in the battles of Drainsville, Mechanicsville and Gaines' Hill, where, when the whole of Fitz John Porter's corps was broken and retiring back toward the Chickahominy River, Captain Bierer rallied part of the regiment, including his company, for probably the last ineffectual stand on that bloody field, and he was captured with his command June 27, 1862, and taken to Libby Prison, from which he was released by exchange on the 14th of the following August. Six days afterward he was granted twenty days' leave of absence on account of sickness, and went home, but on learning by telegraph of the impending battle at Bull Run, he returned to the army and rejoined his command on the day of the battle, August 30, and in a few days afterward, September 14, 1862, participated in the engagement at South Mountain, Md., where he was severely wounded in the left arm, the ball passing through the elbow joint and lodging in the forearm, from which it was not extracted until the 25th of the following November, and from which he is crippled in his arm for life. Having become convalescent, October 24 he was appointed Commandant of Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, Penn., with the rank of Colonel, where he organized the 171st, 172d, 173d, 176th, 177th and 178th Regiments Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and November 18 was commissioned Colonel of the One Hundred and Seventy-first. After serving in various parts of southeastern Virginia and in North Carolina, his regiment was ordered to Washington, N.C., where he was placed in command of a brigade and in temporary command of the military district of the Pamlico. He was also at several times in command of Gen. Prince's Division, Eighteenth Army Corps, Major-Gen. J. G. Foster commanding. He was in an engagement at Blount's Creek, near Washington, N. C., April 7, 1863, commanding a brigade under Gen. F. B. Spinola. Spinola's forces were obliged to retire before superior numbers under the Rebel General Hill. To Col. Bierer was assigned the command of the Rear Guard. The duty was critical, the enemy crowding upon him in heavy force nearly the entire night. In the midst of intense darkness, through pine forests and cypress swamps the march was conducted, and he finally succeeded in bringing off the column with the trains and all the wounded. July 1, 1863, he returned with his regiment to Virginia and went with General Dix on his expedition to Richmond. The expedition marched from the White House landing to within eight or ten miles of Richmond, and after some skirmishing with the Rebels, Dix ordered its return to Fortress Monroe. Col. Bierer with his regiment went to Washington, thence to Harper's Ferry, where he joined General Meade, and on the 7th of that month was given a permanent brigade command, and assigned to duty as Military Commandant of the District of the Monocacy, embracing all Western Maryland, with headquarters at Frederick City, Md. September 26, 1863, he was mustered out of the service, the regiment's term of enlistment having expired on the 8th of the previous August. During January, February and March, 1864, Col. Bierer served in the Veteran Reserve Corps, but not liking that service, resigned his command and permanently retired from the army. In October, 1865, he removed from Pennsylvania to Kansas and settled on a beautiful farm one mile east of Hiawatha, Brown County, and resumed the practice of his profession. The Colonel was originally a Democrat, and as the nominee of that party was elected in 1850 the first District Attorney of Fayette County, Penn., for a term of three years. Believing that the Democratic party had become the mere propagandist of slavery he became a Republican in 1856, led the forlorn hope for Fremont in Fayette County, Penn., Democracy, and had the satisfaction of seeing the county carried for Lincoln in 1860 by a majority vote of one in a poll of about 10,000. He became during the war a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, and always regarded him as the greatest and best man of the age. In 1864 he was elected one of the Presidential Electors by the Republican party of Pennsylvania, and in 1868 was the Representative from Brown County in the Kansas Legislature by the suffrages of the same party. In 1868 he voted for Grant, but with considerable reluctance, as he could not endorse the reconstruction and financial policy of the party, and in 1870 renounced all connection with the Republican party. His vote in 1872 was cast for Greeley, and in 1876 for Tilden, whom he considered honestly elected, and regarded the action of the majority of the Electoral Commission as a gross fraud and outrage, perpetrated deliberately for partisan purposes, and resulting in seating a President who was not elected to the office. He became a member of Fort Necessity No. 254, I. O. O. F. at Uniontown, Penn., in February, 1852, and subsequently joined the Encampment. Has been District Deputy Grand Master, and District Grand Patriarch of the order in Pennsylvania, where he is still a member both of Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment. He was also made a Mason at Uniontown in 1864, and has attained all the higher degrees of the order, and is at present affiliated with Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, A. F. & A. M. He is quite liberal and decidedly individualized in his religious opinions and beliefs. He accepts the inspirations of the moral and religious teachings of Scripture, the divine lawship and pre-existence of Jesus, the efficacy of His example for purposes of redemption, and a condition of future rewards and punishments; denies the inspiration of the historical records and the ceremonial and civil laws of the Jews, the doctrine of the Trinity, vicarious sacrifice and eternal punishment; accepts a salvation by conduct, not by belief, and includes all the family of the Great Father who act according to their highest conception of right. He has been a very careful student of both the Old and New Testament writings, and his present views are the result of a thorough acquaintance with the Scriptures, and extensive knowledge of Ecclesiastic history and Polemics. He has also studied carefully the Koran, the Buddhist and Brahminical Scriptures and the teachings of Confucius, which have also to some extent influenced and modified his religious belief. He was married April 8, 1852, at Brownsville, Fayette Co., Penn., to Ellen, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Troutman Smouse, a lady of extensive family connections in Alleghany County, Md., and in Bedford and Somerset counties, Penn. Her maternal grandfather was a soldier in the war of the Revolution. They are the parents of eight children, six sons and two daughters, all of whom are living. The eldest son, Everhard, graduated from Kansas University in the class of 1877, and is now an Examiner in the Pension Office in Washington, D. C.; the second son is now one of the leading merchants in Hiawatha. In person Col. Bierer is stout and robust, nearly six feet in height, of iron frame, and was never sick excepting during the latter part of his confinement in Libby. He is the sixth in a family of seven sons and four daughters, all of whom are yet living and in good health, the oldest of whom is sixty-six years of age, and the youngest forty-four.



Ed Bierer

LIEUTENANT GEORGE M. BLAIR, farmer and stock raiser, Section 16, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Scotland, born in Glasgow June 27, 1835. He came to the United States in 1849 with his parents, David and Mary Blair, who settled in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, where they were engaged in farming. In 1861 George entered the Rebellion as a volunteer in the Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry, Company D. For gallant and active service he was in 1863 promoted to Second Lieutenant, and in the spring of 1864 to First Lieutenant. After serving until the close of the war he returned to Pennsylvania. In the spring of 1869 he came to Brown County, Kansas, and purchased eighty acres of unbroken prairie land. To this he has since added as much more, and cultivated and improved the same until he has now a fine farm, surrounded by beautiful Osage orange hedge. There is a six acre orchard containing many choice varieties of apple and peach trees, also various kinds of smaller fruit. Mr. Blair is identified with the Masonic Order, and with the K. of H. Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338, Hiawatha. Was married in Pennsylvania, in 1857, to Miss Harriet Henderson, native of that State. Mr. Blair and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JOHN D. BLAIR, Postmaster, is a native of Canada, born December 13, 1842, in the city of Hamilton, Ontario. Learned the trade of painter, and in 1864 came to the United States and worked at that occupation in various places previous to his settlement in Kansas. This occurred in the fall of 1870, choosing Hiawatha as his future field of labor. From that time until 1877 he was extensively engaged at house and sign painting, employing from three to ten men as the business of the season demanded. He then accepted the office of Constable and Under Sheriff, being also appointed U. S. Deputy Marshal, during which time he did an extensive collecting business. Served two years as a member of the City Council, and was Mayor of Hiawatha one year. During this time he made great improvements in the city, and was the first to build tenant houses there, which caused a big boom in this enterprise. In April, 1882, Mr. Blair was appointed Postmaster by President Arthur, and is a gentleman fully competent to fill this important position. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, and a charter member of the Encampment No. 33, and at this writing is Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F. of Kansas. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge at Hiawatha, and also a member of Diamond Lodge, No. 56, Knights of Pythias. He was married March 12, 1873, to Miss Lizzie Hall, daughter of H. F. Hall, deceased, who was one of the first merchants of Brown County.

ABRAHAM BOLLIGAR, pastor of the German Reform Church, was born in Canton Aarjau, Switzerland, December 24, 1844. After receiving a common school education, he attended St. Chrischona Theological College, where he graduated in 1868. He was immediately consigned to a mission in the United States, at Franklin, Sheboygan Co., Wis. Here he completed his course of studies, and was afterwards sent to Allamakee County, Iowa, where he took charge of his first parish. After remaining there three years he went to Wells County, Indiana, and from there to Hiawatha in 1877, where he established the German Reform Church, and has since been pastor of the same. He was married July 7, 1869, in Iowa, to Miss Mary Berner, who is also a native of Switzerland.

ARTHUR D. BROWN, of the firm of Brown & Lemons, family grocery store, was formerly a resident of Garrard County, Kentucky, born August 15, 1844. From 1867 to 1875 he was engaged at merchandising in the town of Lancaster, same county, but his store was then destroyed by fire. In February, 1880, he came to Hiawatha and established the above business house, where he has a live, prosperous trade, and an excellent stock of goods. Mr. Brown took part in the great Rebellion, being in the Confederate Army, with the Sixth Kentucky Regiment for about two years. He is a member of the Blue Lodge and Chapter of the Masonic Lodge at Hiawatha, and worships at the First Presbyterian Church. His wife was Miss Ella Harris, of Mississippi. Joseph Lemons, of the above firm, came to Hiawatha in April, 1880, and from that time until the organization of this firm in January, 1882, was employed at contracting for the digging of wells and erection of tanks along the line of the St. Joe & Western R. R. from St. Joe, Mo., to Grand Island, Neb. He is a native of Crawford County, Wis., born October 3, 1845, and during the latter part of his residence there was employed at furnishing bridge timbers for the Milwaukee & Prairie du Chien R. R. Was afterwards extensively engaged at contracting for railroad ties on the line between Gallatin, Mo., and Omaha, Neb., from which latter place he removed to Kansas.

GEORGE W. BROWN, farmer, Section 10, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Illinois, and was born November 18, 1843, in Pike County. He followed the occupation of farming in his native State until the fall of 1870, then came to Kansas, and locating first on Section 6, Mission Township, Brown County, where he improved a farm of 145 acres. In 1879 he became proprietor of the farm where he now lives. This consists of 160 acres, all well cultivated, and forms a thrifty and well regulated farm under Mr. Brown's judicious management. There is an orchard of over 200 choice fruit trees, and this is fast becoming one of the important features in the culture of this State. Mr. Brown married, January 15, 1866, Miss Martha Greens, of Illinois, by whom he has four children—Charles E., Ida A., George H., and Gracie E. Mr. Brown and his wife are members of the First Baptist Church of Hiawatha. He has been a member of the Board of Education of his town for a number of terms, and was also a soldier in the late war, volunteering in 1861 with the Thirty-third Illinois Infantry, Company I, and veteraned in the same regiment and company in '64. Served his country until December, 1865, and took an active part in all the engagements of his regiment.

WILLIAM S. BROWN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 5, P. O. Hiawatha, came originally from Ross County, Ohio, where he was born December 8, 1841. After acquiring a common school education he was engaged in farming in the lumber trade until the breaking out of the rebellion, when he enlisted with Company A of the Eighteenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in August, 1861, and served until his regiment was discharged in November, 1864, acting in the capacity of Sergeant most of the time. Was in Nagley's division of Thomas' corps, and took an active part in the battles and skirmishes of the Army of the Cumberland. At the battle of Chickamauga, September 20, 1863, Mr. Brown was wounded in the left elbow. In June, 1865, he came west to Holt County, Mo., where he made his home until the fall of 1867, when he concluded to try his fortune in Kansas. This he did by purchasing some land in the Kickapoo Reservation, which forms a portion of his present farm. He was one of the first settlers on this reserve, and is now the possessor of some 280 acres under cultivation, with the exception of eighty acres of native timber. He has a fine orchard, embracing three acres of choice fruit trees of every kind indigenous to this State. Mr. Brown is engaged to some extent in stock raising, and his experience in this line has proved very profitable to him. At present he has on hand about thirty-five head of graded cattle and 100 hogs. Mr. Brown and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, Hiawatha. She was formerly Miss Frances Middleton, of Ohio, whom he married in June, 1865. Their family consists of three daughters and a son—Laura A., Jessie J., Nellie B., and Samuel T.

GEORGE W. BUBACH, proprietor of the Hiawatha fruit farm, was born in Lancaster County, Pa., March 3, 1814. In early life he followed the occupation of farmer, living in Ohio nine years, in Princeton, Bureau Co., Ill., twenty-one years, and in 1869 came to Hiawatha. His intention was to start a nursery, but soon found it difficult to compete with Eastern agents and abandoned that project. He then started in the fruit raising business, devoting his entire farm of eighty acres to this enterprise. Many persons predicted failure for him in this line, but by careful industry and the devotion of his time and energy to it, has made it a decided success. He has all kinds of peach, plum, cherry, apple, apricot, and in fact all the kinds of fruit grown in the country; also two acres of blackberry vines which in 1882 yielded over 200 bushels, and a visit to his farm will at once convince any person that Kansas is fast assuming importance as one of the most extensive fruit growing States in the Union. Mr. Bubach is classed among the most extensive fruit growers in the State, and he says of the four States that he previously lived in, he would not exchange Kansas for any of them. He was married in Ohio in 1838 to Miss Mary Byers. They are the parents of three sons and two daughters, all of whom are living on farms of their own, and making a success of fruit growing and stock raising.

JAMES BUSSING, physician and surgeon, senior member of the firm of Bussing & Woods, was born in Washington County, N. Y., October 4, 1838. Was reared in Ohio and Indiana. Entered the service of the United States in the One Hundred and Twentieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, August, 1862, at Mansfield, Ohio. Was in the battles of Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Magnolia Hills, Siege of Vicksburg, and Jackson, Miss. Was captured on Red River March 3, 1864, and confined in the rebel prison, Camp Ford, Texas, until May, 1865. Was mustered out of the United States service July 7, 1865. He then went to Monmouth, Ill., and finished his literary education. Commenced the study of medicine in 1868, and graduated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa, January, 1875, came to Hiawatha, Kan., and has since continued to practice his profession at that point. Dr. Bussing is a member of the State Medical Society of Kansas, also a ruling elder in the United Presbyterian Church of Hiawatha, through whose instrumentality it was organized. Dr. William M. Woods, junior member of the firm, is a native of Macoupin County, Ill., was born June 28, 1850. He graduated from Blackburn University in 1870, and in 1878 and 1879 attended Rush Medical College of Chicago. Two years later was a student of Louisville Medical College, graduating from the latter in February, 1882. In June of the same year Dr. W. came to Hiawatha, Kan., when the above firm was established.

CASE, McLAUGHLIN & CO., dealers in general merchandise; this extensive business house was established in the fall of 1876 and known as E. Case & Co.; the latter being John S. Lemon. They operated successfully, and during the spring of 1878 Thomas McLaughlin was added to the firm. Two years later Mr. Lemon retired, A. McLaughlin taking his place; and in October of the same year Mr. Case also retired. From that time until March, 1882, the firm was known as McLaughlin Bros., and was then changed to its present name. It consists of Edward Case, Andrew and Thomas McLaughlin and Christian F Joss. They have a fine store room, 110x25, which is well filled with one of the most extensive and complete stocks of general merchandise to be found in Brown County or the surrounding counties. Some idea of the magnitude of the business conducted by this house may be formed when we state that their sales for the year 1881 amounted to over $60,000. In addition to the four partners there are two clerks employed, and all the members of the firm are thorough competent business men, with years of experience in this line. The McLaughlins were originally from Holmes County, Ohio, where both were born; Andrew, the elder, was a soldier in the great rebellion; he enlisted in 1862 with Company I, of the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and was raised to the position of Quartermaster Sergeant. He took an active part in all the engagements of his regiment, and served until the close of the war. He came to Kansas during the spring of 1858, locating at Highland, Doniphan County, where he worked at the carpenters' trade for one year. At the time of the great mining excitement in 1859, Mr. McLaughlin went to Pike's Peak, but returned to Kansas the year following and settled at Hiawatha. He was elected Treasurer of Brown County in 1870 and held that office two terms. He served one term as Mayor of the city and is at this writing one of the County Commissioners. His brother Thomas has been Councilman of Hiawatha three terms. Edward Case, of this firm, was formerly from Painesville, Lake Co., Ohio. Came with his parents to Kansas in 1859 and commenced farming with his father, E. Case, at Troy, Doniphan County. He afterward ran a boot and shoe store in that town, and in 1869 moved to Hiawatha and purchased the stock of W. B. Barnett, running for two years. Mr. Case took part in the late war, volunteering in 1862 with Company A, of the Eighty-fourth Illinois Infantry, at Quincy, Ill. He served until the close of the war, participating in all the principal engagements of his regiment. Christian F. Joss, junior member of this firm, is a native of Holmes Co., Ohio; came to Kansas with his parents in 1858, and settled at Leavenworth City; removed to Brown County in 1864, and has since been a resident of the same. His connection with the above firm dates from March, 1882.

WILLIAM CLEMENT, retired farmer, was born in Butler County, Pa., August 5, 1818. He lived at home working on a farm with his father until 1836, then removed to Lenawee County, Mich., where he improved a farm and worked it successfully until 1851; at this time he removed to Grant County, Wis., and for a number of years was known as one of enterprising farmers of Glenhaven Township. In 1870 he came to Brown County, Kan., located on Section 24, Hiawatha Township, where he resided three years; then his health failed and he removed to the city of Hiawatha, where he has since been a resident. Mr. Clement was a soldier in the late war; he enlisted with Company H, of the Thirty-sixth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, taking an active part in his country's service for two years and seven months. His son William was also a participant with the Thirty-third Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. The subject of this sketch was married May 20, 1839, in Michigan to Miss Joanna Ayers; the names of their children are as follows: Louisa, now Mrs. William Brew, of Hiawatha; Margaret A. married James Miller; Anna, now Mrs. George Sprague; George W., Francis A., John A. and Nettie M., now Mrs. James Dunn. Mary E. married Charles Chandler, of Hiawatha, Kan.

T. C. CLARK, General Insurance Agent for the Farm Department of the Phoenix Insurance company of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the counties of Brown, Doniphan and Atchison (succeeding T. J. Hayes, Esq.), and special agent for the Kansas Mutual Life, was born in Northampton, Mass., March 12, 1826, and lived in his native State until his eleventh year when his parents removed to near Cleveland, Ohio, where they lived seven years, and then removed to Geauga County, in the same State, where they resided for a great number of years, and where some members of the family still live. Mr. Clark was educated in the public and normal schools of Ohio, among others, at the Geauga Seminary, better known as the "Chester Cross Roads School," being the same institution of learning once attended by Garfield. Mr. C. attended and taught schools in Ohio until his twenty-second year, when he returned to New England, where he was engaged in the insurance business for several years—principally in his native State and in Maine. While here Mr. C. learned the then new art of daguerreotyping and traveled extensively and took pictures in the principal Southern and Western cities. He was thus engaged for a period of seven years, and then settled at Wellsville, Ohio, where he married and opened a gallery which he operated for a short time, and then removed to La Salle, Ill., where he resided nearly a year. He then (in 1857) visited the States of Kansas and Nebraska, and after a sojourn of several months, returned to Ohio, locating at Youngstown, where he operated a daguerrean gallery for three years, and removed from there to Pennsylvania, where he resided until 1870, in which year he removed to Kansas and located near Highland, where he was engaged in teaching and farming, and where he resided until the spring of 1882, when he removed to Hiawatha, where he re-engaged in the insurance business, has since resided and which city he intends making his future home. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity. He was married in Wellsville, Ohio, February 5, 1856, to Miss Sarah M. McGittigan, a native of Pennsylvania. They have had three children, two of whom are living. His only son, Charles T., a graduate of Highland University, valedictorian of his class, and for a year principal of the high school at Atchison, having received his appointment after a severe competitive examination, a young lawyer of great promise, was drowned September 2, 1881, at Doniphan while bathing in the Missouri River. He was admitted to the bar at Atchison in 1879, passing a brilliant examination, and at the time of his death had already won an enviable reputation as an orator and lawyer. Mr. Clark has two daughters left, whose names are Willie and Grace B.

THURSTON CHASE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 13, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Bartholomew County, Ind, February 22, 1831. Son of Isaac and Clarinda Chase, the former of English, the latter of Irish descent, her family name Clark. His father was a miller by trade and pursued that vocation successfully in Indiana for many years. Mr. Chase received such education as his county afforded in that early day, then helped his father in the mill and on the farm until he became of age. He then started out to hoe his own row in the world, and made a trip to Cincinnati. He did not make anything, however, by this move, and returned to his native county, where he lived until June, 1852, this being the date of his first move in a westerly direction. This terminated at Winterset, Iowa, where he accepted a position on the Engineer Corps, then making a preliminary survey for the Davenport & Council Bluffs Railroad. At the expiration of two months he went to a point on the Missouri River, now known as Nebraska City, which was then an Indian trading post, and known in those days as Old Fort Kearney. Here he clerked among the traders until the latter part of the year, when he removed to St. Joe, Mo. In January, 1853, Mr. Chase first came to Kansas, and for a time lived with one Mr. Harden, who kept a trading post where the present village of Wathena is now situated, in Doniphan County. While residing with him he marked out a claim which was the first one in that county. Then returned to Missouri, followed various occupations and was married in Andrew County, to the daughter of Nicholas and Julia Deakins, who were very early settlers in that part of Missouri; her Christian name is Harriet. In May, 1854, Mr. Chase returned to Kansas and took up a claim on the southwest quarter of Section 11, Township 3 and Range 18, and was the first white settler; took up the first claim and made the first improvements in Brown County. In February, 1855, he brought his family from Missouri and established them on his claim, and proclaimed Kansas his future home. On July 4, 1856, his wife died and about the same time the country was involved in trouble with the border ruffians. Mr. Chase, therefore, canvassed the county in the interest of the Free-soilers, with a petition which was forwarded to President Buchanan. About this time he sold his first claim and in October of the same year bought the claim where he now lives, which was just enough improved to hold, and for which he paid $100 for 160 acres of land. November 16, 1856, he married his second wife, Matilda C. Proctor, daughter of Moses Proctor, one of the earliest settlers in the county, by whom he had three children: George W., Mary E., now Mrs. Jesse Miller of Doniphan County, and John C. Mrs. Chase died March 19, 1864, and at this time the subject of this sketch was serving his country in the war of the Rebellion, having taken twenty-five men from his own county, to St. Joe, Mo., where they were enrolled with the State Militia, Mr. Chase being elected Second Lieutenant. In the spring of 1862 he returned to Kansas, recruiting a portion of Company H, of the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and upon the organization of the same was defeated by two votes as Captain. He entered the army as a private, but after about three months' service was taken sick and released to go home. Upon his recovery recruited a part of Company H, of the Fourteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, of which he served as Orderly Sergeant until the close of the war. Then returned home and has since given his attention to farming and stock-raising. He was married August 30, 1865, to Miss Olive Teas, by whom he has four children: William T, Jane T., Eddie T. and Alfred L. The second child, Jane T., died September 26, 1870. Mr. Chase was one of the original members of the first Methodist Episcopal Church society, organized in the county, and also of the first School Board, of which he has been Director since. He has seen a great deal of the hardships of pioneer life, but those are past and to-day he is surrounded by everything that can make life comfortable, owning a good farm of 320 acres, with excellent improvements in every shape.

REUBEN C. CHASE, green house and nursery, is a native of Otsego County, N. Y., born February 1, 1835; received a common school education in his native county, and also attended the Franklin Institute in Delaware County. At the completion of his studies he secured a situation to teach in Cooperstown Seminary, and afterward became principal of the graded school at Unadilla. He took part in the war of the Rebellion, enlisting with Company E, of the Third New York Volunteer Cavalry, but after serving one year, his health failing from exposure during service, he was discharged. He returned home and October, 1862, married Miss Julia A. Houghton, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio. In the spring of 1864 Mr. Chase re-enlisted with the First New York Engineers and served until the close of the war, and then returned to his native State and resumed school teaching. In 1867 he came to Hiawatha, permanently locating on the place where he now lives. In 1870 he was elected County Superintendent of Public Instruction, which position he held three terms, having previously been principal of the Hiawatha school. He also taught the same school in 1880. Mr. Chase established his nursery in 1876 and now has twenty-five acres in all kinds of fruit trees best adapted to this Western climate. He is also proprietor of two large green houses, 18x60, where anything in the form of choice house or garden plants and cut flowers in beautiful designs may be found. He was Township Clerk of Hiawatha a number of terms, and is now one of the Trustees of the Morrill public library. He has always been a strong advocate of temperance and was largely instrumental in ridding Brown County of that able assistant of human depravity, the saloon. He is connected with Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, I. O. O. F., and is a charter member of the Star of Hope Lodge No. 1338, of the K. of H., and was first presiding officer in said Lodge.

CHARLES T. CORNING, proprietor of City Laundry, was formerly from Ozaukee County, Wis., where he was born April 27, 1847. Here he received a common school education and worked in his father's blacksmith shop until August, 1864, when he enlisted in the Ninth Wisconsin Light Artillery and served until the close of the rebellion. During the spring of 1868 he came to Kansas with his parents, William B. and Alvira Corning, and located at Hiawatha. For some time after his arrival here he was engaged in freighting on the railroad to St Joe, Mo. Then commenced draying, which business he pursued in connection with the ice business until April, 1882. At this time he established the first steam laundry in Brown County. This is supplied with all the modern improvements, employs from six to eight persons, and is fast becoming one of the leading enterprises of the city. Mr. Corning served as Constable of Hiawatha for three years, and during a portion of that time was Deputy Sheriff under Benjamin McCoy. Mr. Corning is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, Mount Horeb Chapter No. 43 and commandery No. 13 of the A., F. & A. M. Was married in Wisconsin 1866 to Miss Jane L. Adams, of Fond du Lac.

HON. JOHN P. DAVIS, President of Kansas Mutual Life Association, and also of the firm of Knapp, Moon & Davis, abstractors and real estate agents, was born in Ohio January 29, 1839, in Ashland County and moved to McDonough County, Ill., in 1855, where he was extensively engaged in farming and stock raising and shipping; came to Kansas in the fall of 1873, locating two and one half miles east of Hiawatha, where he owns one half section of land, now forming one of the finest and best improved farms in Brown or the surrounding counties. His farm residence was a two story frame building, 33x34, of modern style and architecture, and is well surrounded by ornamental and forest trees of his own planting to the extent of eight acres; there is also a fine orchard consisting of all kinds of choice fruit trees, and in fact every thing that goes to make up a well regulated and successful farm, with large barn and other comfortable out buildings. Mr. Davis is also extensively engaged in raising fine graded stock. For a number of years previous to his connection with the above firm dealt largely in grain and live stock. He represented Brown County in the Legislature two years with marked ability. For a number of years he has been a member of the Agricultural Society of Brown County, serving as president three years of that time. In the fall of 1882 Mr. Davis built and moved into a very fine two story residence, large and convenient, of modern style and architecture, located on corner of Third and Miami Streets, Hiawatha, Kan. His residence grounds contains two acres and is tastefully arranged with fruit and ornamental trees. He has always taken an active part in the advancement of the interests of his county and State, doing all in his power for the future of the same. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Was married in Illinois in 1858 to Miss Sarah Horrabin, a native of England. Both have been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for a quarter of a century. Mr. Davis is a leading and inspiring worker in every movement for the moral and material advancement of the county; holds a high place in the popular confidence and is one of the foremost and best men in this region.

JOHN H. DAVIS, farmer, Section 25, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Washington County, Penn., August 2, 1818. He took part in the Mexican war, enlisting with the Second Pennsylvania Regiment in the Westmoreland Guards on the 9th of January, 1846. He removed to Winnebago County, Ill., in 1854, where he followed farming, and was married February 21, 1856, to Miss Margaret Hayes. On the 29th of March, 1872, Mr. Davis came to Kansas and located on Section 36, Hiawatha Township, and improved eighty acres of land. At the expiration of two years he removed to his present farm, where he has 120 acres, forty of which is in pasture and the remainder under a high state of cultivation. The entire farm is surrounded by hedge and divided into twenty-acre fields by cross fences. Mr. Davis and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church at Hiawatha. They are the parents of six children—Samuel T., a resident of Macomb County, Ill.; Nancy J., married to John Woods, of Wheeling, West Va.; John C., George B., William T. S., and Martha, now Mrs. S. C. Hall, of Hiawatha.

S. C. DAVIS is a native of Ohio, born May 11, 1828, in Columbiana County. His occupation was that of tailor; in the early portion of his life, in 1852, he made a trip across the plains to California, and in 1863 visited the gold regions of Montana, returning home in a Mackinaw boat down the Missouri River, starting at its head waters, being on the tour forty-five days; but during the latter part of his residence in Ohio he was a life insurance agent. In the spring of 1881 he came to Hiawatha, Kan., became interested in real estate and in March of the year following, moved his family to and became a citizen of Hiawatha. Mr. Davis was one of the founders of the Kansas Mutual Life Association, and upon its organization was elected vice-president of the same. He has generally been successful in his business operations. He was married March 2, 1852, to Miss Lorella C. Grubb, of Ashland, Ohio. They have two children—Ida A., now married to A. E. Slocum, of Ashland, Ohio, now a resident of Hiawatha; and Odelphia O., married to L. Hermon, of Hiawatha.

LUTHER DAVIS, farmer and stockraiser, Section 35, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Ohio, and was born April 20, 1837, in Huron County, and has always followed the occupation of farming. At the breaking out of the Rebellion he enlisted with the First United States Engineers, in which he served his country two years. He returned to Ohio where he lived until the spring of 1870, when he came to Kansas. He owns a well-improved farm of 160 acres, which, when he became possessor of it, was unbroken prairie, and at the time of his settlement in this State he did not have money enough to purchase a cow. The improvements are good and substantial, consisting of a fine large two-story stone residence, other buildings such as are necessary on a well-regulated farm, and a large peach and apple orchard. Mr. Davis is a member of the K. of H. Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338, Hiawatha. His wife was Miss Susanna Beck, whom he married in Ohio in 1860.

ELI DAVIS, farmer and stockraiser and shipper, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Ohio, born November 3, 1832, in Ashland County. His parents were Amos and Nancy Davis, and he is the third of seven sons, four of whom are now residents of Brown County. In 1854 Mr. Davis removed to McDonough County, Ill., and was an extensive farmer of that locality. During the fall of 1873, he came to Kansas, purchased 160 acres of partially improved land, one mile west of Hiawatha, and has made of it a fine farm. He now owns 220 acres in Brown, and 160 in Nemaha counties, and in addition to his farming interests, is engaged in buying and shipping live stock, sending off over 200 car-loads during the year of 1881. Was married in Ohio in 1853; his wife's maiden name, Hannah Chandler. They are the parents of four children living—Martha J. Judson, Simeno B. and Herbert. Mr. Davis and wife are members of Methodist Episcopal Church, also of the K. & L. of H., while the former is connected also with the K. of H. Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338.

SAMUEL DETWILER, proprietor of Walnut Row Stock Farm, Section 17, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Kansas in the spring of 1875, and in the fall of the same year, purchased the land composing the farm where he now resides. This was a partially improved farm of 320 acres, which Mr. Detwiler has cultivated and improved until it is now in a fine condition, surrounded by a beautiful hedge fence, in fine order. The farm is also crossed with this fence, dividing it into fields convenient in pasturing stock. He has gone into fruit raising quite extensively, having a young apple orchard of 400 trees, and nearly the same amount of peach trees, in addition to which he has fifty choice grape vines, and other small fruits in abundance. Mr. Detwiler has been engaged at buying and shipping stock with J. P. Davis & Co. for a number of years, and raises a good deal of the same on his farm. He was born in Franklin County, Penn., April 17, 1837, but while yet a lad, his parents removed to a county by the same name in Ohio. Here he was reared, and after acquiring a common school education, worked on a farm until coming to Kansas. He has been married twice. The first time in Ohio, in 1859, to Miss Anna Hoffman, who died in 1863, leaving one daughter—Lizzie. He married his present wife in 1865. She was Sarepta J. Lehman, a native of Pennsylvania. They are both active workers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Hiawatha, to which society they belong. They are the parents of two children—Anna E. and James G. Mr. Detwiler was one of the organizing members of Brown County Agricultural Association, and of Brown County Horse Association, and is secretary of the latter named organization. Is also a member of the K. of L. Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338.

THOMAS B. DICKASON, Probate Judge of Brown County, came to Kansas in May, 1869, and opened a jewelry store at Hiawatha, which was the first of the kind in the county. This he conducted for twelve consecutive years, and is now succeeded by his son, A. O. Dickason. In 1874, Mr. Dickason was elected Probate Judge of Brown County, and this office he has ably and efficiently filled since by making many true and lasting friends among the people. Judge Dickason was born in Jackson County, Ohio, April 2, 1824. His education was such as was afforded by the common schools of that early day. In 1853, he was elected County Treasurer of that county, in which capacity he served eight years, his last term being from 1863 to 1865; during the former year Morgan made his famous raid through Ohio. He and his men hunted like wolves for the county funds, but Mr. Dickason having been apprised of their coming, had secluded himself and the money in the fields and the woods, and thereby saved himself and the county funds. In 1865, he embarked in the jewelry business, but at the expiration of three years, quit it and spent one year in traveling through the Western States, finally settling down as stated above. He was re-elected Probate Judge November 7, 1882, for two years more. He was married in his native State in 1854, to Miss Rebecka A. Reasoner. He is a member of the Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, of the A., F. & A. M.

BENJAMIN W. DODGE, family grocery store, West Hiawatha, was born August 3, 1834, in Waldo County, Maine. The early portion of his life, from 1854, to 1867, was passed in California, part of the time following the occupation of miner, the other part engaged in merchandise. In 1867, he returned to his native State, and two years later came to Kansas to look up a location. His choice finally centered on Hiawatha, where he became a merchant in 1870. In the spring of 1871, Mr. Dodge commenced running a grocery store, but after a short time changed to an extensive dry goods and grocery house. This he run until May, 1882, when he removed to his present situation, starting the first store in West Hiawatha, and erecting the first dwelling house in this same locality. Mr. Dodge is a gentleman of excellent business qualities, and by close attention to business, and the superior class of goods kept, has secured his share of the patronage of the people.

DAVID FELLER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 36, P. O. Hiawatha, was formerly from Switzerland, born September 3, 1835. Learned the shoemaker's trade in his native country, and after coming to the United States, lived first in Tuscarawas County, Ohio. In 1859, he removed to Benton County, Iowa, where he followed the occupation of farmer for eighteen years, and was married there in 1860, to Miss Maria Cechrist, whose birthplace was Switzerland. During the fall of 1877, Mr. Feller came to Kansas and purchased the farm where he now lives, which contains nearly 200 acres of fine farming land, all under a high state of cultivation, and surrounded and crossed by an ornamental as well as useful hedge fence. Some of his improvements are a good substantial residence, barns and other necessary outbuildings for the accommodation of stock and produce, and a fine three acre orchard in bearing. He and his family are members of the German Reform Church, Hiawatha.

JOHN T. FULLER, farmer, Section 26, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Massachusetts, born near the city of Boston, August 9, 1850. Is the eldest son of George and Louisa Fuller, who were descended from the old New England stock, his mother's maiden name Jefferson. While he was yet a small child, they changed their place of residence to Pike County, Ill., and here he attended school during the winters and worked on the farm summers, until eighteen years of age. Then left home and went to Jacksonville, same State, where he learned the carpenter's trade, and afterward worked at the same at Springfield, until his removal to Kansas. This transpired in the summer of 1866, when he settled on his present farm of 160 acres. At that time it was all wild prairie, but by perseverance and industry, Mr. Fuller has made of it a successful and profitable enterprise, and it is now all highly cultivated, and possesses a young orchard, bearing. He was married in 1874, to Miss Ella F. Weeks, of New Hampshire. They have two sons, Walter W. and Frank L.

JOHN H. FRASER, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Hiawatha, and of the firm, Fraser & Burt, dealers in agricultural implements. Was born in Monroe County, N. Y., December 18, 1836. Removed to Kane County, Ill., with his parents, in 1841, where he followed the occupation of farmer to a considerable extent. In 1862, he enlisted with Company I of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served in the same till the close of the great Rebellion. Mr. Fraser was married in that State in 1866, to Miss Margaret Miller, and in 1870 came West to Kansas, locating on a farm five miles east of Hiawatha, where he has since made his home. In 1871, he commenced in the pump and windmill business, in connection with his farming, and in February, 1882, removed his business to Hiawatha, and formed a co-partnership with Mr. Burt in the farm machinery line. He is a member of Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338, of the K. of H.

REED FRETZ, proprietor of Union Hotel, is a native of Pennsylvania, born March 20, 1850, in Bucks County. Was reared on a farm and previous to coming to Kansas, followed the produce commission business in Philadelphia. During the fall of 1876, he was married to Miss Maggie Landies of that city, and in the year following came to Kansas, located in Brown County, on a farm which was partially improved, near Hamlin. This he run until November of 1881, when he sold his farm, and purchased the property where he is now running hotel. This is a three story frame structure, with thirty-two rooms, and can furnish excellent accommodations for about thirty-five of the traveling public, who will always find in Mr. Fretz, an obliging landlord, and one thoroughly acquainted with his business.

PHINEAS W. FULLER, farmer and stock-raiser, living on the northwest quarter of Section 26, three miles west of Hiawatha, was born in Pike County, Ill., March 6, 1846. His parents removed to Cambridge, Mass., in the fall of 1864, taking Phineas W. with them. While there he attended the Cambridge High School, with the expectation of going through college, but losing his health, he started on the 3rd of July, 1866, for some portion of the West. Joining his brother, John T., in Illinois, they both came to Brown County, Kan., arriving here July 17, 1866, and both settled on wild and unbroken prairie land. Mr. Fuller commenced with 160 acres, but has since added enough to make a half section. It is now highly improved, and surrounded with hedge and wire fence. His outside and cross fences would make a continuous string six miles long; he has also twenty gates. He has one of the most convenient barns in the county on his farm; its dimensions are 30x54, with eighteen-foot posts, a basement under, providing shelter for thirty head of cattle and seven horses; has capacity for storing 1,500 bushels of grain and thirty-five to forty tons of hay. Since the spring of 1872 he has grown an orchard of 400 trees of choice fruit, his crop of apples in 1882 being 200 bushels. He was married in 1871, to Miss Emogene Trink, daughter of Rev. Prentis Trink, from the State of New York. Mr. Fuller and his wife are members of the First Baptist Church of Hiawatha. The schoolhouse for District 29 is on the southeast corner of his farm. Mr. Fuller is extensively engaged in stock-raising, keeping about seventy head of grade cattle, a drove of very fine Poland-China hogs, and a small flock of thoroughbred Cotswold and Southdown sheep.

THOMAS J. GIBSON, dentist, was born in Bourbon County, Ky., August 31, 1829. He received an academic course of education, and at the age of nineteen years began the study of dentistry. He subsequently attended one course of the Baltimore Dental College in 1853, and since that time has been in the constant practice of his profession. Was married at Milwaukee, Wis., in 1866, to Miss Joanna Enright, and in 1870 went to California to reside. The climate did not agree with his wife's health, however, and he was obliged to seek another locality. By the advice of Dr. Samuels, of Omaha, Neb., he settled at Falls City, same State, where he practiced successfully until 1876. At that time he came to Hiawatha, and is the oldest resident dentist in Brown County, and the oldest in years of any in the State. Mr Gibson served three years and six months in the Confederate army, as Brevet-Colonel in J. C. Breckenridge's Corps, and during that time was wounded five times, but none of a serious nature.

JAMES T. GRIMES, senior member of the firm of J. T. Grimes & Bro., wholesale and retail dealers in pumps, windmills, etc., was formerly from Rockford, Ill., where he was born October 1, 1841. He learned the plumbers' trade, and was employed in that line of business from the spring of 1867 until he came to Kansas, twelve years later. He served three years in the war of the Rebellion with Company A, of the Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry. In November, 1879, Mr. Grimes came to Hiawatha and established the above business, of which a decided success has been made. The firm keep four teams traveling through Brown and the surrounding counties, for the sale and delivery of goods. They also operate a well augur, which is a new but very much needed enterprise in Hiawatha. He was married on December 4, 1867, at Rockford, Ill., to Miss Jane M. Cox, of that city.

CORNELIUS GRISSON, farmer, Section 6, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Tennessee, born June 23, 1832. When ten years of age went with his mother to Illinois, where they lived for a time in Springfield; subsequently removed to Union County, same State; thence to Mason County, and here the subject of this sketch was married in 1866, to Miss Nancy E. Hale. During the spring of 1868 he came to Kansas, purchased some unimproved land, and proceeded to make a home here, which he has certainly done, as a visit to his well-regulated, finely improved farm will testify. He is the possessor of 260 acres, all under cultivation with the exception of forty acres of native timber. Their family comprises four daughters and four sons.

JAMES G. HANNA, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 34, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Huron County, Ohio. Was born October 3, 1841. Was reared on a farm, and in 1861 volunteered in the first three months' call, when the Government issued orders for troops. He was not enrolled, however, but subsequently enlisted in what was known as Hoffman's Battalion, in which he served his country nineteen months. December 23, 1864, he married Miss Harriet M. Heller, who was born in the same county as himself. During the spring of 1868 he came to Kansas, settled on Section 35, Hiawatha Township, and improved a farm of 160 acres. Here he lived until the spring of 1874, when he sold out, with the intention of going to Oregon to live, but being disappointed with the country, he returned to Kansas, and purchased the land where he now lives but the improvements have all been put on it by himself. Mr. Hanna has made a decided success of farming in this State, and thinks that Kansas surpasses the Eastern States in that respect. He has not had a failure of crops for fourteen years. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity. He and his wife are connected with the First Baptist Church, Hiawatha. They are the parents of two daughters—Ada A. and Ella J.

JOSEPH D. HARDY, farmer, Section 3, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Kansas in March, 1858, and in the April following pre-empted the land comprising a part of the farm where he now lives. He however located at Hiawatha, commenced freighting from White Cloud, and pursued this and various other pursuits until he began improving his land. In August, of 1860, on account of the extreme drought, he returned to New York, and in August, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, of the One Hundred and Eighteenth New York Infantry, and served until the close of the Rebellion. He however still retained his claim, and in 1866 returned to it, and has since resided there. Is the possessor of 360 acres, all improved, and is quite largely engaged in stock-raising. Mr. Hardy was born at Westport, Essex County, N. Y., August 2, 1835, and during the early portion of his life, or until he first came to Kansas, devoted his time to school teaching. In June, 1866, he was married to Margaret, daughter of John and Margaret Ormiston, who were of Scotch origin. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church. They have two daughters—Isabel and Linda. In 1873 Mr. H. was elected Representative from Brown County, and has always been identified with the promoters of the welfare of the town and county. His father was a soldier in the war of 1812, while his grandfather was a participant in the Revolutionary war.

WILLIAM HAUBER, farmer, Section 3, P. O. Hiawatha, first became a resident of this State in the spring of 1857, coming here with his parents. However, when of age, which was in 1859, he returned to Andrew County, Mo., where he had been raised, but was born in Clark County, Ill., October 31, 1838. In 1862 he enlisted with Company E, of the Thirty-fifth Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the Rebellion, after which he came to Kansas again in 1865. Lived with his parents till the fall of 1867, when he purchased the land comprising his present farm, which he has broken and cultivated from its original wild state. He is the possessor of 104 acres, with good substantial improvements, in the way of residence and farm buildings, and a fine orchard. Mr. Hauber's wife, Lizzie, is a daughter of John Magiott, of Hiawatha Township. They were married in 1870, and are the parents of five sons—John F., George U., Martin H., Daniel C. and Oscar O.

THOMAS J. HAYES, attorney-at-law, was born in Brown County, Ohio, March 4, 1850. His education was acquired in the high schools of Chenoa, Ill., after which he read law at Bloomington, in the same State, in the office of Carr Brothers, and in 1872 was admitted to the bar. On the 15th of March, 1873, removed to Cherokee, Crawford Co., Kan. Was admitted to the bar in this State before Hon. B. W. Perkins, now a member of Congress. Practiced law in Cherokee, Kan., with A. D. Polk; now a prominent lawyer in Minneapolis, Minn. (under the firm name of Hayes & Polk). Removed to Waterloo, Iowa, in 1875, and continued the practice of law under the firm name of Hayes & Polk. Also owned a set of abstracts of Black Hawk County, Iowa. Removed to Sabetha, Kan., in May, 1876. Was married to Miss Ella S. Herbert, of Hiawatha, Kan., July 31, 1877. Removed to Eldorado Kan., August 3, 1877, and from there to Hiawatha, Kan., February 1879, where he now lives. He has held the following offices: City Attorney of Chenoa, Ill., Justice of the Peace in Cherokee, Kan., and is now a member of the City Council of Hiawatha, Kan., and County Attorney of Brown County. He is a member of the following Lodges—Odd Fellows, K. of H., K. & of L. H.

DANIEL HAZEN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 23; P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Vermont, on an island in Lake Champlain, August 13, 1826. Arriving at the age of twenty-one years he removed to Franklin County, N. Y., where he was engaged in farming and merchandising until his emigration to Kansas. This transpired in the spring of 1871, when he settled in Brown County. Mr. Hazen is proprietor of the farm where he lives, which contains 160 acres, also of a quarter section in the same township, Section 11. In addition to this he has 300 acres in Nemaha County. His home farm is under a high state of cultivation, and finely improved, and this, when he became possessor of it, was wild, unbroken prairie land. He has set out a great many choice fruit trees, until he now has about four acres in fruit culture. He engaged in stockraising quite extensively, having now on hand about fifty head of graded cattle. He was married in Vermont, in 1847, to Miss Laura Kinsley, of that State. While a resident of New York State, Mr. Hazen served as Justice of the Peace several terms, and held several other positions of trust. His experience of twelve years living in this State, has convinced him that the climate of Kansas is unexcelled for healthfulness, and as far as agricultural interests are concerned, goes far ahead of the old Vermont hills, and also of New York.

LYNN S. HERBERT, Police Judge, Justice of the Peace, and Insurance Agent, was formerly from Pennsylvania; born November 29, 1822, in Fayette County. Received a liberal education in the High schools of his county, and during his residence in that State, made teaching his vocation, with the exception of the years between 1862 and 1868, when he was engaged in general merchandise. Mr. Herbert came to Kansas in June, 1872. He selected Hiawatha for his future home, then returned to his native State, and in the September following, moved his family to their western home in Kansas. His time has been mostly devoted to school teaching. Mrs. Herbert was formerly Harriet J. Roberts. They were married in Pennsylvania in 1848. Both are members of the First Presbyterian Church, of Hiawatha, and Mr. Herbert belongs to Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A., F. & A. M. Their family comprises seven daughters and one son; all of the girls have held certificates for teaching school.

MORRIS HESSELBERGER, of the firm, S. Hesselberger & Co., dry-goods and clothing, is a native of Germany, born in Hesse-Darmstadt, March 29, 1839. Immigrated to the United States in 1856, and lived with his uncle at New Haven, Connecticut, where he attended school. During the spring of 1860 he came to Atchison, Kan., and until 1864, was extensively engaged in freighting across the plains to the mountains and as far as Salt Lake City, sometimes running as many as ten four-muled teams. After this he settled in Cheyenne City, started a grocery store, and until 1876, was a successful merchant in that place. He then came to Hiawatha, opened a dry-goods and clothing store, and was the second exclusive store of the kind in the city. Mr. Hesselberger belongs to the Masonic fraternity, also to the K. of H., in Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338. He was married in Chicago, in 1869, to Miss Henrietta Gacobi, who was born in Baden, Germany. Both are members of the K. & L. of H., of Hiawatha.

EDWARD HOYE, of the firm of Hall & Hoye, meat market, is a native of Summit Co., Oiho, born February 29, 1852. He came to Hiawatha in 1871 and commenced working in a meat market, which has since been his vocation. In the spring of 1879 he became a partner with Mr. Hall, and they are now doing a heavy and prosperous trade. Mr. Hoye is connected with both the lodge and encampment of the Odd Fellows society at Hiawatha; is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, and Mount Horeb Chapter No. 43, of the A., F. & A. M., and of Hiawatha Commandery No. 13. Sebastin C. Hall, senior member of this firm, he is from Virginia; born in 1844. Came to Kansas in 1865, commenced freighting across the plains, and afterwards spent a number of years in the mines of Colorado. In 1873 he returned to Kansas, located at Hiawatha, and previous to embarking in this business in 1875, was employed at various occupations. Mr. Hall is a member Hiawatha Commandery No. 13; Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, and Mount Horeb Chapter No. 43, of the A., F. & A. M., and is one of the live business men of Hiawatha.

ALBERT H. HULSE, of the firm of Hulse & Kinsey, druggists, was born at Troy, Doniphan Co., Kas., February 2, 1859; his parents were Richard and Esther A. Hulse, who settled at Troy in 1856 and began farming, where they still reside. In 1881 Albert H. Hulse came to Hiawatha from Atchison, where he had been in the drug business two years. On July 4, of this year, he established this business house, and on the 17th of August following, Mr. Kinsey became his partner. The store is 80x24, of modern design, and about the finest finished in the inside of any store-room in the State. The style of shelving originated with Mr. Hulse; the counters are of elegant jet finish, lined with gold. The shelving is in eight-foot sections, all enclosed with plate-glass, in a sash sliding upward. The face of the divisions between the sashes is covered with elegant plate-glass mirrors, which gives it a very beautiful appearance indeed. Their stock is choice and complete in every detail; in fact, the entire establishment is such as is seldom met with outside of large cities. F. A. Kinsey, of this firm, is a native of Indiana, born in April, 1857. Came with his mother to Kansas, in 1870, locating in Troy, and previous to coming to Hiawatha, was engaged in merchandising.

JOHN E. HUNTER, farmer, Section 14, P. O. Hiawatha, was born October 19, 1826, in Lawrence County, Pa. Is a son of Thomas and Margaret Hunter, who were of Scotch-Irish descent, his mother's family name, Elder. John E. learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed during his early life. In the fall of 1881, he came to Kansas and purchased the farm where he now lives. This consists of eighty acres of well improved farm land, surrounded and divided into five fields (convenient for pasturing stock) by a beautiful hedge fence. He has also a fine young orchard, bearing, of over 800 choice fruit trees. Mr. Hunter married in his native State, in 1854, to Miss Jane Patton, by whom he has three children—William E., Mary F., and James E.

STEPHEN HUNTER, Sheriff of Brown County, was born in Wayne County, Mich., August 15, 1848. Came with his parents, William and Sarah Hunter, to Kansas, in 1860. His father purchased a farm in Padonia Township, Brown County; his mother's maiden name was Ross. In 1863, Mr. Hunter enlisted at Falls City, Neb., in the Second Nebraska Volunteer Cavalry, and for one year served on the frontier of Dakota and Nebraska. At the expiration of that time he returned to Kansas, and commenced farming in Brown County, which he continued until the time of his election to County Sheriff in the fall of 1879. In 1881 he was re-elected to the same office, and was the first man to serve two terms in that capacity, in the county. Mr. Hunter was married at Highland, Doniphan Co., Kan., in 1870, to Miss Lizzie Simpson, of New York City. He belongs to the Knights of Honor.

LORENZO JANES, retired banker, was originally from Vermont; was born February 19, 1806, in South Hero, Grand Isle County. His parents moved to Georgia, Franklin County, in the same State, when he was a lad of about fifteen years, where they were engaged at farming. In the early part of 1830, he was married to Miss Lucena M. Post, whose father died in 1852, at the advanced age of ninety-eight years. In 1831 he commenced in the mercantile business at Georgia, and followed it until 1850. Both himself and wife worship with the Congregationalists. He was Town Clerk and Treasurer of Georgia, Vt., for thirteen consecutive years. In 1842 he represented the Town in the State Legislature. In 1851 he, with his family, moved to St. Albans, Franklin County, where he began in the mercantile business and took an interest in the First National Bank of that place, and was one of its directors. In the spring of 1870, he went with C. D. Lawrence to Hiawatha, Kan., and in the January following he became a member of the banking house of Barnett, Morrill & Co., and in 1874 he moved with his family to Hiawatha, where they still live. Charles H. Janes, eldest son of the above and junior member of the banking firm of Morrill & Janes, was born in Georgia, Vt., December 2, 1837. He was a graduate of the high school of that State, and was afterward book-keeper in his father's store at St. Albans; he came to Kansas in January, 1871, becoming cashier and representing his father's interests in the firm of Barnett, Morrill & Co. In 1876 he became a partner in the same, purchasing his father's interest. He is a member of the State Historical Society of Kansas, and is one of the leading and representative men of the city of Hiawatha. He is a member of the Banker's Mutual Aid Society, and was one of the instigators of the Hiawatha Building Company, which has a capital of $25,000; also of the Hiawatha Hotel Company, with a capital of $20,000. He was married in New York City, in 1862, to Miss Mary T. Banta, of that place.

LIEUT. CHARLES W. JOHNSON, County Attorney of Brown County, was formerly from Hickman County, Tenn., where he was born September 19, 1834. He is the son of Hugh and Lucinda Johnson, his father dying when Charles W. was only six months old. His mother afterward married Benjamin Johnson, brother of the deceased, who came to Tennessee from Illinois, to settle up his brother's estate; after the marriage they returned to Bond County, Ill., where Charles W. was reared and educated at Georgetown, Ill., under the tuition of J. P. Johnson, now of Highland, Kan., and in 1858 entered McKendree College at Lebanon, where he was a student for two years. He then commenced reading law, and August 4, 1862, enlisted as a private in Capt. Harries' command of the One Hundred and Thirtieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. After serving until February, 1863, he was promoted to Second Lieutenant, and served in this capacity until the close of the Rebellion. His regiment participated in the siege of Vicksburg, and various prominent battles, and was afterward transferred to the Department of the Gulf and took part in the first and second Red River expeditions. Lieut. Johnson was captured at the battle of Mansfield, April 8, 1864, and was detained a prisoner at Camp Ford at Taylor, Texas, until the close of the war. Returning to his old home in Illinois, he entered the law office of William H. Herndon, formerly a partner of President Lincoln, and in April, 1867, was admitted to the bar. His first practice was in Springfield, Ill., where he opened an office, and March 25, 1868, was married in that city to Miss Annie E. Ogden, of Owego, N. Y. During the fall of 1869 he came to Hiawatha, Kan., opened an office and has since practiced his profession there and at Atchison, where he lived from 1874 to 1879. He was elected to his present office in 1880. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and is identified with Washington Lodge, No. 5, of Atchison.

PERRY JOHNSON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 30, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Indiana, July 7, 1838, but was reared in Knox and Warren counties, Ill. In 1858 he crossed the great plains of the West, and during the Rebellion acted as scout for the Union army for nearly three years, making his headquarters at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. He lost two brothers during the war, who were killed while serving in the same capacity as himself. In March, 1877, he came to Kansas for the purpose of making a home for himself and family, and in the June following moved to his present residence. He owns 144 acres of land, all under a high state of cultivation, with about five acres of orchard bearing fruit. In the fall of 1879 his residence was destroyed by fire, but it was immediately replaced by a good substantial structure, one and one-half stories high. His farm is well supplied by a good barn and outbuildings, and, in fact, everything pertaining to a well regulated farm. Mr. Johnson was married October 20, 1863, in Illinois, to Miss Mary Davis, and previous to coming to Kansas was a resident of Fremont County, Iowa, for nine years.

JOHN W. KAUFMAN, farmer, Section 32, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Union County, Pa., March 27, 1846. When fifteen years of age he enlisted in the great Rebellion with the One Hundred and Sixty-second Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry Company A, at the first three months call. After serving four months he returned home, and soon after removed to Sandusky County, Ohio, where he followed the occupation of farming. Here he was married in October, 1868, to Miss Sarah A. Tea, a native of the same State as himself. He subsequently came to Kansas, and for two years operated his father's farm, on Wolf river, in Doniphan County, then removed to Iowa Township, improved a wild prairie farm of 160 acres, and in 1879 changed his place of abode to Leona, same county. Here he improved another farm, on which he lived till the spring of 1881, when having a chance to sell out with decided advantage to himself, he did so, and immediately came to Brown County and purchased the farm where he now lives. During his residence in Doniphan County Mr. Kaufman held the office of Justice of the Peace, and always took an active part in all public enterprises. He is a member of both the Masonic and Odd Fellows's fraternity, the latter in the lodge at Leona, Doniphan County.

LEWIS KESLER, farmer, Section 16, P. O. Hiawatha, is the son of Ambrose Kesler, who came to Kansas in May, 1858, and located in Walnut Township, Brown County. Here Lewis lived until December, 1879, when he was married to Miss Katie L. Schafer, of Illinois, when he commenced farming for himself. During the spring of 1881 he purchased eighty acres of land, which comprises his present farm. This is all under a high state of cultivation and nicely improved. Mr. Kesler was born October 1, 1857. He and his wife are members of the Evangelical Church at Hiawatha. They have one infant son, unnamed.

MICHAEL L. KLINEFELTER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 26, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Morrill County, Ohio, August 13, 1841. He has always followed the occupation of farming, first at home with his parents until twenty-three years of age, then started at the business for himself. He served four months in the Rebellion with Company I, of the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Was married February 16, 1865, to Miss Maria Shell, who was born in Germany, on the Rhine, but came with her parents to the United States while yet a little child, locating in Morrill County, Ohio. In 1869 Mr. K. emigrated to Kansas, and in the fall of the same year established himself on his present place. This contains 160 acres, which he has improved from wild, unbroken prairie land. It is all under fence, and contains a choice apple and peach orchard of seven acres. His family consists of five children, Laura E., Maggie E., John S., Cora M., and Effa.

JACOB K. KLINEFELTER, of the firm of Speer, Klinefelter & Ely, attorneys-at-law and loan and collecting agents, was born in Columbiana County, Ohio, August 8, 1837, but was reared in Morrow County, where his parents removed while he was an infant. His parents, Joseph and Elizabeth Klinefelter, were extensive farmers in that locality, and in 1857 they came to Brown County, Kan., and settled on a farm two miles east of Hiawatha. Here Jacob Klinefelter lived until 1862, when he enlisted with Company I, of the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry. In May, 1863, was appointed Sergeant of his regiment, which he continued until mustered out in April, 1864. He then enlisted with the Fourth Arkansas Volunteer Infantry and was First Lieutenant and Adjutant of the same until the close of the Rebellion. He then returned to Kansas and commenced farming. In March, 1867, Mr. Klinefelter was married to Miss Lucinda Hall, who died May 23, 1870, leaving one daughter. One year later he removed to Hiawatha, where he followed carpentering until January, 1881, this being the date of his connection with the above firm. Mr. Klinefelter has been employed in the office of the County Treasurer nearly ever since his return from the war. His present wife was Miss Abbie M. Osborne, whom he married August 12, 1876. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, and Encampment No. 33.

JOHN KNEISEL, farmer, Section 27, P. O. Hiawatha, was born November 11, 1827, at Hesse Cassel, Germany. Was there engaged at farming and in 1851 emigrated to the United States, and for some years lived in Erie County, Ohio. In 1855 he commenced farming there, which has since been his vocation. Came to Kansas in 1878 and purchased 160 acres of land, which under his careful management has become a fine thrifty farm, all under cultivation. Mr. Kneisel was married in Ohio in 1853 to Miss Catherine Smith, by whom he has seven children—Henry, Eliza, John C., George, Catherine, Emma and Martin. Mr. Kneisel and family are members of the German Reform Church at Hiawatha.

JOSEPH KOCHER, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Germany, born March 26, 1831, in the State of Woodenburg. He learned the trade of stonemason, and worked at it in his native country until 1856 when he immigrated to the United States, his destination Beloit, Wis. In 1860 he removed to Howard County, Mo., where he followed his trade till the fall of 1861. Then enlisted with the First Missouri State Militia, Company G., and served his country three years. Then went to Booneville, Mo., but only remained there a short time, coming to Kansas in 1865. Lived in Atchison until June, 1866, when he removed to Hiawatha and commenced operations in his line of work. This he pursued until 1880, since which time he has turned his attention to farming. Mr. Kocher contracted and erected the first stone building in Hiawatha, and has done the stone work on a good many of the prominent buildings of Brown County, including the courthouse. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35 of the Masonic Order. Was married in the fall of 1866 to Miss Ellen Headers.

JOHN KREBS, stonemason and contractor, was born in Switzerland February 22, 1842. He learned the trade of stonemason in his native country, and that of slate-roofing in the city of Paris, France. In 1869 he immigrated to the United States and was a resident of New Philadelphia, Ohio, nine months previous to coming to Kansas. In 1870 he selected Hiawatha as his future abode and immediately began work at his trade. His trade has kept on steadily increasing, both in the line of stonemason and slate-roofing, until he now does an active and profitable business; employs from five to ten men as the season demands, and has contracted in the erection of some of the most prominent buildings in Brown and the surrounding counties. Is the oldest resident mason in Hiawatha. Mr. Krebs was married in New Philadelphia, Ohio, February 22, 1870, to Miss Elizabeth Oehler, who was born November 18, 1848, in Switzerland, and whose parents immigrated to the United States when she was seven years of age.

JOHN H. LANGE, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Robinson, was born in Germany, near the city of Cassel, capital of Hesse, October 14, 1835. He followed the occupation of farming, and in 1852 immigrated to the United States. In October of the year following he located in Menard County, Ill., where he lived at the breaking out of the Rebellion. In 1861 he volunteered with Company I, of the Thirty-second Illinois Infantry and served in all the principal engagements of his regiment, including Pittsburgh Landing, Corinth, and all the battles in Sherman's march to the Sea. He served until the close of the war, then returned to Illinois, and in July of 1865 came to Kansas and located at Robinson, Brown County, engaged in agricultural pursuits, and during the winter of 1866 was united in matrimony to Caroline, daughter of Conrad and Sophia Halberstadt, who settled in Brown County in 1858. In 1870 Mr Lange purchased the land where he now lives, which was then entirely unbroken, and now consisting of 160 acres finely improved. He has been two terms Clerk of the School Board of the district in which he lives. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Robinson. Their family consists of four girls and four boys.

CHARLES D. LAWRENCE, retired merchant, was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., February 1, 1824. He received an academical course of education at Aurora, and in 1846 was a graduate of the State Normal School at Albany. He then engaged at teaching, and for some time was Professor of Mathematics at Bethel College, Russelville, N. Y. He subsequently went to Nashville, Tenn., where he conducted a boarding school up to the time of the breaking out of the Rebellion, which broke him up. At this time he accepted the position of Professor of Mathematics in the State Normal School at Albany, where he continued one year, and at the expiration of that time became clerk in the Commissary Department under Col. E. N. Morrill, of Hiawatha. At the close of the Rebellion Mr. Lawrence returned to Nashville, Tenn., and until September, 1866 was Principal of the High School there. He was then elected Superintendent of Public Instruction by the Board of Education, Gen. W. B. Bates being his competitor. This position he filled until his removal to Hiawatha in the spring of 1870. Here he erected the building now occupied by his successors, where he became a successful merchant, and after ten years' labor in that line, retired. Mr. Lawrence has served two years on the Board of Regents of Kansas. In 1848 he married Mary G. Sabin, of Ontario County, N. Y., who died in September, 1865. They were the parents of four sons, viz: Charles G., now one of the leading lawyers of St. Paul, Minn., Albert, a merchant in Hiawatha; Dana, in the banking business in Montana, and James A. The present Mrs. Lawrence is a daughter of L. Janes, of Hiawatha, her name Charlotte J. They were married in 1866.

CHARLES H. LAWRENCE, harness manufacturer and dealer and Deputy Sheriff, is a native of New York State, born May 13, 1844, in Dutchess County. He left home when fourteen years of age to earn a livelihood for himself, and in 1863 engaged at military railroading in the South, at which he continued up to the time of his migration to Kansas. This occurred in the spring of 1870, when he became a resident of Hiawatha, and for a few years dealt in real estate. From 1874 to 1876 he served as Deputy Sheriff of Brown County, and in the fall of 1875 was elected Sheriff of the same. This office he held for two years, and in 1877 purchased his present business from J. O. Gardner, said business having been established in 1870. He keeps six workmen constantly employed, manufacturing his own stock, and has a trade of twenty thousand dollars per annum. Mr. Lawrence was one of the instigators of Brown County Exposition Association, of which he served one year as Secretary and two as Marshal. Is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35 of the A. F. & A. M., and a charter member of Mt. Horeb Chapter No. 43. He belongs also to Hiawatha Commandery No. 13. He has been married twice. His first wife was Miss Lottie M. Beardslee, whom he married at Battle Creek in 1870, and who died five months afterwards. Was married in 1879, at Hiawatha, to Miss Emma J. Haughton.

SAMUEL S. LEEDS, contractor and builder, was born in Clermont County, Ohio, November 14, 1845. When but a lad he removed with his parents to Pike County, Ill., where he learned the trade of millwright, which has since been his vocation. In 1868 Mr. Leeds came to Hiawatha and began the business of contracting and erecting mill elevators throughout Kansas and Nebraska, and has since done a heavy business in this line of work. He has at present on hand contracts for nine large elevators in the above named States, employs about sixty men, and does the most extensive business of the kind in the State. Mr. Leeds served two years in the Rebellion as a volunteer in the Seventh Illinois Infantry Company G. He is connected with the Star of Hope Lodge No. 1338 of the K. of H. To give some idea of the magnitude of the above gentleman's work we will state that he erected an elevator in Sabetha, Kansas, with a capacity of 60,000 bushels; another at Falls City and Auburn, Nebraska, of the same dimensions, and a number of others in different localities of the same capacity. Also the large flouring mills at Woodlawn, Kansas.

DR. WILLIAM D. LEWIS, physician and surgeon, was formerly from Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was born July 14, 1847. Received his education in the High Schools of that city, and was afterwards employed four years as mechanical draughtsman in the office of the Patent Attorney there. In 1867 he became engineer on the Union Pacific R. R., and from the time he quit that until his location in Kansas, was engaged in the drug business at Salt Lake City. During the fall of 1869 Dr. Lewis located at Hiawatha and gave his attention to farming and stock raising for three years; then accepted a position in the drug store of J. W. Pottenger, where he read medicine and practiced pharmacy. In 1878 he attended the St. Joseph Hospital Medical College, graduating from the same in the spring of 1879. Returning to Hiawatha he began the practice of his profession, to which he has since given his undivided attention. Dr. Lewis is a member of the State Medical Society of Kansas, also of the District Medical Association of Missouri. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., and is connected with both the Lodge and Encampment of Hiawatha. His wife was formerly Miss Ida Baker whom he married in September, 1874 at Hiawatha.

STEWART LITLE, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Hiawatha, came originally from Virginia, where he was born in Harrison County, September 12, 1830. His attention was given to stock raising and farming in that State and Pennsylvania previous to coming to Kansas. This occurred in the spring of 1868, and he first settled on a farm near Atchison, but in the spring following removed to Brown County, and was one of the first white settlers on the Kickapoo reservation. Here he lived two years, then removed to Doniphan County, and from that time until March, 1882, farmed in Wolf River township; then removed to Brown County, purchased eighty acres of excellent land, which he is improving as rapidly as possible. Mr. Litle married, October 10, 1856, in Washington County, Pennsylvania, Miss Jane Litle, a native of that county and State. Both have been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for a quarter of a century, and are now identified with that society at Hiawatha.

NATHANIEL D. LOOSE, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 24, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Fairfield County, Ohio, was born May 2, 1846, but reared on a farm in Sandusky County, in the same State. In 1863 removed to Monroe County, Mich., where he made his home until his removal to Kansas; this occurred in the fall of 1868, and he settled on his present farm during the year following. He is the possessor of 276 acres of the finest farm land in the county, all under cultivation, which he has improved himself, as he located on wild prairie. Mr. Loose taught school the winter of 1866-67 in Monroe County, Mich., and has served as a member of the Board of Education of his district for a number of terms. He has been a member of the Evangelical Church Society since he was fourteen years of age, and his grandfather, John Driesbach, was one of the founders of that sect in Pennsylvania. Mr. Loose and wife were original members of that church at Hiawatha. Mrs Loose was formerly Miss Catherine Wonders. They were married in Ohio in 1868 and are the parents of three children—Flora M., John E. and Laurel A. They have also an adopted daughter—Eva Taylor.

ROBERT McQUILKIN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 31, P.O. Hiawatha, came originally from Indiana County, Pa. Born June 17, 1820. During early life he learned the carpenter trade, at which he was subsequently employed seven years, but since that time he has given his attention to farming. In May, 1869, Mr. McQuilkin started for Kansas to seek a wider field of labor, locating in Brown County on the same place where he now resides. This contains 120 acres, which he took right out of the wild expanse of prairie, but which he has cultivated and improved until it is now valued at fifty dollars per acre. He has a fine bearing orchard of 300 apple and nearly as many peach trees, also a grove of forest trees, all of which are of his own planting. The farm buildings are good and such as are necessary on a farm of these dimensions, and the whole is enclosed by a handsome hedge. Mr. McQuilkin was married in 1846, in Pennsylvania, to Miss Eliza Willets. Both are connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, Hiawatha. They have six children—William L., Mary, Abner W., Hattie, Nannie and Martha.

JOHN MAGLOTT, farmer, Section 33, P. O. Hiawatha, was born near the city of Worms, in the village of Heppenheim on the Rhine, December 27, 1820. He lived on a farm with his parents until 1838, when all immigrated to the United States, locating in Richland County, Ohio, near Mansfield. Here his father improved a farm and died at the advanced age of ninety years and four months. In 1842 John moved to Andrew County, Mo., and from there to Kansas in the fall of 1855. Here he pre-empted a claim in Brown County and then returned to Missouri until the spring of 1856, when he brought his family to Kansas and located on a 160, for which he paid $100 (the claim he had he presented to one of his relatives). Here he has lived since, improving his land and adding to it until he now has 460 acres, of which eighty is native timber. Mr. Maglott was one of the earliest settlers in Hiawatha Township, and while Kansas was yet a Territory he served one term as Justice of the Peace. This satisfied his ambition as far as public office was concerned, and he has since avoided it. In November, 1844, he was married in Missouri to Miss Catherine Meisenheimer, who was born in the same place as himself. He and his wife are original members of the Evangelical Church at Hiawatha, and were most liberal contributors in the erection of the present edifice; the parents of five children—Louisa, married to John Barnum; Elizabeth, now Mrs. William Hauber; Mary, the wife of Jacob Moser; Barbara E., now Mrs. Frank Wonder; and George T. C., the son. He sold 176 acres of the home place and is living now in Hiawatha, having retired and quit farming.

HUGH R. MATHEWS, farmer, Section 14, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Pennsylvania; born January 2, 1821, in Westmoreland County. During his young days he learned the tanner's trade, which he worked at until 1860, when he came west to Mercer County, Mo., where he commenced farming. In 1862 he volunteered with Company B, of the Twenty-seventh Missouri Infantry, and served his country faithfully until the close of the Rebellion. Then returned to Missouri, resumed farming, and in the spring of 1869 came to Kansas. After spending three years in examining the land and prospects in several different counties, he finally made Brown County his choice, and bought the farm where he now lives, which was partially improved. At the expiration of one year, however, he went to Jewell County, took up a homestead, lived on it three years, and then returned to the former place, where he still resides. Mr. Mathews was married in Brown County in 1872 to Mrs. Isabella Coe. Her father is still living at the advanced age of ninety-three years, and is the oldest man in Brown County.

AARON R. MAY, lawyer, of the firm of Lacock & May, was born at York, Pa., Feb. 28, 1840. Received an academic course of education in his native place, and afterward read law in the office of H. W. Spangler. In 1867, he was admitted to the bar before the Hon. Robert J. Fisher, when he immediately entered into practice. During the spring of 1868, Mr. May came west to St. Joseph, Mo., where he opened a law office and practiced until March, 1870, this being the date of his location in Hiawatha, Kansas. He formed a co-partnership with Hon. B. F. Killey, and continued in the same firm up to July, 1880, when the firm was changed to Lacock & May. Mr. May was county attorney for Brown County during the years 1871 and 1872, and was city attorney of Hiawatha from 1875 to 1880 inclusive. He was elected mayor of this city in 1878. Mr. May is a member of the Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, of the A., F. & A. M., a charter member of Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, and also a charter member of Hiawatha Commandery No. 13. His wife, Flora, to whom he was married in 1873 at Hiawatha, is a daughter of Hon. B. F. Killey. Mrs. May is a member of the Congregational Church.

ELI MOLL, a retired farmer, Section 28, P. O., Hiawatha, came originally from Pennsylvania, and was born, May 7, 1814, in Union County. His boyhood days were spent on a farm, and in the acquirement of an education. In 1836, he moved to Seneca County, Ohio, and the same year of his arrival there, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Schoch, also a native of Pennsylvania. Here he followed the occupation of farming, and being energetic and a public spirited man, always took an active part in the enterprises of the locality in which he was, and was for many years connected with the United Brethren Church. In the spring of 1881, he came to Brown County and purchased the farm on which he now resides, all of which is under a high state of cultivation. It was formerly owned by W. B. Barnett, one of the first settlers in Hiawatha. The residence is a handsome two-story building, 34x84 feet, constructed of very fine cut stone, and adorned with a spacious piazza. The situation is slightly elevated, with a gradual slope towards the entrance to the grounds. These are embellished and beautified with drives, interspersed with ornamental and forest trees, and in their midst, throwing its clear, pure waters to a height of several feet, may be seen a fountain. These all form a delightful and most charming prospect, and one of the finest and most picturesque residences in that locality, three acres being devoted to the culture of choice fruit trees. The names of Mr. Moll's children are as follows:—Franklin C., a resident of Defiance, Ohio; William G., deceased, a soldier of the Union army, whose only child, Ella, lives near Hiawatha; Eliza S., married to David Decker of Brown County; Sarah C., now Mrs. Levi Close, of Doniphan County, Kansas; Eunice R., now Mrs. D. Rubert of Hiawatha; Hattie A., now Mrs. N. Chase, of Highland; Horace C., of Severance; Eva M., and Lily.

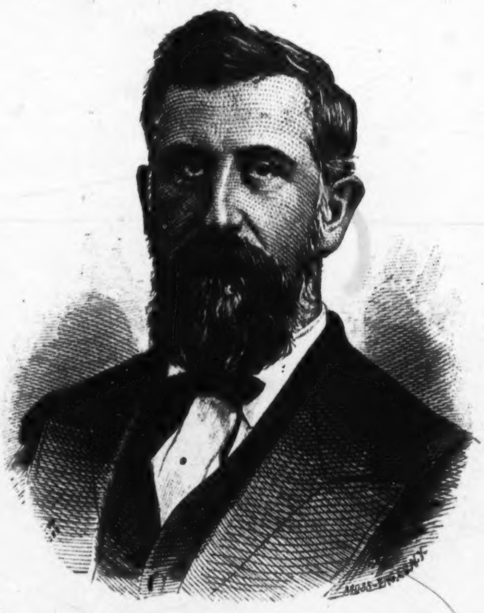
ISAIAH MONHOLLON, farmer, P. O. Baker, came to Kansas in 1861 with his parents, who located in Doniphan, where he lived until he was seventeen years of age. The intervening time, until he came to Hiawatha Township, where he resides at present, was spent chiefly in Atchison, Mc Pherson and Doniphan counties. Mr. Monhollon was born in La Clede County, Mo., December 5th, 1859, and lived in his native State until he was two years of age, when his parents removed to Kansas. He was married at Prairie Grove, April 2, 1881, to Miss Maryetta Robbins, a native of Ohio. They have one child, a son, whose name is Herbert Alexander.

GEORGE W. MONTGOMERY, proprietor of the Parlor Livery Stable, was born in Lake County, Ill., September 26, 1839. His father was Abel Montgomery, formerly a merchant of Waukegan, Ill., and for a number of years, Sheriff. In 1857, he came with his parents to St. Joe, Mo., and for a time was on the mail-route line from that city to Marysville, Kan. This same year, he became station agent at Hiawatha, and afterwards was employed at freighting across the plains. In 1867, he settled in Doniphan County, improved a farm, and in August, 1869, came to Hiawatha. Here he opened a livery stable, the first in the town, and has since been a permanent resident of the place, with the exception of two years spent on his farm. Mr. Montgomery is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, of the I. O. O. F., and was married in St. Joe, Mo., Dec. 5, 1862, to Miss Amanda Poynter. He was one of the illustrious 410, who dared cast their vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1861.

JOHN E. MOON, County Clerk and Secretary of the Kansas Mutual Life Insurance Company, was born in Leesburg, Kosciusko Co., Ind., March 13, 1846. His education was acquired at Notre Dame College, Indiana, Hillsdale College, Michigan, Western Union College (military), Fulton, Ill., and was finally completed at Eastman's Business College, Chicago. He took the latter course after the close of the Rebellion, in which he was a participant, first enlisting with Company E of the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. In this he served three months, then re-enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifty-first Indiana Volunteers, during the fall of 1864, and served as First Lieutenant of Company B., until the close of the war. Mr. Moon came to Kansas in 1866, and for four years subsequent farmed near Topeka. In 1871 he removed to Hiawatha, where he clerked for the well-known firm of Grave & Barnett, druggists, for four years, and for eighteen months afterward ran a drug store for himself, at Sabetha, this State. Returning to Hiawatha, he accepted the position of head bookkeeper in Morrill & Janes' Bank, which he filled for four years, or until January, 1880. During the fall previous, he was elected Clerk of Brown County; in 1881 was re-elected to the same office. Mr. Moon has held various places of trust and prominence. Upon the organization of the Kansas Mutual Life Insurance Company, he was elected secretary and has officiated in that capacity since. He has served four years in the city council, two years being President, and for four years has been City Treasurer, holding that office at this writing. He is identified with the Agricultural Association of Brown County, and has served three years as treasurer of that organization. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., being a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 82, and scribe of Encampment No. 33. He is also treasurer of K. of H. No. 1338 of Hiawatha. Mr. Moon is one of the firm of Knapp, Moon & Davis, abstractors and real estate agents. He was married, April 2, 1867, in New London in Ohio, to Miss Malvina K. Price. She is one of the leading and influential members of the Congregational Church.

AZARIAH W. MOORE, farmer, Section 25, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Orange County, Vt., the date of his birth February 6, 1825. He followed farming in his native State until 1863, when he removed to Fond du Lac County, Wis., and continued his former occupation. While a resident of that State, he held several important offices in the township where he lived. In September, 1873, he came to Kansas, and for the first year lived in Hiawatha. Then moved onto his present farm, which he purchased directly after his arrival here. It was then all wild prairie, but he has it all under cultivation now, and also a fine bearing orchard of choice fruit trees. Mr. Moore has been married twice. His first wife was Miss Orinda Peck, whom he married in Vermont, in 1844, and who died in 1873. They had seven children, four of whom are still living. His present wife was Mrs. Fannie M. Woolbert, of New York State. Both are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hiawatha, while Mr. Moore has been connected with that denomination for more than forty years.

DAVID M. MOORE & CO., proprietors of the Hiawatha Stock Farm, Section 23, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Kansas in spring 1880. The firm consists of David M. and Joseph Moore. The former was born in Licking County, Ohio, in 1830, and was extensively engaged in the merchandise line in that State for many years. Joseph was born in the same county, April 5, 1822, and for fifteen years was employed in the manufacture of woolen goods. During his later years however, his attention has been turned to agricultural pursuits. They have a fine large farm of 500 acres, all fenced and divided into fields, each of which is supplied with living springs, making excellent waterage for stock. They have over 100 head of fine graded cattle, some of which are pure thorough-breds brought from Ohio, in 1881. Both of the above named gentlemen are thorough, practical business men, and know how to run an enterprise of this magnitude in order and to the best advantage, at the same time making of it a profitable investment.



E. N. Morrill

EDMUND N. MORRILL is a native of Maine, where the family is very well known from the prominent part which its different members have taken in public affairs. He was born at Westbrook, Cumberland County, February 12, 1834. His education was received in the common schools, and afterwards at the Westbrook Seminary, and was of a thorough character. His taste for reading and study is a strong one; it has been cultivated all through life, even in the midst of engrossing cares, and has kept him at all times a well informed man, fully abreast of the times on all questions relating to education, religion, and public affairs. Young Morrill learned the trade of a tanner and currier in his father's shop, and has been all through life a man of industry and a hard worker. When twenty-one years old he engaged in the nursery business with John W. Adams. The next year he was elected a member of the School Board in Westbrook. When twenty-three years of age he sold his interest in the nursery business to his partner and came to Kansas, settling in Brown County, in March, 1857. The contest between slavery and freedom had not then been settled in this Territory, the slave laws being in force here, and slaves actually held in many counties. In framing the laws which finally expelled that institution from our borders, the young New Englander acted a manly part. He settled on the Walnut, at a place called Hamlin, a few miles south of the present town of Hamlin, and built a saw-mill. In October, 1857, Mr. Morrill was elected, from Brown and Nemaha counties, a member of the first Free-state Legislature that ever met in Kansas, and bore a conspicuous part in repealing those "bogus" laws that had been enacted by non-residents, and the purpose of which was to utterly stifle free speech and a free press in all the territory between the Missouri River and the Rocky Mountains—the limits of Kansas at that time. That Legislature has made an enviable name in our history; it comprised in its membership many firm, true, and able men who have left their impress upon our institutions. In January, 1858, Mr. Morrill was elected a member of the Legislature under the Lecompton Constitution, the Free-state men having determined if that instrument was forced upon them to hold the political machinery in their hands, and to administer upon the estate of the dead institution. With the close of their political troubles came a year of famine that will never be forgotten by the pioneers of that day—the drouth of 1860. The mill owned by Mr. Morrill and his partner was burned, and it is only telling the truth to say that Morrill and hundreds of others had very little to eat during those long, terrible months. Three months with nothing but green corn from the field, and a winter with corn meal as a luxury are vividly remembered. But very few despaired, and most people, including Morrill, were cheerful, rather intent on helping others than despondent in regard to themselves. The misfortunes of fire and famine were bravely encountered, and every debt contracted in the disastrous year was honorably paid. Morrill learned what suffering and poverty were, and few men in the county, or indeed in the State, have so frequently aided the poor, and helped old and young to secure homes and gain a livelihood. On the 5th day of October, 1861, Morrill enlisted as a private soldier at Fort Leavenworth, in Company C, Seventh Kansas Cavalry. He served as Sergeant until August, 1862, when he received an appointment as Commissary of Subsistence from President Lincoln. This appointment was made at the solicitation of Vice-President Hamlin, and without recommendation from any one. Captain Morrill was ordered to report to Gen. Grant, at Corinth, Miss. He took charge of the large stores at Forts Henry, Heiman and Donelson. In January, 1864, he was sent to Clarksville, Tenn., and ordered to make purchases of flour and beef for Sherman's army. In these important posts millions of dollars worth of stores and supplies passed through Capt. Morrill's hands or were purchased by him. He stood the test of the great responsibility thrown upon him, and his integrity, promptness of action and executive ability were fully appreciated by the great commanders under whom he served. On the 20th of October, 1865, he was promoted and mustered out with the rank of Major, by brevet, for meritorious services. Maj. Morrill returned to Brown County and made his home in Hiawatha. At first he engaged in business with Mr. R. Scott Fairchild, and in January, 1871, went into the banking business. In 1866 he was elected Clerk of the District Court, and was appointed County Clerk to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Joel G. Kelsey. In 1867 he was elected County Clerk. In 1868 he was re-elected Clerk of the District Court. In 1869 and 1871 he was re-elected County Clerk. In 1872 he was elected to the State Senate, and again in 1876. During his last term he was President pro tem, of the Senate and Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. In the county and in the Legislature, Maj. Morrill's business sagacity and executive force were of great advantage to the people. In its business affairs and in its morals, Brown County is second to no other in the State, and Maj. Morrill has been largely instrumental in shaping her character and forming her destiny. He has also been very influential in securing two important railway lines, each of which traverses the entire county. While Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the Senate he devised the plan to tide the State over the financial difficulty created by changing the sessions of the Legislature from annual to biennial. His plan was also adopted for raising the means to build the new wing and the center of the State Capitol. Both of these measures have worked admirably, and for the good of the whole State. In the Legislature he has always been the firm friend of our State institutions, the charitable and the educational. He has worked to build up here at home schools and colleges that shall be equal to any in the land. His affections begin with the home and extend to the school, the church, the county, and the State. His whole practical example and influence have been on the side of temperance, good morals, education, and law. In 1876 Maj. Morrill wrote and published a history of Brown County. In 1882 he gave to the city of Hiawatha a Public Library, the books and treasures of which are open for the free use of all the people of the county. In 1878 he contributed very largely for the relief of the suffering settlers in western Kansas, sending them large quantities of flour and supplies. Maj. Morrill has been repeatedly spoken of by the press of the State as the best man for Governor and for Congress. In the spring of 1882 the press brought him forward for Congress with singular unanimity. He would do nothing, however, in his own behalf, refusing to write letters or to go over the State advocating his own claims. In the June State Republican Convention he was nominated as Congressman from the State-at-Large, with three others, Maj. Morrill receiving the votes of 282 delegates, a larger number than that given to any other successful candidate. In the fall of 1882 he was elected to Congress by about 40,000 majority, running ahead of the ticket in some twenty counties. It was an election in which party lines were very loosely drawn, and when general political demoralization prevailed, but good character and sterling worth showed their strength. Maj. Morrill is a man about six feet tall, with broad shoulders and commanding figure—a prominent man in any assembly. Marked personal traits are his modesty, entire freedom from self-assertion, and accessibility. Mind and body were made for work; clear perception and quick judgment enable him to get rid of a vast amount of labor each day. He is a man in whom all can confide, and he is trusted with the most delicate and the most weighty duties. The number of men, women, and children who want his advice and aid is simply marvelous. They know that the advice will be sound and that no trust will be betrayed. His liberal and generous nature entertains charity for all, malice for none. As a citizen his public spirit is probably the most marked trait in his character. In the erections of schools, churches, and public buildings, in the planting of trees and the beautifying of grounds, he shows that he believes that "whoever can make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before," deserves better of mankind and does more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together. It is said of the Emperor Augustus that he found Rome brick and left it marble. And it can truthfully be said of our citizen that he found Brown County a raw and treeless prairie, and that he has lived to see it and largely helped to make it a fertile garden, the home of thousands of happy, industrious, prosperous people. His public and his private acts stand the test of scrutiny. The competency that he has gained is the inevitable result of good habits, a clear head, and unflagging toil. He is cheerful, joyous, even-tempered, scattering blessings everywhere. "His armor is his honest thought and simple truth his utmost skill."

JOHN E. MORRIS, coal dealer and proprietor of the railroad stock scales at the Union Stock Yards, came to Hiawatha in the spring of 1870 and farmed for one year. He then embarked in the grain business with I. N. Speer, which he continued until February, 1880. At that time he purchased his present business, where he has since carried on an extensive trade in coal, brick, etc., his receipts for the year being about 300 cars of coal and 100,000 brick. Is also agent for the Consolidated Tank Line Co.'s oil at this place, handling about a car load a month. Mr. Morris was born in Seneca County, N. Y. Left there with his parents, removing to Michigan, where his occupation was that of a farmer. He was married in Kansas, during the fall of 1878, to Miss Emma Mitchell, daughter of the Rev. George Mitchell. Mr. Morris belongs to the I. O. O. F., both in the Lodge and Encampment, of Hiawatha.

ELIAS MOSER, of the firm of Moser & McGillioray, agricultural implements, was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, June 5, 1841. He was, however, reared in Missouri, where he removed with his parents while yet a lad, and it was there he received his education. During the spring of 1865 he came to Brown County, Kan., and purchased 160 acres of land on Section 32, Hiawatha Township. On this he still lives, and has indeed made of it a fine place. The land is all under a high state of cultivation. There are three acres of orchard, and all kinds of small fruit in abundance. Mr. Moser was a soldier of the Rebellion, enlisting for the first six-months' call in 1861, with the Fourth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, of the State Militia, and afterwards served in the Fifth Regiment of State troops. He was elected Sheriff of Brown County in 1866. The above firm was organized in the spring of 1881, and during the first season handled ten car-loads of machinery. Mr. Moser has been married twice. His first wife was Miss Elvira Carroll, of Missouri, to whom he was married in 1864. She died in 1873, leaving one daughter, Ida. During the fall of 1876 he wedded his present wife, whose maiden name was Kate Cobb.

JOHN MOSER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 35, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Switzerland, near Berne, March 26, 1826. He received a common school education, and was employed with his father, who was a brick and tile burner, until his immigration to this country, which occurred in the fall of 1854. He immediately sought his brother, in Andrew County, Mo., who had settled there as early as 1835. John remained there for a time, but in the spring of 1855 came to Brown County, Kan., and pre-empted the place where he now lives, being one of the first white settlers in the county, and the third in Hiawatha Township. He is proprietor of 360 acres of land, eighty of which is in native timber convenient for stock ranges; the remainder is under cultivation. There are ten acres of orchard, containing choice varieties of apple, peach and other kind of fruits, nearly all of which is advanced enough for bearing. Mr. Moser's residence is a large, two-story brick building, in a very pleasant situation, and commanding a fine view of the beautiful farming country surrounding it. The farm buildings are substantial and commodious, and everything around this well-kept farm presents a thriving appearance. During the Rebellion, Mr. Moser was enrolled with the State Militia for the suppression of the Price raid, so well remembered by residents of Kansas at that time. His wife's maiden name was Maglema Uenger. They were married in Switzerland, in 1852, and are the parents of eight children—John, Mary, Godfred and Elizabeth, twins, Arnold, Elias, Anna and William F. Mrs. Moser is connected with the Evangelical Church of Hiawatha.

JACOB MOSER, farmer, Section 10, P. O. Hiawatha, was formerly from Andrew County, Mo., where he was born September 3, 1848. He is a son of Peter Moser, who settled in that vicinity as early as 1838. After acquiring a common school education, he worked on a farm with his father until the spring of 1871, when he became a resident of Brown County. He immediately became possessor of 160 acres of his present farm, which was partially improved. To this he has since added another quarter section, and has now one of the finest and best improved farms in this section of the country. There is a fine orchard, containing over 600 fruit trees of choice varieties. Mr. Moser is largely engaged in stock-raising, and for convenience in pasturing the same has his farm divided into fields by cross fences, besides being entirely surrounded by the same. He was married in this State, in 1871, to Miss Mary Maglott, whose father, John Maglott, settled in Brown County in 1858. They are the parents of three children, Ella Lee, Laura E. and Nora B.

FRANK MYERS, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 10, Township 2, Range 16, P. O. Hamlin, was born in North Carolina, September 14, 1832. While he was but a small child, his father, David Myers, undertook to move his family to McDonough County, Ill., but when within thirty miles of his destination, he died. Frank was then taken by his uncle, Jonas Myers, who reared him. He lived in Illinois until May, 1856, when he came to Kansas and pre-empted 160 acres of the land where he lives, beginning improvements by erecting a log cabin, 16x18, and but one story. This was then the largest house in Brown County west of Hiawatha, and still standing on Mr. M.'s farm, having been replaced, however, by a more spacious and modern structure, and the former is now used as a workshop. He has since purchased more land, until he now has a fine large farm of 320 acres, usually spoken of as the "Valley Farm," and its proprietor is considered by all to be one of the most practical and responsible farmers in the county. He was enrolled with the State Militia during the famous Price raid of the Rebellion. Was one of the organizers of the School District No. 2, and has been connected with the Board ever since. He held the office of Justice of the Peace of Walnut Township one term, and both he and his wife were original members of the Christian Church Society, which was organized in the schoolhouse on their farm, with a membership of sixteen. Mrs. Myers' maiden name was Mary M. Shelton. They were married in Illinois, in 1852, and are the parents of four children—Iona A., Willie E., George L. and Laura H.

MARTIN C. NEFF, restaurant and confectionery, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, January 17, 1840, and previous to his emigration to Kansas, was engaged in the hardware and agricultural implement business, in DeWitt County, Ill. He served three years in the Rebellion, enlisting at Chicago, in 1861, with Company D, of the Fifty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was in all the principal engagements of his regiment with the exception of the last six months, when his health failed him, brought on by exposure during service. In April, 1873, Mr. Neff came to Kansas, locating on a farm near Hiawatha, this he ran four years, then served one year as Constable and Deputy Sheriff, and afterwards farmed again, until the fall of 1880, when he removed to the city, and opened his present business, where he has built up a lively and lucrative trade. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, of the I. O. O. F. Was married in Illinois, in May, 1865, to Miss Caroline M. Reeves, of Erie County.

ALBERT L. NEWCOMB, dealer in groceries, is a native of New York; born January 12, 1841, in the city of Brooklyn, but was reared in Dutchess County. When thirteen years of age, he came West, to La Fayette County, Wis., and clerked for Stephenson & Co., merchants at Darlington. In 1869, he came to Hiawatha, and for a time clerked in a hardware store. He afterwards traveled for several extensive firms until the spring of 1876, when he opened business for himself at Hiawatha. Starting with a small but complete line of goods; he has by perseverance and industry worked up a large trade, and as a natural consequence has increased his stock three-fold, thereby requiring the attendance of three clerks. Mr. Newcomb is connected with the Congregational Church. Was married January 1, 1865, to Miss Emily F. Webster, of Kingsville, Ohio.

CHARLES V. NORTON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 36, P. O. Hiawatha; was born near the city of Stockholm, the capital of Sweden, November 5, 1854. He immigrated to the United States, in 1862; lived in Illinois two years, then crossed the plains in 1864, and commenced freighting. In 1865, he went to St. Joe, Mo., and two years latter became a resident of Brown County, Kan.; located on a farm, nine miles east of Hiawatha, where he farmed, and was also engaged in freighting more or less up to 1868. Here he lived until 1876, then went to California, and engaged in farming, three years, near Santa Barbara, and at the expiration of that time, returned to Kansas, and permanently established himself on the farm where he now resides. He is possessor of 160 acres of land, all cultivated, and surrounded by a beautiful hedge. His farm is crossed by a fence, dividing it into fields, each of which is fed by a living spring, very convenient in stock-raising, in which he is largely engaged. Has a large apple and peach orchard as fine a one as is to be found in the county, and as this is fast becoming an important feature in Kansas; many fine ones are to be seen. Mr. Norton was married in 1871, in Brown County, to Miss Mary F. Vaughn, born in Main, but whose parents were early pioneers of Kansas. They have three children—Abbie D., Bertie G., and Charley R.

NOBLE & APPLETON, proprietors of the new meat market. William O. Noble, senior member of this firm, was born in Clermont County, Ohio, October 28, 1845. Previous to coming to Hiawatha had been engaged in the meat market business for ten years, eight of which were passed at Oregon, Mo. In September, 1881, Mr. Noble came to Hiawatha, and established the above business, which has rapidly grown in trade and popularity, until they now kill eight or nine beeves per week, and keep one wagon busy peddling. John W. Appleton of this firm came to Hiawatha, from St. Joseph, Mo., in the spring of 1882, and became connected with the business. He had previously come to Kansas, in 1870, and had lived at Atchison, until 1878, where he was employed as car inspector on the Missouri & Pacific and A. & N. Railroads; following this same occupation after his removal to St. Joseph, Mo.

G. H. NORTON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 1, Township 3, Range 17, P. O. Hiawatha, Brown County, one of the owners of "Alliance" farm, was born in Otsego County, N. Y., May 19, 1849, and lived in his native State until his seventh year, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating in Hiawatha Township, Brown County, where Mr. N. has resided since. He was married March 26, 1878, in South Robinson, to Miss Luella J. White, a native of Illinois. They have one child, a daughter, named Nora. Mr. Norton and his brother Frank L., own together two farms. One, the home farm, is mostly bottom land and contains 280 acres. This farm lies on Drummond's Branch of the Wolf, and is all enclosed by substantial fences and has 150 acres in cultivation, the remainder being timber and pasture land. The orchard covers five acres and has 350 apple and a few peach and cherry trees. There is also a small vineyard on the place. The water supply is excellent and consists of the creek, springs, wells and cistern. The improvements are first-class in every particular, and consist of a large, new French cottage dwelling, with eight rooms, buttery and cellar, in short one of the finest dwellings in Hiawatha Township. It is surrounded by fine shade trees, evergreens and shrubbery. The other improvements are a frame barn, granary, corn crib, etc., etc. The other farm lies in Mission Township, and contains eighty acres of choice upland. This farm is also well improved by good fences, granary, etc., and is as good an "eighty" as there is in the county. The Norton Brothers raised this season 1,618 bushels of wheat on fifty acres. They also raised this year 5,000 bushels of corn, 400 bushels of oats, 150 bushels of potatoes and forty tons of timothy and prairie hay. They feed forty head of hogs, a car-load of cattle and keep thirty head of grade cattle, twenty-five head of stock hogs and seventeen horses and mules. The Messrs. Nortons are among the wide-awake, practical farmers of Brown, and speak in high terms of the county in which they live.

WILLARD W. NYE, physician and surgeon, began his literary course at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., but quit his studies to participate in the Rebellion. His regiment was first sent to Fort Leavenworth, from there to Lexington, Mo., to relieve the first three months call; here he was taken a prisoner, but in the September following was paroled. He then re-enlisted and was again sent to Fort Leavenworth, where he was enrolled with the Eighth Kansas Regiment under Col. John A. Martin, of Atchison; here he served until the latter part of 1863, when ill health compelled him to quit the army. He, however, recovered sufficiently to re-enlist in the One Hundred Day corps and served until the close of the Rebellion in the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Regiment. After the war he returned home, resumed his studies at Galesburg College. In 1870 Dr. Nye began the study of medicine and 1871-72 attended a course of lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. He then practiced his profession in Colorado until the winter of 1876, when he returned to college and resumed a course of lectures and graduated in the spring of 1877. He came to Hiawatha, Kan., in 1879, where he has since devoted his time to the practice of his profession. He is a member of the Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, I. O. O. F. He was married in Iowa, November 10, 1874, to Miss Jennie McChesney.

JAMES H. PATTON, farmer, Section 5, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Lawrence County, Pennsylvania, July 18, 1835. He received a common school education, and followed farming on the old homestead until the spring of 1881 when he came West, to make his future home in Kansas. In March, 1882, he purchased the farm where he now resides. Here he has seventy-two acres, all under a high state of cultivation, and entirely surrounded and crossed by a beautiful hedge, giving a very fine appearance to the place. The buildings are good and of a substantial order. There is a well kept orchard of 300 apple and peach trees bearing, and everything around this well-regulated farm, betokens thrift and economy. Mr. Patton served three years for his country, in the great Rebellion, volunteering in Company K. of the Forty-sixth Pennsylvania Infantry. In 1865 he married Miss Mary J. McDowell. Both are connected with the United Presbyterian Church, Hiawatha.

HENRY E. PENNY, farmer, Section 19, P. O. Hiawatha, was originally from Cayuga County, N. Y., born November 9, 1837. His attention has always been given to farming, and in 1870 he came to Kansas, located near Hiawatha, on Section 34, where he improved a farm of 160 acres. Two years later he removed to Section 35, Padonia Township, spent some time in making improvements on a farm here, and in 1875 removed to Hiawatha, and commenced merchandising in company with John Shaw. This proved a successful enterprise, and he followed it until the fall of 1878, when he returned to his farm in Padonia Township. In 1879 he went to Severance, Doniphan County, and ran a hardware store until the fall of 1880, when he returned to Brown County and purchased a farm. This contains 160 acres, all finely improved, with ten acres of young orchard and all the conveniences pertaining to a first-class, well-regulated farm. Mr. Penny and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hiawatha. She was formerly Miss Mary A. Searing, and was married in New York. They have one daughter—Mary E. Mr. P. is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A., F. & A. M.

EDWARD S. PIEFFER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 27, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Crawford County, Pa., June 6, 1827. Here he lived on a farm with his parents, attending school, until the age of sixteen years, when he commenced to learn the tanner's and currier's trade. After perfecting himself in this branch, he made it his vocation during his residence East, and also followed it some in St. Joe, Mo., after taking up his claim in Kansas. On the 1st of May, 1857, Mr. Pieffer came to this State and took up the first claim adjacent to the town site of Hiawatha, a portion of which is now occupied by the County Agricultural Association. Here he resided until the spring of 1860, when he went to Colorado, where he was employed in the mines for several years. During his residence here he passed through an experience that will long live in the memory of those who participated in it. This was the great Indian scare at Denver, in 1862, which occurred at midnight. Men ran, some with hats, some without, some with one boot on and others none at all—in fact there were all conceivable styles of dress necessary in such hurried toilets. They formed into line for battle, but alas, no Indians came. But finally coming to the conclusion that it was a false alarm, they disbanded and sought their homes and the remains of a badly broken night's rest. Another incident, which occurred about the same time, and that will present the character and bravery of the subject of our sketch more clearly to the minds of the people than we can portray; it occurred at the Cherry Creek freshet. A man fell into the river, and would inevitably soon have drowned. Five hundred men stood on the bank watching him, and out of this number not one offered to rescue him excepting Mr. Pieffer. He dashed into the seething, plunging waters, to save the man's life, which he did, amid the cheers of the multitude and the prayers and blessings of the drowning. During the year 1866 he returned to Brown County, and settled on a farm west of Hiawatha, now occupied as a fruit farm by Mr. Bubach. Lived there until 1877, then removed to his present location. He has a farm of 160 acres, all under a high state of cultivation, and excellent improvements in the shape of dwelling, barns, etc., in fact, every thing necessary on a first-class farm. He has a large orchard of peach and apple trees, all bearing, and among them are some of the choicest varieties. Mr. Pieffer was married in Hiawatha, February 14, 1867, to Miss Celinda Barnum, whose father kept the first hotel in Hiawatha. His name is Seth Barnum. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church. Their family consists of four children—Thomas C., Seth C., Jacob J., and Polly M.

JOHN W. POTTENGER, druggist, was born in Preble County, Ohio, September 3, 1825. He was reared on a farm, and followed that vocation previous to coming to Kansas. Came to this State in 1869, and took up a farm in Brown County. Three years later he removed to Hiawatha, started a drug store, and is now the oldest continual druggist in Brown County. He commenced business in a small building on Sixth street, just in the rear of Morrill & Janes' bank, with only $3,000 capital, but has, by close attention to business, and careful study of the wants and demands of the people, worked up a large and lucrative trade. In 1881 he erected a large brick store, 100x25, and two stories high. This is filled from cellar to roof with a large and choice stock of drugs, amounting to between $18,000 and $20,000, and requires the attendance of five clerks to satisfy the demands of the public. Mr. Pottenger also operates two farms, situated one and a half miles north of the city, one consisting of 160, the other of eighty acres. He has served two terms as Councilman of Hiawatha. Was married in Ohio, in 1862, to Miss Emma Morehead, of West Virginia, by whom he has one daughter, Jennie.

DAVID PRAY, proprietor of the Transfer Mail and Express Line at Hiawatha, is a native of Canada, born September 2, 1828. He came to Kansas in January, 1868, locating in Walnut Township, on a farm. In May following commenced his present business, for which he is excellently adapted, as he had twenty years' experience in that line in Lowell, Mass., previous to coming to this State. His business has increased to such an extent that he now runs three teams, and every thing about his office denotes business energy and competency. Mr. Pray served two years in the war as a volunteer in the Fifteenth Massachusetts Light Artillery, serving as Stable Sergeant.

SAMUEL M. PRATT, physician and surgeon, of the homœopathic school, was formerly from Vermont, born in Washington County, December 2, 1835. He is the son of Asaph and Hermione Pratt, both of the old Puritan stock. His mother's family name was Clark. They removed to Bureau County, Ill., in 1845, and here the subject of this sketch spent his youth, attending school and clerking in his father's store. His parents are still residents there. In 1861 Dr. Pratt graduated from the Homœopathic Medical College of Missouri, and one year later was appointed Assistant Surgeon in the great Rebellion, by Gov. Yates. He was assigned to duty in the Mound City Hospital of Illinois, where he served until the latter part of 1863. Returning to Bureau County, in the same State, he resumed his regular practice there until the spring of 1871, when he came to Hiawatha, Kan., and has since followed his profession there. He was the first physician of that school in the county. Dr. Pratt is identified with the Homœopathic State Medical Society of Kansas and the Western Institute of Homœopathy. He is also connected with the following organizations: Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A., F. & A. M.; Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, R. A. M.; Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13, K. T.; Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338, K. of H. and K. & L. of H., being an instigator of the two latter. His wife's maiden name was Lizzie M. Martin, to whom he was married in Illinois, in 1864. They have one daughter, Myrtle.

GEORGE T. PRICER, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Ross County, Ohio, born September 5, 1857, son of John and Jane Pricer; the former died in Ohio in 1858. George T. came to Kansas in the spring of 1869, and purchased the farm where he now resides. This contains eighty acres of choice farming land, highly cultivated, and about the best improved eighty in that section of the country. There are about 250 fruit trees of different species, and some very choice varieties, all bearing. Mr. Pricer was married September 21, 1881, to Miss Emma Meanor, of Hiawatha. They are both members of the Presbyterian Church of that city.

JOHN PUNSHON, foreman of the locomotive department at Hiawatha, on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, is a native of England, born January 12, 1825, in County Durham. Learned the trade of machinist at New Castle, and upon the completion of the same, commenced railroading in 1846, as engineer on the Caledonia Railroad, running from Carlisle, England, to Edinburgh, Scotland. Here he was employed for two years, then went to France and was an engineer on the Boulogne & Amiens Railroad, but at the time of the Louis Philippe Revolution, he returned to England. This occurred in 1848, and from that time until 1850, he worked in the machine shops in New Castle. He then ran an engine for three years, at the expiration of which time he immigrated to the United States. Upon arriving here, he accepted a position as engineer on the Grand Trunk Railroad; here he worked for three years; on the Great Western four years, then came to Kansas and settled on a farm four miles northeast of the present site of Hiawatha, with the intention of withdrawing from railroad life. In 1862, however, he recommenced in that business as engineer on the Hannibal & St. Joe line, and in 1868, changed to the St. Joe & Council Bluffs. During the spring of 1868, he engaged with the Northern Kansas & Southern Nebraska Railroad, running from Ellwood to Troy, being the terminus of the road now known as the St. Joe & Western. January 29, 1870, he ran the first engine into Hiawatha, and was employed on the above road until his acceptance of his present position. Mr. Punshon is a well-known and social gentleman, better known as Uncle Johnny, and is a general favorite with the railroad men, being a thorough one himself. He is an early member of the Engineer Brotherhood, and is now an honorary member. He was a charter member of the first Masonic lodge organized in the Territory of Kansas, and is now a member of the Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, and Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13. He is also a member of Smithton Lodge, No. 1, Kansas. He was married in Illinois, November, 1855, to Miss Ann M. Crabb, a native of that State. Mr. Punshon has always been a strong temperance man, and during his whole railroad career never met with an accident.

WILLIAM RADFORD, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Hiawatha, was born November 10, 1834, in Hampshire, England. He immigrated to the United States in 1848, with his parents, who settled in Genesee County, N. Y., as farmers. They subsequently removed to Winnebago County, Ill., in 1851, thence to Howard County, Iowa, in 1855, where they were living at the breaking out of the Rebellion. The subject of this sketch enlisted in 1861 with the Third Iowa Light Artillery, serving until the close of the war, and veteraned in the same battery, in 1864, then returned to Iowa, and in the fall of 1866, was married to Miss Ellen Palmer. In January, 1868, Mr. Radford came to Kansas, and settled on a farm, and here he still lives, a thriving, prosperous farmer. He owns 200 acres of land, which he purchased from the U. P. R. R., and which of course was then unimproved. He has since, however, converted it into a fine cultivated farm, with all the many appurtenances thereto, such as good comfortable buildings, fruit orchard of 300 trees, and about twenty acres of native timber. Mr. Radford has served ten years on the School Board of his township, besides filling other positions of trust here. He and his wife are members of the Baptist Church of Hiawatha. They have five children—Annie E., Edmund W., Ray R., Adelbert, and Fannie E.

J. BARNEY RAFF, head miller in the Hiawatha steam mills, is a native of Canton, Ohio, born April 1, 1835. Commenced learning the miller's trade in 1849, at Massillon, and six years later came to Davenport, Iowa; here he lived until March, 1862, then removed to Atchison, Kan., and was head miller in the city mills for seven years. At the expiration of that time was employed in the Fery Mills of that city, and subsequently in Doniphan County until his location in Hiawatha, in April, 1882, when he accepted his present position. Mr. Raff is one of the oldest continual millers in the State. He has been married twice; the first time at Davenport, Iowa, in 1859, to Miss Adeline Cole, who died in 1879. The second time to Miss Emilie J. Kerrigan, of Utica, N. Y. He is a member of the Masonic order, Washington Lodge, No. 5, of Atchison.

RICHARDSON & JONES, attorneys-at-law. This firm was organized in February, 1882, and transacts a general law business. The senior member, William J. Richardson, is a native of Canada, born June 21, 1845, at Waterloo. He was a graduate of Toronto University, in 1866, and immediately began reading law. Was admitted to the bar in November, 1868, and practiced in Canada until April, 1870, then came to the United States, and located at Hiawatha, Kan. Three years later, he was elected Police Judge of that place, and for the past nine years has been Justice of the Peace there. In 1873, Mr. Richardson became a partner of Hon. A. L. Jones, who is now a prominent lawyer at Valparaiso, Ind. They continued together until the fall of 1874, and from that time until the organization of the above firm, Mr. Richardson practiced his profession alone. He is at present City Attorney of Hiawatha, which he has held two terms. Richard C. Jones, of this firm, is a young but promising lawyer, who was admitted to the bar in January, 1882, before Hon. David Martin. Was born in Brown County, this State, in 1860, and received his education in the district schools of that county, completing it at the State Agricultural College, Manhatten. He was the first native born that received a teacher's certificate from Brown County, and followed that vocation four years, then gave his attention to reading law, which he pursued in the office of Mr. Richardson, now his partner. He was the youngest attorney admitted in the District, and is now a member of one of the leading firms of Hiawatha.

ROBERTS & BRUNDAGE, proprietors of the Weekly Kansas Herald. This paper was established in 1874 as the Brown County Advocate, and was edited by Davis & Roberts. It was published under that title until September 2, 1875, when it was changed to the Kansas Herald and its proprietors Burger, Roberts & McCreary; by them it was conducted until April 6, 1876, when Mr. McCreary retired, Burger and Roberts, continuing publication until August 12, 1877, when M. E. Foote succeed D. L. Burger, January 1, 1878. Then the paper was changed from an eight-page quarto, patent, to a seven-column folio, home print. Roberts & Foote continued the publication of this until the winter of 1879, when it was made an eight-column folio, home print. In February, 1882, they put a Campbell power press and steam engine in and enlarged the paper by making the columns fifteen ems in width and twenty-eight inches in length—eight-column paper. May 12, 1882, M. E. Foote sold his interest to T. L. Brundage. Roberts & Brundage still continue its publication; circulation 1,700, being read in many of the surrounding counties. Mr. Roberts was born in Lee County, Iowa, March 4, 1843; farmed, when a boy, in Illinois. Printing has been his trade; came to Kansas in 1868. Mr. Brundage was born in Yates County, N. Y., May 6, 1847; followed the vocation of a farmer until recent years; moved to Michigan in 1865; came to Kansas in 1877; has been engaged as an underwriter for the past few years. The Weekly Kansas Herald employs no foreign agents, allows no patent medicine advertisements place in its columns, enjoys the esteem of even its political enemies, and is regarded as the only reliable paper on earth by everybody, and its proprietors. An extensive job printing establishment is in connection with the paper. The Kansas Herald was the first to introduce steam power in its operations in this section of the State.

ALFONZO ROBINSON, farmer, Section 2, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Brown County, Kan., as early as June, 1857, and took up a claim of 160 acres, upon which he still lives and which he pre-empted January 8, 1858. This he has improved until he now has one of the best farms in that section of the country, entirely fenced with a fine Osage orange hedge, and divided into fields by cross fences. Alfonzo was born in Franklin County, Me., February 1, 1835. Came West with his father to Wisconsin in 1850, where the latter died in 1866. Alfonzo was married February 26, 1860, to Frances A., daughter of Thomas and Hannah Chandler, who settled in Kansas, in 1857, on the southeast quarter of Section 2, Range 17, Brown County, and were formerly from Maine. The former died February 8, 1881, in Hiawatha, where his wife and children, who still survive him, live. During the early part of his residence in this State, Mr. Robinson was engaged one season at freighting across the plains, and during the war of the Rebellion was enrolled among the State Militia for the purpose of the suppression of the Price raid, so well remembered by the participants thereof.

W. H. C. RUDD, jeweler, is a native of Oneida County, N. Y., born May 2, 1846. While yet a lad, he removed to Philadelphia, where nearly twelve years of his life were spent. In March, 1877, came to Hiawatha, established his present business, and is the oldest jeweler in the county. He carries a very large stock of fine and well-selected goods, and is skilled in every department of his work, having had nearly twenty-five years' experience in that line, two of which were spent in the finishing department of the Elgin Watch Factory, and one with the famous Seth Thomas Clock Company at Thomaston, Conn. He carries about $6,000 in stock, and has a large and lucrative trade, which, by strict attention to business, he has gradually acquired, his capital growing with his trade from the original outfit of $1,400. He is now one of the leading merchants of the county, and by his square and honest dealing, has won the confidence and respect of the entire public. Is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, of the I. O. O. F.

CAPT. JOHN SCHILLING, of the firm of J. Schilling & Bro., dealers in general merchandise, came to Kansas March 6, 1857, and settled on a claim one-half mile south of the present site of Hiawatha; here he lived, improving his land, until the breaking out of the great rebellion. He then recruited Company I, of the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and on the organization of the same, was elected Captain, in which capacity he served until the close of the war, taking an active part in all the engagements of his regiment. He then returned to Kansas, and in March, 1866, established the firm of Schilling & Meisenheimer until 1870; then J. Schilling & Co., to January 1, 1881; since A. Schilling & Bro., and is now the pioneer merchant of Brown County. He started with a small stock in an equally small building, but in 1870, the latter was replaced by the fine stone building he now occupies, 140x25 feet, and two stories high, and is filled with one of the most complete stocks of general merchandise to be found in Brown County or the surrounding counties. Adam Schilling, of this firm, is also a member of the firm of Adams & Schilling, extensive hardware dealers in Hiawatha. Capt. Schilling was born near the city of Bingen, on the Rhine, Germany, January 1, 1837; attended school in his native land until 1848, when, at the time of the great German revolution, he left there with his parents, Valentine and Susan Schilling, and located in Hudson, N. Y. Here they made their home until 1851; then moved to Kalamazoo, Mich., where John S. finished his common school education. Previous to coming to Kansas, his employment was on a farm, but having unusual business talent, he embarked in the merchandise line, and is a self-made man in every sense of the word, and a very successful one. Capt. Schilling was married November 5, 1857, to Susan, daughter of Martin Meisenheimer, who was one of the pioneers of Kansas, and a soldier under Bonaparte at the battle of Waterloo. Their family comprises two daughters and five sons. He has served four years as Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners; has been a member of the Masonic Order since 1869, and is now one of the Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35. He is an original member of the Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, and for three years has held the position of commander of Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13; was a Garfield elector in 1880; elected to the Legislature from Fifty-first District, Kansas, in November, 1882.

JOHN NIVEN SCOULLER, druggist, was born in Cuylerville, Livingston Co., N. Y., May 6, 1851. His father, Rev. J. B. Scouller, D. D., is of Scottish descent; the family being in America since 1752. His mother's maiden name was Helen I. Niven, her father a Highland Scotchman, her mother of Holland Dutch descent. In 1852 Mr. Scouller moved with his family to Argyle, N. Y., thence to Philadelphia in 1862, and one year later became a resident of Newville, Pa. In the latter place he attended for a brief period a classical school, but was compelled to relinquish the idea of a thorough education on account of his eyes. His first experience in the drug business was in 1867, when he entered a Newville drug store as a clerk. At the expiration of one year he went to Philadelphia to perfect himself, and in a two years' course received a diploma from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, April 7, 1871, and was one of the youngest graduates since the establishment of this college in 1821. He then purchased a drug store at Newville, where he successfully conducted business for nearly eleven years. During the spring of 1882 Mr. Scouller started out to seek a new location, and May 10 of the same year saw him established at Hiawatha, Kan.

JACOB SCOUTEN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 20, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Genesee County, N. Y., January 15, 1822. He was afterwards a resident of Pike County, Ill., where he followed farming. In June, 1857, he came to Kansas, and pre-empted 160 acres of land on Section 9, Hiawatha Township, where he lived until 1865, and then removed to his present place of residence. Here he also has 160 acres of fine improved land and a choice fruit orchard of all kinds. His farm is supplied with good comfortable buildings, and surrounded by a lovely hedge fence, which gives the farms in this part of the country such a beautiful appearance. In 1865 Mr. Scouten was enrolled with the State Militia in the suppression of the Price raid, so famous in the Rebellion. He was married in Illinois, 1851, to Miss Mary Gray, formerly from Ohio, where she was born. Their family consists of six children—Delia, married to G. W. Peterson, of Palmyra, Neb.; Willis F., Ella, now Mrs. Jesse A. Worley, Hiawatha; Albert H., Josephine and Harriet E.

DR. HARVEY SEBURN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 27, Town 2, Range 17, P. O. Hiawatha. He became a resident of Brown County, Kan., in the spring of 1859. For two years he lived on Section 9, Hiawatha Township, and in 1861 became a participant in the Rebellion, entering the commissary department and serving for three years with Maj. Morrill. Then returned to Brown, where in 1867 he married Miss Maria A., daughter of Joseph Klinefelter. He then settled on his present farm, which contains 160 acres under a high state of cultivation, which was pre-empted in 1857 by his father-in-law, now deceased. Some of the improvements are a nice commodious residence and an orchard of about eight acres, containing many choice varieties of fruit trees already bearing. Dr. Seburn was born in Jefferson County, Ind., July 14, 1836, and received his education in the high schools of that county. He has always been deeply interested and taken an active part in all public enterprises of his town and county. In 1859 he was a delegate to the Territorial Convention, which convened to elect delegates to the National Convention held at Chicago. In 1874 he was elected County Treasurer, which office he filled four years and three months, making his home in Hiawatha during that time. He has also served two terms in the City Council, and has been on the Board of Education frequently. He is a member of the Masonic Society, both Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, and Mount Horeb Chapter No. 42.

ALBERT M. SHANNON, of the firm of Shannon & Son, hardware dealers, successors to Hapgood & Shannon on the 1st of June, 1882. He was born in Licking County, Ohio, February 25, 1856. Came to Kansas in 1870, and located on a farm. Two years later he attended the State Agricultural College, and afterward the Highland University of Kansas for one year. He was a graduate of D. L. Musselman's Commercial College at Quincy, Ill., in 1876. Mr. Shannon became interested in the above hardware house in 1880, but his father did not become a partner until two years later. They have a large and well selected stock of hardware and do a large and thriving business, their annual sales amounting to $25,000. They occupy three floors, each eighty by twenty-five; they employ five men, two salesmen, and three tin manufacturers.

JOHN SHAW, farmer and stock raiser, Section 25, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Cumberland County, Maine, February 15, 1828. Was reared on a farm, but was afterward engaged extensively in the manufacture of clothing and subsequently at general merchandising for six years in his native State. Was married there in 1856 to Miss Emily C. Shaw, also a native of that State. In July, 1872, Mr. Shaw came to Kansas and settled on the place where he now resides in the following November. This was a partially improved farm, and contains eighty acres of very fine, well cultivated land. He also ran a grocery store at Hiawatha, in company with H. E. Penny, during the years 1874 and 1875, in which operation he was very successful.

WILLIAM M. SHIRLEY, dentist, came to Hiawatha in January, 1868, and for a period of seven years was engaged at contracting and building, erecting some of the largest buildings in Brown County. In 1875 he began the study of dentistry, spending two years at Wheeling, W. Va., in the office of Dr. D. B. McLain, of that city. Returned to Hiawatha in the spring of 1878, and began the practice of his profession, and has since devoted his entire time to, and made of it a decided success. He was born in Virginia, Cass Co., Ill., March 5, 1848. His boyhood was spent on a farm with his parents, and when old enough he learned the carpenter's trade, which he worked at in Illinois previous to coming to this State. Dr. Shirley is a member of the Kansas Dental Association, also of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, of the Masonic Order. He was married in July, 1880, at Hiawatha, to Miss Amanda Ellis of Brown County.

FRANK SIPE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 16, P. O. Hiawatha, was born December 21, 1849, in Somerset County, Pa. In 1866 he was a student at Mount Pleasant College, and was afterward engaged in farming and merchandising in his native State. In February, 1879, came West and for one year farmed near Falls City, Nebraska. Subsequently came to Kansas and purchased the farm where he now lives, which contains 160 acres of good farm land under a high state of cultivation. This is entirely surrounded by a beautiful hedge fence, and is also divided into fields, convenient in pasturing stock. There is a good frame dwelling and outbuildings, and a fine young orchard partially bearing. Mr. Sipe was married January 15, 1872, in Pennsylvania, to Miss Jennie H. Trent, born in the same county and State as himself. They are the parents of five children, Bruce E., Estella M., Hattie B., Effa M., and Arthur E.

WILLIAM R. SMITH, farmer and stock raiser, P. O. Hiawatha, was formerly from Posey County, Ind., born January 7, 1852. Was subsequently a resident of Mason County, Ill., and in the spring of 1869 he came to Kansas. For seven months after his arrival here he lived with the family of Cornelius Grisson, then for two years worked for Benjamin Sprague. In 1872 he married Miss Alta Sprague, daughter of the above and Susan Sprague, and in the year following purchased the farm where he now lives. This contains eighty acres of finely cultivated land, the improvements having all been put on it by himself. There is a three-acre orchard of apple and peach trees of his own planting, nearly all of which are old enough to produce fruit. Mr. Smith's family consists of four children, Benjamin A., Oda D., Harvey D., and Orlando.

LUCIAN H. SMYTH, Superintendent of Public Instruction of Brown County, was born in Susquehanna County, Pa. His parents were Benjamin and Corintha Smyth, with whom he came to Kansas in 1869. His mother's maiden name was Hayden. They purchased a farm in Robinson Township, where at this writing they still reside. In 1871 Lucian Smyth moved to Cloud County, and took up a claim. During the fall of the same year he was elected County Surveyor. After filling that position five years he resigned and returned to Brown County, where he immediately became Principal of the public school at Robinson. This position he held for three years, and in the fall of 1881 was elected to his present position. Mr. Smyth took part in the great Rebellion, entering the army when only sixteen years of age. He served in the Third Pennsylvania Artillery until that regiment was discharged in 1865. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to both St. John's Lodge No. 113, and Mount Horeb Chapter No. 43.

JOSEPH H. SMITH, grain dealer, came to Kansas as early as the fall of 1856, and for a time was a resident of Leavenworth, dealing in real estate. From there went to Olathe, Johnson County, where he improved a farm. In 1860 he started West to become a miner, going first to Colorado, then to Montana, and was employed at various occupations till 1878. From there he went to Fairbury, Neb., and embarked in the grain business, making of it a decided success, and in March, 1879, removed to Hiawatha, continuing the former branch of business. He formed a copartnership with E. T. Ellis, which firm flourished until 1881, when Mr. Ellis withdrew. Mr. Smith does a large and remunerative business, and during the past year shipped about 300 car loads of grain. He was originally from Massachusetts, born in Hampshire County, October 22, 1837. In early life he was a clerk in a wholesale dry goods store in Boston, Mass. He is a member of the A., F. & A. M. Triune Lodge. Was married at Chicago, in 1873, to Miss Mary Metcalf, of Columbus, Ga.

ALBERT G. SPEER, senior member of the firm of Speer, Klinefelter & Ely, attorneys at law, came to Kansas in May, 1856, settling at Hiawatha. In June of the year following he pre-empted a claim on Section 7, Town 2, Range 18 east, in what is now Irving Township, but soon afterward, in company with George H. Chestnut, deceased, started the first wagon shop in Hiawatha. On the 2d of August, 1862, Mr. Speer volunteered with Company A, of the Seventh Kansas Cavalry, taking an active part in all of the Rebellion. Was mustered out in October, 1865, having veteraned in the same regiment. He then returned to Kansas, and followed various occupations until 1871. At that time he commenced reading law, and April 28, 1874, was admitted to the bar, in Nemaha County, before Hon. P. L. Hubard. He has since practiced his profession, but his attention has chiefly been given to land business. He was employed by the St. Joseph & Western Railroad Company to superintend the grading of all their lands in Marshall, Riley, Washington and Republic counties, in Kansas, and some twelve counties in Nebraska. Mr. Speer is a native of Greene County, Ohio, born December 4, 1835. Before coming to Kansas he was a school teacher in his native State. In 1868 he was elected to the State senate, from Brown and Nemaha counties. He was married December 23, 1875, in Hiawatha, to Miss Laura E. Albee, of Machias, Maine.

ROBERT E. SPEER, dealer in live stock, was born in Greene County, Ohio, November 10, 1839, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1859, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Hiawatha, where, with the exception of three years spent in the State of Nebraska, he has resided since his advent in Kansas. He was married in Brown County, June 28, 1865, to Miss Laura A. McCoy, a native of Baltimore, Md. They have one child—a daughter, whose name is Mary A. Mr. Speer is one of the most extensive stock dealers in Northeastern Kansas, buying his stock principally in Brown County, and shipping to the markets in Kansas City, St. Louis and Buffalo, N. Y. He has only been engaged in this business since February, 1, 1882, but has already shipped to the markets named above, stock to the amount of $85,000. Previous to engaging in his present business, Mr. S. was in charge of Elevator No. 1, at Morrill, then owned by his brother, I. N. Speer. He was thus employed three years, and then entered into business on his own account, in which, owing to the straight-forward and reliable manner in which it is conducted, he has been eminently successful. Mr. Speer is well and favorably known in Brown County, and possesses the esteem and confidence of all.

ISAAC N. SPEER, of the firm of Speer & Hulburd, grain dealers, came to Kansas in 1859, and for a number of years was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He first embarked in the grain trade in 1873. Three years later he erected an elevator at Hiawatha, and was the first to introduce steam elevators in that city. This firm also have warehouses and elevators at the following named places in this State: Hamlin, Morrill, Sabetha, Axtell and Beattie, and in Nebraska, at Beatrice, Holmesville, Blue Springs, Otoe Agency and Steele City. At Sabetha they are proprietors of a steam mill, with three run of buhrs, which they run in connection with the elevator at that place. Mr. Speer is an active and thorough business man, doing one of the largest trades in the grain business of any in the State, and is one of Hiawatha's live and most prominent citizens. He took part in the great Rebellion, serving with Company A, of the Seventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry.

THEODORE F. SPRAGUE, farmer and stockraiser, Section 31, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Gallia County, Ohio, October 11, 1834. He removed to Hancock County, Ill., during the year 1848, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits up to the time of his coming to Kansas. This occurred in the fall of 1864, and he settled in the same locality where he now lives. He has a fine farm of eighty acres, under the best of improvements; also an orchard of 800 choice fruit trees of different varieties. Mr. Sprague married in Illinois, in 1857, Miss Mary J. Earl. They are both original members of the Methodist Episcopal Church Society at Hiawatha, and are the parents of three children: Theodore, Francis and Ida.

BENJAMIN A. SPRAGUE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 1, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Gallia County, Ohio, May 15, 1833, son of Nicholl and Louisa Sprague, the former of Scotch, the latter, whose family name was Phelpes, of Germany. Mr. Sprague came to Kansas as early as the fall of 1858, and lived at Hiawatha until the following spring, when he established himself on the place where he now resides, and was among the very first settlers in that vicinity. In 1854 Mr. Sprague was enrolled with the State Militia, in the suppression of the famous Price raid during the great Rebellion. One year later he made a journey to the mountains, but after retaining a short time returned to his farm. This consists of 320 acres of choice farm land, all under an advanced state of cultivation, and fenced with six miles of beautiful Osage-orange hedge. There is also thirty acres of native timber and an orchard of choice fruit trees, comprising some fourteen acres. He was married in March, 1854, to Miss Susan Brown, of Illinois.

STEWART BROS., groceries, etc. This firm was organized in April, 1881, and consists of Joseph H. and V. A. Stewart. Their storeroom is 50x25, situated in the old Odd Fellows' block, where they do a large and lucrative business in the grocery line. The first year's sales amounted to about $30,000. Both are natives of Adams County, Ohio; Joseph, the elder, born July 19, 1850; V. A. in 1856. They are the sons of William R. and Druzilla Stewart; the former was an extensive dealer in general merchandise at Bradyville, Ill. Here Joseph H. was initiated in the various details of the grocery trade, and when twenty years of age, started in business for himself in Adams County, and was thus employed in various places previous to his location in Kansas. This transpired in the spring of 1876 and he subsequently followed school teaching for a short time, first in Greenwood County, then in Doniphan, after which he opened a grocery store at Robinson, Brown County, which he conducted until the establishment of the above firm in April, 1881, his brother only coming to Kansas the March previous.

CHARLES M. STOWE, farmer, Section 27, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Broome County, N. Y., October 1, 1847. He is the son of Marcus S. and Louisa E. Stowe, nee Heath, who came to Kansas in February, 1870, and settled on the farm where Mr. Stowe now lives, and owns eighty acres of well improved land. His father was a native of the same county as himself, and worked at various employments during the early portion of his life, and finally died in Kansas May 16, 1881, a devoted Christian and a member of the Congregational Church, his wife still surviving him. They were the parents of two children: Charles M., and one daughter, Emma A., who married William E. Dorrington of Fall City, Neb. Charles M. chose farming as his vocation. He was married in Brown County, August 3, 1873, to Miss Alice I. Hawks.

REV. WILLIAM D. SWAIM, pastor of the Christian Church, was born in Vinton County, Ohio, January 20, 1843. Son of Moses and Lydia Swaim, his mother's family name Darby. He lived on a farm until nineteen years of age, when he entered Franklin College at Athens, Ohio. Here he was a student for two years, then went to Bethany, W. Va., where he graduated in 1866. From that time until 1871 he was employed at school teaching, since which time he has been engaged in the ministry of the Christian Church in various localities in Iowa. In February, 1882, he was called to Hiawatha, which he accepted. Rev. Mr. Swaim is a thorough Christian and social gentleman, and wherever his vocation calls him wins the respect and friendship of the entire community. His wife was Miss Hattie A. Garvin, born in Kentucky, to whom he was married at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, November 22, 1870. They have one daughter, Mabel.

CHRISTIAN SWEITZER, farmer, Section 6, P. O. Hiawatha, was born April 19, 1847, in Switzerland. His parents immigrated to the United States when he was only two years of age and settled in Tuscarawas County, Ohio; here the subject of this sketch learned the trade of harness making, which he subsequently followed until his immigration to Kansas. This occurred in 1869, and three years after, he started a harness shop at Hiawatha, which proved a decidedly profitable business venture, and which he operated until 1876. He then bought the place where he now resides, containing 146 acres, all under a high state of cultivation but when it came in his possession was unbroken prairie. He and his wife are members of the German Reform Church, Hiawatha. She is the daughter of J. S. Zimmerman; her name is Paulina. They were married in 1872, and have four children—Albert L., Anna M., Charley W. and Edward N. Mr. S is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge No. 83, at Hiawatha.

JOSIAH C. THOMAS, dealer in general merchandise, is a native of Lee County, Va., born January 12, 1835, was reared on a farm and received but a common school education; but has, by industry and studious habits, become a thorough practical scholar. In 1857 he moved to Grant County, Ky., and was a prosperous farmer in that locality until his removal to Kansas. This transpired in the spring of 1869, his first settlement being on a partly improved farm one mile east of the present city of Hiawatha; since then he has bought and sold several farms. In November, 1873, he opened a general merchandise store at Hiawatha in company with his brother, Abijah H. This they conducted together until the fall of 1881, when Josiah C. erected a building where he now carries on business. This was built in L shape, thereby fronting on two streets, Oregon and Seventh. The main portion is 90x25, and has its front on Oregon street; while the grocery department, 50x25, is on Seventh, forming one of the most convenient business blocks in the county. Mr. Thomas does a careful and extensive business which is rapidly growing every year, and requires the attendance of four clerks. He is one of the directors of the First National Bank of Hiawatha, and is connected with the following societies: Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, I. O. O. F., Star of Hope Lodge No. 1338, K. of H. and also K. & L. of H., being a charter member of the two last named. He was married in Virginia, in 1859 to his first wife, Miss Nancy Bartley, who died in March, 1866. They were the parents of three sons and one daughter; the two eldest are now operating a large farm of their father's near Baker, on the Missouri Pacific R. R. consisting of a half section. Mr. Thomas' present wife was Miss Sarah E. Johnson, of Lee County, Va. Both have been faithful workers in the Methodist Episcopal Church for thirty years, and are members of the church of that denomination at Hiawatha.

ABIJAH H. THOMAS, with J. C. Thomas, dealer in general merchandise, was born in Lee County, Va., April 21, 1837, was reared on a farm, and received such education as the public schools afforded. In December, 1863, removed to Grant County, Ky., but after a residence of two years, moved into the adjoining county of Pendleton. In July, 1866, Mr. Thomas made his first venture in the merchandise trade, carrying on a successful business for nearly eight years; in November, 1873, he came West and started a store in company with his brother, J. C. Thomas, at Hiawatha, Kansas, and was a member of that firm until the fall of 1881, when he retired. He is one of the original members and founder of the Christian Church, and is one of the elders in that society. His wife is also a member of the same; her maiden name was Emeline Bartley, whom he married in Virginia, January 29, 1861. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity, Hiawatha Lodge No. 35.

PETER D. TOBIE, proprietor of the Hiawatha Steam Flouring Mills, was born August 25, 1839, in Herkimer County, N. Y. Received his education in the high schools of Utica, N. Y., and when twenty-one years of age became a member of a hardware firm. In this he was interested for three years, and then withdrew from the firm and took charge of his father's woolen mill at Eaton, the same State. In 1864 he engaged with the Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., as station agent, at Eddyville, Iowa, where he remained for three years, returning to Utica at the expiration of that time. In 1868 he, in company with his father, Peter Tobie, put in a bid for the government improvements on the Mississippi River at Rock Island. His father was successful in obtaining the contract at Keokuk, Iowa. Here the subject of this sketch lived three years assisting his father in the government work, and in 1871 removed to Atlantic, in the same State, where he was engaged in the drug business until 1874; at that time he went to Colorado; spent seven years of his life in the mining region, and in the fall of 1881 became a resident of Hiawatha, purchasing the mills of which he is now proprietor. Mr. Tobie was married at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1871, to Miss Isabella F. Kenderdine, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa.

WINDFIELD A. TURNER, physician and surgeon, was born November 4, 1847; his birth-place, Mount Hope, Orange Co., N. Y. Came to Kansas with his parents, George and Charlotte Turner, who settled in Powhattan Township, Brown County, on Section 20, purchasing 1,200 acres of land from the Central Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company. They were the first settlers in this locality, which was that of the Kickapoo Reservation, and were the first parties to open a road from that part of the county to Hiawatha. They were appointed land agents for the above railroad company during the same year, and sold thousands of acres of their land in those parts. In 1871 he graduated from the St. Louis Medical College, and has since practiced his profession in addition to his farming. In August, 1881, he removed to Hiawatha, and is now the oldest resident practicing physician in Brown County, and is considered by all one of Hiawatha's most able and competent physicians.

REV. WILLIAM H. UNDERWOOD, Pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Hiawatha, was born at Seneca Falls, N. Y., April 13, 1841; son of Joseph and Mary A. Underwood, who were both born in England, but came to this country while young; his mother's family name, Smallbridge. When William H. was five years of age, his parents removed to McHenry County, Ill., where with limited means they began farming. Six years afterward his mother went entirely blind, and two years later died. William was then thrown upon his own resources, and made a beginning by working by the month on a farm. Followed that occupation, attending school during the winter months, until seventeen years of age, at which time he took up his abode with his uncle, John Eddy, a prominent man, then holding the position of Sheriff of McHenry County. Here he attended school at Woodstock, and at the same time became converted to the religion of Christ. During the following winter he attended school at Elgin, same State, and from that time until the breaking out of the Rebellion was engaged in the pursuance of his studies and at teaching school. He then enlisted with the first call for men for one hundred days' service, in Capt. Harley Wayne's company, which, however, soon went to Freeport, where it was consolidated with the Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, Company D, under command of Thomas J. Turner. During the May following, was sworn into the United States service for three years, and took an active part in all the principal engagements of his regiment, being mustered out June 14, 1864. He then returned home, but soon offered his services to his country again. They were rejected, however, on account of injuries received during his previous enrollment. He was very observant while in the army, keeping a complete journal of the events taking place in his regiment during his entire service, which records he still has in his possession. He then took charge of his uncle's farm until the close of the war, and by this time, having been always very economical and saving, had accumulated enough means to finish his education. This he did by attending school at Aurora and Evanston, Ill., until 1868, taking a theological course at the latter place. Was then appointed local preacher at Round Grove, same State, in the Rock River Methodist Episcopal Conference. Here he remained until October, 1870, when he was sent to Genoa, and in 1871 was ordained deacon at Aurora, Ill., by Bishop Ames. Remained in the Genoa circuit until the fall of 1872, when he was transferred to the Kansas Conference, but spent the winter following in northern New York. In March, 1873, came to Kansas, took charge of Irving District, and was soon afterwards ordained elder at Atchison by Bishop Andrews. In 1875 he was appointed to Clay Center, where he remained until 1878, in the meantime doing good work, and erecting a church for his society at that point. From there he went to Sabetha, Nemaha County, where he stayed two years; from there to Severance, Doniphan County, where he stayed the same length of time, and then was appointed to Hiawatha. Rev. Mr. Underwood has always been a strong advocate of the Prohibition movement in Kansas, and at one time was thrown in prison for the maintenance of that principle. He was married November 24, 1869, to Miss Juliet Plank, of Lewis County, N. Y., by whom he has three daughters living.

THOMAS G. WAGSTAFF, dealer in agricultural implements, became a resident of Hiawatha in the fall of 1870. He established the above business and is now the oldest agricultural implement dealer in the county. He does a large and remunerative business, employing two men to travel through the country for the sale of farm machinery. He was born in Ireland July 10, 1835, immigrated to the United States in 1849, his destination western Pennsylvania. Here he learned the trade of wagon-making and in 1855 removed to Monmouth, Ill., where for a time he was employed in extensive farm machinery manufactories. He afterwards ran a large wagon shop for himself there previous to coming to Kansas. Mr. Wagstaff was married in 1858 to Miss Martha P. Travers, who was a graduate of the Woman's Medical College of Chicago in 1875. She has since been devoted to the practice of her profession at Hiawatha and is a member of the State Medical Society of Kansas. She is an active member and worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

LIEUT. HARLOW M. WALLER, contractor and builder, was born May 18, 1836, in Crawford County, Ohio, removed to Washington County, Wis., while it was yet a Territory, with his parents, C. B. and Nancy Waller, who were there engaged in agricultural pursuits. In the fall of 1861 he entered the army as Sergeant of Company D, Twelfth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. In May, 1862, he was promoted to Second Lieutenant, and as such served in all the principal engagements of his regiment until September, 1864. Returning to Washington County, Wis., Mr. Waller worked at his trade, which was that of carpenter, which he had previously learned, and in spring of 1866 moved to Fond du Lac County, Wis.; the spring of 1869 came to Kansas, worked at his trade in Hiawatha for one year, then accepted the position of baggage master on the St. Joe & Western R. R., afterward becoming conductor. He afterwards ran a train on the A. T. & Santa Fe and the A. N. Division, and held various responsible positions on the railroads until the spring of 1875, when he returned to Hiawatha, which has since been his sphere of action, and has erected some of the most prominent buildings in Brown County. Mr. Waller served as one of the City Council of Hiawatha in 1881. He is an Odd Fellow and District Deputy G. M. of Hiawatha district, both in Hiawatha Lodge No. 83 and encampment No. 33, being a charter member of the last named institution. He has been married twice. To his first wife, Miss Henrietta Newcomb, of Massachusetts, he was united in 1857, who died in 1875. His present wife was Mrs. Almyra Anderson, of Hiawatha, whom he married in 1878.

SILAS F. WALTERS, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 13, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Richland County, Ohio, November 23, 1845. Here he attended school, and worked on a farm with his father until the spring of 1865, when he immigrated to Kansas. During his residence in Brown County Mr. Walters has improved several farms, and finally, in 1880, moved on to his present farm, which contains 320 acres, all under fence and finely cultivated. Has also largely engaged in stock raising, and at this writing has on hand fifty head of graded cattle in addition to a great deal of small stock. He was married in 1870 to Miss Lucy Dowell, who was born and reared in Logan County, Ohio, and is a sister of John A. Dowell, who came to Kansas in 1857. Their family consists of five children, Banner, Clark, Franklin, Earl and Gracie.

CAPT. ALFRED WALTERS, deceased, was born in Richland County, Ohio, November 19, 1831. In early life he learned the trade of blacksmith, and in 1855 was married to Miss Ann Eliza Bowers. During the spring following they removed to Holt County, Mo., and here Mr. Walters was extensively engaged in the manufacture of wagons, also at blacksmithing. At the breaking out of the Rebellion, in 1861, he recruited Company F of the Fourth Regiment Missouri State Militia, and upon its organization was chosen Captain. He was assigned to State duty under Major-General Pleasanton, serving until the close of the war. During this career he was always brave and unflinching in his duty, winning great approbation, and was several times called to the front. During this time his family remained in Missouri, suffering many inconveniences, and very frequently abuse, from the Confederates. At the close of the war the Captain returned home, but his health had been impaired through exposure during the service. In 1869 came to Kansas, locating on the place where the family still reside, purchased some wild prairie land, and, by perseverance and industry, converted it into a thrifty, profitable farm. The improvements are extensive and substantial and the farm of 260 acres is now operated by his sons. Capt. Walters served two terms as County Commissioner of Brown County, and also held other positions of trust, always taking a prominent part in the varied interests of town and county. He was an earnest worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hiawatha, to which society his family also belong; was also a member of the Masonic fraternity, Hiawatha Lodge No. 35. He was a man of strong influence and cheerful disposition, and during life was surrounded by a host of earnest and sincere friends, who, with his family, deeply mourn his death, which occurred October 4, 1876. His wife and eight children survive him. The names of the latter are as follows: Loren B., Frank M., Charles L., John M., Ward B., Samuel M., Harry K. and Ada May.

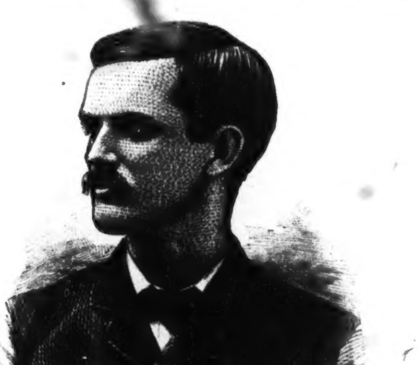
WILLIAM WALTERS, farmer, Section 35 P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Richland County, Ohio, where he was born April 14, 1837, and also reared, he receiving a common school education. In 1861 he entered the Union Army as a volunteer with the Sixty-fourth Ohio Infantry in Sherman's Brigade. After serving a little more than two years his health became impaired through exposure during Government service, and from this he has never fully recovered. Was then discharged and returned to his home in Ohio. After partially recovering from indisposition he resumed the occupation of farming, and in 1863 was married to Miss Mary E. Young, of his own State. During the fall of 1865 he came to Kansas, and for three years lived on his brother Alfred's place, Section 28, Hiawatha Township. At the end of that time removed to his present home, where he owns 160 acres of land, which he has cultivated and improved from unbroken prairie. There are thirty-five acres of native timber utilized for stock pasture, and his farm is well supplied with living springs. Fruit he raises in abundance of many different kinds from an ample orchard of his own planting, and of which he has made a decided success. Mr. Walters is connected with the Odd Fellows Society in Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, and has served on the Board of Education, of his township for a number of terms. His family consists of three children—Annie Gay, Burton G., and Leon L.

BENJAMIN WATKINS, proprietor of the "Willow Grove Farm," Section 26, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Kansas during the spring of 1858, and pre-empted 160 acres of land. He was the first settler on the prairie between Hiawatha and Walnut Creek, and has resided on the same farm ever since, which he has improved until he now has one of the finest places in the county. He has a fine grove of forest trees of his own planting, also a fine orchard containing 250 choice fruit trees, all bearing, and his farm is surrounded by a beautiful hedge fence. Mr. W. was born in Logan County, Ohio, January 16, 1826, and was married in Indiana in 1859 to Miss Emily Evens. They have three children, viz.: Delpha M., Rachael C., and Grant C. Mr. W. belongs to the Masonic Society, and is a charter member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, and Mount Horeb Chapter No. 43; is also connected with Hiawatha Commandery No. 13.

WILLIAM M. WELCOME, County Treasurer of Brown County, is a native of Maine, born November 19, 1838, in Franklin County. While but a lad removed with his parents to Wisconsin, and lived first in Waushara County but afterwards removed to Green Lake County. Was employed at farming and lumbering, and in 1863 became a soldier of the Rebellion, enlisting with his twin brother in the Sixteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, Company H, at Eau Claire. In this he served until the close of the war, but his brother was killed at the battle of Atlanta, July 21, 1864. After the war he returned to Wisconsin, and was there employed at farming up to 1870. Then came to Hiawatha, Kansas, and embarked in the grain and lumber business in company with S. P. Gaskill, deceased, and afterwards with J. M. Chase. Mr. Welcome was elected Clerk of the District Court in 1878, and in 1879 was elected County Treasurer, resigning the position of Clerk to accept that office, to which he was re-elected in 1881. He had previously served in the City Council, and was Mayor of the city one term. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35 of the Masonic order, and of Star of Hope Lodge No. 1338, K. of H. His wife was Miss Fanny Seiley, daughter of A. J. Seiley, one of the pioneers of Brown County, and for many years proprietor of the old "Hiawatha House." They were married in this city in 1873.

HENRY B. WEY, manager of the firm of H. B. Wey & Co., hardware dealers, tin manufacturers, etc. This business house was established in the spring of 1868, by H. C. Wey, and was operated by him until January, 1878, when he took H. B. Wey as partner. This is the oldest hardware house in the county and has been constantly growing in stock and trade until they now carry the largest and most complete stock of goods in this line to be found in Brown or the surrounding counties; they employ nine men and in 1881 did a business of $50,000. Their store room is 140x25, and in addition to this there is a large basement for the storage of wares, and an upper floor 80x25 used for work shops. Mr. Wey was born in Sauk County, Wis., October 8, 1852; he came to Kansas with his parents in 1859. Previous to coming to Hiawatha was engaged in the dry goods business at Leavenworth. This is a large enterprising firm and handle their large and excellent stock of goods like men born to the trade.

WHARTON BROS., printers and publishers, of Hiawatha, Kansas, are the proprietors of the Messenger. The "Wharton Boys," as they are familiarly known, are the sons of Geo. W. and Angeline J. Wharton, former residents of Mifflin County, Pa. The family came to Kansas in the spring of 1872, and located about five miles northwest of Morrill, Brown Co., Kan., where they resided about nine and one-half years. The parents now reside near Sabetha, Nemaha Co., Kan., while the "boys" are residents of Hiawatha, where they do a general printing business and publish the Messenger, one of the best and most popular papers in the State of Kansas. The brothers are Samuel R., James M. and William G. They were all born near Newton Hamilton, Mifflin Co., Pa.; Samuel R., March 24, 1861; James M., June 9, 1864; and William G., January 12, 1866. Their early education was very meagre. Poverty compelled their parents to retain them on the farm until each was sixteen, that being the age at which they started out into the world each for himself. Their education, such as it was, was received in the common schools of Brown County and the high school of Hiawatha, except that Samuel R., was a student of Kansas University for a short time. Outside of this, they have been educated by the hard knocks of the world, which always "make or break" men. They are all acceptable members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Hiawatha. The firm was organized and started in business in September, 1881, and the Messenger was founded in December, 1881, when the "boys" were all under age. This firm of young men and their paper, the Messenger, started as a private enterprise and without a promise of patronage from anybody; very few, even, knew that they were in business until their press was running constantly; and nobody knew they were going to start a paper until 3,000 copies of the first number were in all the postoffices of the county. They had to compete with two old and well established papers, whose proprietors openly sneered at the "boys," and publicly insulted them. Very few believed that the paper could succeed; not even its own subscribers, who were willing to risk a few cents to "give the boys a chance," thought it would live three months. Opposed by the political rings of all parties, by all the business men who expected favors from the other papers, and by the most sneaking and underhanded fight that the opposing papers could possibly make, it has come out ahead, and patronage is flowing in from all over Northeastern Kansas. Notwithstanding the fact that a noted literary man is one of its competitors, the Messenger is constantly going into families where the other paper is being discontinued. This fact is mentioned with due regard to the merits of the gentleman whose literary abilities are not appreciated by the people, who are more anxious for the latest news and all the news. A prominent farmer of Brown County was heard to give utterance to the following words: "The Messenger not only 'takes the cake,' but the whole bakery;" and such is truly the case. It has been enlarged three times since its start, and has a larger circulation than any other weekly paper in Kansas, outside of the daily offices. It is Republican in politics. It is a fact that nowhere, in the history of this country, can be found an enterprise that has made such rapid strides forward under so adverse circumstances. Industry, economy and constant hard work are the secrets of its success. It is the pride of the county, because three boys, so young, had the "backbone" and determination to make it win in the face of the opposition of men of money, experience, ability and fame. Its success is due, also, to the men who know a good thing when they see it, and who took up with the Messenger as soon as they saw that it was worthy of patronage. These same men are now proud to say. "I have taken the Messenger ever since it started, when it was a little bit of a sheet, and everybody laughed at me for subscribing, but now I laugh back." The friends of Wharton Bros. and the Messenger, who have watched their growth with interest, expect a brilliant future for them, and speak openly in their praise. S. R. Wharton, whose portrait is given at the head of this sketch, is the eldest of the Wharton Bros., and senior member of the firm, is managing editor of the Messenger and manager of their business. This portrait represents him at present. His biography is partly given in that of Wharton Bros. He was married to Miss Blanche Miller, of Hiawatha, on July 18, 1883, which union proved to be a very happy one. He is a member and secretary of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, A., F. & A. M.; is a member of Diamond Lodge No. 56, K. of P., of Kansas; and a member of the Greek letter fraternity of students, Beta Theta Pi, his membership being with Alpha Nu chapter at Kansas University. Miss Miller, who is now his wife, was a native of Wisconsin. After leaving Kansas University, and before turning his whole attention to newspaper work, he spent twenty-five months in the law office of Lacock & May, in Hiawatha; but finding newspaper work more congenial to his tastes than law, took up the former. He is still a law student, and has quite a collection of volumes on various branches of that subject. (Legal knowledge is valuable to an editor.) The success of the Messenger is chiefly due to his work. He is the father of it. The paper, as well as all other business of the firm, is run at his dictation. Honorable in his dealings, far-sighted and shrewd, he is pretty certain of an eminently successful career, which he has begun well for one so young. He would have made a brilliant lawyer. In fact, he is one of those peculiar individuals destined to succeed in any business he may undertake, and may be looked for in the future higher up the ladder of fame.



S. R. Wharton.

GEORGE H. WHEELER, retired merchant, was born in Livingston County, N. Y., July 10, 1836. He is the son of Thomas C. and Mary Wheeler nee Northrup; both of his parents of English descent. They removed to McHenry County, Ill., while the subject of this sketch was but a small boy, from there to Columbia County, Wis., in 1849, and here he lived on a farm and acquired his education. When nineteen years of age he went to Chicago and afterward traveled around through different States. In 1861 he enlisted at Dubuque, Iowa, as a volunteer with Company A of the Third Iowa Infantry. He veteraned in the same regiment in 1864, but this was afterward consolidated with the Second Iowa Regiment, and in this he served until the close of the Rebellion. In January, 1866, Mr. Wheeler came west to St. Joseph, Mo., and was one of the illustrious 410 who dared to step up to the polls and cast his vote for Grant's first election to the Presidential chair. In June, 1874, he removed to Hiawatha, where he was engaged at merchandising and various enterprises until he retired. He served one year as City Marshal of Hiawatha, and is at present Councilman. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, of the I. O. O. F., and is also connected with the K. of H. Mr. Wheeler and wife are members of the K. & L. of H. of Hiawatha. She was formerly Miss Mary E. Brown, whom he married at St. Joe, Mo., in 1869, but who is a native of Iowa.

DANIEL WEBSTER WILDER, editor of the Hiawatha World, was born in Blackstone, Mass., July 15, 1832. He graduated at the Public Latin School, Boston, and received a Franklin medal; at Harvard College and received the Bowdoin first prize, gold medal; attended the Harvard Law School and was admitted to the Boston bar. Came to Kansas in 1857, settled in Elwood, in 1858, and was elected Probate Judge of Doniphan County. Went to St. Joseph, Mo., in 1860, and edited the Free Democrat; went to Leavenworth and edited the Conservative until 1865. He was Surveyor-General of Kansas and Nebraska in 1863-'64, appointed by President Lincoln. Editor of the Rochester, N. Y., Express in 1866, '67 and '68; of the Leavenworth, Kan., Conservative, in 1868, '69 and '70; of the Fort Scott Monitor in 1871-'72, and was for two terms State Auditor of Kansas, after two unanimous nominations. In 1875 he received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from the University of Kansas and wrote "The Annals of Kansas," which was published at Topeka. Returned to St. Joseph in 1876, as the editor of the Herald. Came to Hiawatha, Kan., and took his present position, March 1, 1882.

SAMUEL WILSON, Clerk of the District Court, came to Kansas in the spring of 1870, locating in Highland, Doniphan County, where he was engaged in merchandising. In 1875 he moved to Nemaha County, and was extensively concerned in agricultural interests. In 1879 came to Brown County, and in October of the following year was appointed by Judge Otis to fill an unexpired term of W. M. Welcome, Clerk of the District Court. At the expiration of his appointment he was elected to that position for two years, which he holds at this writing. At the election held November 7, 1882, he received the largest vote cast in the county. Mr. Wilson was born in Baltimore, Md., July 24, 1821. His parents Samuel and Rosann Wilson, removed to Hardin County, Ky., Samuel was yet a small child, and here he was reared and received his education. Previous to coming to Kansas he was engaged at general merchandise there, and although residing in the South during the Rebellion he was a strong Union man, and on his removal here brought testimonials from many prominent Union men in Kentucky to attest the same. He was married there in March, 1848, to Miss Martha Gore, of Nelson County, Ky. Both are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church society. Mr. W. belongs to the Masonic Order, Hiawatha Lodge No. 35.

CHARLES WOLF, dealer in general merchandise, was born December 1, 1848, in New York City; while yet a lad he removed to Westmoreland County, Pa., with his parents, Peter and Elizabeth Wolf, who were natives of Germany, his mother's family name, Foulk. Mr. Wolf received a common school education, and during his early life was employed at clerking. He came to Hiawatha in 1869, and commenced clerking for R. S. Fairchilds, deceased, one of the very first merchants in the town. This he followed for ten years, and then started in business with E. D. Benner, which firm flourished until the spring of 1881; then Mr. Benner retired, and the firm was known as Wolf & Cornelison, up to the 5th of January, 1882, when Mr. Wolf became sole proprietor of the entire business. He has a fine and spacious store-room 25x100; employs two clerks, and does a large and lucrative business, and in fact is one of Hiawatha's influential and enterprising citizens. Mr. Wolf has held various town and public offices, and is at this writing Township Treasurer. He was married January, 1, 1878 to Miss Minnie King, of Manitowoc, Wis. They are both members of the K. L. of H., of Hiawatha, and Mr. Wolf belongs to the Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338, of the K. of H.

JOHN WONDER, retired farmer, was born in Mifflin County, Pa., January 9, 1815. Received a common school education, and worked on the home farm with his parents until twenty-one years of age, when he was married to Miss Mary Harpster, a native of the same State. He then started farming for himself, which he has made his vocation, and at which he has been very successful. In the spring of 1871, he removed to Brown County, Kan., purchased 160 acres in Hiawatha Township, and is now proprietor of 467 acres of land, all under a high state of cultivation. He and his wife are original members of the Evangelical Church of Hiawatha, and were liberal contributors to the erection of the church building and parsonage. Mr. Wonder has been connected with this denomination for fifty years. They are the parents of seven children—Daniel, Frederick, David, John W., Franklin, Sarah and Catherine. David was a soldier in the late Rebellion.

DANIEL B. ZIMMERMAN, farmer, Section 35, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, February 11, 1847. During his boyhood he attended school, and worked on a farm until sixteen years of age, when he commenced learning the blacksmith's trade, which he followed until the breaking out of the Rebellion, then enlisted with Company K, of the Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in 1862, and was a participant in all the principal engagements of his regiment until the close of the war. Returned to Ohio and resumed his former occupation. In 1859, was married to his first wife, Saloma Buhlman, who died in 1867. He was married to his present wife, Miss Annie E. Zimmerman, in August, 1868. During the spring of 1876, Mr. Zimmerman came to Kansas, purchased the place where he now lives, which was partially improved, and contains 160 acres of land. He has put a great number of improvements upon it, and as fruit raising is fast becoming a prominent industry in this State, he has given a good deal of attention to the same, and raises an abundance of all the choice varieties indigenous to this climate. He and his wife are members of the German Reformed Church of Hiawatha. Their family consists of eight children—Emma H., Thomas, William O., Alice and Alma, twins, Fredliena, Christie and Edwin.

ELIAS ZIMMERMAN, proprietor of Poplar Grove Farm, Section 35, P. O. Hiawatha, which is situated three miles west of the city, and at the head of Wolf River. He was born November 13, 1838, in Tuscarawas County, Ohio. His education was limited, as he was left in early life, to his own support, and is one of our self-made men in every sense of the word. He was engaged in agricultural pursuits in his native State, and was married in 1860. In 1864, he removed to Benton County, Iowa, where he improved a farm and operated it until his immigration to Kansas. This occurred in 1874, and in the same year he established a home on his present place, which contains 160 acres, all under fence and finely improved. Mr. Zimmerman is extensively engaged in importing, breeding and shipping Poland-China hogs, and has always on hand a choice lot of the same, which he furnishes to purchasers of the same on orders. Is also a practical auctioneer, and makes sales over the entire county. He and his wife are members of the German Reformed Church, Hiawatha.

FREDERICK ZIMMERMAN, boot and shoe store, was born near the city of Berne, Switzerland, May 16, 1833; when thirteen years of age his father died, and in 1849, with his mother and eight other members of the family emigrated to America, they settled in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, and here Frederick learned his trade. In 1856, he removed to Andrew County, Mo., where he spent two years, thence to St. Joe, same State, and engaged in mercantile business. In 1862 he enlisted in the Federal army, serving six months in the Missouri State Militia, and two years in active service with the Fifth Missouri Cavalry. In 1869, Mr. Zimmerman came to Hiawatha, and for some time worked for his brother Daniel, who had preceded him one year. He then bought him out and has since conducted the business himself. Being now the oldest resident shoemaker in the county. He and his wife are members of the German Reformed Church. They were married in 1858. Her maiden name was Catherine Zimmerman.

RUDOLPH ZIMMERMAN, farmer, Section 32, Township 2, Range 17, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Switzerland, November 18, 1828; while yet a small child he came to the United States with his parents. During the spring of 1855 he came to Brown County, Kan., in company with his father and John Moser, and pre-empted a claim of 160 acres, where he now lives. This of course was at that time all wild prairie, as Rudolph was one of the first settlers in the county, and while doing the breaking was obliged to go as far as St. Joe, Mo., to have his plows sharpened. It is now all under cultivation, excepting forty-five acres of native timber, and is supplied with good improvements. There is also a fine orchard of about five acres, most of the trees having been set out in 1860, and the two years following, as Mr. Zimmerman was one of the first gentlemen to introduce fruit raising in the county, which is fast becoming so important an enterprise. He was married to his first wife, Miss Barbara Meisenheimer, May 18, 1854, in Andrew County, Mo. She died January 22, 1872, leaving three children, William A., Eliza E. and Mary M. The present Mrs. Zimmerman was formerly Mrs. Mary A. Boyce; they were married November 7, 1872, and have three children, Hattie M., Leslie C. and Katie M. The father of the subject of this sketch, Christian Zimmerman, was a native of Switzerland, and was born November 24, 1799, near Berne. After acquiring a practical education, he learned the trade of carpenter and builder which he afterward followed. In August, 1832, he emigrated to the United States, first locating in Tuscarawas County, Ohio; here he farmed and worked at his trade until 1851, when he removed to Andrew County, Mo., where he lived until 1855, when he came to Kansas with the subject of this sketch. He was among the first settlers in Brown County, and helped stake out the village of Hiawatha. He was married April 1, 1821, to Miss Magdelena Wiland, who was born in the same Parish as himself, December 17, 1797. Six children were born to them, Magdelena, Christian, Ann, Rudolph, Catherine and John, all of whom are now living, except the mother, who died May 25, 1871.

ADAM H. ZIMMERS, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Hiawatha, hails from Pennsylvania. Was born September 10, 1844, in Bedford County. The date and month seemed to have an unusual attraction for the family, for his father and one of his sisters were born on the 10th of September. His parents moved to Richland County, Ohio, while the subject of this sketch was yet a lad, and there he made his home until he immigrated to Kansas; this occurred in March, 1870, and during the fall following he established himself on his present farm, which was partially improved and contains eighty acres. Mr. Zimmers has been three terms Road Overseer, and is now serving his sixth year as Clerk of School District No. 6, he is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, I. O. O. F., and his wife is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city. They were married December 28, 1875; her maiden name was Annetta Everts. They have three children, Abba R., Jake R. and Reuben R.

ROBINSON.

The Robinson of to-day bears date from the building of the railway station upon the completion of the St. Joseph & Denver City Railway in 1871. Prior to the advent of steam transportation, the old California trail, running half a mile to the south, had built up a horsing station with the attendant buildings.

This town, now known as Old Robinson, contained a tavern, kept in 1858 by Samuel Wade, and later by William Brown; general stores by Daniel P. Williams and S. Morehead, and two blacksmith shops.

The site of the old town is now a farm.

The new town of Robinson was first platted in 1872, the plat showing a site of forty acres, all upon the land of Z. Holcomb. This plat was not, however, satisfactory to interested parties, and the following year a new survey was made. A third and final survey and plat were completed in 1881.

The first building in Robinson was a dwelling house erected by Z. Holcomb, and still standing near the railway track. This was very shortly followed by the drug store of E. Odell and the dwelling of D. P. Williams. The first merchant in general business was John A. Dowell, who was almost immediately followed by D. P. Williams and the firm of Moorehead & Anderson.

The postoffice was opened in 1871 in the store of Moorehead & Anderson, Mr. S. Moorehead acting as Postmaster. From this point it was removed to the store of J. B. Mitchell on his accession to the office of Postmaster, and with him it has ever since remained.

The first birth near the new town was that of a son of Porter Sanborn, which occurred in 1870; the first death that of Miss Sophia McAllister; the first wedding the union of Dr. James Parsons and Miss Phœbe Martin. This Dr. Parsons was the first physician of the town and continued the practice of his profession until shortly before his death. A Dr. Burns was also an early practitioner in the neighborhood, but remained but a short time. After him in the order named came Drs. George Parsons, J. L. Le Master and W. Taylor, who are all at this time residents of the community.

The first hotel was kept in 1871 by C. McAllister, who after various changes of base occupied in 1875 the building next the store of Charles Hack, where he remained until burned out in the great fire. Within two weeks after this memorable event in the town's history Mr. McAllister erected on Parsons Street a building which is the only hotel in the town.

Shortly after McAllister's opening in 1871 G. M. Wade opened a hotel on the south of the railway. This was after a year or two converted into a dwelling house. The third hotel of the town was opened on the corner of Parsons street in the building formerly used by L. C. Parker as a storehouse and leased from him by A. C. Nellans. It was destroyed in 1881 and has not been rebuilt.

The first blacksmith in the town was C. McAllister, who opened a shop in May, 1871. He was very shortly followed by John Wyncoop, who began business in February, 1872, removing from Old Robinson.

The first 4th of July celebration occurred in 1871 and was observed by "national salutes" speeches, and in the evening by a dance at the grain house, now the store of J. A. Gilbert. The next year the Odd Fellows had charge of the celebration and carried out their programme, including a dance in Dowell's store on Parsons street, to the satisfaction of a large crowd which had assembled from the country round.

It is rarely the case that small towns, even when constructed of the most inflammable material, are severe sufferers by conflagration. That fire may become utterly unmanageable in a few buildings and be only stopped by natural or artificial barriers is not an infrequent occurrence; but that all efforts should be unavailing, all barriers useless, is fortunately a rare event. Such was, however, the case in Robinson. To understand the course of the fire it must be premised that the business part of the town consisted of two streets running at right angles, one parallel to the railway and the other northward. On the upper portion of the latter stood the two-story building of C. Meisenheimer. Just before daybreak on February 16, 1882, flames were seen pouring from the upper story of this building and before the citizens could be aroused the whole interior of the store was seething with fire. Adjoining on the south stood the hardware store of Leslie & Hall, and attention was at once turned to removing its contents. Little had been done in this direction before the flames, impelled by a strong northwest wind, drove the workers from their places. Abandoning their efforts in this direction and trusting to a large vacant lot between the burning building and the hotel on the south the crowd turned to the store of G. W. Parsons, upon the north, already well ablaze, and to the dwelling of J. W. Baxter, on the east side of the street. It is needless to detail the half frantic efforts of those who saw their property endangered and the very existence of the town doubtful. Noon saw the flames subdued but chiefly because there was no more to burn. On the north of the building in which the fire started were the ruins of the building of G. W. Parsons, occupied by J. B. Mitchell as a drug store and postoffice, and in the upper story by the Odd Fellows' and the Masonic Lodges; the grocery of H. C. King and the office of Dr. J. L. LeMaster. Below the stores of C. Meisenheimer and Leslie & Hall the fire had leaped the vacant space and burned from the corner westward, consuming the hotel building of L. C. Parker, leased by A. Nellans; the general store of Spencer & Spickelmire; the grocery of Round & Zieber; the meat market of A. Terrill, and the hotel of C. McAllister. On the east side of Parsons street was destroyed the dwelling of J. W. Baxter, also used as a millinery store; the barber shop of William Morris; the agricultural implement warehouse of Leslie & Hall; the meat market of N. Peek; the general store of N. P. Rush & Co.; the grocery of J. A. Gilbert, and the wagon shop of T. J. Jenkins. This was a clean sweep of both sides of Parsons street to the street next the railway. The loss by this fire footed up $31,000; the insurance on the property destroyed being $11,000. The heaviest losers were N. F. Leslie, J. P. Mitchell and L. C. Parker. The fire, it will be remembered, broke out on February 16th. On February 17th the work of rebuilding was begun, and in exactly one week the hardware store of Leslie & Hall was completed. A few days later the drug store of J. B. Mitchell was ready for occupation. Others followed, and in a month ten buildings were erected. Robinson of to-day, though the scars of her great disaster are yet visible, is to all appearance as thriving as before the eventful 16th of February, but it will be long before the vivid recollection of the night of terror will leave the minds of the inhabitants.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The first public school was held in an old stable on the farm of P. S. Kelly, and was taught by a Miss Brownley. In 1867 a schoolhouse 18x36 feet was built at a point just northwest of the town. In 1878 the present school building was erected. This structure is 36x60 feet, and one story in height. It has two rooms and cost $1,400. The first teacher in this building was L. H. Smyth, the present County Superintendent, who taught the school three years and was followed by P. C. Carey, who held the position during 1881-82. The present enrollment of the district, (No. 26), is 120, but owing to attendance from outside the number actually in school is 115.

Prairie Spring Schoolhouse, District No. 25, Robinson Township, was built in 1867, on what was once a portion of the farm of Mr. Seeley Sherman, who donated the land for this purpose. It is a handsome frame structure, and was erected when there was not to exceed seven families in the district, at a cost of $1,000. It is well furnished throughout, and has a seating capacity of seventy-five.

The School Board is composed of the following named gentlemen: J. A. Jeffers, Treasurer; A. J. Owen and J. A. Dowell, Clerk.

Mr. Samuel B. McCray is the teacher at present in charge of the school. This schoolhouse was one of the first erected in Brown, and was for a long time considered one of the best in the county.

Robinson Methodist Episcopal Church.—The corner-stone of this church was laid in June, 1875. The church was completed at a cost of $2,700, and dedicated in 1877. The first pastor was the Rev. Walter A. Saville, who preached one year, and was succeeded by the Rev. B. F. Bowman. He continued in charge two years, and was succeeded by the Rev. S. M. Hopkins, who also had charge two years. The parsonage, a handsome structure, was built while he was pastor. Mr. H. was succeeded by Rev. J. S. Kline, who continued in charge one and a half years, and was succeeded by Rev. E. H. Bailiff, the present popular pastor. The first trustees were P. S. Kelley, chairman; C. L. Carroll, treasurer; John H. Lange, secretary, I. F. Martindale, Harry Cheal and Hiram Crounse. The present trustees are P. S. Kelley, chairman; Charles Hack, treasurer; John H. Lange, secretary, C. L. Carroll, I. F. Martindale, James A. Gilbert and A. Terrill. The congregation has 130 members, composed of some of the first families of Robinson and vicinity. Prior to the erection of the church, services were held by Rev. John Day in the old schoolhouse.

A Sabbath-school was organized in the summer of 1876 under the superintendence of J. H. Lange, and had about forty members. At the present time the attendance is fully seventy. The school is in charge of Mr. John Wood.

Robinson Lodge, No. 98, I. O. of O. F.—Was instituted September 27, 1872, with the following charter members: A. J. Owen, N. G.; L. C. Parker, V. G.; G. B. Sterline, Sec.; M. V. Christy, Treas.; Lum. Martin, W. Swift, J. Sherman and J. Wynkoop. The lodge first met in Dowel's Hall, where it held its meetings until November, 1880, when it moved into Leslie's Hall. On the 16th day of February, 1882, it lost its hall by fire, with all its furniture and regalia. On this loss there was, unfortunately, no insurance. A meeting of the members of the lodge was held a few days after the fire, when it was decided to rent another hall, and on the 25th day of March, 1882, it held its first meeting in Hack's

Hall, the Masons and Odd Fellows furnishing the hall together. The lodge is now in a prosperous condition, with thirty-five members, composed of some of the best citizens of Robinson and vicinity. The lodge was incorporated July 18, 1882, with J. B. Mitchell, J. Wynkoop, L. M. Hughes, William Parker and Miles Cook as trustees. The following named have been the Past Grands of the lodge: A. J. Owen, L. C. Parker, J. Wynkoop, A. Nellans, J. S. Stilwell, S. Iams, S. Malloit, J. B. Mitchell, C. C. Gregg, J. J. Payne and L. M. Hughes. The present officers are: W. M. Parker, N. G.; J. M. Morris, V. G.; C. S. Payne, Sec.; L. M. Hughes, Perm. Sec.; Ashael Terrill, Treas; C. C. Gregg, representative, and J. B. Mitchell, D. D. G. M.

Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A.,F. & A. M.—The dispensation for organizing this lodge was granted June 30, 1874, by the Grand Lodge of the State of Kansas, and chartered October 21, 1875.

The following named were the charter members: Charles Hack, W. M.; C. A. Lemon, S. W.; A. H. Wade, J. W.; R. H. Bollinger, Treas.; Geo. W. Parsons, Sec.; John Wynkoop, S. D.; William Morris, J. D.; Solomon Jamison, tyler, and Hiram Crounse. The lodge held regular meetings in Hack's Hall, until the fall of 1880, when they removed to their new hallin Leslie & Parson's block, which was destroyed by fire, February 16, 1882. The lodge lost all their regalia and property, on which they had, unfortunately, no insurance. Since the fire they have held their meetings in their old room in Hack's Hall. The lodge has thirty-five members, comprised of the solid and influential men of Robinson and vicinity. The present officers of the lodge are: Dr. Geo. W. Parsons, W. M.; N. F. Leslie, S. W.; John Wynkoop, J. W.; John Bangtson, Treas.; E. C. Brown, Sec., William Morris, S. D.; Hiram Crounse, J. D., and Josiah Ball, tyler.

At an election held at their hall, December 19, 1882, by this lodge, the following officers were elected for the ensuing Masonic year: Charles Hack, W. M.; John Wynkoop, S. W.; Hiram Crounse, J. W.; John Bengtson, Treas.; William H. Morris, Sec.; James Jensen, S. D.; N. S. Wood, J. D.; Henry Smith, S. S.; E. C. Brown, J. S. and Julius Meecke, tyler.

A steam grist-mill was built in 1870 by D. P. Williams, at a point south of the railway. After running it for about a year Mr. Williams sold the mill to Sterline & Bower, who used it up to the time of its destruction by fire in 1873. It was valued at $5,000, and had two run of buhr-stones. After the burning of the old mill no steps were taken to supply its place until 1880, when L. C. Parker erected, on the north bank of the river the mill now in use. This structure is 24x36 feet in size and two stories in height. It is furnished with two run of buhr-stones—one for wheat and one for corn and feed—and has capacity for milling, 120 bushels of grain daily. Power is furnished by an engine of forty-horse power. The property was sold on June 1, 1882, to R. A. Groninger, who now carries on the business.

What is now known as the Leslie elevator was built in 1876 by Crosswaite & Middleton as a warehouse. In this form it was twenty by sixty feet. It was purchased in 1880 by the Gregg Brothers Grain Company, of St. Joseph, Mo., and enlarged to 48x110 feet. It is two stories in height and has a capacity of 15,000 bushels of grain. Power is furnished by an engine of twenty horse-power. With its improvements the elevator is valued at $5,000.

The town had, in 1882, a population of 300. Its business may be summed up as follows: Four general stores, four groceries, one hardware store, one drug store, one agricultural implement house, two millinery stores, two blacksmith shops, two harness shops, one wagon shop, one elevator and one hotel.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

WALTER E. BEAL, farmer, Section 22, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson; came to Kansas April 15, 1880, and located in Robinson Township, where he has resided since. Mr. Beal was born in Richland County, Ohio, April 24, 1862, and lived in his native State until he came to Kansas. He was married October 10, 1882, in Hiawatha, to Miss Clara E. Iiams, a native of Morrow County, Ohio. Mr. Beal is a young and energetic farmer, and has charge of 160 acres of fine upland in Robinson Township, belonging to his grandfather, Mr. G. C. Everts, an old Ohioan. The farm is all enclosed, and all under cultivation. The orchard covers six acres, and contains 182 bearing apple, seventy-five peach, and a few plum and cherry trees. The water supply is good and cannot be excelled, and consists of a good well and a number of never-failing springs. The improvements consist of a new three-room frame dwelling house, stock stable, new granary, corn-crib, etc. Mr. Beal had twenty acres in fall wheat this season, which yielded 27½ bushels to the acre, forty-five acres in corn, which averaged 55 bushels to the acre, and ten acres of timothy, which yielded two tons of hay to the acre.

JOHN BENGTSON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 17, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson was born in Hastveda, Krasteanstad, Sweden, January 19, 1840 and lived in his native country until 1865, when he immigrated to America and located in Galesburg, Ill., where he resided one year. The next year he traveled extensively through the States of Kansas and Missouri, and in the fall of 1867 became a resident of Kansas, locating in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is an active and zealous member of the Lutheran Church, and is one of the officers of the congregation to which he belongs. He is also a member of Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A., F. & A. M., and is treasurer of his lodge. He was married in Robinson, to Miss Carrie Ericson, a native of Sweden. They have four children—Nellie, Albert, Hermina and Emma. "Wheatland," as Mr. Bengtson's farm was aptly christened by the correspondent of the Chicago Industrial World, lies on a branch of the Wolf River, and is a valuable estate. It is finely watered by that stream and springs, contains 320 acres, forty of which are woodland, four miles of hedge, and a pretty house, and gives the enterprising owner a yearly yield of 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of wheat, 4,300 bushels of corn, 400 bushels of oats and some rye. He feeds a carload of hogs, keeps fifty head of good grade cattle, raises some good horses for the market, and is one of the most thrifty, thorough and successful farmers in this region. Mr. Bengtson came to Brown County fifteen years ago without a dollar, and now owns an estate worth at least $9,000, and stands high in the community in which he lives for sterling character and public spirit.

E. C. BROWN, dealer in general merchandise, member of the firm of M. P. Rush & Co., came to Kansas September 18, 1870, and located at Robinson, where he has resided and carried on his business since. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 159, A., F. & A. M., of which lodge he is secretary. Mr. Brown was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., May 16, 1850, and lived in his native State until his fourteenth year, when his parents removed to Branch County, Mich. Mr. Brown resided in Michigan about five years, and then came to Kansas. He is a young and energetic business man, and his firm does the principal trade in the city of Robinson.

CHARLES L. CARROLL, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 17, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas May 15, 1858, locating at Sumner, Atchison County, where he resided ten months, and then removed to Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He has been Constable of Robinson Township one term, Treasurer and Clerk of the same township one term each, and Commissioner of Brown County one term. He is a prominent and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He took part in the war of the Rebellion during the Price raid as a member of Captain Swayze's Company, of the Nineteenth Regiment Kansas Militia, and enlisted in Robinson; served seventeen days and was mustered out of service at Lawrence. Mr. Carroll was born in Richmond, Chittenden Co., Vt., December 3, 1827, and lived in his native State until he removed to Kansas. He was married in Washington County, Vt., in 1850, to Miss Lucy Scribner, a native of Vermont. They have two children living—Charles E. and Alice (married to James E. Curtis, a native of New York). Mr. Carroll has a fine farm, divided into upland and bottom land. It is all enclosed and has 120 acres in cultivation, the remainder being timber land. His orchard contains 120 apple, 30 cherry, 75 peach and a few pear and plum trees. There is an abundance of good water on the farm, comprising three wells and a great number of fine springs. The middle fork of Wolf Creek flows nearly through the center of the farm. The improvements consist of a fine seven-room frame dwelling house, with cellar, and surrounded by handsome shade trees and evergreens, frame barn with basement, 28x32 feet, granary, etc. Mr. C. had eighty acres in corn this season, which averaged fifty bushels to the acre, and twelve acres of rye, which averaged twenty bushels to the acre. He does an extensive business in feeding and fattening hogs and cattle, which he disposes of in the home markets. His farm lies two and a half miles from the town of Robinson, and is well calculated for a grain and stock farm.

REV. ORIN A. CHAPMAN, pastor of Robinson Circuit and Church of the United Brethren in Christ, was born in Sheffield, Lorain Co., Ohio, February 7, 1834, and lived in his native State until his twenty-seventh year, and then removed to Lake County, Ind., where he resided six years, and in November, 1865, became a resident of Kansas, locating in Greenwood County, near Eureka, where he resided one year, and was engaged in farming. He then removed to Ottawa, Franklin County. While residing in this city he became an itinerant in the Church of the United Brethren, and had charge of a circuit stretching through the counties of Coffey, Woodson and Allen, in this State. He was in charge of this circuit one year, and afterwards was stationed for a time in Miami, Douglas, Osage, Marion, Dickinson, Pottawatomie, Jackson, Jefferson and Leavenworth counties. Then again in Jackson County, then in Nemaha, and then was sent to Brown County, where he has charge of the circuit already named. He participated in the War of the Rebellion as a non-commissioned officer in Company A, Seventy-third Regiment, Indiana Infantry, and was enlisted at Crown Point, Lake Co., Ind., July 28, 1862. In July of the next year, owing to injuries he sustained while in the United States service, he was transferred to Company K, Eighth Regiment, Veteran Reserve Corps, and was discharged in July, 1865. He took part in the Battle of Stone River. He was married in Erie Co., Pa., March 25, 1858, to Miss Olive K. Barker, a native of Erie Co., Pa. They have eight children living, whose names are: Lottie (married to Theodore Mathers, a native of Ohio), Willie, Emma, Ella, Carrie, Scott, Minnie, and Frank. Mr. Chapman is a self-educated man, a devoted and zealous pastor, a preacher of remarkable gifts, and is loved and revered by the members of his church.

M. V. CHRISTY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 22, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas in January, 1868, locating in Washington Township, where he resided one year and then removed to Robinson Township where he has resided since. Mr. Christy was born in Morrow County, Ohio, January 19, 1836, and lived in his native State until 1859, and then went to Calaveras County, Cal., where he was engaged in mining and prospecting. He resided in California until the fall of 1865, and then returned to his Ohio home where he resided until he came to Kansas. He has been married twice. The first marriage took place near Mount Gilead, Ohio, May 1, 1867, to Miss Martha Finley, a native of Ohio; she died in 1873. The second marriage occurred in January, 1875, in Morrow County, Ohio, to Miss Elmira Hull, a native of Ohio. They had three children, two of whom are living—Zoe Estella, Mattie (died in March, 1882) and Harry Hull. Mr. Christy has a choice upland farm of 160 acres, all enclosed and all in cultivation. His orchard covers about three acres and contains 200 bearing apple, 100 peach and 25 pear and cherry trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits and grapes on the farm. The water supply can not be excelled and consists of springs and a never failing well. The improvements consist of a seven-roomed frame dwelling house, surrounded by handsome evergreens and shade trees, frame barn, granary, corn crib and other out-buildings. Mr. Christy had 6 acres in oats this season, which averaged 40 bushels to the acre; 16 acres in barley, which yielded 30 bushels to the acre, and 75 acres in corn which averaged 55 bushels to the acre. He is one of the enterprising and successful farmers of Brown County.

AUSTIN CLOSE, farmer and stock raiser, west half of Section 36, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Union County, Penn., February 3, 1838, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, and then removed to Sandusky County, Ohio, where he lived ten years and was engaged in farming. From Ohio he came to Kansas, locating, March 25, 1866, at Highland, Doniphan County, where he lived three years and was engaged in farming. He then removed to his farm in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Congregational Church. He was married in Erie Co., Ohio, in 1861, to Miss Angelina Mathews, a native of Ohio. They have three children—Henry Boyer, Dora and Alice. Mr. Close owns a fine upland farm of eighty acres, all enclosed and all in cultivation. This orchard covers two acres and contains 100 apple, 500 peach and abundance of small fruits and grapes. The improvements consist of a new frame French cottage dwelling, with seven rooms, surrounded by handsome evergreens and shade trees. The dwelling is built on a elevated site and from it a fine view of the cities of Troy, Highland and Hiawatha can be had. The other improvements are a stock stable, granary, corn crib, etc. Mr. Close is one of the energetic and thrifty farmers of Brown County, and in addition to tilling his own farm cultivates thirty acres of rental land in close proximity to his own farm. He makes a specialty of raising fine hogs, of which he sells quite a number each year. He raised this season 1,761 bushels of small grain and 1,800 bushels of corn.

MILES COOK, junior member of the firm of Terrill & Cook, dealers in groceries, provisions, queensware, boot, shoes, etc., came to Kansas in March, 1879, and located in Robinson, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of Robinson Lodge No. 98, I. O. O. F., of which lodge he is recording secretary. He participated in the late war as a private of Company B, Thirty-sixth Regiment Iowa Infantry, and enlisted August 24, 1862, at Christianburg, Iowa, and was discharged September 24, 1865, at Davenport, Iowa. He took part in the battles of Helena, Ark., in the Tallahatchian expedition, Shell Mound and numerous other engagements. Mr. Cook was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1833, and lived in his native State until his third year when his father removed to Dearborn County, Ind., where Mr. Cook lived until his twenty-first year and then removed to Wapello County, Iowa, where he resided until he came to Kansas. He is known for his strict business integrity and probity, and the firm of which he is a member do a large and safe business. He was married November 26, 1882, to Miss Fanny Hendy, a native of New York City, where she resided until her fourteenth year when she removed to Illinois, where she resided until her twenty-third year, when she removed to Brown County, Kan., where she has since resided.

ABRAHAM COLE, Esq., farmer and stock raiser, P. O. White Cloud. Came to Kansas in June, 1857, locating in what was then Irving Township, now Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has since lived. Esquire Cole was one of the Judges of Election at the Roy's Creek Precinct, in Irving Township at the time of the rejection of the Lecompton Constitution. He was Justice of the Peace of his township in 1858-59. He is a member of the Evangelical Church, and of White Cloud Lodge, No. 6, I. O. O. F. He participated in the late war, during the Price Raid, as Commissary Sergeant of Company B, Nineteenth Regiment, Kansas Militia, and enlisted at Fort Leavenworth in the fall of 1864, served fourteen days and was discharged in the city of Atchison. He was born in York County, Pa., December 15, 1821, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, then his parents removed to Columbiana County, Ohio, where he lived until his twenty-first year and then removed to Holt County, Mo., where he lived two years, and then returned to his old home in Ohio, where he lived eleven years, and then removed to Kansas. He was married in Columbiana County, Ohio, October 9, 1843, to Miss Magdalena Hahn, a native of Columbiana County. They have had seven children, of whom only three are living, viz: Tobias, (married to Miss Margaret Ulch, a native of Kansas. They have one child, a son.) Mary, (married to Elias Fintzinger, a native of Allentown, Pa.,) and Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Cole has a fine upland farm which contains 390 acres. It is all under fence and all in cultivation. The improvements consist of a frame dwelling house, large stock barn, new granary, smokehouse, milkhouse and other farm buildings. He has plenty of good, pure living water on his farm, a fine spring rising near the house which is conveyed, by means of a hydraulic ram through iron pipes, to his dwelling and barn. Another fine spring rises in his pasture land in the northwest section of his farm. His orchard covers fourteen acres, and contains 750 apple, 1,500 peach, 50 cherry, 25 pear, 15 prune and apricot, and a few mulberry trees. He has a small vineyard which covers one acre and has about 200 vines. A portion of the grapes from these vines are manufactured at the proper season, into wine for his own use, while the rest of the grapes not needed for family use, are sold in the markets of Hiawatha, White Cloud and Highland. Esquire Cole devotes his attention to raising grain, cattle and hogs. He has a small herd of fine blooded Durham cattle, and about 100 Poland China hogs. Mr. Cole comes of honest Pennsylvania stock and follows the Pennsylvania mode of farming, which is too well known to need description.

HIRAM CROUNSE, farmer, Section 9, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Albany County, N. Y., June 7, 1825, and lived in his native State until March, 1860, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, near Wathena, where he resided but a short time and then removed to Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was a charter member of Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A., F. & A. M. and is J. W. of this lodge. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity ere his arrival in Kansas, having been a member of Port Byron Lodge, No. 35, Port Byron, Cayuga Co., N. Y. He has been a member of the School Board of the City of Robinson three years, and is Justice of the Peace of Robinson Township. He took part in the last war as a member of Company C, Ninth Regiment, New York Heavy Artillery, and enlisted in Auburn, N. Y., August 29, 1864, and was discharged in Rochester, N. Y., July 1, 1865. In one of the hotly contested battles before Petersburg Mr. Crounse was severely wounded, and was for a long time confined in Lincoln General Hospital, in Washington, D. C. Subsequently, he was transferred to the United States Hospital, in Rochester, N. Y., where he remained until his discharge. He was married in Cayuga County, N. Y., in February, 1845, to Miss Caroline E. Snow, a native of New York. They have three children: Elizabeth, Belle, (married to R. H. Snyder, a native of, and a resident of Illinois,) and Mary Emma. Esquire Crounse owns a choice upland farm of seventy-one acres. It is all enclosed with substantial fences, and has sixty-five acres in cultivation, the remainder being timber land. The farm is well watered, having a number of good wells, and Wolf River flowing through the north part of it. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the property. The improvements are good and consist of a comfortable frame dwelling, containing six rooms, a good frame barn, corn crib, granary, etc. Esquire Crounse raises from 200 to 225 bushels of wheat, 50 to 75 bushels of rye, 250 to 300 bushels of oats, 800 to 1,000 bushels or corn, keeps 8 to 10 head of stock cattle, 25 to 30 head of hogs and 4 horses. He is an honored Magistrate of his township, a thorough farmer and a good citizen.

CURTIS N. DeWOLF, meat market, was born February 9, 1847, in Boone Co., Ill., and lived in his native State until his fourth year, when his mother (his father having died) removed to Erie County, Pa., where Mr. DeWolf lived until his sixteenth year, when he entered the U. S. army as a member of Company B, Independent Battery, Pennsylvania Artillery. He enlisted in the city of Erie, Pa., February 2, 1864, and was discharged at Victoria, Texas, November 2, 1865. He took part in the battles of Peach Tree Creek, Jonesboro', Spring Hill, Franklin, Nashville and other minor engagements. After his discharge he staid in Pennsylvania until the April following and then became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, where he resided until 1867, and then removed to Robinson, B own County, where he has resided since. He was married in Robinson in April, 1875, to Miss Eliza J. Crozier, a native of Kansas. They have three children, whose names are: Emery, Jessie and Alice. Mr. DeWolf is an honest, upright business man, has a big list of friends, and deserves them all.

JOHN A. DOWELL, proprietor of Rosedale Farm, Section 29, P. O. Robinson, became a resident of this State in June, 1857; in July of the year following he pre-empted 160 acres of his present farm and was one of the pioneers of Brown County. He is now the possessor of one of the finest and best improved farms in the county, containing 320 acres, entirely surrounded by a beautiful hedge fence. There is a fine grove of forest trees of over twenty years' growth, planted by Mr. Dowell's own hand, and fruit trees in abundance of all the choicest varieties, both large and small, and during a walk through this orchard it would indeed be difficult to realize that one were not in some of the old settled eastern States of Ohio or Pennsylvania. The residence of Mr. Dowell is a spacious dwelling of modern architecture, two stories high, the material frame. The proprietor of this large and well-regulated farm is also extensively engaged in stock raising and has some very fine specimens of graded cattle. Mr. Dowell is a native of Warren County, Va., and was born March 2, 1830, and removed to Licking County, Ohio, in 1847, where he farmed for four years. He then removed to Union County, Ohio, where he remained until 1856 and then removed to Tama County, Iowa, where he lived until his removal to this State. He stayed here through all the trials, troubles and difficulties during the border troubles, always standing firm in his belief, though his life was threatened many times. During the years 1860 and '61 he worked for one bushel of wheat per day, which was then worth only twenty-five cents per bushel, and this wheat he took to the mill and had ground into flour for the sustenance of his family. Notwithstanding the drought of 1860, the Border troubles, the panic of 1873 and the grasshopper plague, Mr. Dowell never lost his confidence in the future of this country, of which he always has been and is a strong admirer. He was married in November, 1858, at White Cloud, Kansas, to Miss Mary C. Northern, by whom he has six children living, Emma, Elmer E., George H., Charles, Hattie and John. Mr. Dowell has served seven years as a member of the Board of Education of District No. 25, this district having been organized at his residence.

JOHN GEORGE FIECHTER, farmer, Section 22, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson; was born in Baden, Germany, March 27, 1815, and lived in his native country until his twenty-first year, when he immigrated to America, locating in New Orleans, where he stayed five months. From there he went to Clark County, Ind., where he resided three and half years, and was engaged in farming. He then removed to Andrew County, Mo., where he resided twenty-two years, and was engaged in farming. In October, 1861, he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Robinson Township, Brown County where he has lived ever since. He has been a member of the Board of School District, No. 21, Brown County, three years. He has been married twice. The first marriage took place in Andrew County, Mo., in 1842, to Miss Cyntha Ann Deakins, a native of Iowa. Three children were the fruits of this marriage, one of whom is living—John, a soldier of the last war, a former member of Company H, Thirteenth Regiment, Kansas Infantry. The second marriage took place in 1846, in Andrew County, Mo., to Miss Annie Breit, a native of Switzerland. They had seven children, six of whom are living—William Frederick, married to Miss Hermina Dean, a native of Prussia, Germany; Louisa, married to C. M. Truex, a native of Missouri; Susan, married to S. E. Rush, a native of Illinois; Samuel Edward; Tina, married to Oscar Dean, a native of Prussia; and Jacob. Mr. Fiechter owns a large and excellent upland farm of 320 acres. It is mostly enclosed, and has 160 acres in cultivation, the balance being timber and pasture land. His orchard covers six acres and contains a great number of apple, peach and cherry trees, there is also half an acre of grapes on the farm. The supply of water is abundant, in addition to a number of wells and springs; it has Fiechter's branch of the Wolf flowing through the centre of it. The improvements consist of a comfortable frame dwelling, large frame barn, granary, etc. He has twenty-five acres in wheat this season, which yielded twenty-one bushels to the acre, eighteen acres in oats which yielded forty bushels, and sixty acres in corn, which averaged forty bushels to the acre. Mr. F. is one of the solid and substantial farmers of Brown County, and is an honest hard working German, who has demonstrated in his own case, what can be done in this county by intelligent and well directed labor.

JAMES A. GILBERT, dealer in groceries, queensware, boots and shoes, pocket and table cutlery. Came to Kansas in May, 1868, and located in Robinson, where he taught school until 1875, when he accepted a position in the general mercantile house of Charles Hack, where he continued until 1879, when he went into business for himself. Mr. Gilbert is Clerk of Robinson Township, and has held the office for two years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was Sergeant in Company C, Ninty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and enlisted at Camp Chase, Ohio, August 12, 1862. He was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., August 14, 1865. He took part in the battles of Richmond, Ky., Vicksburg, Tupelo siege of Nashville, Spanish Fort, and other engagements. At the battle of Richmond, Ky., he was taken prisoner by the rebel forces under the command of Major General Kirby Smith. He was however, shortly afterward, parolled. Mr. Gilbert was born in Washington County, Md., November 5, 1840, and lived there until his sixth year, when his parents removed to Henry County, Ind. Shortly afterward his parents removed to Montgomery County, Ohio, where they lived two years, and then moved to Franklin County, in the same State, where Mr. Gilbert lived until he entered the United States Army; after his discharge from the service, he returned to his Ohio home, where he resided until he came to Kansas. Mr. Gilbert married May 1, 1879, in, Robinson, Miss Harriet J. Abbott, a native of Illinois, she died June 28, 1881. Mr. Gilbert is a fair and honorable business man and does a thriving trade and is respected by all who know him.

CHARLES HACK, dealer in d y goods, groceries, boots, shoes, queensware, hardware, etc. Came to Kansas in August, 1855, and located in Wathena, Doniphan County, where he resided until 1872, and for a time was engaged in farming, and for the last eight years, while residing there, was in the general mercantile and hotel business. From Wathena, he came to Robinson, Brown County, where he has resided since and carried on business. Mr. Hack has been Treasurer of Robinson Township four terms and Treasurer of School District No. 26, Brown County, three terms. He is a prominent and influential member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and of Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A., F. & A. M. He was one of the charter members of and has been worthy master of his Lodge for eight years. He is also a member of Wathena Lodge No.—, I. O. O. F. He participated in the war of the rebellion, as a member of Company B, Thirteenth Regiment Kansas Infantry, and enlisted at Troy, Doniphan County, in September, 1862, and was mustered out at Little Rock, Ark.; in June 1865. He took part in the Battles of Prairie Grove and other minor engagements. Mr. H. was born in Breslau, Prussia, Germany, November 16, 1835, and lived in his native country until 1853, when he immigrated with his parents to America, locating in St. Louis, Mo., where they resided until 1854; in this year, he removed to St. Joe, Mo., where he resided until he came to Kansas. He was married in Doniphan County, February 16, 1860, to Miss Caroline Staley, a native of Illinois. They have five children living—William A., Cora E., Charles W., Harry W., and Albert J. Mr. Hack is one of the strong business men of this city, enjoys excellent credit and is a man of acknowledged strength in the community. He carries an unusually large stock, is popular and does a commanding trade. Mr. H. is also the owner of Hack's Hall, in Robinson. It was built in 1871, at a cost of nearly $2,500. It has a seating capacity of about 200, is elegantly furnished and at present is occupied by the Masonic and Odd Fellow's lodges, of Robinson as a place of meeting.

L. B. HALL, dealer in hardware, stoves and agricultural implements, Robinson, came to Kansas in May, 1864, and located in Hiawatha, where he resided until 1873, when he went to Colorado where he was engaged in mining and prospecting. He remained in Colorado until the winter of 1880, when he returned to Kansas. In April, 1881, he removed to Robinson and engaged in the hardware business with N. F. Leslie. In March, 1882, he purchased his partner's interest, since which time he has been carrying on business for himself. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, I. O. O. F., and of Doric Lodge No. 25, A., F. & A. M., of Fairplay, Park County, Colorado. Mr. Hall was born in Kosciusko County, Ind., December 12, 1849, and lived in his native State until he came to Kansas. He is one of the young and energetic business men of Robinson and does and deserves a large trade.

GEORGE W. B. HETLER, farmer, Section 22, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas March 8, 1880, and located in Irving Township, Brown County, where he resided until November 3, 1882, when he removed to Robinson Township, Brown County, where he resides at present. Mr. Hetler was born February 22, 1858, in Se eca County, Ohio, and resided in his native State until his nineteenth year and then removed to Butler County, Iowa, where he resided until he came to Kansas. He was married December 28, 1881, in Butler County, Iowa, to Miss Jennie C. Plantz, a native of Illinois. Mr. Hetler is a young, energetic and hard working farmer, and stands high in the favor of his neighbors.

Z. HOLCOMB, farmer, Section 4, Township 18, Range 72, P. O. Robinson, was born in Gallia County, Ohio, near Gallipolis, April 11, 1824. When quite young he immigrated with his father to Warren County, Ind., and from there to Cook County, Ill.; from there to Van Buren County, Iowa; from there to Jo Daviess County, Ill., near Galena, and from thence returned through the Territory of Iowa to Van Buren County, Iowa, where he was married in the year 1846 at the age of twenty-two years, to Miss Rebecca Blackford, a cousin of Judge McLane. Mrs. Holcomb was born in 1825 in Clark County, Ohio, and at the age of eighteen moved to Van Buren County, Iowa. After his marriage Mr. Holcomb removed to Wapello County, Iowa, where he resided about nineteen years. When he first went there he entered a quarter section of land; and began chopping and clearing, splitting rails to build fences, and breaking the land with six yoke of cattle, with which he plowed, putting muzzles on them. After building and otherwise improving the place he sold out and came to Kansas. He was one of the first subscribers to the Des Moines Courier, the first paper published in Ottumwa. Mr. Holcomb is a self-made man, having educated himself mostly by the light of the fire at night after his day's labor was finished. While residing in Iowa, Mr. Holcomb practiced law in the justice courts in this State, and his able services are frequently called into requisition by his neighbors in Brown County. He also took an active part in the Fremont and Lincoln campaigns during his residence in Iowa. He remained in this State until he saw the first railroad train running from Burlington to Ottumwa. He then removed to Kansas, becoming a resident of Robinson Township, Brown County, in the spring of 1865, where he has resided since. Shortly after coming to Brown County he purchased the farm that Robinson now stands on from the Hon. Ira Smith, a former register of the land office, at a cost of about $3,000, for three eighties of land. Mr. Holcomb laid out the town of Robinson, still owns most of the vacant lands, and is selling fine residence and business lots for from $25 to $100 each. The farm land adjoining the town is worth about $100 per acre. There is room and opportunity here for double the present population of the town, which time and development are sure to bring. Mr. Holcomb has lived in Robinson about eighteen years; he is an active and zealous member of the Church of the United Brethren. He has been a licensed preacher of this church for about fifteen years, and has had charge of congregations of this denomination in Kansas and Oregon until he was obliged to give up preaching on account of failing eye sight. While living in Robinson he has been engaged in chopping wood, farming and pleading cases in the justices' courts. He is the father of nine children, two of whom died young. Those living are: Stephen, a farmer and resident of Powhattan Township, Brown County; a soldier of the last war, having been a member of Col. Somer's Seventh Regiment, Iowa Cavalry. He enlisted at the age of fifteen and served three years. He is married to Miss Anna Richason, a native of England; Thomas, a merchant and farmer of Powhattan Township, Brown County; married to Miss Exeline Wallis, a native of Wapello County, Iowa; Angeline, married to S. P. Rupe, a school teacher and farmer, living in Dickinson County; Elizabeth, married to Marion Wade, a farmer and Justice of the Peace, of Robinson Township, Brown County; Roxa Jane, married to Monroe Parsons, a farmer residing in Robinson; Laura Ann, a school teacher living in Dickinson County, and Lucinda, married to Jesse Wallis, a farmer living in Robinson Township, Brown County.

LAVENS M. HUGHES, farmer, Section 15, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas September 3, 1865, and located in Robinson Township, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Baptist Church and of Robinson Lodge, No. 98, I. O. O. F., and is permanent secretary of his lodge. He has been Clerk of Robinson Township one term, Justice of the Peace of the same Township one term and Clerk of School District No. 21, Brown County, four terms. He took part in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company H., First Regiment, Washington Territory Volunteer Infantry, and enlisted September 5, 1862, in San Francisco, Cal., and was discharged from the service July 10, 1865, at Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory. After his term of service expired he came to Kansas. Mr. Hughes was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, June 10, 1832, and lived in his native land until his eighteenth year, when he went to Australia, where he lived three years, and was engaged in gold mining. From Australia he returned to his native country where he remained a short time, and then in 1853 immigrated to Canada, locating in Montreal, where he resided seven years, and was engaged in the mercantile business. He then again returned to his native home in Ireland where he remained eighteen months and then sailed for San Francisco, Cal. Immediately after recovering from the fatigues incident to his long voyage he joined the United States Volunteers, as already stated. Mr. Hughes was married November 4, 1868, in Washington Township, Brown County, to Mrs. Rachael McBride, a native of Morrow County, Ohio.

M. W. HUSON, of the firm of Huson & Payne, proprietors of Steam Threshing Machines. Mr. Huson came to Kansas in December, 1875, and located in Robinson Township, where he has resided since. He is a member of Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A. F. & A. M. Mr. Huson was born in Canada West, March 8, 1849, and lived in his native country until 1874, when he immigrated to the United States, and located in Oxford County, Mich., where he lived one year, and then came to Kansas. He and James W. Payne are the proprietors of a Champion Steam Engine and a New Massillon (Ohio) Separator, which they operate during the threshing season through the counties of Brown and Doniphan. They also operate a six-hole Sandwich Corn Sheller which is run by the same engine. The corn sheller is used by them in the winter. They have threshed for various farmers during the past season in Doniphan County: 4,028¼ bushels of wheat, 414½ bushels of rye, 1,113 bushels of barley, 299 bushels of oats, and in Brown County 31,474 bushels of wheat, 357 bushels of rye, 3,906 bushels of barley, 9,245 bushels of oats, 58½ bushels of timothy seed.

T. R. HUSTON, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Robinson, was born in St. Johns, New Brunswick, September 18, 1830, and lived in his native Province until his fourth year, when his parents removed to Norfolk County, Ontario, Canada, where he lived until 1865, and then removed to Oakland County, Mich. He lived in this State until 1875, when he became a citizen of Kansas, locating on his farm in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was married in the fall of 1876 in Brown County to Mrs. Sarah E. Jones. She was born in Warren County, Ohio, September 6, 1828, and moved with her parents to Indiana, where she married Isaiah Jones. In 1866 they immigrated to Kansas, where Mr. Jones died. Mr. Huston has a fine upland farm of eighty acres all enclosed, and with fifty acres in cultivation the remaining thirty acres being in pasture lands. There is a small young orchard on the farm. The improvements are a new four-room frame cottage, stock stable, granary, corn crib, etc. He had thirty acres in corn this season, which yielded 1,500 bushels; four acres in German millet, which averaged two tons to the acre, and ten acres of prairie grass, which averaged one and a half tons to the acre. When Mr. Huston came to Kansas he had just $600; to-day he owns a property worth from $3,000 to $4,000, which he has accumulated by his indomitable perseverance and industry.

JOHN HUTCHISON, farmer, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas in 1859, locating in Doniphan County, where he lived seven years and then removed to Montgomery County, where he resided three years. From there he removed to Shelby County, Iowa, where he lived two years and then returned to Doniphan County, where he lived two years, and from there went to Colorado, where he was engaged in prospecting and where he stayed one year. From Colorado he returned to Kansas and located in Robinson Township, where he has resided since. Mr. Hutchison was born in Wayne County, Ky., October 19, 1844, and lived in his native State until his thirteenth year, when his parents removed to Nodoway County, Mo., where they lived one year, and then removed to Andrew County, in the same State, where Mr. H. lived four years. He then returned to Nodoway County, where he lived two years, and then came to Kansas. He is a member of Robinson Lodge, No. 98, I. O. O. F. and has been vice grand of his lodge. He was married in Mission Township on March 4, 1872, to Miss Surilda Tindall, a native of Kentucky. They have three children—Arthur Lee, George W. E. and Gertrude.

WILBUR A. JAQUES teacher of Hill Top School, District No. 8, was born in Defiance, Ohio, November 5, 1860, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1865, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating near Robinson, Brown County, where they have resided since. Mr. Jaques is a self-taught young man, having acquired most all of his education at home. He is a member of the German Baptist Church. He is the son of Theophilus and Mary A. Jaques; his father is a prominent farmer and stock-raiser. Mr. Jaques is an educator of rare merit, has taught five years in Brown County, and over half that time in one school; takes great pride in his profession, is beloved by his pupils and possesses the esteem and respect of their parents.

THOMAS J. JENKINS, wheelwright, came to Kansas in April, 1878, and located at Robinson, where he has carried on business and resided since. He took part in the last war as a member of Company G, First Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and was enlisted at Brownsville, Neb., in the spring of 1863 and was discharged at Omaha, Neb., in the summer of 1865. Mr. J. was born in St. Louis County, Mo., in December, 1844, and lived in his native State until the breaking out of the war. After his discharge from the Union army he returned to his home in Missouri, where he lived two years and then removed to Holt County, in the same State, where he lived seven years and was engaged in working at his trade. From Holt County he came to Kansas. He was married in the spring of 1866 in Lafayette, Doniphan County, to Miss Susan Knowles, a native of Iowa. They have five children living—Sarah, George, Effie, Minnie and Myrtle. Mr. Jenkins is a skilled practical mechanic, and has a large patronage among his fellow townsmen and the farmers in the neighborhood of Robinson

O. JORDAN, farmer and dealer in live stock and grain, Section 1, Township 18, Range 3, P. O. Robinson, was born near Mifflinsburg, Union Co., Pa., November 13, 1835, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, and then removed to Sandusky County, Ohio, where he lived twenty-five years and was engaged in farming. From Ohio he came to Kansas, locating in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in Seneca County, Ohio, March 27, 1858, to Miss Mary H. Zeiber, a native of Ohio. They have five children, Jeremiah, Henry, William, Franklin and Irvin. Mr. Jordan owns a fine upland farm of 166 acres four miles northeast of Robinson. It is enclosed by substantial fences, is all in cultivation, and is improved by a first-class dwelling, frame barn 20x32, large granary, corn cribs, feed lots, which are well supplied by living water, large orchard, etc. He raises from 1,200 to 1,500 bushels of wheat, 500 to 600 bushels of oats, 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of corn, cuts from twenty-five to thirty tons of clover and timothy hay, sells from fifty to seventy-five bushels of apples, forty to fifty bushels of peaches, and large quantities of small fruits yearly. He is one of the largest feeders and dealers in live stock, principally hogs, in his section. He generally has from seventy-five to one one hundred head of hogs, and ships from two to five car loads of stock each week to

St. Joe and Kansas City markets. He keeps from twenty-five to thirty head of stock cattle, fifty to seventy-five head of stock hogs, and from ten to twelve horses. Besides his farm in Robinson Township, Mr. Jordan is now the owner of "Wildey's Addition" to the town of Robinson, which comprises altogether forty acres. Three and one-half acres of this addition have already been laid out in town lots, and are almost all sold, at prices ranging from $25 to $50. It will not be long, judging from the present progress of Robinson, before the remainder of the lots in the addition will be sold at higher figures, real estate having advanced considerably in this vicinity during the past year. Mr. Jordan is one of the prosperous and industrious farmers of Brown County, and a live, square business man, whose integrity is beyond question.

JOHN KREY, proprietor of "Riverside" farm, Section 7, Township 3, Range, 17, P. O. Robinson, was born in Baden, Germany, September 19, 1825, and lived in his native country until he was thirty years of age. He then immigrated to America and located in St. Joseph, Mo., June 9, 1857, where he resided nine months, and then removed to Andrew County, Mo., near Savannah, where he lived until 1865 and was engaged in farming and stock raising. On the 20th day of March, of this year, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Brown County, where he has resided ever since. He is a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and of Robinson Lodge No. 159, A., F. & A. M., and was Treasurer of his lodge two years. He participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Capt. Castle's Company, of Col. Ben Logan's Regiment of Missouri Militia and enlisted in Savannah, Mo., in the spring of 1862. Served until the close of the war, and was discharged at St. Joe, Mo. He was married in Baden, Germany, in 1856, to Miss Louisa Hess, a native of Baden. They have four children: Louise, married to Julius Meecke, a native of Germany and a resident of Robinson; Mary Jane, Charles Abraham and Rosa Ama. Mr. Krey is a veteran soldier, having served in the German Army as a member of Company A, Second Regiment Artillery, before he came to America. He entered the German Army in 1845, and served until 1848, when he took part in the German Revolution, under Maj. Gen. Franz Sigel, and was in nine general engagements. When the Revolution was ended he, like hundreds of other patriotic sons of the Fatherland, left his native land for America. Mr. Krey's fruit and stock farm, "Riverside," contains 225 acres, and lies three miles southwest of Robinson on Wolf River, and is one of the finest in this section. He has a fine fruitful orchard of 300 apple, 100 cherry, 1,000 peach and some very prolific plum trees, besides a thrifty bearing vineyard of 550 vines, and never fails of abundant fruitage all around. He has a dozen good springs and the river, fine native pasturage, good buildings, goood fences, and plenty of timber. He feeds a few steers and about fifty hogs, keeps fifty stock cattle and a good string of horses and mules. He grows 300 bushels of wheat, 5,000 bushels of corn, 300 bushels of oats, and some rye. He has made his money in this county, is a man of good common sense, intelligence and public spirit, and is greatly pleased with his adopted State.

J. L. LEMASTER, M.D., physician and surgeon, son of James and Emily Lemaster, was born in Clay County, Ind., twelve miles east of Terre Haute, November, 27, 1844. When but a lad of a few years his parents removed to McDonough County, Ill., and settled near where the city of Bushnell now stands and where his parents yet reside, his father being one of the wealthy and influential citizens of the county. Dr. Lemaster is the fifth child born in the family, all of whom are still living, there being four daughters and three sons. At the breaking out of the Rebellion he enlisted in the Union Army as a private soldier in Company D, Seventieth Regiment Illinois Infantry to served three months, but owing to the limited number of men to do active service his regiment served five months and six days before being mustered out of the United States service. After his discharge he returned home and subsequently re-enlisted as a private soldier in Company I, Thirty-seventh Regiment, Illinois Infantry, and served in the Army of the Mississippi up to the 21st day of August, 1864, when he was taken prisoner in a general engagement between the Union Forces under Gen. Washburn and the rebels under Maj. Gen. Forrest, and along with the other Union prisoners was taken to Cahaba, Ala, where he was held until the general exchange of prisoners in March, 1865. After being released he was sent to Vicksburg, Miss., where he was taken sick and sent to the general hospital at this post, where he remained for some time, and was then transferred to the hospital at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., where he remained until May of that year; when sufficiently restored to health he was ordered to Springfield, Ill., and was there during the funeral obsequies of the lamented Lincoln, taking part in the parade and other exercises of his burial. He was finally discharged from the service May 8, 1865. After returning home and after sufficiently regaining his health he entered the office of his brother-in-law, Dr. J. S. Kirby, of Bushnell, Ill., as a student of medicine, and in the fall and winter of 1867-68 he was admitted as a student in the Medical Department of the Iowa State University at Keokuk. After the close of the session at this institution in 1867-68 he returned to Bushnell, re-entered the office of Dr. Kirby and pursued his studies until the winter of 1868-69, when he again returned to the university to complete his course, where he graduated on the 25th of February, 1869, receiving the degree of M.D. Soon after he commenced the practice of his profession in Tremont, Ill., where he remained two years. He removed from there to Randolph County, Ill., where he enjoyed a large and lucrative practice, but owing to ill health he came West and settled in Robinson, Brown County, where he has since resided and is in the enjoyment of an extensive practice of medicine and surgery. Dr. Lemaster was one of the losers of the disastrous fire which swept the town of Robinson February 16, 1882, having but a short time previous finished and furnished one of the most complete offices in the county, but has since, in a great measure, recovered from his loss, having purchased real estate in the prosperous town in which he resides. Dr. Lemaster was the regular nominee of the Republican party of the county in 1881 for the office of Coroner, and received a majority of upwards of 700 votes over his Democratic competitor. Dr. Lemaster is a young physician of decided promise and a strong man in his profession. He is public spirited and stands high in social circles, and is widely known for his generosity and benevolence.

N. F. LESLIE, proprietor of Robinson Elevator, dealer in grain, Notary Public and Conveyancer, and Agent for German-American Fire, and Kansas Mutual Life Association, was born in Brookfield, Trumbull Co., Ohio, February 26, 1842, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, when he went to the Pennsylvania Oil regions, where he remained until the 25th day of April, 1861. He then entered the Union army as a member of Company C, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserve Corps. He served in this regiment until December, 1863, when he re-enlisted as a member of Company D, First Pennsylvania Rifles (Col. Kane's "Bucktails.") He served in this regiment until the close of the war. He participated in the battles of Drainsville, Va., Seven Days' Fight, Mechanicsville, Savage Station, Charles City Cross Roads, Malvern Hill, Harrison's Landing, Second Bull Run, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Williamsport, Mine Run, the Wilderness campaign, comprising the engagements at Robinson's Tavern, Spottsylvania C. H., North Anna River, Cold Harbor, Charles City C. H. and Petersburg. On the 19th day of August, 1864, he was taken prisoner at the last named place, by the rebel troops, under the command of Maj. Gen. Longstreet, and conveyed to Libby Prison, being subsequently transferred to Belle Isle, and Sansbury, N. C., from whence he was paroled February 22, 1865, and discharged from the United States service at Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md., June 26, 1865. After his discharge from the army, and after his shattered health had been restored, he attended Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, at Cleveland, Ohio, for six months, and then returned to Hubbard, Ohio, where he resided two years, and from there removed to Ogle County, Ill., where he lived five years, and was engaged in teaching. He taught one term in the Public Schools of this county, and two and a half years in Rock River Seminary, and then became a resident of Kansas, locating in Seneca, where he lived one year, and was engaged as Assistant Postmaster, and as a clerk in the drug store of McKay & Butt, in this city, for nine months, and during the remaining three months was engaged in teaching in the Public Schools in the vicinity of Seneca. From there he came to Hiawatha, where he had charge of the City Public Schools one year, and then entered the employ of the St. Joe & Denver City Railroad, at Robinson, as agent and operator. He was in the employ of this company at various points on the road, and in various capacities for eight years. He subsequently returned to Robinson, continued in the employ of the railroad company, and managed a lumber yard on his own account for five years. In 1878 he built a store and entered into the hardware business, in Robinson, in which he was engaged three years, and in the meantime, built, in connection with Dr. G. W. Parson Leslie & Parson's Block, in Robinson, which was destroyed by fire, together with the hardware store, February 16, 1882. In September, 1881, he commenced operating the Robinson Elevator, in which business he is engaged at present. He is a member of Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A. F. & A. M., and of Mt. Horeb Chapter, R. A. M., of Hiawatha. He has been Commissioner of Brown County two years; a member of the House of the Kansas Legislature, Session of 1881-2, and Notary Public three years. He was a member of the Board of School District No. 26, Brown County, and during his term of office, in connection with other members of the Board, built the handsome school building which now adorns the town of Robinson. He was married April 9, 1873, in Hiawatha, to Miss D. P. Nichols, a native of Indiana. They have two children—Harry M. and Britomarte. The Elevator operated by Mr. Leslie was built in 1876, by Crosthwaite & Middleton, and is now owned by the Gregg Brothers' Grain Company, of St. Joe, Mo., and has a capacity of 20,000 bushels. It is equipped with a corn sheller and feed mill, on which from three to five car loads of feed are cut each month, and which is shipped principally to St. Joe and Western markets. The elevator has a working capacity of ten cars of grain per day, and at present is kept busily employed, being run night and day, and is still behind hand on orders. There was shipped to St. Louis and other Eastern points from this elevator, during the past year: 57,000 bushels of wheat, 97,000 bushels of corn, 9,000 bushels of rye, 4,700 bushels of barley, 11,000 bushels of oats, all of which was raised in four townships of Brown, the Banner County of Kansas. There was also shipped and sold from this elevator during the same time, 450 tons of feed. Personally, Mr. Leslie is one of the most popular men in the county—is a man of generous impulse, large intelligence, liberal views, frank, manly nature, and great public spirit. He has served his country, both in the camp and forum, and to know him is to honor and respect him.

FREDERIC LYMAN, farmer, Section 25, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Highland, came to Kansas in April, 1857, locating in La Fayette, Doniphan County, where he resided until 1864, and was engaged in the milling business. In April, 1864, he removed to his farm in Brown County, where he has resided since. He was Postmaster of La Fayette five years and Justice of the Peace of Center Township, Doniphan County seven years. He is a member of the Congregational Church, of Highland Lodge, No. 67, I. O. O. F. and of White Cloud Lodge, No. —, A. F. & A. M. He participated in the War of the Rebellion as Major of Col. Leland's regiment of militia, and enlisted in the fall of 1861, at Troy, served six months and was discharged at the same place. Esquire Lyman was born in Hadley, Mass., October 3, 1813, and lived in his native place until he removed to Kansas. He was married in Kingston, Mass., January 5, 1842, to Miss Caroline Elizabeth Whitten, a native of Massachusetts. They have had six children, three of whom are living—Melzar Whitten (a resident of Muskegon, Mich., married to Minnie DeVoe, a native of New Jersey), Helen L. (married to H. H. Steed, a native of Missouri, and a resident of St. Charles, in the same State), and Nannie. Mr. L. has a fine upland farm of 120 acres, all enclosed and all in cultivation. The water supply is excellent, and consists of springs and a good well. His orchard covers two acres, and has 100 bearing apple, twenty-five peach, twenty-five cherry, and a few pear and apricot trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the farm. The improvements consist of a fine family mansion, containing nine rooms, surrounded by shade trees and evergreens. A fine avenue of maple and catalpa trees leads from the main entrance to the house. The other improvements are a frame barn, 16x32 feet, granary, corn crib, etc. Mr. Lyman had twenty-two acres in wheat this season, which yielded 600 bushels; forty-five acres in corn, which averaged fifty bushels to the acre; eleven acres in rye, which yielded 300 bushels, and twenty two acres in timothy, exclusive of fifteen acres in pasturage, which yielded two tons to the acre. Major Lyman was a firm and consistent Free-state man before the war, and not only gave his own services during the dark days of the civil strife, but sent forth his eldest son, Charles Frederick, to battle for the Union. This bright and promising youth rose through the various grades, until he became First Sergeant of his company, D, Eighth Regiment, Kansas Infantry, and was killed before Atlanta, Ga., July 24, 1864. Had he lived a few days longer, he would have been promoted to a Lieutenancy in his company, his commission being on the way at the time he received his fatal wounds.

JOHN WESLEY MARTIN, farmer, southwest of Section 27, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Bedford County, Pa., December 8, 1813, and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year, when he removed to what was then Richland, now Morrow County, Ohio, where he resided and worked at his trade as a carpenter and joiner until September 22, 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Baptist Church. He was the first Clerk of Robinson Township, and held the office one term. Justice of the Peace of the same township two terms, and Clerk of the Board of School District No. 20, Brown County, seven years. He has been married twice, the first marriage took place in Richland County, Ohio, in 1840, to Miss Mary Ogle, a native of Ohio. They have had seven children—six of whom are living, and whose names are—William Pinckney, Amanda M., died February 23, 1847; Columbus, married to Miss Phillina Truex, a native of Missouri; Phœbe, married William Parker, a native of Ohio, and a resident of Robinson; W. D. Martin, married to Rachel Price, a native of Ohio, in 1869, came to Kansas in 1871; Melville and Williard Judson. The second marriage occurred in 1861, in Morrow County, Ohio, to Miss Mary [illegible]pman, a native of Ohio. She died in 1879. Mr. Martin owns a productive upland farm of eighty acres, all enclosed and all under cultivation. The orchard covers four acres, and contains 800 fruit trees of various kinds; small fruits and grapes are plenty also. The water supply is good; the improvements are a comfortable frame dwelling, containing six rooms, with cellar. The house is surrounded by handsome shade trees and evergreens, and near it is a magnificent grove of white maple, black walnut, and locust trees, which covers ten acres, and has about 3,000 trees. Among the other improvements are a frame barn, 30x32 granary, wagon shed, corn crib, etc. He had ten acres in fall wheat this season, which yielded 270 bushels; six acres in oats, which yielded 250 bushels, and thirty-two acres in corn, which averaged sixty bushels to the acre. Mr. Martin is one of the intelligent, earnest and progressive farmers of Brown County, and has a high opinion of the county in which he resides.

I. F. MARTINDALE, farmer, fruit and stock-raiser, Section 20, Township 18, Range 3, P. O. Robinson, proprietor of Grovelawn, was born near Greenfield, Hancock Co., Ind., December 6, 1832, and lived in his native State until the fall of 1856, when he removed to Montgomery County, Iowa, where he lived until February, 1857, and then became a resident of Kansas, locating in what is now Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was the first Free-state Constable elected in Claytonville Township, Brown County, which position he held three terms, and Justice of the Peace of Claytonville, Township one term, and of Robinson Township two terms. He was a member of Company C, Major Pope's Independent Battalion, Kansas Militia, during the late war, and enlisted at Robinson in the fall of 1864, served twenty days, and was discharged at Kansas City. He was married in Brown County, March 24, 1859, to Miss Lucinda Abshear, a native of Virginia. They have seven children, whose names are—Minerva Alice, married to Thomas Glover, a native of Virginia; James A., Calvin F., Corsandia J., Emelia, Isaac F. and Willie J. In addition to farming his own land, Esquire Martindale cultivates 160 acres of rented land. Grovelawn, as his magnificent estate is named, contains 228 acres, and is improved with a pretty house and fine groves, orchards and fences. There are a number of springs and forty acres of wood land on the farm. Esquire M. grows 8,000 bushels of corn and 1,400 bushels of wheat and rye yearly. He keeps fifty stock stables, feeds a car load each of steers and hogs, sells a few surplus horses, owns one of the choice farms of this region, is an honored magistrate of his township, and a successful farmer, having increased his means from less than $200, of original capital, to $15,000, since 1857. He has a high standing in his community, and has an exalted opinion of the country. Shortly after he bought his farm, being of an observant turn, he discovered a fine bed of coal on the northern portion of his farm, which he is now developing and mining under the superintendence of an able and experienced Swedish coal miner. The coal, as fast as it is mined, meets with a ready sale in Robinson and vicinity, and gives good satisfaction. Meadow Brook school, No. 3, is built on what was once a portion of Grovelawn Farm. The land, about an acre, having been donated for this purpose with his characteristic public spirit and liberality, by Esquire Martindale. The school building is a neat and tasty frame structure, has a seating capacity of seventy-five, and was erected in 1875, at a cost of $1,000. The school building is also used as a house of worship by the members of the Church of the United Brethren, Rev. O. A. Chapman being the Pastor. Miss Julia M. Leslie, a graduate of an Illinois institution of learning, is the teacher at present in charge of the school.

JOHN H. MAXWELL, farmer and stock-dealer, Section 23, Town 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson. Mr. Maxwell came to Kansas, May 1, 1856, and located on his farm in Robinson Township, where he has resided ever since. He was Commissioner of Claytonville Township two terms in succession. He was Treasurer of Robinson Township for nearly two terms. Mr. Maxwell was born in Mason County, W. Va., February 17, 1826, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, when his parents moved to Morgan County, Ind., where they resided three years, and then removed to Illinois. Here they lived the same length of time, and then removed to Andrew County, Mo. Mr. Maxwell lived with his parents in Missouri until August, 1846, when he became a teamster in the United States army, under Major-Gen. Price, and went to Mexico. He served in this capacity fourteen months, and then returned to his Missouri home. He then resided in Missouri until 1852, and then went to San Joaquin County, Cal., where he lived until November, 1855, and was engaged in farming and the live stock business. From California he removed to Missouri, where he remained a short time, and then removed to Kansas. Mr. Maxwell was married twice. The first marriage took place March 9, 1848, in Andrew County, Mo., to Miss Elizabeth Deakins, a native of Indiana. By this marriage he had three children, who all died in their infancy. Mrs. Maxwell accompanied her husband to California, and returned to Missouri, where she died February 13, 1856. The second marriage took place in Andrew County, Mo., to Miss Emelia Abshar, a native of Virginia. Seven children were the fruits of this marriage, six of whom are living: Jonathan S. (married to Miss Emma Reniker, a native of Missouri), Sarah Margaret (died in her nineteenth year, April 18, 1877), Lucy Ann, Thomas K., Alexander, Jessie, and Mary E. Mr. Maxwell has a large upland farm of 480 acres, all of which is inclosed, and 240 acres in cultivation, the rest being pasture land. His orchard contains forty-five bearing apple trees, forty-five cherry, and a few peach trees. The water supply is good, and consists principally of springs. The improvements consist of a fine six-room frame dwelling house, with a large cellar, and surrounded by shade trees; a fine barn 30x36 two granaries, corn crib, buggy house, etc. Mr. Maxwell had ninety acres in wheat this year, which yielded 1,826 bushels; ten acres in oats, which yielded 390 bushels; fifteen acres in rye, which yielded 311 bushels; 105 acres in corn, which averaged forty bushels to the acre. Mr. Maxwell's farm is well calculated for a grain and stock farm. He raises a large number of horses, cattle and hogs.

MRS. ELIZABETH MAXWELL, widow of Robert G. Maxwell, farmer and stock raiser Section 35, Town 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson. Mr. Maxwell was born in Kentucky in 1818. He left his native State at an early age, and removed to Buchanan County, Mo. He resided in Missouri six years, and in 1854, removed to Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, where he lived six years. He then removed to his farm in Robinson Township, where he resided until his death in 1869. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He participated in the last war as a member of Capt. Samuel Swayze's Company of the Nineteenth Regiment Kansas Militia, and enlisted in Robinson in the fall of 1864, served fourteen days and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth. He was married in Wright County, Mo., in 1837, to Miss Elizabeth Iker, a native of Missouri. They had seven children, six of whom are living, and whose names are: Eliza (married to Benjamin Terill, a resident of Robinson), Ann, Joseph, Absolom (married to Miss Rosa Davey, a native of England), John (married to Miss Julia Montgomery, a native of Iowa), Daniel and Hugh. Mrs. Maxwell owns a fine upland farm of 160 acres, which is ably superintended by her son Daniel. The farm is all enclosed by substantial fences, and all in cultivation except fourteen acres which is pasture land; the water supply is excellent. The orchard covers four acres, and contains 400 bearing apple, 200 peach, and a few cherry trees. There is also an acre each of blackberries and raspberries on the place. The improvements consist of an eight-roomed frame cottage dwelling, placed on a commanding height, from which the thriving towns of Robinson, Willis, and the city of Hiawatha can be seen. The house is surrounded by splendid shade trees, and a short distance north of it is a fine grove seven acres in extent. The other improvements consist of a large frame barn, granary, corn crib smokehouse and other out-buildings. Mrs. M. had eighty-six acres in fall wheat this season which averaged twenty-three bushels to the acre; twelve acres in oats which yielded 410 bushels, and twenty-five acres in corn, which averaged seventy bushels to the acre.

JULIUS MEECKE, saddle and harness maker, came to Kansas in August, 1855, and located at Wathena, Doniphan County, where he lived until 1875, when he removed to Robinson, where he has resided since. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 159, A. F. & A. M. Mr. Meecke was born in the Province of the Rhine, Germany, March 17, 1853, but lived in his native country but a short time, when his parents emigrated to America and located in Louisville, where they resided a short time, and then moved to St. Louis, and from there to St. Joseph, Mo., and from there came to Kansas. Mr. Meecke was married in Brown County, May 16, 1880, to Miss Louisa Krey, a native of Missouri. They have two children, whose names are John Earnest and Charles Augustus. Mr. Meecke does a leading business in the harness, saddlery, and horse furnishing trade, and his patronage extends well into the county surrounding Robinson. He manufactures most of the goods he keeps for sale.

DANIEL R. MERCER, teacher of Heckler School, District No. 35, was born in Port Washington, Tuscarawas, Co., Ohio, September 23, 1859, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Robinson, Brown County, where he has resided since. His mother is still living in Port Washington. Mr. Mercer was educated in the public and graded schools of his native county, and finished his education at the State Normal in Columbus, Ohio. After completing his education came to Kansas, where he has been engaged in teaching almost all the time since his arrival in the State. Since his ninth year Mr. Mercer has been living among strangers, having learned early in life to "paddle his own canoe." He is emphatically a self-made man and a teacher and educator of rare merit.

ISRAEL MILLER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 23, Township 2, Range 18, P.O. Highland, Doniphan County, was born in what was then Alleghany County, Md., March 21, 1833, and lived in his native State until March, 1877, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in Alleghany County, Md., June 20, 1857, to Miss Mary J. Dawson, a native of Maryland. They have six children—Rebecca, married to John Staples, a native of Pennsylvania, and a resident of Robinson Township, Brown County; Susan, married to Lycurgus B. Winkler, a native of and resident of Doniphan County, Kas.; Robert M., Louisa, Samuel C., and Fanny V. Mr. Miller owns one of the finest farms in Robinson Township, it is surrounded by very nearly three miles of handsome hedge, and is all under cultivation. The water supply is pure and abundant, and is composed of a couple of never failing wells. There are two young and thrifty peach and apple orchards on the place and an abundance of small fruits consisting of grapes, raspberries, and blackberries. The improvements consist of a comfortable frame dwelling containing five rooms, a large and convenient frame barn, 16x50 feet, corn crib, smoke house, etc. etc. Near the house is a handsome grove of timber which covers four acres, and which contains 1,000 cottonwood and maple trees. Mr. M. raises from 700 to 1,000 bushels of wheat, 500 to 600 bushels of oats, and 2,000 to 3,000 bushels of corn; keeps 15 to 20 head of stock cattle, 6 to 8 head of milch cows, 40 to 50 stock hogs, and 4 head of horses. Mr. Miller is one of the model farmers of Robinson Township, is progressive, systematic, influential and intelligent, and speaks highly of Brown County.

J. B. MITCHELL, dealer in drugs, books and notions, Robinson, came to Kansas in the spring of 1860, and located at Wathena, Doniphan Co., where he resided until 1874, and was engaged in the drug business. From Wathena he removed to Robinson where he has resided since. He was Clerk of Washington Township, Doniphan County, two terms, Clerk of the city of Wathena one term; has been Treasurer of School District No. 26, Brown County, for three years. He is the Postmaster of Robinson, and has been ever since 1875. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 98 I. O. O. F., and is D. D. G. M. of his Lodge. Mr. Mitchell was born in Washington County, Wis., January 24, 1850, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, when his parents removed to Kansas. He was married October 16, 1872, at Wathena, to Miss Emma Bell, a native of Missouri. They have four children living—Maud E., Grace A., Minnehaha and Vernon E. Mr. Mitchell does a large and constantly increasing business, and possesses the esteem of his friends and neighbors. As a druggist he is known for his skill and accuracy, and has no competition in his business. On the 16th of February, 1881, a destructive fire laid in ashes sixteen of the principal business places in Robinson, among which was the store of Mr. Mitchell. His loss amounted to $2,500 over and above his insurance. But with his characteristic energy, he has almost recovered from his loss.

JOSEPH M. MORRIS, Constable of Robinson Township; manufacturer of, and dealer in harness, saddles, bridles, etc., Robinson, came to Kansas with his parents in the fall of 1870, and located in Cherokee County, where they lived until 1872, and then removed to near Robinson, where they resided two years. Mr. Morris then was placed in charge of the first harness shop opened in Robinson. It was owned and operated by Mr. Charles Hack. Mr. Morris was in charge very nearly one year. He then removed to Robinson Township, where he lived one year, and was engaged with his brother in farming. He then removed to Nodaway County, Mo., where he lived three years, and was engaged in various occupations. From Missouri he returned to Kansas, and located in Robinson, where he left his family while he went to Wyoming Territory where he remained ten months, and was engaged in working at his trade. From Wyoming he returned to Kansas, working part of one summer in Hiawatha and then came back to Robinson, where he has since resided, and where he built his shop and engaged in business on his own account. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 98, I. O. O. F., of which lodge he is treasurer. He was Marshal of Hopkins, Mo., one year, and was a member of the police force all the time he resided in that city. He is at present Constable of Robinson Township. He was born in Shelbyville, Ind., December 30, 1853, and lived in his native State but a short time when his parents removed to Taylor County, Iowa, where they resided until 1870, when they came to Kansas. He was married February 18, 1875, in Robinson Township, to Miss Laura J. Terrill, a native of Iowa. They have one child—a daughter, Ethel B. Mr. Morris leads the trade in his section, in saddlery and harness with good stocks, fine mechanical ability, and a capital patronage. He makes his own saddles, collars, etc., and is a go-ahead business man.

ABNER MURPHY, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 7, Township 18, Range 2, P. O. Robinson, was born in Belmont County, Ohio, August 14, 1836, and resided in his native State until the spring of 1871, when he came to Kansas and located in Mission Township, where he resided about four years and then removed to his farm in Robinson Township, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has been married three times; the first marriage took place December 25, 1862, in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, to Miss Kathenie Kail, a native of Ohio. She died in 18 6. By this marriage he became the father of four children—all of whom died in their infancy. The second marriage occurred in March, 1870, also in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, to Miss Melinda Miller, a native of Ohio; she died in January, 1880. Three children were the fruit of this union, all of whom died young. The third marriage took place in St. Joseph, Mo., in September, 1882, to Miss Emma Robinson, a native of Ohio. Mr. Murphy owns three choice Brown County farms which comprise 580 acres and are principally upland. These farms are all enclosed with substantial fences and are in a high state of cultivation, and rank among the best in the county. They all have fine, large and productive orchards, and are well watered. The improvements are first-class and can not well be excelled. Mr. Murphy had thirty acres on the same farm in fall wheat this season which yielded 960 bushels; ten acres in oats which averaged forty bushels to the acre; fifty acres in corn which averaged fifty-five bushels to the acre. He cut the grass from fifty acres of timothy clover and prairie land which yielded 100 tons of hay. Mr. Murphy has just purchased the elegant residence lately owned by Dr. George W. Parsons, in the town of Robinson, where he intends in the near future to make his home, and enjoy the ease earned by a life of hard and honest toil.

A. J. OWEN, farmer, fruit and stock-raiser, residence on the southeast quarter of Section 21, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Wayne County, Pa., October 17, 1829, and lived in his native State until his second year, when his parents removed to Oakland County, Mich., where he resided until 1849. He then removed to Clermont County, Ohio, where he resided six months, and then removed to Defiance County, in the same State, where he lived until the spring of 1857, when he came to Kansas, and in 1860 located on his farm in Robinson Township, where he has resided since. Mr. Owen is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 98, I. O. O. F., and is past grand of his lodge. He participated in the last war as a member of Company H, Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and was enlisted at Troy, Doniphan County, September 8, 1862, and discharged at Leavenworth, July 20, 1865. He took part in the battles of Prairie Grove and Cane Hill. He was married in Oakland County, Mich., March 12, 1867, to Miss Delia Carpenter, a native of Michigan. They have two children living—Sarah A. and Alfred A. Mr. Owen has a choice upland farm of 400 acres, all enclosed with hedge and wire fences; 250 acres are in cultivation, the remainder being timber and pasture lands. His orchards cover two and one-half acres. The water supply is excellent. The improvements consist of a dwelling-house, barn and other outbuildings.

CHARLES SUMNER PAYNE, dealer in furniture, was the first child born in the then city of Sumner, Atchison County. He was named by the town company, who made out and presented to him a deed for a lot in this once thriving city. His birth occurred September 25, 1857. He lived in his native county until 1868, when his parents removed to Mission Township, Brown County, where they resided until 1874. From there the family removed to Hiawatha, where they lived two years, and then removed to Robinson, where Mr. Payne has resided since. He is a member of Robinson Lodge, No. 98, I. O. O. F., and is at present secretary of his lodge. He was married in Robinson December 11, 1881, to Miss Mollie Townsend, a native of Indiana. They have one child, a daughter—Celia Evaline. Mr. Payne has lately started the first furniture store in the prosperous town of Robinson. He has a large stock which was carefully selected and bought for cash. He is already doing a good trade. He is a young man of upright habits, enjoys excellent credit, and with his indomitable perseverance and business tact is bound to succeed.

THOMAS J. PAYNE, blacksmith and wagonmaker, came to Kansas, March 18, 1855, and located at Port William, Atchison County, where he resided until 1868, and then removed to Mission Township, Brown County; he remained there until 1874, and was engaged in farming. He then removed to Hiawatha, where he lived two years and was engaged in working at his trade. Mr. Payne was Justice of the Peace of Walnut Township, Atchison County, for six years, having been appointed by Gov. Shannon in 1856. He was Clerk of Mission Township, Brown County, three years, and at present is Justice of the Peace of Robinson Township. Mr. Payne is a member of the I. O. O. F., having been made a member of Sumner Lodge, No. 7, in 1858. He is at present N. G. of Robinson Lodge, No. 98, and is serving his second term. Mr. Thomas J. Payne took part in the war of the Rebellion as a private in Company F, Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He was subsequently promoted to Orderly Sergeant of his company. He enlisted, August 20, 1862, in Atchison County, and was discharged, October 29, 1864, at Fort Smith, Ark. He was appointed, October 29, 1864, by the Secretary of War, First Lieutenant of Company B, First Regiment, Kansas Infantry, colored. He was mustered out of service in August, 1865, at Little Rock, Ark. He took part in the battles of Cane Hill, Prairie Grove, Van Buren, Honey Springs, Ark., Jenkins Ferry, Marks Mills and other minor engagements. Mr. Payne was born in Brown County, Ohio, March 12, 1830, and lived in his native State until his fourteenth year, when he moved to Liberty, Clay Co., Mo., where he resided until he came to Kansas. He was married in Clay County, Mo., in July, 1854, to Miss Eliza Eiler, a native of Missouri. They have nine children, seven of whom are living—Charles Sumner, who was the first child born in Sumner, Atchison County; he was named by the Town Company; he is married to Miss Mary Townsend, a native of Indiana. John A., married to Miss Elvira Terrill, a native of Iowa; James W., Annie C., Addie C., Lydia and Thomas J., Jr. Mr. Payne is doing a good business in blacksmithing and general repairing; is a No. 1 mechanic and an old Kansas pioneer and one of the squarest men in the county.

MOORSE N. PEEK, dealer in fresh and cured meats, fish, oysters, etc., was born in St. Joseph County, Mich., August 5, 1844, and lived in his native State until his twentieth year when he went to Virginia City, Idaho Territory, where he lived three years and was engaged in mining and prospecting. From Idaho he returned to his home in Michigan, where he resided three years, and was employed as a baggage master on the Michigan Southern R. R. From there he came, in the fall of 1871, to Kansas, locating in Robinson, where he has resided since. He was married in 1866 in Coldwater, Mich., to Miss Sarah Brown, a native of New York. They have one child, a daughter, Vera. Mr. Peek lives in a fine family mansion in the "Old Town" of Robinson. It is one of the first houses built in the town, and was framed in Cincinnati, Ohio, and brought to Robinson, where it was erected in the early days of the Territory and was for a long time used as a hotel. The house has been vastly improved since it has come into Mr. Peek's possession. It contains twelve rooms, with a fine cellar, and is built on an elevated site overlooking the new town of Robinson. In addition to this house, Mr. P. owns another fine, seven-roomed frame dwelling, besides his place of business of Robinson. He was one of the losers by the disastrous fire that swept his fine town in February, 1882, losing his shop and contents, and ice-house, suffering a loss of $1,000, with no insurance. He has, however, in a great measure, recovered from his loss, is doing a good business, enjoys excellent credit, and is an honorable, upright business man and a good neighbor.

YOUNG J. POWELL, farmer, Section 6, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Perry County, Ohio, October 31, 1837, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, when his parents removed to Wapello County, Iowa, where he resided until November, 1880, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Church of the United Brethren. He took part in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company K, Second Regiment Iowa Infantry, and enlisted in Ottumwa, Iowa, May 28, 1861, and was discharged at Pulaski, Tenn., December 24, 1863, and re-enlisted in the same company and regiment, December 25, 1863, and finally discharged at Davenport, Iowa, July 12, 1865. He participated in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Iuka, Resaca, Dallas, and Atlanta. At the last named engagement he was severely wounded (from which he suffers to-day), and was taken to the General Hospital at Marietta, Ga., where he was confined until the next spring, and then rejoined his regiment at Goldsboro, N. C. He shared in all the marches and battles of Sherman's army, from thence on until the surrender of Gen. Joe Johnston. Mr. Powell was married in Wapello County, Iowa, September 3, 1865, to Miss Mary E. Aumack, a native of New Jersey. They have two children—Cora C. and Phoebe P. Mr. P. has a fine upland farm of eighty acres, all enclosed, and has sixty acres in cultivation, the remaining twenty acres being pasture land. The farm is well supplied with water and consists of springs and Powell's branch of the Wolf River flows through the northeast corner of the farm. There is a small orchard and an abundance of small fruits on the farm. The improvements consist of a comfortable frame dwelling, stock stable, corn crib, etc. Mr. Powell had forty-five acres in corn this season, which averaged forty bushels to the acre. He is a hard working, thorough and systematic farmer and is well known for his energy and integrity.

ALFRED RONDEBUSH, farmer and dealer in live stock, Section 5, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas in the spring of 1869 and located on his farm in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since 1872. He is Clerk of School District No. 26, Brown County, and has been for one term. He is secretary of Robinson Lodge No. 159 A., F. & A. M., and a member of the I. O. O. F. He was born in Clermont County, Ohio, July 3, 1850, and lived in his native State until he came to Kansas. He was married in Robinson Township November 21, 1874, to Miss Cornelia Briggs, a native of Luzerne County, Pa. They have two children living, Eliza and John. Mr. Rondebush owns a fine grain and stock farm, equally divided between upland and bottom land, which contains 229½ acres. It is mostly enclosed and has eighty acres under cultivation, the remainder being timber land. His orchard covers one acre and contains fifty young and thrifty apple trees. The water supply is good, there being a number of fine springs on the farm, one fifty feet from his dwelling. The improvements consist of a comfortable five-room frame dwelling-house with cellar, stock barn, two granaries, three corn cribs and other outbuildings. Mr. R. had ten acres in wheat this year which averaged twenty bushels to the acre, and sixty-five acres in corn which averaged fifty bushels to the acre. He makes a specialty of feeding and dealing in live stock; he generally has on hand from 60 to 75 head of cattle and from 100 to 125 head of hogs. He ships the most of his stock to Leavenworth markets. He also has a fine stock of poultry on hand, included among which are Muscovy ducks, spangled Poland chickens, Guinea hens, etc. He has a fine lot of Italian bees on his place, comprising about fifty hives.

MARSHAL P. RUSH, dealer in general merchandise, came to Kansas, November 26, 1870, and located in Robinson Township, where he has resided since and carried on business. He was Clerk of Robinson Township one term. Mr. Rush enlisted, early in the war, in the Missouri Militia and participated in several engagements. He subsequently entered the United States service as teamster in the Quartermaster's Department. He enlisted April 24, 1863, as a member of Company F, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, at Fort Scott, and was mustered out September 30, 1865, at Fort Leavenworth. He took part in the battles of Big Blue, Prairie Grove and many minor engagements. Mr. Rush was born in Cass County, Ind., August 24, 1843, and lived in his native State till his eleventh year, when his parents removed to Jasper County, Mo., where he resided, with the exception of the time he was in the army, till he came to Kansas. Mr. Rush was married in April, 1875, in Robinson, to Miss Emma G. Brown, a native of New York. Mr. Rush is the senior member of the firm of M. P. Rush & Co., which is composed of himself and Mr. E. C. Brown. They do a large and extensive business in dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, etc. They also deal in grain. They are doing a safe and thriving business, which is constantly increasing.

MRS. EDITH RUSSELL, widow of Dilworth Russell, farmer, Section 22, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson. Mr. Russell came to Kansas in September, 1878, and located in Barton County, where he resided one and a half years, and from there removed to Robinson Township, Brown County, where he resided until his death, December 26, 1880. Mr. Russell was a member of the Society of Friends. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company B, Sixth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and enlisted in Fulton County, Ill., August 7, 1862, and was discharged June 8, 1865, at Camp Harker, Tenn. He was present at all the engagements in which his regiment participated, except Stone River, being then absent on detached duty, among which were the battles of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Franklin, Nashville and others. Mr. Russell was brave, faithful and patriotic, and while in the service contracted a disease, consumption, which caused his death. He was born in Fulton County, Ill., November 13, 1848, and lived in his native State until he came to Kansas. He was married March 15, 1866, in Fulton County, Ill., to Miss Edith Knock, a native of Illinois. Three children were the fruits of this marriage, Florence D., Joseph J. and Perry C. Mr. Russell, at the time of his death, owned one of the finest farms in Brown County. It is owned and operated at present by his widow, a thorough practical business woman. The farm contains 160 acres all enclosed and all under cultivation, except 30 acres, which is pasture land. The water supply is good. The orchard covers about two acres and contains 150 bearing apple, 300 peach, 75 cherry, and a few pear and plum trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the farm. The improvements are one of the finest family mansions in the county, planned and built by Mrs. Russell since the death of her husband, containing seven rooms with cellar. It stands on a commanding elevation and is surrounded by handsome evergreens and shade trees, with also a small tenement house on the property. The other improvements consist of a small barn, first class granary, corn crib and other outbuildings. Mrs. Russell has thirty-two acres in wheat this season, which yielded 754 bushels; four acres in oats, which yielded 139 bushels; 58 acres in corn, which averaged 50 bushels to the acre; and ten acres in timothy which yielded one and a half tons of hay to the acre.

They ship on an average a car load of live stock every week throughout the year. They buy their lumber and building material from first hands in the lumber districts of the Northwest, and are consequently able to compete in prices with any retail firm west of the Missouri River.

JOSEPH V. WORK, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Robinson, was born near Chambersburgh, Franklin Co., Penn., July 12, 1829. During the early portion of his life, was employed at farming and clerking in a general merchandise store. When twenty-one years old, he removed to Tazewell County, Ill. Here he married, in the spring of 1869, Miss Emma Wooden, who was born in New Jersey. In May of the same year, Mr. Work came to Kansas, and located on the farm where he now resides. This was then wild, unbroken prairie land, consisting of 140 acres; but by industry and a great deal of hard labor, Mr. Work has transformed it into a fertile, well improved farm, outlined with a beautiful hedge fence. He has a large orchard, from which he will realize this year over 250 bushels of apples and 300 bushels of peaches. The buildings consist of a good two story frame house, barn 32x50, and smaller buildings, such as granaries, etc., necessary on a well regulated farm.

JOHN WYNKOOP, blacksmith and wheelwright, came to Kansas in February, 1865, and located at Wathena. He moved from Wathena to Robinson, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, also of Robinson Lodge No. 158, A., F. & A. M. and Robinson Lodge No. 98 I. O. O. F. Mr. Wynkoop participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company C, First California Cavalry. He enlisted at Folsom, Cal., in August, 1861, and was mustered out at Las Cruses, New Mexico, September 7, 1864. His regiment did duty in Arizona and New Mexico and Western Texas, and was principally employed against the hostile Indian tribes. He participated in the battles of Pino Alto, Deadman's Hole and numerous other engagements. He was born in Cass County, Ind., January 1, 1837. He lived in his native State but a short time when his parents removed to Franklin County, Ohio, where Mr. Wynkoop resided until his nineteenth year when he removed to Van Buren County, Iowa, where he resided two years, then went to Sacramento County, Cal., where he resided until he entered the United States Army, after his discharge from the service he went to Fort Union, N. M., where he lived three months and was in the Government employ working at his trade; at the expiration of his time he came to Kansas. He was married in Wathena, in September, 1865, to Miss N. J. Hayes, a native of Ohio. They have four children living, whose names are: Sheridan, Eliza E., Minnie Florence and Charles. Mr. Wynkoop is well known by his fellow townsmen as a first class mechanic and has all the work he can do, and is highly spoken of by his neighbors.

DAVID D. WORK, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 21, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Mercersburg, Franklin Co., Pa., June 24, 1837, and lived in his native State until his tenth year when his parents moved to Tazewell County, Ill., where Mr. W. lived until the spring of 1872, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married March 30, 1875, in Brown County, to Miss Catharine Dansberger, a native of Bavaria, Germany. They have two children, Charles Edmund and Margaret Ellen. Mr. Work owns a valuable upland farm of 160 acres, nearly all surrounded by a handsome Osage orange hedge. It has ninety acres under cultivation, the remainder being meadow and pasture land. In front of his handsome dwelling is a young and thrifty orchard, which contains 100 apple and 300 peach trees. There is also an abundance of small fruit on the place. The farm is well watered by springs and wells. The improvements are first class in every particular, and consist of a new frame dwelling, containing four rooms and cellar, a new and convenient frame barn, 18x36, corn cribs, granary, smokehouse, etc. Mr. Work raises from 75 to 100 bushels of wheat, 200 to 300 bushels of oats, 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of corn yearly. Keeps 20 to 25 head of stock cattle, 40 to 50 head of stock hogs and 7 head of horses and mules. He is a live energetic and intelligent farmer, a good citizen and a popular gentleman in the community in which he lives.

IRVING TOWNSHIP.

This township was one of the earliest of the county to receive settlement, and is now thickly peopled with a prosperous community, though having no towns, or even villages, within its borders. The first settlers were Solomon McCall and L. Ashley, who located March 13, 1855. The only postoffice in the township at present writing (January, 1883), is that of Mount Roy. This office was established September 2, 1857, with Shelton Duff as the first Postmaster. There are several schoolhouses in the township. That in District No. 8 is generally believed to have been the first built in the county. The township has always taken much interest in schools, and one at least of its schools is deserving of mention.

Heckler Schoolhouse, District No. 35, Brown County, was erected in 1869, at a cost of $1,200. It is well furnished, has a seating capacity of fifty, and is a handsome frame structure. The first school officers were elected March 16, 1868, and consisted of Henry J. Heckler, Director; J. W. Bowman, clerk, and Abel Hodge, Treasurer. The officers at present consist of the following named gentlemen: George Klinefelter, Director; Thos. A. Dunn, Clerk, and H. Clay Plotner, Treasurer. The building is also used as a church and Sunday school. An Methodist Episcopal congregation Rev. E. K. Jones, pastor, hold services here on alternate Sabbaths, and a Union Sunday school occupy the building weekly. The latter organization owns a fine toned Mason & Hamlin organ.

The average daily attendance of the day school is thirty-eight, and according to the last report of the Superintendent of Public Schools of Brown County, L. H. Smyth, Esq., it is in point of morals and good government, one of the best in the county, reflecting great credit on the school officers and the efficient teacher, Mr. Daniel R. Mercer.

Hill Top Schoolhouse, District No. 8, Brown County, is built on what was once a portion of Mr. Idol's farm. It is a frame structure and was erected in 1870 at a cost of $2,000. It has a seating capacity of seventy-five and is well furnished with all the modern school furniture. The first school officers were—Dr. H. F. Macey, director; M. B. Bowers, treasurer, and S. B. Sloan, clerk. The present officers are—J. M. Idol, director; Oliver Dimmock, treasurer, and B. F. Goodwin, clerk. Mr. Wilbur A. Jaques is the teacher at present in charge of the school. The daily attendance is forty. Besides the ordinary studies pursued in district schools the following branches are taught at Hill Top; Civil government, book keeping, physiology and algebra. This school has had the honor of furnishing several first class instructors to Brown County, and who are now engaged in teaching in her public schools.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ALBERT E. BEACH, farmer, Section 9, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Ontario County, N. Y., August 3, 1842, but left his native State at an early age with his parents, who removed to Scott Township, Ogle Co., Ill., where Mr. B. resided twenty-nine years and was engaged in farming. In the fall of 1872 he removed from Illinois to Kansas, locating in Lyon County, near Emporia, where he resided but one year, and in 1873 removed to Butler County, near Eldorado, where he was engaged in farming and freighting and where he resided until 1881, when he removed to Irving Township Brown County, and where he has resided since. He was married, August 6, 1864, in Rockford, Ill., to Miss Sarah A. Barnes, a native of Pittsburgh, Penn. They have six children living, whose names are: Lilly M. (married to Matthew Noble, a native of Edgar County, Ill., and a resident of Brown County); Walter Eugene, Willie H., Harry Lee, Carrie Alice (twins) and Cora Maud. Mr. Beach owns a choice upland farm of forty acres. It is all enclosed and all in cultivation. The water supply is good and consists of a number of fine springs and a good well. The improvements are a comfortable and cosy frame dwelling, containing six rooms, stock stable, good granary, etc., etc. Mr. B. is a thorough practical farmer, and believes that a small farm, well tilled, is better than a large one, half cultivated. His oats, this season, averaged seventy-five bushels to the acre, and his corn fifty-five bushels. Mr. Beach stands high in the community in which he lives and is known for his sterling good sense and integrity.

ALEXANDER W. BELL, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 19, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Morgan County, Ohio, October 20, 1836, and lived in his native State until his twenty-second year, when he removed to Buchanan County, Mo., where he resided until August, 1861, when he returned to his native county in Ohio, where he entered the Union army as a member of Company C, One Hundred and Twenty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He served until the close of the war and was discharged at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio, June 30, 1865. He took part in the battles of Winchester, Mine Run, Wilderness Campaign, Monocacy Junction, Md., Sheridan's Campaign in the Valley, siege of, and battle, of around Petersburg, and in all the engagements previous and up to the surrender of Lee's army. Mr. B. was wounded three times in the service, once severely at Mine Run in 1863. After his discharge from the army he returned to his Ohio home, staid a short time and then went to St. Joseph, Mo., where he resided until March, 1879, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He is Treasurer of Irving Township. He was married November 29, 1866, in Buchanan County, Mo., to Miss Catherine Hersh, a native of Missouri. They have four children living—Oscar Edward, Lizzie J., Martin A. and James H. Mr. Bell owns a splendid upland farm of 144 acres, enclosed by very nearly two miles of handsome hedge and well supplied with cross fences; 100 acres are under cultivation, the remainder being meadow and pasture land. The supply of water is abundant and consists of a number of fine springs and two good wells. The orchard contains 165 bearing apple, 00 peach and a number of pear and cherry trees. The improvements are first-class and comprise a comfortable and cozy home, with six rooms, surrounded by handsome shrubbery and shade trees, a frame barn, 28x30 feet, wagon shed, granary, corn crib, smoke-house, etc., etc. Near the dwelling is a magnificent grove of native timber, which contains about 600 maple and cottonwood trees. Mr. Bell raises yearly from 300 to 350 bushels of wheat, 200 bushels of oats and 3,500 bushels of corn; keeps ten to fifteen head of stock cattle, fifty head of stock hogs and a half a dozen head of horses. He is a man of large and liberal views, a thorough farmer and a popular citizen.

C. F. BOWRON, M. D., farmer, Section 35, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Clinton County, N. Y., near the site of the battle ground of Plattsburg, January 21, 1814, and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year. He then removed to what is now Morrow County, Ohio, where he commenced reading medicine with Drs. Roberts and Carey, eminent and well-known practitioners of Mount Gilead in this county. After reading medicine with these gentlemen for a period of about three years, he attended lectures at the Starling Medical College, at Columbus, Ohio, graduating at this institution in 1848. He then commenced the practice of his profession in Morrow County, Ohio, where he resided about six months, and then removed to Champaign County in the same State, where he resided nearly twelve years, and practiced his profession. In the fall of 1851, he removed to Oregon, Holt Co., Mo., where he resided until May, 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating near Troy, Doniphan County, where he resided eighteen months, and then returned to Oregon, Mo., where he resided this time until the spring of 1862, when he returned to Kansas, and located in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has been Commissioner of Brown County four years, and was a member of the House of the Kansas Legislature, session of 1872-73. He was married in Delaware County, Ohio, in 1840, to Miss Jane Foster, a native of Ohio. They have seven children living, whose names are—Jacob W. (married to Miss Ella Roberts, a native of Illinois), Samuel (married to Miss Mattie Hershey, a native of Illinois), James, Phœbe, Darl, Fletcher and Mary. After a practice of ten years in Brown County, in addition to the number of years he practiced in other States, Dr. B. retired from the practice of his profession, owing to ill-health, and devoted his entire attention to the management of his fine 400-acre farm, on the Hiawatha and White Cloud road, being situated seven miles from the latter place. The farm is enclosed by substantial fences, is well watered by a number of the finest springs in the county, has good improvements, splendid orchards, and is in a good state of cultivation. Dr. B. raises from 500 to 600 bushels of wheat, 500 to 750 bushels of oats, 6,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn, keeps 25 to 50 head of stock cattle, 50 to 75 stock hogs, and 15 to 20 horses, among which are some fine road horses. Dr. Bowron is one of the leading farmers, and a man of considerable personal influence in his section.

FREDERICK BURKHALTER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 10, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas in the winter of 1856, locating at Iowa Point, Doniphan County, where he lived seventeen years, and was engaged in the butchering business. From Iowa Point he removed to his farm in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was a member of the Board of School District, No. 61, Brown County, for three terms. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. He took part in the War of the Rebellion as First Lieutenant of Ninth Regiment of Militia, and enlisted in Troy in the fall of 1861, served two months and was discharged at Troy on the 26th day of June, 1862. Mr. B. enlisted in Company F, Second Regiment, United States Regular Infantry; this regiment was sent to California, going "round the Horn," and arrived in California, July 5, 1849. He served with his regiment, participating in several Indian fights, until June 26, 1853, when he was mustered out. After his discharge from the army, he was employed in the Quartermaster's Department, United States Army, at Benicia, Cal., for one year; he then returned to Muskingum County, Ohio, where he remained until he came to Kansas. Mr. Burkhalter was born near Falzburg, Germany, August 3, 1829, and lived in his native State until his nineteenth year, when he immigrated to America, and located at Creston, Ohio, where he lived nearly a year. From Creston he removed to Cincinnati, where he remained but a short time, and then went to Pittsburgh, Penn.; from there he returned to Cincinnati, remaining a short time, and then went to Newport Barracks, Ky., where he enlisted in the United States Army. He was married in Iowa Point, Doniphan County, in May, 1863, to Miss Matilda Wilson, a native of Missouri. They have seven children living—F. Louis, Sophie, Frederic, Jr., George, Katie, Nellie and Carrie. Mr. Burkhalter has a fine upland farm of 240 acres, all enclosed, and all under cultivation except seventy acres, which is pasture land. The water supply is good, and consists of wells and springs. The orchard covers one acre, and contains thirty peach and seventy-five apple trees. The improvements consist of a comfortable six-room frame dwelling house, new large frame barn, granary, corn crib, etc. Mr. Burkhalter had thirty-six acres in wheat this season, which yielded 980 bushels; eight acres in rye, which yielded 200 bushels; four acres in oats, which yielded 150 bushels; 105 acres in corn, which averaged fifty bushels to the acre. Mr. B. is a thrifty practical farmer, and a square, manly man, who entertains a very high opinion of the section of the county he has settled in.

HERMIS CHAMPLIN, farmer, Section 21, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in McLean County, Ill., May 22, 1849, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, when he removed to Nebraska where he lived two years and was principally engaged in working at his trade as a carpenter. From Nebraska he came to Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in Forest City, Mo., January 1, 1871, to Miss Marcella Hockabaugh, a native of Illinois. They have five children living, Flora, Freddie, Dora, William and Eulalie. Mr. Champlin is a young and industrious farmer, and is well known among his neighbors for his sterling uprightness and integrity of character.

GEORGE DANSBERGER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 16, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Bavaria, Germany, May 9, 1816, and lived in his native country until 1852, when he immigrated to America and located in Montour County, Pa., where he resided eighteen years. M., of Moore's Hill, Dearborn County, Ind. He is a young, intelligent, and energetic farmer and a good citizen and neighbor.

THOMAS A. DUNN, farmer and stock raiser, southwest of Section 35, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, November 15, 1838, and lived in his native State but a short time when his father, Richard Dunn, removed to the Platte Purchase in Missouri. His father was one of the first settlers in this region and tells many graphic tales of the early history of this part of Missouri. Mr. Thomas Dunn lived in Missouri until the breaking out of the war, when he entered the Confederate service as a private in Company F, First Missouri Cavalry. He enlisted December 25, 1861, at Springfield, Mo., and was transferred in April, 1862, to Company G, Monroe's Arkansas Cavalry. He participated in the battles of Wilson's Creek, Pea Ridge, Cane Hill, Fayetteville, Cove Creek, Jenkin's Ferry, Prairie D'Ann, and Pilot Knob, or Ironton, Mo. At the last named battle Mr. D., who since his transfer to Monroe's Cavalry had been regularly promoted to First Lieutenant of his company, was wounded and taken prisoner by the Union forces under Brig. Gen. Ewing. After his capture he was kept at Ironton until he was able to be moved and then taken to Alton, Ill., where he remained until the spring of 1865, when he was paroled. After his release he went to his father's house in Nebraska City, Neb., where he staid a short time and then engaged in freighting on the plains. He was thus employed until December, 1865, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a consistent and prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has been Justice of the Peace of Irving Township six years, Township Clerk three years, and a member of the School Board of his district ten years. He was married in Irving Township in February, 1869, to Miss Mary C. Wood, a native of Missouri. They have two children, Sybil and Arthur Wood. Mr. Dunn has a fine upland farm of 160 acres. It is enclosed by nearly three miles of hedge and has 110 acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture and meadow land. The farm is well watered by wells and living water. There is a splendid orchard on the place which covers six acres and contains 500 fruit trees, among which are apple, Siberian crab, dwarf apple, peach, plum, cherry and pear trees. There is an abundance of small fruits on the property, among which are grapes, raspberries, strawberries, blackberries and gooseberries. Near the dwelling is a magnificent grove of native timber containing 2,000 cottonwood, black and white walnut, and maple trees. The improvements consist in part of a new and splendid family mansion containing six rooms and handsomely furnished throughout, large frame barn, granary, corn cribs, smoke house, wagon sheds, cattle yards, etc. Mr. Dunn raises from 400 to 500 bushels of wheat, 300 to 400 bushels of rye, 200 to 300 bushels of oats, 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn, feeds a car load of cattle, keeps forty to fifty head of stock cattle, seventy-five to 100 head of stock hogs and ten horses and mules. They have had seven children, six of whom are living, and whose names are: Myrtle, died in September, 1879; Katie, Albert, Mary, Edwin, Charles, and Lida. Mr. Finley is a hard working and industrious farmer, and is well known for his strict integrity.

MORRIS FRALEY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 29, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. Jonesville, was born in Montgomery County, N. Y., January 16, 1836, and lived in his native State until his sixteenth year, when he went to Holt County, Mo., where he worked at his trade as a carpenter, and in the fall of 1856, became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he resided until the spring of 1857, when he removed to White Cloud, where he lived until 1860, then returned to Brown County, where he farmed two years and then returned to White Cloud, where he resided this time five years and was engaged at working at his trade and in freighting across the plains. From White Cloud he again returned to Brown County, locating in Irving Township, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and of the Masonic fraternity, and was one of the charter members of White Cloud Lodge, No. 78. He took part in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company C, Ninth Regiment, Kansas Militia, and enlisted in Brown County, in the summer of 1863, and served until the close of the war and was discharged at White Cloud. He was married January 12, 1860, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, to Miss Jennie Mawhenny, a native of Virginia. Mr. F. owns two fine Brown County farms, one containing 160 acres, and the other, the home farm, eighty acres. These farms are both enclosed, are all under cultivation and rank among the best in this section. The water supply is pure and abundant and consists of a number of fine springs and branches. There is an orchard on the home farm which covers eight acres and contains 700 fruit trees. There is also a young and thrifty orchard on farm No. 2, which covers five acres and has about 500 fruit trees. The improvements on the home farm are first-class, and consist of a new, neat and cozy dwelling, frame barn 24x32 feet, granary, corn crib, smokehouse, etc. Mr. F. raises from 1,400 to 1,800 bushels of wheat yearly, 500 to 700 bushels of oats, 6,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn, 200 bushels of apples, feeds 25 to 30 head of cattle, keeps 50 to 60 head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 head of stock hogs and 8 head of horses and mules. On the southern portion of the home farm is a fine quarry of sandstone, which is being worked at the present time. The stone meets with a ready sale among the neighboring farmers. There is a fine apiary on the farm which is under the immediate supervision of Mrs. Fraley, and which has twenty-one stands. Mr. Fraley is an intelligent, earnest, and progressive farmer of liberal views and stands high in his community.

ELIAS FRITZINGER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Highland, came to Kansas in the fall of 1866, locating in Brown County, near Highland, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. F. was born in Lehigh County, Pa., October 14, 1840, and lived in his native county until his thirteenth year, when he removed to Montgomery County in the same State, where he lived until he came to Kansas. He was married in Highland, Doniphan Co., September 5, 1868, to Miss Mary Cole, a native of the Buckeye State, a daughter of Abraham Cole, Esq. Mr. F. has a fine upland farm of 160 acres all under fence, and in a high state of cultivation. The improvements consist of a French cottage dwelling, two stories high, and which contains nine rooms, and has two large verandas on the north and south sides of the building. The house was erected in 1880, and is finely finished throughout. Mr. F. has also a comfortable tenant house on his farm which is generally occupied by his laborers. He has a fine new, large barn, built on the latest and most improved plans; granary, corn-cribs and other farm buildings. His orchard covers 8 acres, and has 200 apple, 2,000 peach, 25 cherry, and 15 pear trees. His vineyard covers half an acre, and has 150 vines. He also has an abundance of small fruits such as raspberries, currants, etc., etc. His farm is well supplied with good pure water, having two wells and a cistern. He also has six fine springs which supply an equal number of fields with plenty of running water for his stock. His farm is finely situated, and is one of the best stock farms in Brown County. It lies on the State road, between Hiawatha and Highland, being nine miles from the former, and five miles from the latter place. Mr. Fritzinger devotes his time to raising grain, fine hogs, horses and cattle. He is one of the numerous sons of the old Keystone State who have immigrated to Kansas, and who by their proverbial thrift and industry, have become substantial and prosperous farmers in the State.

ANDREW R. GEYER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 17, Town 5, Range 9, P. O. Robinson, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, September 18, 1827, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1880, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County where he has resided since. He is a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was married in Morrow County, Ohio, in 1853, to Miss Charlotte Valentine, a native of Ohio. They have seven children living—Julietta M. (married to Willis M. Neilans, a native of Ohio), Sarah E. (married to W. L. Valentine, a native of Ohio), Eliza Lorain, Henry H., Mary Almeda, Nathaniel F. and Charles Elmer. Mr. Geyer has one of the finest upland farms in his section. It contains 160 acres, and is enclosed by substantial fences; has seventy-five acres in cultivation; forty acres in pasture, and the remainder meadow. It is well supplied with running water the year round, and is well calculated for a stock farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the place, which contains 100 apple, fifty peach, and a few pear and cherry trees. The improvements are a new and neat frame dwelling, containing four rooms; stock stable, corn-crib, smoke house, etc. Mr. G. had twelve acres in fall wheat this season, which yielded 300 bushels, and forty-five acres in corn, which averaged fifty bushels to the acre. Mr. Geyer is an intelligent farmer, and a Christian gentleman, and is held in high esteem by his neighbors. During the War of the Rebellion Mr. G. was a member of Company I, Eighty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and enlisted in Columbus, Ohio, in the fall of 1863, and was discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, in June, 1865.

AARON B. GIBSON, farmer, Section 15, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas in April, 1867, and located on his farm in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. Mr. Gibson took part in the War of the Rebellion, as a member of Company A, Fifth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. He entered this regiment as a private, May 10, 1861, at Manitowoc, Wis., and was promoted through all the various grades, being mustered out as First Lieutenant, commanding his company, at Madison, Wis., August 1, 1864. He took part in the battles of Gettysburg, Antietam, the Peninsula Campaign, Wilderness, and in fact in almost all of the battles of the old Army of the Potomac up to the closing battles of, and around Petersburg. He was severely wounded at the battle of Spottsylvania C. H., from the effects of which he is suffering to-day. Mr. Gibson was born in Fitchburg, Mass., May 11, 1834, and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year, and then removed to Manitowoc, Wis., where he resided until he entered the Union army. After his discharge from the service, he returned to his Wisconsin home, where he resided three years, and then removed to Fort Dodge, Iowa, where he resided four years, and then returned to Wisconsin, where he lived three and a half years, and then came to Kansas. He was married September 29, 1867, in Galesburg, Wis., to Miss Emma B. McAllister, a native of Libertyville, Lake Co., Ill. They have two children—Carrie and Calista. Mr. Gibson owns one of the choice upland farms in Brown County. For location, good buildings, fences and good cultivation, it cannot be surpassed. It contains eighty acres, all enclosed by substantial fences, and all in cultivation. The water for family use and for the stock is supplied by two excellent never-failing wells. His orchard covers one acre, and contains 100 apple, 300 peach, twenty-five cherry, and a few pear and plum trees. There is also an abundance of all kinds of small fruits. The improvements consist of a neat and tasteful frame dwelling house, containing eight rooms and with cellar, surrounded by handsome evergreens and shade trees, a new large frame barn, new granary, corn crib, etc. He had fifteen acres in fall wheat, which yielded 379 bushels; two acres in rye, which yielded sixty bushels; five acres in oats, which yielded 130 bushels; seven acres in spring wheat, which yielded fifty bushels, and forty acres in corn, which averaged fifty-five bushels to the acre. Mr. Gibson is an intelligent, earnest, progressive farmer, of liberal views and decided public spirit.

E. B. GORDON, farmer, Section 10, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, came to Kansas in April, 1865, and located in White Cloud, where he resided six years, and was engaged in farming. From White Cloud he went to Richardson County, Neb., where he resided five years, and was engaged in the milling business. From Nebraska he came to Irving Township, where he has resided since. He took part in the last war as a member of Company A, Sixteenth Regiment Kansas Militia, and was enlisted at Atchison, in the fall of 1864; served one month, and was discharged in the same city. Mr. Gordon was born in Warren County, Ohio, July 3, 1846, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, when his parents removed to McLean County, Ill., where he always resided until he came to Kansas. He was married October 20, 1872, in Falls City, Neb., to Miss Mollie Hall, a native of Illinois. They have two children living whose names are—Effie Blanche and Nellie. Mr. Gordon is a young, intelligent and industrious farmer, and is bound to become ere long a prosperous one also.

PHILIP GRIBLING, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 23, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Neiweit on the Rhine, Germany, July 4, 1849, but lived in his native country but a short time when his parents immigrated to America, locating in Mansfield, Ohio, where Mr. G. lived until the fall of 1867, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of White Cloud Lodge No. 6, I. O. of O. F. and of White Cloud Lodge No. 98, A., F. & A. M. In the fall of 1868, Mr. G. enlisted in Company H, Nineteenth Kansas Cavalry at White Cloud, and his company was shortly afterward sent to join the forces under the command of Gen. Custer at Fort Dodge. Mr. G. took part in the engagement with Black Kettle's band and in a number of Indian skirmishes. He was discharged from the United States service at Fort Hays in the fall of 1869. He was married at Falls City, Neb., July 4, 1871, to Miss Rebecca J. Bright, a native of Pike County, Ill. They have two children living, whose names are: Carrie Ada and Nellie May. Mr. Gribling is an intelligent and industrious young farmer and a good citizen. He raises from 200 to 400 bushels of wheat, the same amount of oats, 3,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn yearly, feeds half a car load of cattle, keeps 25 to 30 head of stock cattle, 40 to 50 stock hogs and 4 head of horses and mules.

JASPER N. GUINN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 16, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Ray County, Mo., May 2, 1830, and lived in his native county but a short time when his parents removed to Clay County in the same State, where they lived four years. From there they removed to Buchanan County, Mo., where Mr. G. lived until 1847, when he entered the Government employ and was engaged in freighting on the plains. He was thus engaged until the spring of 1848, when he entered the United States Army as a private. He enlisted at Middle Cimmaron Springs, N.M., in a company commanded by Lieut. Roy, proceeded as far as Santa Fe, where learning that peace had been declared the company was disbanded. After his discharge from the service Mr. G. returned to Fort Leavenworth where he remained a short time and then went to his home in Missouri, where he lived until 1852, when he removed to Gentry County in the same State, where he resided until the fall of 1860, when he removed to Buchanan County, Mo., where he lived until September, 1861, when he again entered the United States Army as a private in Company H, First Battalion Missouri Militia. He served in this company until the spring of 1862, when he was transferred to Company F, First Regiment Missouri Militia, and was a member of this company until the close of the war. He took part in the battles of Camden Point, Rock House Prairie and other minor engagements and skirmishes. He was severely wounded while in the service from the effects of which he suffers to-day. After his discharge he returned to his home in Buchanan County, Mo., where he resided until the 11th day of March, 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, where he resided two years. He then removed to his farm in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Church of the United Brethren. Mr. Guinn has been married twice. The first marriage occurred in Gentry County, Mo., in November, 1852, to Miss Deborah Culp, a native of Missouri. She died in April, 1862. Four children were the result of this marriage, only one of whom is living and whose name is Isabella Jane (married to George Williams, a native of Kansas and a resident of Washington Township, Brown County). The second marriage took place September 2, 1864, in Buchanan County, Mo., to Miss Hester Arnold, a native of North Carolina. They have four children—Mary E., John Stanton, Philena A. and William T. Mr. Guinn owns a choice upland farm of eighty acres, all enclosed and all in cultivation. The place is well watered by a number of fine springs and wells and by Roy's Creek which flows across the northeast corner of the farm. There is a good peach orchard on the place which contains 400 trees. The improvements are good and consist of a comfortable frame dwelling, stock stable, granary, corn crib, etc. Mr. G. raises from 200 to 300 bushels of wheat yearly, and 2,000 to 3,000 bushels of corn, keeps 25 to 30 head of stock cattle, 40 to 50 stock hogs and a few horses. He is a veteran of two wars, a thorough and practical farmer and well known for his integrity.

L. G. HARPER, farmer, Section 3, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Marion County, Ohio, August 4, 1851, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1861 when his parents removed to Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where Mr. Harper has resided since. He was married in Brown County, March 3, 1874, to Miss Rettie H. Cyphers, a native of Morrow County, Ohio; they have two children—James Ellsworth and Myrtie May. Mr. Harper is the fortunate owner of a fine upland farm containing eighty acres. It is all in cultivation and is surrounded by substantial fences. Two good wells supply the water for stock and household requirements. The orchard covers four acres and contains 100 apple, 400 peach, 200 cherry, and a few plum and pear trees. The place is also well supplied with small fruits, such as raspberries, blackberries, etc. The improvements are of the very best in Irving Township and excel in point of neatness and style many others of more pretensions in his immediate neighborhood. They comprise a comfortable frame cottage, a first class and well arranged frame barn 16x24, granary, stock sheds, corn crib, etc., etc. The cottage is eligibly located and is surrounded by handsome evergreens and shrubbery. Mr. Harper raises 100 bushels of wheat, 300 to 400 bushels of oats, and 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn yearly. He is one of the enterprising and go-ahead young farmers of Brown. His farm and the improvements are beautiful to look upon and everything about the place is kept in neat and perfect order.

JOHN G. HOWARD, farmer and stock-raiser, proprietor of "Springdale" Stock Farm, Section 30, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. Jonesville, was born in Carter County, Ky., in 1842, but only lived in his native State until his second year, when his parents moved to Buchanan County, Mo., where Mr. Howard lived until the fall of 1862 when he came to Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, near Highland, where he resided ten years and was engaged in farming. He then removed to Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He took part in the last war as a member of Capt. Hunter's Company of Missouri Militia. He was enlisted at St. Joe, served nine months and subsequently re-enlisted in Capt. Karne's Company of Missouri Militia, served two months longer and was discharged at St. Joe. He has been married twice. The first marriage took place near Highland, Doniphan County, to Miss Nancy Jenkins, a native of Indiana, in 1865; she died in 1867; one child, who died in infancy, was the result of this marriage. The second marriage took place, in 1869, in Buchanan County, Mo., to Miss Ann Eliza Copeland, a native of Missouri; they have had six children, five of whom are living—James M., William Edward, Elmira J., John Wesley, David Otis (died in August, 1878) and Roy E. Mr. Howard owns a large and fine upland farm of 529 acres equidistant (nine miles) from Rulo, Neb., Robinson, White Cloud, Padonia and Hiawatha. It is enclosed with substantial fences and has 300 acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture land. The water supply is excellent and consists of a number of good springs. The orchard is young and thrifty, covers eight acres and contains 700 fruit trees of various varieties. The improvements are good and consist of a new and comfortable frame cottage, frame barn 30x40 feet, wagon and buggy shed, smokehouse, granary and large corn crib and stock shed 28x124 feet. Mr. Howard feeds 85 head of cattle, 200 to 300 head of hogs, keeps 75 to 100 head of stock cattle, 100 head of stock hogs, and 8 head of horses and mules. In addition to farming his own land he tills 140 acres of rented land. He raises 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of wheat, 600 bushels of oats, 200 to 300 bushels of rye, and 10,000 bushels of corn. Mr. Howard also owns three acres of town lots in one of the pleasantest and best portions of the city of Hiawatha. He is one of the prosperous farmers of Brown and from the $600 of original capital brought here from Missouri twenty-one years ago has acquired an estate worth at least $25,000.

ANDREW J. IDOL, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 24, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Davidson County, N. C., August 30, 1835, and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year and then removed to Lafayette County, Mo., where he lived nine months. He then became a resident of Kansas, locating in May, 1856, near White Cloud, Doniphan County, where he was engaged principally in farming and where he resided five years. In 1861 he went to Walla Walla City, Washington Territory, where he was engaged in mining and freighting until 1867, when he returned via San Francisco and the Isthmus of Panama to his North Carolina home, where he married, staid a short time and then returned to Kansas, locating on his farm in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Baptist Church. He was married in Guilford County, N. C., in 1867, to Miss Eliza Payne, a native of North Carolina; they have three children living named Ettie, Frederic and Hubert. Mr. Idol owns a fine upland farm of 159 acres enclosed with substantial fences. The farm is in a good state of cultivation, is well watered, has two good orchards, and first class improvements, among which are a cozy and comfortable frame dwelling containing nine rooms and surrounded by beautiful shade trees, evergreens and shrubbery, and conveniently arranged frame barn 25x30 feet, granary, corn cribs, etc., etc. Mr. Idol raises from 150 to 200 bushels of wheat, 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn; keeps 20 to 25 head of stock cattle, 60 to 75 head of stock hogs, and 5 horses and mules. He is an honest, industrious and intelligent farmer, a good citizen and neighbor, and is well and favorably known.

J. M. IDOL, farmer and stock raiser, Section 25, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, was born in April, 1833, near Salem, N. C., where he resided until his nineteenth year. He then removed to LaFayette County, Mo., where he resided for three years, and from there, in 1855, removed to Holt County, the same State, where he resided until January, 1856, when he became a resident of Kansas, being one of the original settlers of White Cloud. He resided near this city until the spring of 1861, when he went to Walla Walla Valley, W. T., where he remained seven years. He then returned to Kansas via Fort Benton, and located in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of White Cloud Lodge, No. 6, I. O. O. F.; of White Cloud, No. 78, A., F. & A. M., and of Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M., of Hiawatha. He has been a member of the Board of School District, No. 8, of Brown County, for two terms, and Commissioner of the same County one term. He was married in Doniphan County in 1857, to Miss Nancy J. Hobbs, a native of Missouri. They have eight children, seven of whom are living—Luemma, married to Granville Arnold, a native of Kansas, and a resident of White Cloud; Flora, Edward, Cordelia, James, died in July, 1867, at Fort Hawley, M. T., the most northern fort in the United States; Frank, William and Raymond. Mr. Idol owns two exceptionally fine farms in Irving Township, which adjoin each other; they contain 160 acres each, and rank with the best in Brown County; one of these farms at present is rented, while Mr. Idol resides on and cultivates the other himself. The buildings on the rented farm are first-class, while the improvements on the home farm are equal to any in the State, and consist of an elegant farm house and good outbuildings. This farm is in a high state of cultivation; has a thrifty orchard and superb fences. Mr. Idol feeds twenty-five steers and 150 hogs; raises excellent crops of wheat and corn, and is a model farmer; has made his means in this county, and is a strong, influential representative man.

CLARENCE C. JONES, farmer and stock raiser, Section 35, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Sandusky County, Ohio, April 2, 1849, and lived in his native State until October, 1869, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married June 3, 1873, in Doniphan County, to Miss Mary I. Arnold, a native of Kansas, daughter of Dawson Arnold, Esq. They have had five children, one of whom is living, and whose name is Myron J. Mr. J. has one of the finest upland farms in Irving Township. It contains eighty acres, is enclosed by good fences, and has seventy acres in cultivation, the remaining ten acres being meadow land. The supply of water is pure and abundant, and consists of two good wells and a fine spring. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the place, which contains 140 apple trees. The improvements are good, and consist of a handsome frame cottage, containing eight rooms, a good and convenient frame barn and granary, 18x22, corn cribs, wagon shed, etc. Mr. Jones raises from 200 to 250 bushels of wheat, 100 bushels of rye, 300 bushels of oats, 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn, keeps eight to ten head of stock cattle, forty to fifty head of hogs and four head of mules. He is a young and enterprising farmer, with lots of grit in his composition, and will yet rank among the foremost farmers of his section.

FORDYCE M. KEITH, lawyer, residence Section —, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., April 27, 1816, and lived in his native State until his seventeenth year, when his parents removed to Elyria, Lorain Co., Ohio, where he resided until the fall of 1836. He then removed to Cleveland, Cuyahoga County, in the same State, where he resided until the spring of 1840, when he located at Massillon, Stark County, in the same State, where he commenced the practice of law. Col. Keith received his education at Oneida Institute, New York, and at Oberlin College, Ohio. In 1836, he commenced reading law with Albert A. Bliss, of Elyria, Ohio, and concluded the reading of law in the office of Messrs. Wade & Wells, at Cleveland, and was admitted to the bar August 28, 1838. He resided and followed his profession at Massillon until the spring of 1854, when he removed to Jackson, Jackson County, in the same State, and entered upon the manufacture of iron, still however, continuing to practice his profession, and where he remained until the spring of 1862. During the greater part of the year 1861, Col. K. was actively engaged in making speeches in favor of, and in recruiting troops for the Union army. In the spring of 1862, he entered the United States Army, as Major of the One Hundred and Seventeenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry—this regiment being subsequently known as the First Ohio Heavy Artillery, and was promoted to the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of this regiment, in which position he was mustered out at the close of the war. While Major of the One Hundred and Seventeenth Ohio, he was sent by order of Maj. Gen. Burnside to take command of Montgomery County, Ohio, where he remained in command during the Vallandingham troubles, a period of four or five months. Upon being relieved of this duty, he was ordered to take command of that portion of Kentucky lying opposite to Cincinnati, embracing four or five counties, where he remained until January, 1864; being then relieved, he was ordered to Knoxville, Tenn. Upon arriving at this place, he was ordered to take command as Provost Marshal of East Tennessee, in which position he remained until near the close of the war, when, with all others upon special duty in this department, he was ordered to his command, and to occupy the only gap in the extreme east of Tennessee and western part of North Carolina, left for the enemy to escape, it then being evident that the confederacy was about to collapse. After his discharge from the army, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, residing with his son, Lieut. U. S. Keith. Col. K. continued the practice of his profession until five years since, when, owing to ill-health, he was obliged to relinquish all active business. He has one son, U. S. Keith, late a Lieutenant of the First Ohio Heavy Artillery, who enlisted at the beginning of the war, and served faithfully and with honor, until its close. Lieutenant K. was married, September 11, 1886, in Massillon, Ohio, to Miss Mary F. Grossman, a native of Massillon. They have four children living, whose names are—Minnie L., Ruby V. and Eddie and Charles, twins. Lieut. Keith ranks among the intelligent, progressive and liberal minded farmers of Brown, and is well and favorably known.

PETER L. LANDES, farmer and stock raiser, Section 3, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Whitehallville, Bucks Co., Pa., September 22, 1841, and lived in his native State until his twentieth year, when he removed to Elkhart County, Ind., where he resided four years and was engaged in farming. From Indiana he came, the 9th of February, 1869, to Kansas, locating on his farm in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married February 4, 1866, in Columbiana, Ohio, to Miss Anna Culp, a native of the Buckeye State. They have six children living—Alice Isabel, Eliza Jane, Charles Urban, Norman, Hester and Martha. Mr. Landes owns two choice farms; one, the home farm, contains eighty acres, and the other 160. These are enclosed with good fences, are mostly in cultivation and rank among the best in Brown County. The water supply of both is excellent and cannot be surpassed, consisting of wells and springs. There is a fine orchard on each farm; that on the home farm has 200 apple, 1,000 peach and a number of pear and cherry trees. The orchard on the other farm contains 100 thrifty apple, and some peach, pear and cherry trees. The improvements on the home farm are a six roomed, comfortable and cozy frame dwelling, surrounded by numerous shade trees and evergreens. In close proximity to the house is a fine grove of native trees. The other improvements are a fine frame barn, 30x48 feet, granary, corn crib, smoke house, etc., etc. Mr. Landes raises from 700 to 800 bushels of wheat, 150 to 200 bushels of oats and 3,500 bushels of corn annually; feeds half a car load of steers, 60 to 100 head of hogs and keeps thirty-two head of stock cattle; sixty to seventy-five stock hogs and seven horses. There are a number of fine large spring branches on both his farms and they are well adapted for stock raising. Mr. Landes is an earnest, progressive working Pennsylvanian, who has fairly demonstrated what may be done in this country by intelligent and well directed labor.

JAMES N. MILLS, farmer and stock raiser, southwest quarter of Section 4, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, in 1834, but left his native State at an early age, when his parents removed to Illinois, where Mr. Mills resided about twenty years. He then went to Calaveras County, Cal., where he resided five years and was engaged in the lumber trade and in mining. From California he returned to his Illinois home, staid a short time, and in the year 1857 became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in 1861, in Missouri, to Miss Susan Davidson, a native of Missouri. They have had eight children, seven of whom are living—Laura Bell (married to Richard E. Dunn, a native of Missouri and a resident of Brown County), Sherman, Maggie, Bertie, Effie, James and Otis. Mr. Mills owns two fine farms, which together comprise 720 acres. These farms are all enclosed with substantial fences and are all in cultivation. They are well watered by Roy's Creek and numerous springs, wells and cisterns. The orchards cover eight acres and contain about 800 apples, 200 peach and a few pear and cherry trees. The improvements are first class in every particular and consist of a fine family mansion, containg eight rooms, surrounded with handsome shrubbery, evergreens and shade trees. The other improvements are a large frame barn, 44x74 feet, granaries, corn cribs, etc., etc. Farmer Mills does his own weighing and has a four-ton pair of Fairbank's scales in a convenient scale house, on which to do it. His farm is well supplied and equipped with all the improved modern farm machinery. He had 175 acres in small grain this year, which gave a fair yield, and 225 acres in corn, which yielded 12,000 bushels. He feeds on an average 100 head of cattle annually, and has done so for the past sixteen years. He feeds also 200 head of hogs, keeps seventy-five head of stock cattle and twenty-four head of horses and mules. Mt. Roy schoolhouse is situated on the southwest quarter of Section 4, on what was once a portion of Mr. Mill's property. This land was presented by him with his characteristic generosity and public spirit to the District for school purposes. The school building was erected in 1877 at a cost of about $500. It has a seating capacity of forty. Mr. I. S. Griswold is the teacher at present in charge of the school. Mr. Mills is one of the early pioneers of Brown County. He is a solid and prosperous farmer, and a prominent citizen, taking an active part in every project for the welfare of the community in which he lives.

WILLIAM PEARL MOORE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 34, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Nettlestead Hall, Suffolk, England, February 7, 1821, and lived in his native country until 1849, when he came to America, locating in Oshkosh, Wis., where he was engaged in farming, and where he resided until the fall of 1870 when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Episcopalian Church. He was married in Otley, Suffolk, England, May 5, 1842, to Miss Marian Last, a native of Suffolk, England; they have five children living whose names are—Pearl Bedwell, Emma Last, Annie Grace (married to Wilson Taylor, M. D., a native of Ohio, and practicing physician at Robinson, Kan.), Charles Walter and William Robert, twins. Mr. Moore owns a splendid upland farm of 320 acres. It is all enclosed with substantial fences and has 240 acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture land. There are a number of good wells, fine springs, and a young, thrifty orchard on the property. The improvements are first class and consist of a large and elegant brick mansion containing ten rooms, situated in the center of a beautiful lawn and surrounded by handsome shade trees and shrubbery. The other improvements are a convenient frame barn and granary 30x40, wagon sheds, corn cribs, etc. Mr. Moore raises from 500 to 800 bushels of oats, 600 to 800 bushels of wheat, 7,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn yearly; feeds a car load of cattle, keeps from 40 to 50 head of stock cattle, 50 to 75 head of stock hogs, and 12 to 14 head of horses and mules. Mr. Moore is the fortunate owner of a fine estate, an energetic and practical farmer, a thorough gentleman and stands high in the community in which he lives.

E. R. MORTON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 27, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, was born in Cooper County, Mo., August 22, 1844, and lived in his native State twenty five years and then removed to Kansas locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. The second marriage took place December 16, 1874, in Highland, Doniphan County, to Miss Sarah A. Close, a native of Ohio. They have had three children, two of whom are living, Arthur H. died August 15, 1882; Susan and Edward T., Jr. Mr. Noble owns one of the finest upland farms in this section. It contains 320 acres and is all enclosed with substantial fences, and all under cultivation except 120 acres, which is pasture and timber land. The property is well supplied with water, comprising springs and wells and Roy's Creek flowing through the west quarter of the farm. There is a fine young orchard on the place which covers about three acres and contains 200 apple 150 peach, and a number of pear and cherry trees. The improvements consist of a handsome cottage dwelling house containing six rooms, with cellar, and surrounded by elegant evergreens, shrubbery and shade trees. The other improvements are a large barn, stock stable, granary, corn crib, and other outbuildings. There are two large feed lots on the farm amply supplied with running water for the stock and protected on all sides by a natural growth of timber. Mr. Noble has 25 acres of timothy and clover, 50 acres of native grass, 20 acres of woodland, grows from 6,000 to 7,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 to 1,200 bushels of oats, and 600 to 800 bushels of wheat. He feeds 150 head of hogs, 60 to 75 head of steers, keeps 40 head of stock cattle, 8 to 10 head of horses and mules, and raises a few thoroughbred road horses. His farm is situated five miles north of the prosperous town of Robinson and is reached by some of the finest roads in Brown County. Within twenty rods of his dwelling is Williams' coal mine, which supplies half of the county with coal. Mr. Noble is a young, intelligent, energetic and thorough farmer. His grain fields, meadows, hedges, orchards, stock yards, etc., etc., all showing the impress of a master in good husbandry.

MATHEW DOUGLAS NOBLE, farmer and stock raiser, P. O. White Cloud, came to Kansas in the spring of 1857, locating at White Cloud, where he remained for fifteen years and was employed as superintendent of O. Bailey's pork packing establishment for ten years of this time. He then engaged in business for himself and for eight years was engaged in the cattle trade, shipping cattle and hogs to St. Louis, Chicago and Buffalo, N. Y., markets. At the end of this time he removed to his farm on Roy's Creek, in Brown County, where he resided until 1880, when he removed to his farm near White Cloud, where he resides at present. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 159, A., F. & A. M., and was one of the charter members of White Cloud Lodge No. 78. He was born in Bridgeport, Vt., March 6, 1822 and lived in his native town until his eighteenth year, when he removed to Paris, Ill., where he lived until he came to Kansas. He was married in Edgar County, Ill., in the fall of 1844, to Miss Lydia Bassford, a native of Illinois. They have had seven children, dren of whom but three are living, viz: Edward (married to Miss Sallie Close, a native of Ohio), Mary, and Phœbe (married to Franklin Moore, a farmer, a Pennsylvanian by birth), living near Walnut Creek, Brown County. Mr. Noble has two farms which contain 480 acres. Both farms are rolling prairie, under fence, and in a good state of cultivation. His farm on Roy's Creek contains twenty-five acres of fine walnut and elm timber and also has a fine young apple orchard containing 200 trees. The improvements on this farm consist of a commodious frame dwelling house, a good barn, and other farm buildings. His farm near White Cloud has a small orchard containing about fifty apple trees. About twenty acres of this farm is pasture land, in which rises one of the finest springs in the State of Kansas. It never freezes and never runs dry.

HENRY CLAY PLOTNER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 2, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Berkley County, Va., December 17, 1844, but left his native State at an early age, his parents removing to Platte County, Mo., where they lived a number of years, and then removed to Holt County, in the same State, where Mr. P. resided until the fall of 1861, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, where he lived six years, and was engaged in farming. In 1870, he removed to Brown County, where he resided until 1873, and then removed to Phillips County, where he lived until 1875, when he returned to Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is Treasurer of School District, No. 35, Brown County. During the war of the Rebellion he was a member of Company A, Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted September 20, 1862, at Troy, Doniphan County, and was discharged from the service in October, 1865, at Little Rock, Ark. Mr. Plotner's company was engaged in the battles of Cane Hill, Ark., November 28, 1862; Prairie Grove, Ark., December 7, 1862; in the raid on Van Buren, Ark., December 28, 1862, and was in the expedition in chase of the rebels, under the command of Gen. Cooper, in August, 1863. Mr. P. was married in White Cloud, January 24, 1866, to Miss Laura P. Harper, a native of Marion, Ohio. They have three children living—Charles E., Samuel and Benjamin Franklin. He owns a choice upland farm of 160 acres on the Hiawatha and White Cloud road, being twelve miles from the former and nine miles from the latter town. The farm is enclosed by substantial fences, is all in cultivation, and all plow land except three acres. It is well supplied with water, and has two fine orchards, which cover two acres and contain 160 apple, 500 peach, 50 cherry and a few plum trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place, consisting of grapes, blackberries, strawberries and raspberries. Near the dwelling is a fine grove of native timber, containing 4,000 cottonwood and box-elder trees. The improvements are first class in every particular. There is a fine family mansion, containing six rooms, surrounded by handsome shrubbery, evergreens and shade trees, stock stable, corn crib, 12x35 feet, granary, etc. Mr. Plotner has good stock lots and pastures, keeps 25 head of stock cattle, 40 to 50 head of stock hogs and 6 horses and mules. He raises 600 bushels of wheat, 400 to 500 bushels of oats, 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn, and cuts 8 to 10 tons of timothy hay annually. Heckler schoolhouse, No. 35, is located on the quarter adjoining Mr. P.'s farm, and is only 100 rods from his dwelling. Mr. Plotner is a square, level-headed man, a model farmer, and stands high in the community in which he lives.

H. H. SPANGLER, teacher Prairie Roy schoolhouse, District No. 61, P. O. Robinson, was born near Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa., September 19, 1860, and lived in his native State until September 19, 1882, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Irving Township, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. Since living in Kansas, Mr. Spangler has had charge of the Prairie Roy School in Irving Township, Brown County, and has given satisfaction to both the parents of his pupils and the superintendent of the schools of the county. He is a young man of culture and fine attainments, and received his education in the public and high schools of Somerset County, Pa., and at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, in the same State.

ENOCH SPAULDING, farmer and stock raiser, Sections 24 and 25, Township 1, Range 18, P. O. White Cloud, Doniphan County, was born in Scioto County, Ohio, in January, 1828, and lived in his native State but a short time when his parents moved to Jersey County, Ill., where Mr. S. lived until his twenty-first year. He then removed to Holt County, Mo., where he remained but a few months, when he enlisted as a bugler in Company C, (Capt. James Craig) First Missouri Battalion of Cavalry, commanded by Col. Powell, of St. Charles, Mo. He enlisted in May, 1847, in Oregon, Mo., and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth, in the fall of 1848. Upon his return from Mexico, he returned to Illinois where he spent the winter, and in the spring of 1849, started for California, where, upon his arrival, he was engaged in mining and prospecting, until July, 1850. He then returned to Holt County, Mo., where he resided until October, 1855, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating at White Cloud, being one of the original members of the town company. While residing in White Cloud he was engaged in the hotel and livery business, and built, in connection with J. H. Utt, Esq., the first hotel in White Cloud. In the spring of 1869, he removed to his fine farm in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a member of White Cloud Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F. He was married in August, 1856, in Holt County, Mo., to Miss Christina Dorland, a native of Ohio. They have seven children living, whose names are—Ida J., widow of D. G. Garlock, a native of New York; she has four children; Alfred R., married to Miss Julia Dunleavy, a native of New York; Cora, married to H. C. VanBuskirk, a native of Ohio and a resident of White Cloud; Lulu, married to L. B. Keith, a native of Ohio and a resident of Seneca; Emma, Annie and Herman J. Mr. Spaulding owns two fine upland farms containing 320 acres, enclosed with substantial fences and well watered. There are two fine orchards on these farms which contain together, 300 bearing apple, 400 peach and a number of cherry, plum and pear trees. These farms are also well supplied with small fruits among which are grapes, gooseberries, raspberries, strawberries, etc. The improvements are first-class, and consist in part, of a fine frame family mansion, with brick basement, containing nine rooms, two-storied frame barn 30x40 feet, granary, corncribs, wagon and stock sheds, etc., etc. Mr. S. makes a specialty of growing corn and stock. He raises 10,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps from fifty to seventy-five head of stock cattle, the same number of hogs, and fifteen to twenty head of horses and mules. Mr. Spaulding is one of the pioneers of this section of Kansas, a veteran of the Mexican war, a California '49er, and withal, is a thorough, practical, prosperous and intelligent farmer, a good citizen and a valuable man in the community in which he lives.

GEORGE A. STANSBURY, farmer, Section 17, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Baltimore, Md., January 15, 1827, and lived in his native State until 1837, when his father removed to Champaign County, Ohio, where Mr. Stansbury lived until 1855, when he removed to Henderson County, Ill., where he resided until the spring of 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on the farm where he now resides, which he pre-empted on his first arrival in Kansas, paying for it by a land warrant obtained by his father, James B. Stansbury, for services in the Revolutionary War. Mr. Stansbury resided in Kansas until January of the next year, when he returned to Illinois, where he lived until March, 1881, when he returned to Kansas, and has since made his home on the farm where he resides at present. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Hiawatha. During the war of the Rebellion, Mr. Stansbury was Wagon Master of the Seventh Illinois Cavalry, and enlisted at Bushnell, Ill., in June, 1861, and was discharged at Springfield, Ill., four years subsequently. He participated in all the battles and engagements of his command. He was married in Urbana, Ohio, in April 1868, to Mrs. Isabella Howell, a native of the State of New York. They have had two children, one of whom is living—James R. Mr. Stansbury's farm contains 160 acres, mostly upland, all enclosed, and has sixty acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture and meadow land. The farm is well watered by Roy's Creek and numerous springs and wells. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the farm. The improvements consist of a comfortable frame dwelling house, one and one half stories high, stock stable, etc.

HARRISON STEELEY, farmer, P.O. Mount Roy, came to Kansas March 7, 1879, locating in Iowa Township, Doniphan County, and has resided in this vicinity ever since. He is a member of the German Reform Church. He was born near Bloomsburg, Columbia Co., Pa., March 12, 1834, and lived in his native State until he came to Kansas. He was married in Columbia County, Pa., in the fall of 1859, to Miss Elizabeth Gearhart, a native of Columbia County. They have four children, whose names are: Daniel Jacob, Diana (married to George McCauly, a native of Ohio), Stephen and Ellis. Mr. Steeley has a fine upland farm of eighty acres, which he has earned by hard work and frugality, being comparatively a poor man when he first came to Kansas. His farm is all under cultivation, and is all enclosed by substantial fences. His orchard contains 125 bearing apple trees, the same number of peach trees and twenty-five cherry trees, all of the finest and most prolific varieties. He has a good comfortable frame dwelling house, large barn, granary, corn crib and other buildings on his farm. He devotes his attention chiefly to raising corn and small grain. His wheat this year, 1882, averaged thirty-two bushels to the acre; his prospective yield of corn this summer is simply enormous.

JACOB S. STILWELL, farmer, Section 17, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Williams County, Ohio, June 11, 1842, and lived in his native State until 1859, when he came to Kansas and located in Doniphan County, where he resided until 1861. He then entered the Union Army as a member of Company A, Seventh Regiment Kansas Cavalry, and was enlisted at Highland, Doniphan County, in June, 1861, and discharged from the service in October, 1862, at Corinth, Miss. After his discharge from the Seventh Kansas he returned to his old home in Ohio, and while there again entered the United States Service as a member of Company E, Eighty-sixth Ohio Infantry, a six months regiment. He served out his time in this regiment and was discharged in Cleveland, Ohio. After being mustered out of the service he went to Nashville, Tenn., where he lived about seven months, and then again returned to Ohio where he stayed but a short time and then went to Henry County, Iowa, where he lived nine months. From Iowa he returned to Kansas and located in Brown County, where he has resided since. Mr. Stilwell came from a brave and patriotic family, his father and two brothers being members of the Union Army during the war of the Rebellion, besides himself. His father, William A. Stilwell, a native of Berkeley County, Va., was a member of Company A, Thirteenth Kansas Infantry, and died from disease contracted while in the service of his country in hospital at Cane Hill, Ark., although born on Southern soil he was an ardent Unionist. One of Mr. Stilwell's brothers, Stephen D., was a member of the same company (A, Seventh Kansas) with him, and was killed at the battle of Little Blue, November 10, 1861. William O., another brother, was a member of, and served a full term during the last war in the United States Regular Army, being a member of the Sixteenth United States Infantry. Mr. Stilwell participated in the battles of the Little Blue, Corinth and a number of minor actions and skirmishes. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 98, I. O. O. F. He was one of the charter members and has filled all the chairs of his lodge. He was Constable of Irving Township, Brown County, one term. He has been married twice. The first marriage took place in Oregon, Mo., October 21, 1866, to Miss Ruth A. Cole, a native of Ohio. Three children were the fruits of this marriage—Anna May, Ida Alice and Ruth A. The second marriage took place in Brimfield, Ind., February 10, 1874, to Miss Caroline Snyder, a native of Ohio. They have had two children, one of whom is living and whose name is George Martin. Mr. S. owns a small but choice farm of eighty acres, which is all enclosed and all under cultivation. The farm is well watered, and has a fine young orchard which contains fifty apple and a number of cherry, plum and peach trees. There is also a handsome grove of young walnut and catalpa trees. The property consists of a comfortable frame dwelling house, small stock stable, granary and other out buildings.

G. W. STUMBO, farmer, Section 10, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Mahaska County, Iowa, October 11, 1848, and resided in his native State until his third year, when his parents started to remove to Oregon Territory. They both died, however, while crossing the plains. The subject of this sketch was then taken in charge by his uncle, Hiram Niday, who took him through to Oregon. Mr. S. lived in this Territory until 1863, when he went to Idaho, where he lived five years and was engaged in mining and prospecting. From Idaho he went to California, where he was engaged in freighting and where he lived five years. From there he went to Nevada where he again engaged in mining until 1879, when he removed to Falls City, Neb., where he lived until September, 1872, when he removed to Irving Township, Brown County, where he resides at present. He was married December 27, 1879, in Falls City, Neb., to Miss Hirsa Hall, a native of Iowa. They have one child, a son, whose name is David.

ISAAC L. VAIL, farmer and stock raiser, Section 18, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Middlesex County, N. J., April 1, 1840, and lived in his native county until his tenth year, when his parents removed to Newark, in the same State, where they lived until the spring of 1857, when they removed to Henry County, Ill., where Mr. V. lived until September 19, 1861, when he became a member of Company H, Thirty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Cambridge, Ill. On the 1st day of January, 1864, Mr. V re-enlisted in the same company and regiment and served until the close of the war, being discharged December 2, 1865, at Vicksburg, Miss. He was present and took part in the battle of Fredericktown, Mo., October 21, 1861; Cotton Plant, Ark., July, 1862; Magnolia Hill, Champion Hill, Black River, siege of Vicksburg, Matagorda Bay, Spanish Fort, Mobile Bay, and a number of minor engagements. After his discharge from the U. S. army he went to Chicago, where he attended Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, and after completing his course came, in the spring of 1866, to Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He has been Clerk of School District No. 25, Brown County, for four years. He was married in November, 1868, in Brown County, to Miss Emma Chipman, a native of Warren County, Pa. They have three children living—Cora, Maud and Theodore. Mr. V. has a choice upland farm of 160 acres, all enclosed with substantial fences, and all under cultivation. The water supply is fair. There is a thrifty orchard on the place which contains 250 fruit trees. There is a fine grove of native trees near the dwelling. The improvements are a new and commodious frame house, stock stable, granary, smoke house, corn cribs, etc. Mr. V. had five acres in oats which yielded 180 bushels, ten acres in barley which yielded 350 bushels, and seventy acres in corn which averaged fifty-five bushels to the acre. Mr. Vail is one of the intelligent and leading farmers of his section, raises considerable fine stock, and is prospering abundantly.

EVAN B. WILLIAMS, farmer and proprietor of coal mine, Section 16, Township 2, Range 18, P.O. Robinson, Brown County, was born in Monmouthshire, England, June 24, 1833, but lived in his native country only till his third year, when his parents immigrated to America, locating in Montour County, Pa., where Mr. Williams lived until his eighteenth year, when he went to California, where he lived one year and was engaged in mining. From the Golden State he went to Australia, via the Sandwich and Simoon Islands, where he was engaged in gold mining and remained two and a half years. From Australia he went to Peru, South America, remained a short time, and then returned to California via the Isthmus of Panama and Acapulco, Mexico. He resided in California, where he was engaged in mining, about eleven years, and then returned via the Isthmus to Pennsylvania, where he lived two and a half years, and then went to the Rocky Mountains, where he was engaged in coal mining. Staid a short time, went to Iowa, and after a short time removed to Bevier, Mo., and from there, in December, 1868, came to Kansas, locating in Irving Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Robinson Lodge, No. 159, A., F. & A. M. He was married in Danville, Pa., in 1867, to Miss Elizabeth Deucenbarger, a native of Bavaria, Germany. They have four children living—Mary, Charles F., Katie D. and George. Mr. Williams owns a valuable upland farm of 120 acres, all enclosed with substantial fences, and all in cultivation. The supply of water is excellent, and consists of a number of fine springs and Roy's Creek, which flows along the north and east sides of his farm. The improvements consist of a new frame dwelling, containing seven rooms, and good outbuildings. On the northwest quarter of the farm is one of the best coal mines in Brown County, which is operated by Mr. Williams, personally. The coal is of good quality, meets with ready sale, and the yearly out-put amounts to from 14,000 to 15,000 bushels. Mr. Williams has been a great traveler in his time, and has made the acquaintance of thousands of persons in various countries and climes. He is a substantial business man and farmer, and has an enviable reputation as a citizen.

GEORGE MARION WILSON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 9, Township 2, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Oregon, Holt County, Mo., December 31, 1852, and lived in his native State until his fifth year, when his parents moved to Iowa Point, Doniphan County, where Mr. W. lived ten years. He then went to Richardson County, Neb., where he was engaged in farming and where he resided for eight years. From Nebraska he returned to Kansas, locating in Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in Irving Township, Brown County, in April, 1875, to Miss Sulie A. Wilhoit, a native of Andrew County, Mo. They have had three children, two of whom are living, Louie B. and Maud Estella. Mr. Wilson owns a fine farm of 160 acres, equally divided between bottom and upland. It is enclosed by substantial fences. Seventy acres are under cultivation, the remainder being timber and pasture land. The farm is well supplied with water, Roy's Creek flowing through the center, and has also a number of good springs and a fine well. The orchard is young and thrifty. The improvements are a comfortable four roomed frame dwelling, stock stables, corn crib, etc. In addition to farming his own land Mr. Wilson cultivates fifty-five acres of rented land. He had thirty acres in fall wheat this season which yielded 607 bushels, and forty acres in corn which turned out a crop of 2,000 bushels. He keeps twelve to fifteen head of stock cattle, forty to fifty head of hogs and eight head of horses and mules. He is a young and enterprising farmer and is well and favorably known for his strict integrity and fine business qualities.

WALNUT TOWNSHIP.

Walnut Township has as yet no railroad. It has one village, however, of some little importance for one so far fram rail transportation. The first settlement in this township was made by Isaac Swain, near where the Carson school and settlement is now located. The first organized public school in the county was in District No. 1, this township, date of organization March 11, 1859. The schoolhouse for this school was built in 1860, and is still occupied and in good condition. Carson was the first postoffice established in the township, December 9, 1857, and M. L. Swain was the first Postmaster. There is one very thriving church organization in the township, described below.

Fairview Congregational Church.—The society connected with this church was organized January 30, 1872. The first pastor was the Rev. Milan Ayers, who was ordained April 8, 1872. The church building was commenced in 1878, and completed and dedicated May 4, 1879, the Rev. S. D. Storrs preaching the sermon at the dedication ceremonies. The church building is a handsome gothic structure, 30x54, with ceiling eighteen feet high, and its seating capacity is 300. It contains a fine chapel organ, is well carpeted, is supplied with all the modern church furniture, and cost, including furniture, organ, etc., about $2,500. The membership of the church at the time of its organization was only nine persons. At present it consists of 103, composed of some of the most prominent and influential families of Fairview and vicinity. The first officers of the church society were: C. H. Isely, Jas. W. Betts and R. Evans, trustees; John S. Belts, clerk; C. H. Isely, treasurer, and Andrew Carothers, deacon. Rev. Mr. Ayers was pastor of this church four years, and was followed by Rev. J. M. Cheeseman, who had charge one and a half years. He was succeeded by Rev. G. W. Skinner, who preached to the congregation one year, and was in turn succeeded by Rev. Hiram S. Howard for one year, who was followed by the Rev. Albert Matson, who was pastor one and a quarter years, and was succeeded by Rev. Dwight Dunham, the present incumbent. The present officers of the church are: Andrew Carothers, S. W. Rounds, J. M. Sewell, S. Thompson and J. H. Van Foolsom, trustees; C. H. Isely, treasurer, and John S. Belts, clerk (who has held this position ever since the organization of the church society); F. J. Robbins, T. W. and J. W. Belts, deacons.

A Union Sunday school was organized at Fairview sixteen years ago, and since the erection of the church building has used it as a place of meeting. A. Jeff. Anderson was the first and Andrew Carothers is the present superintendent. The Sabbath school has a membership of eighty-three, and has been held continuously, summer and winter, since its organization.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—WALNUT TOWNSHIP.

J. R. ANDERS, farmer and stock raiser, Section 8, Township 2, Range 16, P. O. Hamlin, was born in Montgomery County, Pa., September 24, 1854, lived in his native State until December 13, 1879, when he removed to Kansas, locating in Hamlin, Brown County, where he resided a short time, and thence removed to Hamlin Township until February, 1880, when he moved to his farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in Montgomery County, Pa., December 28, 1876, to Miss Lizzie

Price, a native of Pennsylvania. They have two children whose names are Esther Lilly and Elmer. Mr. Anders is the fortunate owner of a fine upland farm which contains 240 acres. It is all enclosed with substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, is well supplied with water and has magnificent orchards and groves. The improvements are first-class in every particular and comprise among others a comfortable and cosy frame cottage, containing five rooms, large frame barn 44x58 feet, one double corn crib 24x32, another 8x30, smoke house, cattle shed 18x36, a good poultry house 14x16, two stock sheds, one 14x32 and the other 8x28, etc. Mr. A. raises from 300 to 400 bushels of wheat, 500 bushels of oats, 6,000 to 7 000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps thirty head of fine stock cattle, 100 to 150 Poland-China and Berkshire hogs and seven head of horses. He is a young, intelligent and energetic farmer who cultivates his land according to methods learned in the old Keystone State, and a good citizen and neighbor.

JOHN S. BELTS, farmer and fruit and stock raiser, Section 25, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Carson, is the son of James W. and Mary Belts and was born November 28, 1848, in Bartholomew County, Ind., and lived in his native State until January 9, 1858, when the family came to Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, and where he has resided ever since. He is an earnest and prominent member of the Congregational Church. He is also a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 83, and of Hiawatha Encampment No. 33, I. O. O. F.. Mr. Belts is a graduate of Bryant's Commercial College of St. Joseph, Mo. Has had several years experience in mercantile pursuits, but prefers farm life. Is a young, intelligent, and jolly bachelor, a thorough and practical farmer, a good and useful citizen and a man of high character and greatly esteemed in his neighborhood.

JAMES W. BELTS, farmer, fruit and stock raiser, Section 25, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Carson, was born August 10, 1819, in Livingston County, N. Y., and lived in his native State until November, 1844. He then for a number of years traveled extensively in the Southern and Western States. Among other places of interest, visiting the mammoth cave in Kentucky, where he spent forty days. After the completion of his travels he located in Bartholomew County, Ind., where he resided eleven years, and was engaged at working at his trade as carpenter. From Indiana he removed to Kansas, becoming a citizen of this State May 13, 1856, locating on his fine farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided ever since. He is a zealous member of the Congregational Church. He was Justice of the Peace of Walnut Township six years, and a member of School Board of District No. 16, Brown County, about fifteen years. He was married in Bartholomew County, Ind., October 2, 1847, to Miss Mary Spencer, a native of Ohio. They have eight children, whose names are—John S., Ellen M. (married to A. A. Pyles, a native of Virginia and resident of Morrill Township, Brown County), Emma (married to Ashley Chase, a native of New York and a resident of Cawker City), Laura E. (married to A. A. Frink, a native of New York and a resident of Walnut Township, Brown County), Charles A. and Mary A., twins; Mary A. is married to Fred A. Hough, a native of New Jersey and a resident of Doniphan County; Sadie I. and Bessie Florence. Walnut Valley fruit and stock farm, as the splendid estate of Esquire Belts is called, lies on Spring Creek, is 400 acres in extent, is divided into bottom, upland and timber land, and is by odds the finest fruit and stock farm in this section. It is enclosed by good wire, hedge and board fences, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water, by means of springs, wells, cisterns, and Spring Creek, which flows through the entire length of the farm in a southeasterly direction. There is a model orchard on the farm, a part of it having been planted twenty-six years ago, being among the first orchards planted in this section, and having been renewed from time to time by young trees, it has a constant supply of fruit every year; it contains 900 apple trees, 100 peach trees, and a number of pear, plum and cherry trees; 800 to 1,000 bushels of apples are gathered every year in this orchard. Walnut Valley fruit and stock farm is known far and wide for the good quality and excellent variety of the fruit raised here, buyers coming from all sections to purchase, the fruit being in many instances hauled to various points to supply the local markets in the extreme western part of this State and Nebraska. The improvements are first-class in every particular, embracing among others, a new and elegant frame mansion, built in the latest style, with all modern improvements and conveniences, containing thirteen rooms. The residence is located in the center of a rich blue grass lawn, embowered in evergreens and shrubbery. Large and stately shade trees also dot the lawn here and there. The other improvements are, a large and conveniently-arranged frame barn, 30x53, granary 20x16, corn crib, 25x36, with thirteen foot posts, stock sheds and lots, etc., etc. Esquire Belts devotes his attention chiefly to raising fruit, corn, cattle and hogs. He grows 6,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn, 75 to 100 Poland-China hogs and 10 head of work horses. South of the dwelling is a magnificent walnut grove. It is seventy acres in extent, and contains thousands of second growth black walnuts from six to twenty-five inches in diameter, and many fifty feet high. Mr. Belts is one of the most successful fruit-growers in the country, a practical, thrifty, variety farmer, and a square, manly man, who entertains a very high opinion of this country.

HARRISON J. BEMIS, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Carson, is the son of Jotham and Martha Bemis, the former a native of Vermont State, died in January, 1882, the latter born in Massachusetts, still survives him. During the summer of 1853 they came west to Clinton County, Iowa, where they farmed for ten years, and at the expiration of that time came to Kansas and took up a homestead in the northwestern portion of Brown County. Here Mr. Bemis lived until 1875, when he removed to Richardson County, Neb., but after farming there a few years he returned to Kansas in March, 1881, and purchased the place where he now lives. He was married in September, 1871, to Susie, daughter of John Long, who settled in Kansas as early as 1859. Both are members of the Congregational Church at Fairview.

REV. JOSEPH F. BERRY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 9, P. O. Hamlin, is a native of Washington, Tazewell Co., Ill., born in 1836. He was a graduate from Bethany College, West Virginia, in 1867, both in the scientific and theological course, and was afterwards a minister in his native town for nearly eight years. His next place of residence was Monroe, Wis., and was married while in that State, at Center, Rock County, to Miss Julia M. Parmly, in the year, 1868: then removed to Marshall County, Iowa, and in the fall of 1869 came to Kansas. He first lived in Hiawatha Township, where he purchased eighty acres of partially improved land, on which he lived three years, preaching during the mean time for the Congregational Church at Hamlin, and the Christian Church at Padonia. He then removed to Salem, Neb., where he was engaged at teaching school, and in the ministry for two years, returning to Kansas at the expiration of that time. He then purchased his present place, where he owns 160 acres of land, all under cultivation, highly improved with beautiful hedge fence, fine young apple and peach orchard, bearing, and good comfortable buildings, necessary to a first-class farm. During his residence here, the Hamlin Christian Church was organized under his supervision, and also the church for the same society at Hiawatha, where he preached two years. He is at present filling a pulpit at Falls City, Neb., every Sabbath.

D. BLODGETT, farmer and stock raiser, Section 32, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in what is now Franklin County, Ohio, October 18, 1808, and lived in his native State until January, 1872, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Rooks County, where he engaged in farming and where he resided one year. Thence he removed to Nemaha County where he was also engaged in agricultural pursuits, and where he resided nearly five years. He then purchased a farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided ever since. Mr. Blodgett was married at Fort Finley, Ohio, in September, 1833, to Miss Melinda Snerr, a native of Richland County, Ohio. They have six children living—Luzette (married to Norman Edwards, a native of Licking County, Ohio, and a resident of Graham County, Kansas), Charles (married to Miss Ida Hemphill, a native of Kansas), Richard (married to Miss Melissa Rhea, a native of Missouri), James (married to Miss Lucy Thornell, a native of Missouri), John and Albert. Mr. Blodgett is the fortunate owner of a choice upland farm, situated on the Delaware River. It contains 174 acres, sixty-four acres of which are meadow and timber land, the remainder being equally divided between bottom and upland; is enclosed with substantial fences and is in a good state of cultivation. The orchard is young and thrifty and contains about 100 bearing apple and 200 peach trees. The farm is well watered by means of wells, springs and the river which flows through the south part of the farm. The improvements on the property are good; among which may be enumerated, a comfortable frame dwelling house, a small tenant house, stone barn, granaries, corn cribs, etc. Mr. Blodgett devotes his attention chiefly to raising corn and hogs. He raises from 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps 15 to 25 head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 Poland-China hogs and five head of horses and mules. Mr. Blodgett is the Nestor of this portion of Brown County, and old as he is "makes a hand" in the field to-day. He is an honest, hardworking farmer and is a good citizen and neighbor.

J. M. BOOMER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 21, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Fairview, was born in Worcester County, Mass., in 1831, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year. In 1849 his parents removed to Kendall County, Ill. Three years later Mr. B. entered the employ of Stone & Boomer, of Chicago, extensive bridge contractors. He continued in the employ of this firm four and a half years, and then engaged in farming in Illinois. In the fall of 1863 he entered the employ of L. B. Boomer, formerly of the firm of Stone & Boomer, who at that time had large contracts with the United States government in erecting railroad bridges. Among others the firm replaced several bridges on the M. P. Railroad destroyed by the rebel Gen. Price during his raid. He continued in this employment for two years, and then returned to his farm in Illinois, where he remained until May, 1873, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent and zealous member of the Baptist Church of Sabetha, and has been Superintendent of the Sabbath-school connected with this church for a number of years. He has been Commissioner of Brown County for nearly three years past, and is Chairman of the Board. He has been for five years a director of, and is now president of the Brown County Exposition Society. He was married in Kendall County, Ill., in 1861, to Miss Mary Ann Haigh, a native of England. They have had three children, two of whom are living—Alice and Merrill B. James D. died in August, 1873. "Spring Creek Stock Farm," as Mr. Boomer's fine estate is aptly named, contains 480 acres, mostly upland. It is enclosed with substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, and is abundantly supplied with water by means of wells and springs, and Spring Creek, which heads on this property. The orchard contains two and a half acres, and contains 100 bearing apple, 200 peach and a number of pear and cherry trees. The place is also abundantly supplied with small fruits, among which are grapes, currants, gooseberries, raspberries, etc., etc. The improvements are first-class in every particular, among which is a large family mansion containing nine rooms, with a good cellar, stock stables, a hay shed 30x56, with nineteen feet posts, granaries, stock sheds, 20x190 feet corn crib, 25x40 wagon and buggy sheds, tool and machinery house, etc., etc. Everything is in complete order, and the place is equipped with all the modern farm machinery and labor saving appliances. There is also a large feed mill and stock scales on the property. A fine grove of native trees covering three acres is on the northeast portion of the farm. There is also 120 acres of tame grasses, consisting of timothy, clover and blue grass. He cuts 120 tons of tame hay, raises from 200 to 300 bushels of wheat, 600 to 1,000 bushels of oats, 4,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn yearly, feeds forty to fifty head of cattle, keeps eighty head of thoroughbred and grade cattle, 150 Poland-China hogs and ten horses and mules. At the head of his fine herd of Short-horn cattle stands "Captain Cobb," a thoroughbred Princess bull. He is two years old and weighs 1,630 pounds. Mr. [illegible]mer considers Brown County as well adapted to growing tame grasses as any section of [illegible] Mississippi Valley. His grass last year yielded three tons to the acre. Mr. Boomer is an intelligent, thorough going farmer and stock raiser, one of the prominent and honored citizens of Brown County, and possesses the esteem of a wide circle of friends, and is eminently worthy of it. Mr. B.'s brother, Charles T. Boomer, was a member of Company A, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, and enlisted in the summer of 1861 in Walnut Township, serving until the close of the war, sharing all the dangers and hardships of his regiment, and was discharged in the fall of 1865. He entered his company as a private and re-enlisted as a veteran, and rose to the rank of Sergeant. He was wounded twice while in the service, once severely, and his death, which occurred in April, 1871, was directly attributable to the exposure and hardships he endured while in the service. He was born in Worcester County, Mass., in October, 1834, and lived in his native State until his fifteenth year, when his parents removed to Kendall County, Ill., and where he resided until the spring of 1858, when he came to Kansas, where he pre-empted a farm on which his brother now lives, and resided in the neighborhood until he entered the Union army. After his discharge he returned to his brother's farm in Illinois, where he resided for three years, and then entered the employ of the American Bridge Company. He continued with this company about three years, and in 1870 returned to his farm in Kansas to improve it, and where he lived until his death, in 1871. He was favorably known far and wide to all the old settlers in the northern part of the State for his sterling worth and manly qualities.

JOHN T. BRADY, farmer and stock dealer, P. O. Sabetha, was born in Cass County, Ill., and came thence with W. H. Collins to Brown County, Kan., in 1859, each living about two miles east of Sabetha; the partnership in cattle buying and selling continued about six years, though Mr. Brady served from 1862 to 1865 as a volunteer in the Seventh Kansas. During 1866-67 he was located at Pawnee City, Neb., in partnership with Gov. Butler, of Nebraska, in the cattle trade, doing business on an immense scale. From 1868 to 1875 he and T. B. Collins were associated together doing a heavy business, and up to the time of their failure owning large tracks of land in Brown and Nemaha counties. The two grasshopper incursions and repeated drouths finally ruined them financially. Mr. Brady mortgaged every acre of land and dollar of property in order to raise money to resume the business in stock, for which a natural liking and long experience so well fitted him. His success has been most gratifying, as he to-day owns 480 acres of fine land on the line of Brown and Nemaha counties, to which he removed in 1881, on which he has good buildings, a herd of at least 200 cattle, and owes no man a dollar. Not content with forming various business partnerships with the Collins brothers from his and their boyhood, he married a sister, thus binding himself in a lifelong union meaning more than any mere partnership.

ELIZABETH S. BUNN, widow of Jacob K. Bunn, farmer, Section 10, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Frinkville. Mr. Bunn was the son of Henry and Elizabeth Bunn, natives of Pennsylvania. He was born in Pennsylvania October 29, 1827, his parents removing at an early day to Ohio and thence to McLean County, Ill. Mr. Bunn lived in Illinois until the spring of 1855 when he became a resident of Kansas, first locating on Bunn Branch of the Wolf River in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he resided five years and was engaged in breaking prairie and in farming. He then removed to what is now Walnut Township, in the same county, where he resided until his death, which took place in Franklin County in January, 1878. He was a member of the Church of the United Brethren. Mr. Bunn was one of the first Constables of Robinson Township and served a considerable length of time. He was also Justice of the Peace of Walnut Township six years. Mrs. Bunn's maiden name was Smith. She was born in Indiana, and married to Mr. Bunn in 1849 in McLean County, Ill. They have ten children living—Smith Sawyer, married to Rachael Smith, a native of Illinois; Mary Charlotta and Charles Marion, twins, both married—Mary C. to Niram Curtis, a native of Ohio, Charles M. to Miss Esther H. Nicholson, a native of Illinois; John M., born September 29, 1855, was the first white child born in Brown County; Horace Greeley, married to Miss Fanny Handley, a native of Missouri; Clarinda, Benjamin B., Lizzie, Milly A. and Jacob K., Jr. In 1861 Mr. Bunn was engaged in freighting across the plains, plying between Hiawatha, Pike's Peak and Denver, and for a number of years was engaged in operating a steam thresher in Brown and adjoining counties. He was an ardent and prominent politician and acted with the Republican party. He was one of the early pioneers of Brown, an intelligent and industrious farmer, a useful and popular citizen and a good neighbor.

ANDREW CAROTHERS, farmer and stock raiser, northwest of Section 30, Township 2, Range 16, P. O. Carson, was born December 2, 1840, in Cumberland County, Pa. Living in his native State until the spring of 1851, when his parents removed to Henderson County, Ill., where he resided until 1862, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company F, Eighty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Monmouth, Ill., in August, of that year, and was discharged at Camp Douglas, Chicago, Ill., July 5, 1865. He participated in the defence of Fort Donelson and the battle of Nashville. Early in 1863, Mr. C. was detached from his company and assigned to the corps of Topographical Engineers attached to the Army of the Cumberland, maintaining his connection with this corps until his discharge. Mr. Carothers received his early education in the public schools of Henderson County, Ill., and at Monmouth College in the same State, which he attended until the breaking out of the war. He is a prominent and zealous member of the Congregational Church, and of Star of Hope Lodge, No. 1338, Knights of Honor. He was Superintendent of Public Instruction for Brown County two terms, and is president of the Temperance Union of the same county. Mr. Carothers was married in Brown County, in April, 1867, to Miss Flora J. McCune, a native of Ohio. They have five children living, whose names are—Susie, Charles Greely, Frank, Lydia, Estella and Gertrude. Mr. Carothers owns two choice farms, one of 200 acres, lying on Spring Creek, six miles west of Hiawatha, and the other, containing 320 acres, lying on Walnut Creek, four miles west of Hiawatha. These farms rank among the best in this section in respect to fences, cultivation, water, timber, and improvements. The home farm has a cozy and comfortable dwelling surrounded by beautiful shrubbery, evergreen and shade trees, and one of the best and most convenient frame barns, 32x42, in the county. It also has a good granary, corn crib, wagon shed, smoke house, etc. There is a young and thrifty orchard on this farm, which covers three acres, and contains 200 fruit trees of various varieties. Farm No. 2 is well watered, is in a high state of cultivation, has plenty of good timber, and possesses an inexhaustible supply of building rock, the markets of Hiawatha being supplied from these quarries. There is also a splendid orchard on this property, which covers five acres, and contains 400 fruit trees of all kinds. Owing to these farms being so far apart, Mr. Carothers offers one of them for sale, thus affording an opportunity for some man to become the fortunate owner of one of the finest and most fertile farms in the Banner County of the State. Mr. Carothers grows 4,000 bushels of corn, and 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of small grain annually; keeps thirty to forty head of stock cattle, seventy-five to one hundred Poland-China hogs and nine head of work horses. He began here with little means and has accumulated a splendid estate; is a man of great energy and liberal intelligence, and proposes to make up a stock farm that shall represent the best phases of breeding, grazing and feeding prime cattle and hogs. He is a man of decided working ability and will realize his ideal.

MRS. DEIDAMA FRINK, widow of Rev. Prentis Frink, farmer and stock raiser, Section 4, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Fairview. Rev. Prentis Frink was born in Brookfield, Madison Co., N. Y., September 22, 1815, where he resided until his 25th year, when he removed to Wyoming Valley, Penn., where he had charge of the Plymouth and Sebman Baptist churches for three years. He then removed to Middleton, Pa., where he had charge of the Dimmock and Forest Lake churches, and where he resided five years. Thence he returned to Madison County, N. Y., where he had charge of the Clockville and Peterboro churches, and where he resided three years. On the 11th day of November, 1859, he became a resident of Kansas, locating at Iowa Point, Doniphan County, where he resided five months and located in what is now known as Walnut Township, Brown County, where he resided until his death, September 11, 1861. While residing on a farm in Walnut Township, the cultivation of which he superintended, Mr. Frink was engaged in preaching and in organizing church societies in Sabetha, Kapioma, and Padonia. Mr. Frink received his early education in Brookfield, N. Y., and completed his studies in the Hamilton University, in the same State. After completing his classical course at this institution, he commenced reading theology, being admitted to the university of the Baptist Church and ordained at Dimmock, Pa., in 1844. He immediately took charge of Dimmock and Forest Lake churches, as already stated. He was a faithful and zealous pastor. Mrs. Frink, whose maiden name was Millard, was born in Delaware County, N. Y., and was married to Mr. Frink at Lehman, Pa., October 26, 1842. They had eight children, all of whom are living, and whose names are: Emogene B., married to P. W. Fuller, a native of Illinois, and a resident of Brown County; J. Melancthon, a resident of Seattle, Washington Territory, twice married, the first married being contracted with Miss Hannah Phillips, a native of Pennsylvania, and the second with Miss Abbie Hawkins, a native of Illinois; Ophelia, married to Charles M. Sprange, a native of Ohio and a resident of Morrill, Brown County; Adelbert A., a resident of Walnut Township, Brown County, married to Miss Laura Belts, a native of Indiana;

Henry C., Joshua L., Frederick P., a resident of Walnut Township, Brown County, married to Miss Minnie Cranz, a native of Ohio; and Nettie. The last named, Miss Nettie, was Postmistress of Frinkville for five years, and until the removal of the post-office to Fairview. Mrs. Frink owns a choice upland farm of eighty acres; enclosed by substantial fences; is in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by means of springs, wells, and a branch of the Delaware, which flows in a southeastern direction through the farm. There is a thrifty orchard on the place which covers over an acre and contains 250 fruit trees of various kinds. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the property. The improvements are good, embracing among others a comfortable five-room frame cottage, a frame barn 30x32, corn cribs, stock shed, lots, etc. East of the dwelling is a fine grove of native timber, which covers one acre and contains 500 cottonwood, honey locust, and black walnut trees. There is also another magnificent grove, containing two acres, on the north side of the farm. Mrs. Frink's farm is managed by her son, Joshua L., who is a thorough and intelligent farmer. He grows 100 bushels of wheat, the same quantity of oats, and 2,000 bushels of corn yearly; keeps 16 head of stock cattle, 30 to 40 Poland-China hogs, and 4 head of fine horses. The Frink family are well and favorably known to the old pioneers of this section, and are among the most prominent and prosperous residents of Brown County.

ANDREW GASSIN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 10, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in New York City December 24, 1848, and lived in his native city until his twenty-second year, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He has been a member of the Board of School District No. 57, Brown County, five years. He was married in New York City in July, 1869, to Miss Mary F. Jones, a native of Burlington County, N. J. "Mulberry Stock Farm," as Mr. G.'s farm is named, is a fine valley farm of 240 acres. It is all enclosed with a handsome osage hedge; is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by wells, springs and Mulberry Creek, which flows through the farm in a southeasterly direction. The orchard on this farm covers eight acres and contains 350 apple trees, 375 peach, twenty-five pear, twenty-five cherry and a number of plum, apricot, nectarine trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place, among which are 200 grape vines of the choicest varieties, strawberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, etc. The improvements are excellent and comprise among others, a comfortable and cozy frame dwelling, containing six rooms, with good cellar, stock stable and sheds, 16x110 feet, combined granary and corn crib, 30x28, corn crib 9x60, poultry house, calf pens, stock lots, etc., etc. Southwest of the house is a fine young grove containing 250 ash trees. Mr. Gassin raises 500 bushels of wheat yearly, 400 to 500 bushels of rye, 250 to 300 bushels of oats, 3,500 to 4,000 bushels of corn; cuts forty to fifty acres of hay; has fifty acres seeded down to timothy, clover and blue grass; feeds two car-loads of cattle; keeps a herd of fifty head of fine grade Durham and Jersey cattle; seventy-five to 100 Poland-China and Essex hogs and eight head of horses. At the head of the "Mulberry" herd stands "Young Duke of Mulberry," an animal of superior personal traits and illustrious lineage. Mr. Gassin aims to build up a herd second to none in Brown County and will, doubtless, succeed. In addition to his other pursuits Mr. G. also pays some attention to bee-culture, and has now on his place a small apiary of fine Italian bees. He has also some of the finest Light Brahma poultry in the county. Mr. Gassin is a young, intelligent and industrious farmer and stock breeder, a useful and honorable citizen and a good neighbor.

JOSEPH HAIGH, farmer and stock raiser, Section 22, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Fairview, was born in Wakefield, England, January 18, 1841, and lived in his native country until he was six years of age, when his parents immigrated to America, locating near Bristol, Ill. Mr. H. lived in Illinois until August 7, 1862, when he enlisted at Yorkville, in this State, in the Union army, becoming a member of Company H, Eighty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He was discharged from the United States service at Nashville, Tenn., June 11, 1865. He suffered severe hardships while in the army, from the effects of which he suffers to-day. He participated, among others, in the battles of Stone River, Liberty Gap, Chickamauga, the Atlanta campaign, including the siege, Nashville, Tenn. At the battle of Stone River, Mr. H. was taken prisoner by the rebel forces under the command of Gen. Braxton Bragg, and after being confined in a number of different places, was sent to Richmond, Va., where he was immured in Libby Prison. He was detained as prisoner about six weeks, and then paroled. After his exchange, he returned to his regiment, where he served until the Atlanta campaign, when, on the 11th day of September, 1864, he was again taken prisoner by the enemy. After his capture he was taken to Macon, thence to Millen, and from there to Savannah, where he was held a prisoner until his exchange, when he was conveyed to Annapolis, Md., where he was an inmate of the Naval Hospital for a period of six weeks. He was then furloughed, and proceeded to his home in Illinois, where he remained until his shattered health was sufficiently restored, when he rejoined his regiment at Huntsville, Ala., and served with it until the close of the war. At the battle of Chickamauga, on the 19th day of September, 1863, Mr. H.'s twin brother, Benjamin, a member of the same company and regiment, was stricken down by a rebel bullet, and died on the 25th of the same month. He was a bright and promising young man, and beloved by all his comrades, and laid down his life for his country at the early age of twenty-two. After Mr. Haigh's discharge, he returned to his Illinois home, where he resided until May, 1870, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a zealous and consistent member of the Baptist Church of Sabetha. He has been Justice of the Peace of Walnut Township for four years, and a member of the Board of School District No. 64, Brown County, one year. He was married in Bristol, Ill., March 13, 1872, to Miss Annie Bennett a native of Scotland. They have had five children, three of whom are living—Jessie Harlan, Benjamin (died December 4, 1877), Gracie (died December 7, 1876) Jessie, and Annie Mabel. Esquire Haigh owns two fine farms in Walnut Township. One, the home farm, contains eighty acres, is enclosed with substantial fences, well supplied with water; has a fine orchard and good improvements, among which are a new and neat frame dwelling, containing five rooms, stock stables, granary, corn cribs, etc., etc. The other farm contains 160 acres, is well fenced, and has seventy acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture and meadow land. It is a fine body of land, and has a branch of Spring Creek flowing through it. Mr. H. devotes his attention to raising grain and hogs. He raises from 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of corn yearly, keeps fifteen head of grade Durham cattle, seventy-five to one hundred hogs, and four head of horses. He is a thorough and practical farmer, an honored magistrate of his county, and is well and favorably known for his probity and integrity.

NOAH HANSON, farmer, Section 20, Township 2, Range 16, P. O. Carson, was born in Windham, Cumberland Co., Me., December 14, 1814. He is the son of Joseph and Lydia Hanson, both of English descent. His mother's name was the same before and after marriage. He received a practical education at the district school and also at Alfred and Parsonfield, Me., Academies, and Friends' School at Providence, R. I. He worked on his father's farm till he became of age, commenced teaching school when seventeen years of age, and continued to teach during the winter for fifteen winters, working on a farm in the summer. From 1845 to 1857 he was engaged in merchandising at Portland, Me. In April, 1857, he came to Kansas and pre-empted the northwest quarter of Section 28, Walnut Township, Brown County. In October, 1858, he was appointed, by President Buchanan, Postmaster of Carson, the office being at his residence for over twenty years, or until January 1, 1879, when he resigned and recommended the appointment of the present Postmaster, Jacob Hayward. Mr. Hanson took an active part in the first effort to establish public schools. He helped organize and was one of the first officers of School District, No. 1, and helped build the first public schoolhouse in Brown County, in which Miss Harriet Chase, now Mrs. Harriet Tyler, taught the first term of public school. Mr. Hanson and his wife, Mary C. (daughter of James Winslow, of the same school district), to whom he was married October 29, 1847, were of Quaker parentage, and, with some liberal and important qualifications, retain largely the views of that sect. He is the owner of 270 acres of land, all under improvements, and well supplied with native timber. He has been an active and efficient agent in building up and putting in operation the Public Schools of Brown County, having held the office of County Superintendent of Public Schools six years. He has also been an active participant in township and county matters, having been County Commissioner two years and Township Trustee of Walnut Township seven years. He was one of the pioneers in the Anti-Slavery movement, a life-long temperance advocate, and continues to take an active part in political and social reforms.

S. HATFIELD, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 22, Town 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Ross County, Ohio, December 25, 1828, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, and then removed to McLean County, Ill., where he was engaged in farming, and where he resided until the spring of 1855, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on Bunn's Branch, Robinson Township, Brown County, where he resided until November 12 of the same year, when he removed to his farm—which he pre-empted—in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a consistent member of the Congregational Church at Fairview. Mr. H. participated in the War of the Rebellion during the Price raid, as a member of Capt. I. N. Speer's Company, Twenty-second Regiment, Kansas Militia, and enlisted in Hiawatha, in October, 1864. Served one month, and was discharged at Kansas City. Mr. H. also gave his eldest son, Peter Hatfield, to the Union cause. He enlisted at Hiawatha, August 19, 1862, as a member of Company I (Capt. John Schilling), Thirteenth Regiment, Kansas Infantry, and was discharged on the expiration of his term of service, at Little Rock, Ark., June 26, 1865. He was born in McLean County, Ill., March 8, 1844, and came with his father's family to Kansas. He took part in the battles of Cane Hill, Pea Ridge, and other minor engagements. He was a brave and loyal soldier, shared in all the dangers and privations of his command, losing his eyesight almost completely from the hardships endured while in the service. He was accidentally killed in September, 1879. Mr. Hatfield, the elder, was married in McLean County, Ill., in 1843, to Miss Mary E. Bunn, a native of Ross County, Ohio. They have eight children living, whose names are: Henry (a resident of Republic County, married to Miss Addie Phelps, a native of Michigan), Hannah (married to Frank S. Dixon, a native of Ohio and a resident of Brown County), Mary Ellen (married to R. M. Parker, a native of Iowa and a resident of Washington Ter.), Christopher Ira (a resident of Republic County, married to Miss Alice Prince a native of England), Eva (married to Frank B. Robbins, a native of Kansas and a resident of Brown County), Ida and Freddie. Mr. Hatfield owns a fine farm of 160 acres, lying on Spring Creek. It is mostly second bottom, is all enclosed by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by means of springs, wells, and the creek, which flows in a southeastern direction through the farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the place. The improvements are good, and consist in part of a six-roomed frame dwelling, a good frame barn, 24x38, granary, corn crib, wagon shed, a summer and wash house, etc., etc. Mr. Hatfield devotes his time and attention chiefly to raising corn, cattle, and hogs. He raises 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of corn, keeps 100 stock cattle, 100 to 200 fine stock hogs, a few sheep, and eight head of work horses. He is an old pioneer of this section, an industrious, practical farmer, a prosperous and prominent citizen, and is favorably spoken of in his neighborhood.

SAMUEL IDE, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 3, Township 3, Range 15, P.O. Hiawatha, was born in Luzerne County, Pa., November 19, 1824, and lived in his native State until December, 1859, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, near Highland, where he resided four years. He then removed to Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has ever since resided. He is a zealous and consistent member of the Baptist Church. He was married in Luzerne County, Pa., in July, 1851, to Miss Mary Millard, a native of Masonville, N. Y. She died July 29, 1882. They have had four children, three of whom are living, named: Frederic (died November 27, 1876), Louisa (married to William Drake, a native of New York and a resident of Brown County), Eugenia and Rosetta. Mr. Ide owns a fine upland farm of 200 acres. It is in a high state of cultivation, is all surrounded with substantial fences, and is well supplied with water by means of a number of good wells and Ide's Branch of the Delaware River, which flows through the western part of the farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the property, and a fine quarry of building stone. The improvements are first-class, comprising, among others, a fine frame dwelling, stock stables, sheds and lots, granary, corn cribs, etc., etc. Mr. Ide raises 250 to 300 bushels of oats, 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn, keeps twenty to twenty-five extra fine stock cattle, thirty to forty hogs, and four head of horses. Mr. Ide is one of the old residents of Brown, is an honest, intelligent and hard-working farmer, a useful and prosperous citizen, and an honorable, upright Christian gentleman.

C. H. ISELY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 16, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Hochstetten, Canton Berne, Switzerland, May 3, 1828, but left his native country at an early age, his parents immigrating to America in 1831, locating in Holmes County, Ohio, where Mr. Isely lived until April 11, 1850, when he removed to St. Joseph, Mo., where he resided until October, 1851, when he removed to Marathon County, Wis., where he engaged in the lumber business, and where he resided until April 8, 1853, when he returned to St. Joseph, in which city, and in Omaha, Neb., he was engaged in working at his trade as carpenter and house builder, and where he resided until October 9, 1861, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company F, Second Regiment Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, enlisting at St. Joseph, Mo., and being discharged at Fort Leavenworth, November 16, 1864. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Ind. Ter., Backbone Mountain, Ark., Dover, Prairie D'Anne, Jenkins Ferry, Clarksville, Fort Smith and a number of minor engagements. Mr. Isely shared all the dangers and hardships of his command, and had many narrow escapes, while in the service, from capture and death. After his discharge from the United States service, he rejoined his wife in Ohio where he remained a short time, and then returned to St. Joseph, where he again followed his trade, and where he resided until the spring of 1872, when he returned to Kansas, having previously been a citizen for a time, locating on his farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent and consistent member of the Congregational Church at Fairview. He has been Clerk of School District No. 64, Brown County, six years. He was married in St. Joseph, Mo., May 31, 1861, to Miss Eliza Dubach, a native of Courrendelin, Canton Berne, Switzerland, a daughter of Benjamin Dubach, Esq., an old Free state settler of Doniphan County, he having located there in Willow Dale, in 1856. Ten children were the fruit of this union, seven of whom are living, their names being as follows:—Adolphe, born June 28, 1862, died October 4, 1862; W. Henry and M. Alice, twins; John C., born August 31, 1867, died August 11, 1868; Lydia J., Olivia Grace, born September 12, 1871, died May 10, 1874; Freddie B., Charles C., James W. and P. P. Bliss. Mr. Isely, for many years of his life, followed his trade as carpenter and house builder, in the cities of St. Joseph and Omaha and in Brown County, Kas. He has superintended and erected among others, the palatial residence of Hon. E. N. Morrill, of Hiawatha, the Congregational Church at Fairview, Spring Grove Schoolhouse, and the commodious residences of Fred and Henry Isely. For the past ten years he has followed farming, principally, conducting his fine upland farm of 165 acres, lying five miles southeast of Sabetha. It is enclosed with substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by springs, a good well and Spring Creek, which flows nearly through the center of the farm. Five acres of the farm are devoted to a young and thrifty orchard, which contains 160 apple, 300 peach, and a number of pear, plum, cherry and mulberry trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place, consisting of grapes, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and gooseberries. The improvements are good, and consist, among others, of a new and cozy nine-room frame gothic cottage, surrounded by a handsome lawn, adorned by evergreens, shrubbery and shade trees, stock stable and lots, granary, corn cribs, etc., etc. Mr. Isely raises from 250 to 400 bushels of wheat yearly; 50 bushels of rye, 300 bushels of oats, 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn, cuts ten acres of hay, keeps twenty to twenty-five head of fine stock cattle, seventy-five to ninety Poland-China hogs, and four head of good work horses. Mr. Isely and his amiable and accomplished wife are old pioneers of the State. They came to Kansas in the early days of the Territory, although they did not take up their permanent abode in the State until a later date. Mr. Isely was a Free-state man in the early times, and is a Republican to-day, and is a zealous and strong friend of prohibition and temperance. He is besides, a prosperous, industrious and intelligent farmer, and a good Christian gentleman, well and favorably known for his integrity and probity. He loves his home and is warmly attached to his bright, promising family.

FREDERIC ISELY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 16 Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Holmes County, Ohio, November 18, 1831, and lived in his native State until September 17, 1872, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is an earnest and consistent member of the German Reform Church. He was married in Stark County, Ohio, November 3, 1859, to Miss Paulina Geiger, a native of Ohio. They had one son, William H., a bright and intelligent child, who died August 24, 1867. Mr. I. owns a fine upland farm of 400 acres, it is enclosed with substantial fences, and is in a high state of cultivation, and well supplied with water by means of an excellent well, equipped with a Woodmansie wind mill. A number of fine springs, the north branch of Spring Creek which flows through, and Knapp's Run which heads on his farm. The orchard on this fine estate covers eight acres, and contains 300 apple, 200 peach and 50 plum, pear and cherry trees. The improvements are excellent, and consist, in part, of an elegant residence containing nine rooms, surrounded by handsome evergreens, shade trees and shrubbery; large frame barn, stock stables, granary, corn-cribs, etc., etc. Mr. I. raises from 500 to 600 bushels of wheat, 600 to 700 bushels of oats, 300 bushels of barley, 200 bushels of rye, 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn annually; keeps 60 head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 stock hogs, and 4 head of horses and mules; has 20 acres in timothy and clover, and cuts 60 acres of hay annually. Mr. I. is a thorough and practical farmer; an honest straightforward man, and a good and useful citizen.

HENRY ISELY, farmer, Section 16, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County; born September 1, 1841, near Winesberg, Holmes Co., Ohio. His father, Christian Isely, was a native of Canton Berne, Switzerland. He immigrated to this country in 1831, and settled on a farm in Holmes County, Ohio, and lived there until his death, which occurred in 1865. His mother's maiden name was Barbara Ozenberger. She was born in the same canton, Switzerland, in 1800. She resided at the old homestead in Ohio until 1878, when she followed her children and resided with them in Brown County, and died at the house of the subject of this sketch, January 16, 1882. The family consisted of eight children; the two eldest died young; the eldest living, Elizabeth, married Rev. J. G. Abele, now at Harrisburg, Pa; Christian H. married Miss Eliza Dubach, a native of Switzerland; Frederick married Miss Pauline Geiger, of Ohio, and Barbara married Jacob Kenelle, of Ohio, and Jacob died when fifteen years old. The subject of this sketch was the youngest of the family. His common school education was obtained in one of those ancient log cabins with slab benches. He subsequently attended the high schools of Massillon and Berlin, Ohio, with a course at the Commercial College at Cleveland. He taught school in his native county four years. In the spring of 1867 he came West, and after roaming through portions of Kansas and Missouri, during the summer of 1867, he organized and taught what was known as the Woodburn Seminary, near St. Joseph, Mo., and taught the first public school in said district. He remained at this post three years. He opened the school with four scholars, and the last year he was there the enrollment was over ninety, and had the pleasure of seeing the spirit of free schools flourish. In 1869, bought wild land in the western part of Brown County, Kan., which now constitutes his homestead. In 1870 he moved to Brown County, and taught the Fairview school for three successive winters. In the spring of 1871 he commenced to open up the farm on which he now resides. In the autumn of 1862 he enlisted in Company C, Sixty-seventh Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, as a private, and served a little over three years, serving first in the Department of Virginia, next in North Carolina, then in South Carolina. Participated in the sieges and capture of Morris Island, in the siege of Charleston, Fort Sumter, and other noted strongholds, and was in the bloody charge on Fort Wagoner, July 18, 1863, where his division lost nearly one-half of its men in that night's attack. In the siege of Charleston his command was under fire for three months, with scarcely an hour's cessation of bursting of shells. After the charge of Fort Wagoner he was prostrated with typhoid fever, and lay in the field hospital on Morris Island about six weeks. Contrary to the expectations of the surgeon and his company comrades, our subject weathered it through. Although barely twenty-two, he came out of that hospital his head covered with gray hair. After his recovery he rejoined his company. In January, 1864, the regiment entered as a veteran regiment, and after thirty days' furlough, was sent, via Washington, to the Army of the James, under Gen. Butler. May 10, 1864, he was in the battle of Chester Station, May 20, at Weir Bottom Church, and on the same ground in the battle known as Weir Bottom Church and Howlett House, June 16, 17, 18. In the following September he was under fire during the whole month in front of the rebel fort blown up by Grant's mine, then commonly called Fort Hell, in front of Petersburg, his camp being within rifle shot of the rebel batteries. September 29, he was at the engagement at Signal Hill, on the north side of the James River, and the same afternoon at Chapin's Farm, and on the same ground, October 1, his command repelled the onslaught of the rebel hordes under Gen. Ben. Hill. October 13, he was in the battle of Darbytown Road; his command stormed the enemy's works. October 27 and 28, he was in the battle of Charles City Road; storming of Petersburg, April 2, 1865. On the retreat of Gen. Lee, the command of Mr. Isely followed him and engaged him in his intrenchments at Jettersville, April 6. The next day he was again engaged at High Bridge, east of Farmville. He was at the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox Court-house, April 9, being at that time in the First Brigade, First Division, Twenty-fourth Army Corps, under Gen. Ord. On the day of the surrender he was wounded in the face by the bursting of a shell. From this time he was on provost duty in Virginia until October 16, 1865, when he was mustered out at Richmond, Va. In 1872 he was elected Township Clerk of Walnut Township, Brown Co., Kan., and has filled various school and township offices since that time. He was a member of the City Council of Hiawatha two terms. In 1873 he was elected on the Farmers' ticket to the office of County Clerk of Brown County; was re-elected in 1875 as independent candidate by the coalition of the Independents and the Democrats, and was again re-elected as an Independent in 1877, and his candidacy was endorsed by all three parties in their conventions, hence had no opposition. He retired from said office somewhat shattered in health, in January, 1880, and retired to his quiet rural home, fourteen miles west of Hiawatha. Out-door exercise seemed to agree with him, and his health was gradually restored. His chief ambition now was to establish a pleasant little home on the farm, to enjoy it with his little family for the balance of his natural life. Against his wishes, in 1882 he was nominated by the Democratic convention. The campaign was hot, and with great odds against him was elected by sixty majority. As a member of the House, he served on the Committee of Assessment and Taxation, and enrolled bills. On the former his best work was put in, a work of which the public find out but little. He was the author of five meritorious bills, which were reported on favorably by the different committees. To his chagrin, he was prostrated by sickness, which prevented his attendance the last two weeks of the session. Mr. I. has been raised and confirmed as a member of the Reformed Church, the church of his parents, and is a member of said church now. He took an active part in effecting an organization of said church in Hiawatha. In politics he has acted with the Republicans, voting for Grant in 1868 and 1872, and for Hayes in 1876, but examining the result in the latter case from both sides, without partisan bias, he never could make himself believe that the measures by which Hayes was counted in were exactly honest, hence in 1880 he voted for Hancock. He is no partisan, independent in his political views. In the main he believes in supporting the honest principles of men above party. He does not believe that all the virtues are in one party, nor all the evil in the other. He was married August 24, 1871, to Miss Sophia B. Hochstetler, a native of Holmes County, Ohio, and daughter of Elias and A. E. (Joss) Hochstetler. Her father has been a prominent leader and office-holder in Holmes County, Ohio, where he has lived since 1811. Mrs. I. is a member of the same church with her husband, and is a modest lady of many estimable qualities of mind and heart. They have had five children; three of them died in infancy, and Mary E. died in her fourth year; but one child is left them now, a boy, William Frederick, born July 13, 1873. He owns 475 acres of land, all under fence but a five-acre timber lot; 235 acres in Section 16, and 240 acres in Section 9, all in Township 2, Range 15, adjoining each other. About 175 acres are under cultivation, the balance in pasture or prairie meadow. The farm has two good pasture fields, one of seventy and the other of 190 acres. The former is watered by Spring Creek and the latter by a never-failing spring, therefore well adapted for a stock farm. The buildings are all on the northwest quarter of Section 16, and consist of a house, small barn, granary, corn cribs, and other outbuildings, and as soon as his means will permit, he expects to improve his house and build a good basement barn. The orchard, which he started himself, is composed of apple, peach, cherry, pear, plum and other trees, and in 1882 had the first sufficient supply of apples. Has ten acres laid off for the apple orchard, but it is not all filled yet. In small fruits, has grapes, blackberries, currants, etc. As windbreaks or ornamental trees, there are maple, cottonwood, Lombardy poplar, box elder, ash, elm, yellow poplar, and a few pine and other varieties. Has started to seed some of his land with tame grasses. Believes in mixed farming, hence he raises small grain, besides corn. Has a good foundation for a good stock farm, and expects to improve and stock as fast as his means will admit.

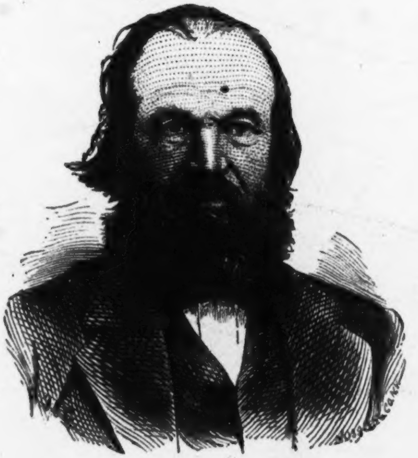
G. JOSS, farmer, stock raiser and feeder, proprietor of Maple Grove Stock Farm, Section 22, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Fairview, was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, January 24, 1829 and lived in his native country until his fifth year, when his parents immigrated to America, first locating in Weinsberg, Holmes Co., Ohio. Mr. Joss lived in Ohio until the spring of 1858, and then removed to East Troy, Walworth Co., Wis., where he remained six months. From there he came to Kansas, locating in the city of Leavenworth, November 28, 1858, remaining in this city five and a half years, and working at his trade—that of wagon maker. In the fall of 1863 he removed to Atchison County, where he lived six months, and then removed to his farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Congregational Church of Fairview. He was Treasurer of School District No. 16, Brown County, for six years. He took part in the War of the Rebellion, as a member of Captain I. N. Speer's Company, Twenty-second Regiment Kansas Militia, and enlisted in Walnut Township in October, 1864; served one month and was discharged at Kansas City. He was married in Holmes County, Ohio, May 23, 1852, to Miss Martha Robinett, a native of Ohio. They have nine children living—Christian Frederic, (married to Miss Allie Driblebeis, a native of Ohio). Rosa, Charles W., (married to Miss Hattie Gardner, a native of Kansas), George E., John Frank, William I., Edward C., Jesse Warren and Myrtle Leonora. Maple Grove Stock Farm, as Mr. Joss' fine estate is known, is one of the finest and best improved farms in Brown County. It contains 720 acres; is all enclosed by substantial fences; is divided into bottom, timber and upland; is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by means of wells, springs and Spring Creek, which flows in a southeast direction the farm. The orchards cover ten acres. Orchard No. 1 contains 500 apple, 400 peach, and a number of pear and cherry trees. Orchard No. 2 contains about 300 fruit trees of all varieties. There is also a magnificent maple grove on the property, from which the farm takes its name. The improvements are superb, and include among others, a new and modern built family mansion, containing nine rooms, elegantly furnished, and surrounded by handsome shrubbery, shade trees and evergreens; two tenant houses, one containing four, the other six rooms; a frame barn, 22x50 feet; a combined granary, corn-crib and implement house, 40x52 feet, etc. Mr. J. raises 800 bushels of wheat, 100 bushels of rye, 300 bushels of barley, 500 bushels of oats, 8,000 to 10,000 bushels of corn; cuts from 50 to 60 acres of hay, yearly; has 90 acres seeded down to timothy, clover and blue-grass; feeds two car loads of cattle; keeps 125 fine-grade cattle; 200 head of Poland-China and Berkshire hogs, and 16 head of horses. Mr. Joss is one of the early settlers of Brown; has made his means here, and speaks in high terms of this portion of Kansas. He is an earnest, intelligent and prosperous farmer, and a useful and popular citizen.

THOMAS LAUGHLIN, farmer, Section 32, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in County West Meath, Ireland, in 1808, and lived in his native county until 1828, when he immigrated to America, locating in Pennsylvania where he resided for two years. He then went to New York City, whence he shipped to New Orleans, where he resided one winter, thence to Louisville, Ky., where he remained a short time and then went to Vincennes, Ind., where he resided for twenty years and was engaged in farming, thence he removed to Poweshiek County, Iowa, where he resided until May, 1856, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has ever since resided. He is a member of the Catholic Church. He was married in Wabash County, Ind., in 1835, to Miss Jane Gorland, a native of Miami County, Ohio; she died in 1874. Mr. Laughlin has five children living—Sylvester Thomas, married to Miss Catherine Brown, a native of Pennsylvania; Mary, married to Henry Monroe, a prosperous and influential farmer and an old resident of Brown County; Matthew, married to Miss Ann Goodfellow, a native of England, she died in 1880; and Martha, married to Emery Jaunichs a native of Germany. Mr. L. is one of the "old timers" of Brown County, of which he relates many reminiscences, and now after an industrious and active life is enjoying the evening of his days in the family of his son-in-law, Henry Monroe Esq.

W. C. MEYER, farmer, stock raiser, dealer and feeder, proprietor of the Delaware Stock Farm, east half of Section 10, and west half of northwest quarter and west half of southwest quarter of Section 11, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Frinkville, was born in Hanover, Germany, August 4, 1830, and lived in native country until his mother (his father being dead) immigrated to America and located in Cincinnati, Ohio, where Mr. M. lived with the exception of two years spent in Iowa and Missouri, until the spring of 1858, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. From 1861 to 1868 Mr. Meyer was engaged in freighting on the plains on his own account, principally between Atchison and Denver. He has been married twice. The first marriage took place in Brown County, in July, 1868, to Miss Elizabeth Griffin, a native of England, but whose parents were among the first settlers of Atchison. Three children were the fruit of this marriage—Frank Herschel, Alberta Rose and Leroy Emerson. The second marriage occurred in Brown County, April 12, 1881, to Mrs. Matilda Banning, a native of Illinois. By a former marriage Mrs. Meyer had three children—Ella Sophronia Proctor (married to Cornelius White, a native of Illinois and a resident of Robinson Township, Brown County), John M. Proctor and Effie E. Proctor. Delaware Stock Farm, as Mr. Meyer's magnificent estate is appropriately named, has the Delaware River flowing through the southwest portion of the property. A fine spring branch flowing from north to south the whole length of the farm and a number of excellent springs, and is in short, as well watered and is as fine a stock farm as there is in the State. It contains 480 acres, divided into upland, bottom and timberland, is well fenced—mostly by a handsome Osage orange hedge—and is in a high state of cultivation. Mr. M. also owns twenty acres of prime timber land in Walnut Township, five miles northeast of the home farm. The orchard on the farm covers eight acres, and contains 400 apple and 250 peach trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place, consisting of grapes, blackberries, raspberries, etc., etc. Among the improvements are an elegant stone house, containing seven rooms, with a good cellar, a large stone barn, 42x74 feet, stock stables, sheds and lots, corn cribs, smoke-house, etc., etc. Mr. Meyer devotes his attention chiefly to raising corn, hogs and cattle. He raises from 7,000 to 10,000 bushels of corn yearly, cuts from 30 to 40 acres of millet, 125 acres of hay, sows 25 to 30 acres of rye to pasturage, has 30 acres seeded down to timothy and clover, feeds from 60 to 80 head of cattle, keeps 125 fine grade cattle, 100 to 200 Poland-China hogs and 18 head of horses and mules. There are several quarries of limestone on the property, from which the rock used in the erection of Mr. M.'s fine residence and large barn was obtained. There is also a bank of excellent building sand on the farm. Along the entire north and west ends of the farm extends a row of stately cottonwoods. South of the dwelling is a handsome grove of native timber, which covers thirty acres and contains a great number of burr oak, black walnut, hickory, mulberry, elm and linden trees. Mr. Meyer is one of the old pioneers of this county, is an honorable and honest stock breeder, one of Brown's prosperous and prominent farmers and a good neighbor and citizen.

HENRY MONROE, farmer, stock raiser and feeder, Section 32, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha Co., was born in County Down, Ireland, July 12, 1823, and lived in his native country until May, 1851, when he immigrated to America, and located in McLean County, Ill., where he resided one year, thence he removed to Poweshiek County, Iowa, where he engaged in farming, and where he resided until May 13, 1856, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in what is now Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a member of Central City Lodge, No. 125, I. O. O. F. of Sabetha. He participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company H, Twenty-second Regiment, Kansas Volunteer Militia, and enlisted at Seneca, Nemaha Co., in April, 1864, and was discharged at the same place, November 2, 1864. He was married in Poweshiek County, Iowa, December 27, 1855, to Miss Mary Laughlin, a native of Indiana. They have six children living—Emma, (married to Peter Jones, a native of Iowa, and a resident of Brown County); William, (married to Miss Ella Bruce, a native of Wisconsin); Cicely, (married to Charles Roker, a native of Iowa and a resident of Brown County); Eliza, (married to William Skinner, a native of Kansas, and a resident of Brown County); Henry and Joseph. Mr. Monroe owns a fine stock and grain farm of 640 acres, lying on the Delaware, in Walnut Township. It is divided into timber, bottom and upland, is enclosed by substantial fences and is in a high state of cultivation. The water supply is excellent and consists of wells, springs and Delaware River, which flows through one quarter of the farm. The orchard covers two acres and is well supplied with fruit trees of various varieties. There is also a handsome grove of native timber upon the property. The improvements are first-class in every particular. Among others are a comfortable and cozy frame dwelling, frame stock barn 32x35, stock shed and lots, two large granaries, etc. Mr. M. raises from 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of oats, 7,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn yearly, feeds 60 head of cattle, keeps 80 fine stock cattle, 150 stock hogs, 11 head of horses, has 65 acres of clover and timothy seeded down and cuts from 70 to 80 acres of hay annually. In addition to his farm in Walnut, he also owns 160 acres in Powhattan Township, lying three miles south of the home farm. It has eighty acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture land. Mr. Monroe is one of the early pioneers of this section of the State, is one of the extensive cattle raisers and feeders of Brown County, a prominent and prosperous farmer, a good and useful citizen, and possesses the esteem and confidence of his neighbors.

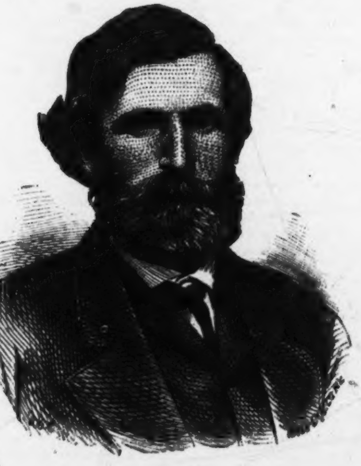


Henry Monroe

SAMUEL NYFELER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 9, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, March 1, 1823, and lived in his native country until 1855, when he immigrated to America, first locating in Holmes County, Ohio, where he lived for four years, and was engaged in farming. In the spring of 1859, he became a citizen of Kansas, locating in the city of Leavenworth, where he lived for two years, and thence removed to Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Evangelical Association. During the Price raid he served for two weeks in the Kansas Volunteer Militia. He was married in 1851, in Berne, Switzerland, to Miss Barbara Scharr, a native of Switzerland. They have seven children living—Samuel, a resident of Brown County, married Miss Emma Moseman, a native of Indiana; Mary, Caroline, married Joseph Robinson, a native of New Jersey, and a resident of Netawaka; Louisa, Edward, Henrietta and Charles. Mr. N. owns a fine upland farm of 240 acres surrounded by a handsome osage hedge and in a good state of cultivation. The farm is supplied with water by a number of excellent wells. The orchard covers one and a half acres, and contains 250 fruit trees of various varieties. The improvements are good, among others are a new and comfortable frame dwelling containing six rooms, new frame barn 34x42 feet, stock stables, granary, corn cribs, smoke house, etc. Mr. N. raises from 400 to 800 bushels of wheat yearly, 200 bushels of rye, 250 bushels of oats, 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn, feeds half a car load of cattle, keeps 35 fine stock cattle, 40 to 50 stock hogs and 11 head of horses. Mr. Nyfeler is an honest, upright and hard working farmer, a prominent, prosperous and useful citizen, and stands high in his community.

ROBERT RHEA, farmer and stock raiser, southeast of Section 31, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Christian County, Ky., July 11, 1827, but lived in his native State only until his eighth year, his parents removing to Cooper County, Mo., where Mr. Rhea resided thirteen years. Thence he removed to Platte County in the same State, where he resided until the fall of 1854, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating near Woodlawn, Nemaha County, where he engaged in farming and where he resided two years. Thence he removed to Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Sabetha Lodge, No. 162, A., F. & A. M., and was one of the charter members of this lodge. He was Constable of Walnut Township five years and a member of the Board of School District, No. 74, Brown County, three years. Mr. Rhea participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company H, (Capt. Aaron McGill), Twenty-second Regiment, Kansas Volunteer Militia, and was enlisted in April, 1864, at Seneca, Nemaha County, and discharged at the same place November 2, 1864. Owing to the exposure and hardships he endured while in the service, Mr. Rhea contracted a disease from which he suffers to-day. He is also a veteran of the Mexican war, having enlisted in May, 1846, in Cooper County, Mo., in a company commanded by Capt. Joseph L. Stevens in the Third Regiment, Missouri Volunteer Infantry. He served one year in this regiment and was discharged at Booneville, Mo., in May, 1847. He was married in Platte County, Mo., October 8, 1850, to Miss Elizabeth Magill, a native of Clay County, Mo. They have had nine children, seven of whom are living—Melissa (married to Richard Blodgett, a native of Ohio, and a resident of Nemaha County); Saline M., Mary Frances (married to Marion Pringle, a native of Iowa, and a resident of Nemaha County); Florence E., Robert, Edward Morrill and Alonzo F. Mr. Rhea owns a fine upland farm on Grasshopper Creek, or Delaware River, as it is now called. It contains 159 acres, is all surrounded by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water, having wells, springs, and the river, which flows through the northeast corner of the farm. The orchard covers two acres and contains 100 apple, fifty peach, and a few Siberian crab trees. The improvements are fair and consist in part of a six-room frame dwelling, stock stable and lots, corn-cribs, etc. Near the house is a handsome grove of native timber. Mr. Rhea devotes his attention principally to raising corn, hogs and cattle. He raises from 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps twenty-five to forty head of stock cattle, forty to fifty hogs, and four head of horses. Mr. Rhea is one of the old pioneers of Kansas, an honest and sturdy farmer and a useful and popular citizen. Pleasant Valley Schoolhouse, District, No. 74, is built on what was once a portion of Mr. Rhea's farm. It is a neat frame structure, was erected in 1880, and cost with furniture, etc., about $600. It has a seating capacity of forty, and is well furnished. The first and present school officers were and are: Robert Rhea, director; Charles Culverhoss, clerk, and Henry Monroe, treasurer. Ira B. Dye is the teacher at present in charge of the school.

F. J. ROBBINS, farmer and stock raiser, Section 20, Township 2, Range 16, P. O. Carson, was born in St. Charles County, Mo., February 28, 1827, where he resided until shortly after the breaking out of the Mexican war, when he became a member of Company B of the Oregon County Battalion of the Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, commanded by Col. Powell, enlisting in St. Charles County, Mo., in June, 1847, and being discharged at Fort Leavenworth in the fall of 1848, while his company was stationed at Fort Kearney. Mr. Robbins received severe injuries from which he suffers to-day. After his discharge from the United States service he returned to Andrew County, Mo., where he resided until May, 1855, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent member of the Congregational Church at Fairview and of Hamlin Lodge, No. 135, A., F. & A. M. He was married in Andrew County, Mo., in 1849, to Miss Martha A. Kersey, a native of Indiana, but for a long time a resident of Kentucky. They have seven children living whose names are—George W., Louisa, married to Irvin Hanson, a native of Maine and a resident of Brown County; B. Frank, a resident of Brown, married to Miss Eva B. Hatfield, a native of Kansas; Abbie, married to Henry Sewell, a native of Ohio and a resident of Brown County; Martha, William and Edward A. Mr. Robbins owns four fine farms in Walnut Township, which altogether comprise 567½ acres. This magnificent estate is all enclosed with hedge, wire and board fences, is mostly in cultivation, and is well supplied with water. The home farm contains 240 acres, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well improved. There is a fine nine-roomed frame dwelling surrounded by evergreens, shrubbery and shade trees; stock stables, sheds and lots; granary, corn cribs, etc., etc. North of the dwelling is a handsome maple grove. Mr. Robbins devotes his time chiefly to raising corn and hogs. He grows 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps a dozen head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 Poland-China and Berkshire hogs, and 12 head of horses. He is a veteran of the Mexican war, an old pioneer of Brown, a thorough farmer, a substantial citizen, and is highly esteemed in his neighborhood.



J. S. Tyler

J. S. TYLER, farmer, fruit and stock raiser, Section 4, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Fairview, was born in November, 1825, in Griswold, New London Co., Conn., and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year when he removed to near Dubuque, Iowa, where he resided two years and was engaged in lead mining. Thence he went to New Orleans for the benefit of his health and where he resided one winter. He then moved to Harding, Calhoun Co., Ill., where he resided six years and was engaged in the lumber business and in farming. On the 11th day of April, 1856, he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent and zealous member of the Baptist Church. He was Assessor of Brown County one term; Commissioner of the same county two terms and Postmaster of Tyler's Post Office ten years. He participated in the War of the Rebellion, during the "Price raid," as a member of Capt. Colman's Company, Twenty-second Regiment, Kansas Volunteer Militia, and was enlisted in Nemaha County in the fall of 1864, served three weeks and was discharged at Kansas City. He was married in June, 1866 in the city of Leavenworth, to Miss Harriet Chase, a native of Maine. They have four children, whose names are—Augustus H., James C., Lois and John H. Deacon Tyler owns one, among the largest and most productive estates in Brown County. It contains 800 acres; is all enclosed by substantial fences, all in cultivation and well supplied with water by means of wells, springs and the Delaware River, which flows through the center of the farm. There is a large and thrifty orchard on the premises, which covers twelve acres and contains 1,200 fruit trees of various kinds. There is also a small vineyard on the farm. The property is well timbered, having eighty acres of elm, oak and walnut trees. The improvements are good and consist of a comfortable and cosy frame dwelling, containing eleven rooms, a frame barn 20x26, corn cribs, stock sheds and lots, etc., etc. Mr. T. devotes his attention chiefly to growing corn, fruit, cattle and hogs. He raises 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn; 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of apples; feeds two car-loads of cattle; keeps 100 head of stock cattle, 150 to 200 Chester White, Berkshire and Poland-China hogs and eight head of horses and mules. Deacon Tyler and his amiable and accomplished wife are among the old settlers of Kansas. They have grown up with the State and rejoice with all old pioneers in the present prosperity of the commonwealth. Mrs. Tyler taught the first public school in Brown County and subsequently taught a large public school composed of colored pupils in South Leavenworth. She was engaged as a teacher in the public schools of the State at various times for six years.

REZEN SEWELL, farmer and stock raiser, Section 22, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Fairview, was born September 30, 1851, in Pike County, Ohio, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1859 when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Walnut Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a consistent and zealous member of the Congregational Church. Mr. Sewell's brother, Joseph Marion Sewell, was born in Benton County, Ind., August 28, 1853, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1867 when he came to Kansas, where he joined his fortunes with his brother Rezen. Like his brother he is a prominent member of the Congregational Church. The Sewell Brothers are the fortunate owners of "Bellevue" farm. It contains 350 acres and is undoubtedly one of the finest farms in the township. It is substantially enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water, having wells, cisterns, and Spring Creek flowing through the southeast portion of the farm. The property has good improvements, among which are a five-roomed frame cottage, stock stables and sheds, granaries, corn cribs, smoke house, etc., etc. There is a young and thrifty orchard and abundance of small fruits of different varieties on the farm. They raise from 1,000 to 2,000 bushels of wheat, 200 to 300 bushels of rye, 500 to 600 bushels of oats, 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of corn yearly; feed a car load of cattle, keep 50 to 75 grade cattle, 200 Poland-China hogs, and a dozen head of horses and mules; and have 100 acres of their farm seeded down in timothy and clover. The Messrs. Sewell had but limited means when they came to Kansas, but now, by their industry, intelligence, economy and pluck have made a handsome competency in Brown County, of which they speak in the highest terms. They are honorable, upright men, and good and useful citizens.

MRS. SARAH SMITH, widow of Isaac R. Smith, farmer, Section 5, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Fairview. Mr. Smith was born in Indiana in 1824, but left his native State at an early age. His mother, after the death of his father, removing to McLean County, Ill., where Mr. S. resided until the fall of 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Robinson Township, Brown County, where he lived about five years and was engaged in farming. Thence he removed to near Frankfort, Marshall County, where he resided until August 27, 1862, when he entered the Union Army as a member of Company G, Thirteenth Regiment, Kansas Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Marysville, Kan., and being discharged for disability contracted while in the United States service, and which subsequently caused his death, March 19, 1863, at Springfield, Mo. After his discharge he returned to his home in Marshall County where he resided until his death, January 8, 1864. He was a brave and faithful soldier and died in his fortieth year. He participated in the battle of Prairie Grove. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. S.'s maiden name was Foster, a native of Indiana and was married to Mr. Smith in 1846, in McLean County, Ill. They had ten children, eight of whom are living and whose names are: Elizabeth, married to George Mize, a native of Kentucky and a resident of Brown County; Harriet, married to Herman Schubert, a native of Wisconsin, and a resident of Brown County; Susan, married to Augustus Albright, a native of Germany, and a resident of Marshall County; Margaret, married to Aaron Houts, a native of Indiana and a resident of Dakota Territory; Eli, a resident of Marshall County, married to Miss Salma Schubert, a native of Indiana; Robert, a resident of Saline County, married to Miss Ruth Nichols, a native of Indiana; Abraham Lincoln, a resident of Brown County, married to Miss Belle Morrison, a native of Kansas; and Isaac R., Jr. Mrs. Smith owns a nice little bottom farm of forty acres. It is all enclosed with substantial fences; is in a good state of cultivation and the supply of water is unequalled. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the property containing 150 apple, 100 peach and a number of cherry and plum trees. The improvements are good and consist among others, of a new and comfortable frame dwelling, stock stable and lots, etc. Mrs. S. is assisted in her farming operations by her sons. Attention on this farm is given principally to raising corn and hogs; 1,000 bushels of corn are grown annually, and a couple of dozen of stock hogs and four head of horses are kept.

W. A. WAGONER, farmer, P. O. Capioma, was born in 1847, in Knox County, Ohio; reared on the paternal farm; educated in Frederick, and enlisted from school in 1861, as a private in the Eighty-first Ohio. With the alert and able Sherman, he with his regiment fought at Shiloh, Iuka, Corinth, about Vicksburg, at Jackson, Miss., and all through the Atlanta campaign. While on the way to Savannah his time expired and on the capitulation of that city he returned to his Ohio home for a time, but during 1865 he came to Kansas. He settled on his present fine 360 acre farm in 1872. Has erected a large and substantial farm house, planted hedges, orchard and forest timbers, thus laying foundations that will eventually secure him a life of peace and plenty. He married Miss Hannah A. Dissette, a native of Kingston, Canada, and their two children, Joseph and Mabel, were both born in Kansas.

PADONIA.

Padonia, now a station on the Missouri Pacific Railway, five miles north of Hiawatha, was probably named in honor of Jessie Padon, who lived, prior to 1862, in a log hut on the bank of the Walnut. Its first settler was E. R. Cornelison, who took a claim on April 3 1854. Although a town in name, Padonia is now merely a thick settlement of farm houses. A school was built in this township in 1858, by the Padonia Town Company, a private corporation; this school is now included in District No. 13, of the public schools. The post office at Padonia was established October 20, 1857, and Orville Root was the first postmaster.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

EDDIE A. CHASE, general manager of the extensive merchandise business of E. Chase & Son, was born June 24, 1864, in Brown County, Kan. He is the son of Elbridge and Almira Chase, his mother's family name Grover. They came to Kansas in the spring of 1859, locating in Hiawatha Township, Brown County, but shortly afterward removed to Padonia, where his father engaged in farming and stock raising until the summer of 1882, when he embarked in his present business. They have a store room, 50x20, two floors of which are all filled with a complete stock of general merchandise. They are also extensively engaged in shipping grain and live stock.

EDWARD R. CORNELISON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 18, Township 1, Range 17, P. O. Reserve, was born in Madison County, Ky., January 8, 1826, living in his native State until the spring of 1847, when he removed to Andrew County, Mo., where he resided until March 18, 1855, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Padonia Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Christian Church. He has been Treasurer of Padonia Township one year, and Justice of the Peace of the same township six years. He was married in Madison County, Ky., November 26, 1846, to Elizabeth A. Gillespie, a native of Kentucky. They have four children living, whose names are: John F., Robert W., married to Miss Lizzie Nutting, a native of Kentucky; Henry G. and William J. Esquire Cornelison owns a fine farm of 480 acres, lying on Walnut Creek It is mostly upland; is all enclosed; is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with water. The orchard covers five acres and contains 250 apple, 300 peach and 100 cherry trees. There is 100 acres of native timber on the farm, comprising oak, elm, hickory and walnut trees. The improvements consist in part of a frame and log house, frame barn, 24x40, corn crib, smoke house, etc., etc. Mr. Cornelison raises from 1,200 to 1,500 bushels of small grain, 3,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn, cuts fifty acres of hay, keeps forty to fifty head of stock cattle, 100 hogs and ten head of horses and mules. Padonia Christian Church is built on the northeast corner of Mr. Cornelison's farm. It was completed and dedicated in September, 1881, and cost with furniture, etc., about $2,200. Rev. M. F. Redilen was the first, and Rev. William Branch is the present pastor. The membership is seventy-five and consists of some of the most prominent and influential citizens and their families, of Padonia and Hamlin townships.

SAMUEL I. DANES, proprietor of Padonia Flouring Mills, Section 30, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Lancaster County, Pa., January 16, 1830. Was reared on a farm, and previous to coming to Kansas, was engaged in merchandising and stock dealing in Miami County, Ohio. He enlisted with the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Ohio National Guards, and was mustered into the United States service in 1862, and served until the close of the war. In 1865 he came West, to Brownville, Neb., where he improved a farm of 160 acres, which he sold afterward for $7,000. He subsequently improved several farms in Johnson and Nemaha counties, and in 1866 was married at Nemaha City to Miss Lydia E. Blair. In 1876 Mr. Danes came to Kansas, purchased the mill property, put in new machinery, and has since operated the same. It is situated on the west bank of Walnut Creek, and is the only water-power mill in the county, having a fall of thirteen and one-half feet. He has two twenty-inch wheels, three run of buhrs, and a capacity for making thirty barrels of flour daily, which he sends to Hiawatha, Falls City, Neb., Hamlin, White Cloud, and various other distributing points. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church.

JOHN E. DAVIS, farmer, Section 5, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of Ohio, born December 8, 1834, in Morgan County. In 1855 he removed to Wisconsin, and was extensively engaged in farming in Vernon County for a number of years. In 1862 he became a participant in the Rebellion, volunteering with the Twenty-fifth Wisconsin Infantry, Company A, and serving in the same till the close of the war. During the fall of 1869 he came to Kansas, and located one mile west of his present farm, to which he removed in the fall following. This he has improved from wild, unbroken prairie, and brought it to its present perfection for agricultural interest, being proprietor of 120 acres. Mr. Davis is serving his third term as Treasurer of Padonia Township, and is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, of the Masonic order. He and his wife are original members of the Christian Church of Hiawatha, while he is an elder of that society. They were married in Wisconsin, January 1, 1860; her maiden name, Mary A. Williams. She was formerly from Ohio.

DAVID EVANS, farmer and stock raiser, Section 32, P. O. Hiawatha, is a native of South Wales, born May 30, 1819, in County of Carmarthen. Here Mr. Evans received a common school education, and was afterward engaged in agricultural pursuits there. In 1848 he was married to Miss Annie Bowen, a native of the same county as himself. In June, 1869, he came to the United States, and became a resident of Brown County, Kan., and purchased over one thousand acres of land in Padonia Township. This he improved, but has since disposed of nearly one-half of it, leaving him a fine improved farm of 500 acres. Mr. Evans was the founder of what is known as the Welsh Settlement of Padonia Township, consisting of ten families, all of whom came to this country through his influence, and constitute the best citizens and substantial farmers of this township. He has been connected with the Baptist Church for more than thirty years, and was one of the first members of the First Baptist Church at Hiawatha, and has served in the capacity of deacon ever since he came to this State. Mr. Evans is one of the enterprising men of Brown County, and always takes a prominent part in the advancement of its best interests.

THOMAS HART, farmer and stock raiser, Section 17, Township 1, Range 17, P. O. Reserve, was born February 24, 1826, in Richland County, Ohio, where, however, he resided but a short time his parents removing to Morgan County, Mo., where they resided two years and then removed to Andrew County, in the same State where Mr. Hart resided until August 20, 1856, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Padonia Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent and consistent member of the Christian Church. He is also a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, A., F. & A. M. He took part in the war of the Rebellion during the Price raid, as a member of Captain Laycock's company, Kansas Volunteer Militia, enlisting in the fall of 1864 in Padonia Township, serving a short time and being discharged at Atchison. He has been Treasurer of School District No. 33, Brown County, fifteen years. He was married in Andrew County, Mo., September 2, 1847, to Miss Nancy J. Gillispie, a native of Kentucky. They have seven children living, William Henry, (married to Miss Lucinda Hanseberry, a native of Iowa,) Thomas J., (married to Miss Hannah C. Drake, a native of Ohio,) Mary Jane, (married to H. M. Stewart, a native of Missouri,) Jackson, married to Miss Florence Brown, (a native of Maryland,) Sarah E., (married to John M. Davis, a native of Kentucky,) Harvey W. and Perry. Mr. Hart owns a fine upland farm of 520 acres. It is all enclosed, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by means of springs, wells, Hart's Branch and Walnut Creek, which flows in a northerly direction through the farm. The orchard covers five acres and contains 500 peach, 500 apple and a number of cherry, plum and pear trees. The improvements are first-class, and embrace among others an elegant nine-roomed frame dwelling, surrounded by handsome shade trees, shrubbery and evergreens, a large frame barn 40x40, granaries, corn cribs and other outbuildings. Mr. H. grows 1,500 bushels of small grain, 10,000 bushels of corn, and cuts eighty acres of hay yearly, feeds four car loads of cattle, keeps fifty to seventy-five fine grade cattle, 150 head of hogs, and twenty-five head of horses and mules. He is an old pioneer of Brown, a prominent and prosperous farmer, a useful and honored citizen, and an honest, upright man.

DAVID HILLYER, Justice of the Peace, farmer and stock raiser, Section 24, Township 1, Range 17, P. O. Jonesville, was born in Mahoning County, Ohio, January 24, 1840, and lived in his native State until his thirteenth year, when his parents removed to Whiteside County, Ill., where Esquire H. lived until the spring of 1868, when he removed to Richardson County, Neb., where he lived two years and was engaged in farming. From Nebraska he removed to Padonia Township, Brown County, in this State, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Church of the United Brethren and of Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He is Justice of the Peace of Padonia Township. He took part in the war of the Rebellion and enlisted as a private in August, 1862, at Sterling, Ill., in Company B, Seventy-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, being promoted to First Sergeant ere his discharge, which occurred in July, 1865, at Chicago. He was present at thirty-two engagements, among which were Nolansville, Knobb Gap, Perryville, Lancaster, Stone River, Liberty Gap, Lookout Mountain, Rossville, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold, the battles at and around Atlanta, Franklin and Nashville. He was married in 1861 in Whiteside County, Ill., to Miss Lydia Ann Campbell, a native of New York. They have three children, Florence, (married to John R. Patterson, a native of Geary City,) Alfred A. and Maud. Esquire H. has a fine upland farm of 160 acres. It is all enclosed with substantial fences and has 110 acres in cultivation, the remainder being pasture land. The water supply is excellent and consists of a number of fine springs and a branch of Lost Creek. The orchard covers three acres and contains 125 apple and 400 peach trees. The improvements are good and comprise a comfortable house, frame barn 26x28 feet, granary, corn crib, etc. He raises from 600 to 800 bushels of wheat, 75 to 100 bushels of rye, 300 of oats, 2,500 bushels of corn, keeps 10 to 15 head of stock cattle and 40 to 50 head of stock hogs. Mr. Hillyer is a brave veteran of the last war, a successful farmer, and an honored magistrate of his township, and has a high standing in his community for sterling character and worth.

AUSTIN W. HOYT, farmer, Section 5, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Washington County, Me., where he was engaged both in the lumbering business and at farming. In 1869 he came to Kansas, purchased 160 acres of land adjacent to the place where he now lives, and built the first house on the prairie. His present farm he has improved from wild prairie and has now one of the finest farms in the county, together with a good, comfortable residence. Mr. Hoyt has been to Texas and also made one trip to California, from which he was obliged to return, however, to take charge of his brother's farm, who was killed by the falling in of the hay-shed on him. He has lost two sisters, and another brother, who was a Congregational minister for a number of years. His mother is still living and a member of the same denomination in which her son was a minister. Mr. Hoyt was married in 1880, to Miss Lizzie Hoyt, a native of the same State as himself. He is a member of the Masonic order, both in Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, and Mount Horeb, Chapter No. 43.

TIMOTHY JONES, farmer and stock raiser, Section 2, P. O. Hiawatha, was born December 13, 1831, in County of Cardigan, District Cellan, near Lampeter, in South Wales. Here he received a common school education and pursued farming until 1871, when he immigrated to the United States. During the same year came to Kansas with very limited means, but a strong determination to better his circumstances, and how successful he has been in this undertaking will be seen further on in this sketch. He first settled on Lost Creek, Padonia Township, Brown County, and lived in a dug-out. In 1875 Mr. Jones purchased the farm upon which he now lives and is proprietor of 480 acres of land in this farm and 400 in Nemaha County. He is extensively engaged in stock raising and has 400 head of cattle and 500 sheep. Some of the latter are of the very fine grades of Southdown and Cotswold and were brought from Canada and Kentucky. During the spring of 1876 Mr. Jones erected a cheese factory for the purpose of manufacturing this article from the milk in his own dairy. This was the first one erected in Padonia Township, in which is consumed the milk from 100 of his cows, the production being about 200 pounds of cheese per annum per head. By several years trial of this scheme he has proved it to be as profitable an industry in this country as in South Wales, where it is one of the chief enterprises. Mr. Jones is a gentleman of strong will and great force of character, and by always giving strict attention to the business of to-day, has proved what one may do with little or no capital if he only has the required tact and perseverance and is not too easily discouraged. He was married in his native country, in 1860, to Miss Mary Jones, whose birthplace was in the same county and parish as his own. His father's family were all members of the Unitarian Church. Although he was born in and for many years a resident of Wales, Mr. Jones would not leave this country to return there to live under any consideration, but would be very much pleased to have some of his old friends and neighbors come here to live. His family consists of nine children, Anna, now Mrs. Aaron Hall, of Hiawatha; Mary, married to T. P. Evans, of Nemaha County; Sarah, Jane, Maggie, Rachel A., Morris, Elizabeth and Ellen.

CURTIS A. McCOY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 33, P. O. Hiawatha, came originally from Harrison County, Ohio, January 7, 1852. He, however, subsequently moved to Tama County, Iowa, with his parents, where his father, Thomas McCoy, was a contractor for the construction of the Central R. R. During the winters of 1865, '66 and '67, Curtis was a student at Cornell College, Iowa, and in the spring of 1868, came to Kansas, and settled with his parents on Section 4, Padonia Township. Here he lived until June, 1879, when he was married to Miss Eliza J. Tully, of St. Joe, Mo. He then removed to the place upon which he now lives, which he had previously purchased in 1873, at which time it was wild prairie. To-day it presents a very different appearance, being all under cultivation, with fine improvements, and surrounded with a beautiful hedge fence, and having a large orchard in a fine condition. He has one son—Thomas T. His father was born in Harrison County, Ohio, March 19, 1828. He was reared on a farm, and received his education in the public schools of that early day. He was married, in 1851, to Miss Marinda Anderson, of Ohio, and subsequently came West, as above stated. He has a fine farm of 160 acres on Section 4, Padonia Township, and is one of the thorough practical farmers of Brown County. He is a member of the Masonic Order, Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35. Mr. McCoy and wife are the parents of four children—Curtis A. (whose name appears at the head of this sketch), Hannah, Susan I. and Thomas A.

JOHN P. McKNIGHT, farmer and stock raiser, Section 5, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Brown County, Ohio, March 21, 1839. He received a common school education, and when thirteen years of age, was offered a position as clerk, which he accepted, and subsequently held until he arrived at the age of manhood. At the breaking out of the Rebellion he became a participant, and for nine months was aid on staff duty with Gens. Ward and Harrison, after which he was nine months on the Signal Corps with Capt. Bachtel. Altogether he served in the Rebellion three years, then returned to McLean County, Ill., where he followed farming and merchandising up to the time of his emigrating to Kansas. This occurred in the fall of 1870, and he settled here on an unimproved farm of 160 acres. This has been transformed, however, to a thrifty, well-conducted farm, entirely surrounded by fence, mostly hedge, and good improvements in the shape of residence, barns, etc. Mr. McKnight belongs to the Masonic order, both in Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, and Mount Horeb Chapter, No. 43, being past master of the former society. Was married in Illinois, in 1860, to Miss Mary E. Vanderbilt, of Pennsylvania. They have a family of eight children—George C., Walter S., John P., William E., Thomas E., Ida, Grace and Charles F. Mr. McKnight and his wife are connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hiawatha.

LEWIS MORGAN, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Hiawatha, was born January 19, 1819, in County of Carmarthen, South Wales. Here he followed the occupation of farming, and in July, 1844, was married to Miss Sarah Bowen. During the spring of 1873, they came to the United States; their destination was Brown County, Kan., where three of their children had preceded them. The subject of this sketch first purchased eighty acres of land, and has added to it until he and his children are proprietors of 720 acres in Padonia Township. It is fine rolling prairie land, and 160 acres are in pasture for grazing of stock, as he is engaged quite largely in stock raising, and has on hand about sixty head of graded cattle. Mr. Morgan is a member of the Church of England, while his wife is of the Baptist persuasion, and an original member of the Welsh Baptist Church in Padonia Township. They are the parents of nine children—William, Hannah, John, David, Rees, Daniel, Annie, Isaac and Sarah. After Mr. Morgan had got nicely settled and his lands paid for, he, in company with his son Daniel and some of his neighbors, paid a visit to his native country, starting in January and returning in June of 1882. Although born in, and for many years a resident of, South Wales, he is an evident admirer of Kansas, and was glad to return to the country of his adoption.

JESSE A. WORLEY, farmer, Section 3, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Harrison County, Ohio, September 21, 1852. Here he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in February, 1872, he immigrated to Kansas, and became a resident of Brown County very soon after his arrival here, and during the summer following, settled on the place where he now resides. This consists of eighty acres of very fine land, well adapted for farming purposes, and is all in an advanced stage of cultivation. Mr. Worley was married, in 1872, to Ella, daughter of Jacob Scouten, one of the pioneers of Kansas, who settled in Brown County as early as 1857.

MORRILL.

Morrill is located in the west portion of Brown County, on the St. Joseph & Western Railway, ten miles from Hiawatha. Although settled soon after the railway was completed the town was not laid out until February 27, 1878. The land occupied by the town was the property of T. J. Elliott, who on May 6, 1867, came to this part of the county and erected a sod house where his residence now stands and the same fall purchased the land of the town site. At this time there was no settlement within a radius of many miles. A Sac and Fox trail ran a short distance west of the town and the mounds of two of Jim Lane's old forts were still visible a few miles away. Antelope and elk were often seen and a coyote den was thriving in the east part of the present town.

The town site as originally platted contained forty lots, each 50x100 feet. Two years later Mr. Elliott presented the town with a first and second addition, the latter containing ground for a public square. For a number of years after the completion of the St. Joseph & Western Railway a spur was all that was granted the town, but in 1877 the company erected a depot and caused all trains to stop at this point. T. J. Elliott acted as station agent and Miss Nettie Howe as telegraph operator.

The first house in town was a 12x14 occupied by E. Hani, who is still a resident of the place. The first store was that of the Farmers' Co-operative Association, located on the present hotel site. Upon the abandonment of this store a building was erected by Reid & Mickey upon the site of the former store and used as a general store until incorporated into Smith's hotel.

The first birth in Morrill was that of a son of B. H. Anmiller; the first marriage that of Reuben Ridley and Elizabeth Ryan; the first death that of Miss Sarah Dyke.

The first physician who located here was A. H. Clarke. He was soon succeeded by S. Miner, and later by the present resident physicians W. C. Cecil and L. M. Foster.

The first Postmaster was S. R. Myers, who had his office in the co-operative store. He was followed by J. T. Mickey, the location of the office remaining unchanged until 1878, when D. A. Vanderpool was appointed and removed it to his place of business, where it still remains.

The first hotel in the town was the Smith House, opened in 1879 by Leonard Smith. The house was sold about a year later to John McCleary, who in turn retired after a year's business and was followed by W. P. Winton, the present landlord.

The first shipment of stock from this place was made in 1877, a load of hogs being placed upon a tier of hay bales.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The first school near Morrill was located on Poney Creek and taught in 1858-59 by William Hunter, and later by J. Boyce. The first public school was taught in 1864, in a log schoolhouse on the farm now owned by Mr. George Clark. When the school district was first organized, two families supplied all the scholars—fourteen in number. There were but three heads of families in the district, and perforce they constituted the board. In giving notice of election, posters were stuck up at convenient places on the farm, and the form necessary was completed.

A school was taught for some time prior to the organization of the town, at a point just outside the present town limits. The school building was 24x30 feet. The present schoolhouse was built in 1878; is 28x48 feet, two stories in height, and cost $1,900. It has two departments. The first teacher in the new school was Miss Kate Herbert, who had entire charge for one year. The second school year, Miss M. Belts was made Miss Herbert's assistant. J. M. Reid and Miss M. Obenour were appointed in 1880, and retained until 1882.

The Morrill High School was built in 1882, by J. M. Reid, who opened it as a private academy, in September, of that year. The building is 40x50 feet and has two stories and a belfry, surmounted by an observatory. It stands on a commanding elevation at the northwest of the town.

Franklin Schoolhouse, District No. 52, Brown County, was erected in 1872. It is a neat and handsome structure and has a seating capacity of fifty. The first officers were: H. Fulton, director; John Beamer, treasurer; and F. M. Starns, clerk. The present officers are: John Beamer, director; E. L. Miner, treasurer; and Aaron McGill, clerk. The building is well supplied with modern school furniture and appliances, and cost, as it stands with furniture, about $1,600. The average daily attendance is twenty-five. The house was erected by issuing bonds, which were sold at ninety-five per cent.; the first bonds ever sold in Brown County for that price.

Probably the first religious services held near Morrill were those of the Brethren at Work, or Dunkards, who met as early as 1870. At the present time they have no church in the town, but a neat building, erected in 1881, a few miles away. It is 40x60 feet, with a basement, and cost $2,500. Their first preacher was Rev J. J. Lichty, who was followed by Revs. Daniel Fry, Jonathan Warner and the present pastor, W. J. H. Bauman. A Sabbath school was organized in April, 1882, under the superintendence of John Burnworth, and has an attendance of over sixty.

Morrill Methodist Episcopal Church.—The society connected with this church was organized in 1878, and the building was completed and dedicated in August, 1880. It is a neat and handsome frame structure, and cost, with the furniture, fine chapel organ, etc., about $2,000. Its seating capacity is 200 and its membership is composed of thirty-five of the prominent and leading citizens of Morrill and vicinity. Services are held regularly every Sabbath.

The first pastor of the congregation was the Rev. Z. S. Rhon. The first trustees of the church were: George Wharton, Hiram Fulton, David Crewes W. L. Doughty and Capt. Thornton J. Elliott. The first Sabbath-school superintendent was W. L. Doughty; the first organist of the church was Mrs. Laura Hammond, nee Offnett. The trustees of the church at present are: Albert Cottrell, Samuel Bell, A. K. Twidwell and Gillam Cox. A. W. Stewart is class leader, and Albert Cottrell, A. W. Stewart, William Offnett and Miss Henrietta Middleswart are the stewards. The pastor at present in charge of the congregation is the Rev. J. W. Graham, a native of Patrick County, Va., who was born and reared a Methodist, and who had the courage to maintain his creed in his native State during the dark and bloody days of the Rebellion.

Christian Church.—The society belonging to, or forming, this church was organized March 13, 1882, by Elder J. W. Kelsey as Evangelist. Immediately after the organization of the Church society steps were taken to erect a house of worship. The building was commenced and completed in the year 1882, being dedicated in November of that year. The first pastor was Elder C. H. Pierce. He continued in charge until February, 1883, when he resigned to take charge of work in District No. 1. J. W. Elliott and L. M. Foster were the first and are the present elders, and D. A. Vanderpool and John M. Reid were the first and are the present deacons. The trustees are: D. A. Vanderpool, treasurer, John M. Reid, and George L. Parker, clerk. The church building is a handsome frame structure, neatly furnished and in modern style, and when fully completed will cost $3,000. The society numbers about fifty members, composed of some of the most influential citizens of Morrill and vicinity. Elder J. W. Kelsey is the present pastor, and services are held regularly every Lord's day.

Morrill Lodge, No. 187, I. O. of O. F. was instituted and dispensation granted by the Grand Lodge of the State, June 15, 1881, and charter granted October 12, of the same year. The charter members were composed of the following named gentlemen: D. A. Vanderpool, Joseph Kirk, T. T. Myers, W. L. Hammond, W. Brockhoff and Nathan Jones. The first officers were: D. A. Vanderpool, N. G.; Joseph Kirk, V. G.; W. L. Hammond, Sec'y; T. T. Meyers, Treas.; Henry Stafford, warden; B. Haldeman, conductor; George Roberts, R. S. to N. G.; A. W. Stewart, L. S. to N. G.; W. S. Aumiller, R. S. to V. G.; U. J. Tucker, L. S. to V. G.; W. Brockhoff, inside guard; R. Huxtable, outside guard; G. Cox, R. S. S.; W. C. Cecil, L. S. S.; G. L. Parker, chaplain. The lodge holds regular meetings every Wednesday night in their handsomely furnished hall, corner of Main and Roxanna streets. It has thirty-three members, composed of some of the foremost citizens of Morrill and vicinity. The lodge is in a good condition, financially; owns their furniture, paraphernalia, etc., and has money loaned out at interest. The present officers are: W. L. Hammond, N. G.; W. S. Aumiller, V. G.; H. C. Hamilton, R. S.; Z. T. Stewart, P. S.; D. A. Vanderpool, Treas.; T. P. Gordon, R. S. to N. G.; G. Cox, L. S. to N. G.; R. Huxtable, R. S. to V. G.; E. K. Wharton, L. S. to V. G.; James O'Donnell, warden; Nathan Jones, conductor; W. C. Cecil, I. G.; B. Haldeman, O. G.; A. W. Stewart, chaplain. The past grands of this lodge are: D. A. Vanderpool, Joseph Kirk, Henry Stafford and Nathan Jones.

The Morrill Cornet Band was organized in December, 1879, with twelve pieces, under the leadership of F. Hani. The band now numbers nine pieces and is under the same leader. It has on many occasions furnished music for other places, but is held together more by the love of music than desire for pecuniary profit. Rehearsals take place every Saturday night. The instruments owned by the band are valued at over $300.

Morrill Elevator, No. 1, was erected in the year 1879, by Messrs. I. N. Speer and Thornton J. Elliott. It was first operated for the space of two years by I. N. Speer. The firm of Speer & Co. then operated it until 1882, when the present proprietors, Speer & Hulburt, assumed the management. The elevator complete, as it stands to-day, cost $2,000. Its capacity is 17,000 bushels, and its working capacity is about five cars per day. Mr. R. B. Gibbs is the present superintendent of this elevator, and has been in charge seven months, and during that time has handled 75,000 bushels of grain of all kinds.

The town now has four general stores, two drug, one hardware and one furniture store, an hotel, livery stable and elevator. Its population is two hundred and twenty-five

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—MORRILL TOWNSHIP.

JOHN BEAMER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 6, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, March the 16th, 1834, and his parents removed from there to Van Wert County in 1839, where he resided until 1859, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Nemaha County, where he lived for three years. He then returned to his former home in Ohio, where he resided until 1867, when he returned to Kansas, locating in Miami County, where he resided for two years; removed from there to Nemaha County, where he remained for one year, and finally he purchased a farm and settled, in 1870, in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He has been a member of the Board of School District No. 52, Brown County, for ten years. Mr. Beamer was married in Van Wert County, Ohio, April the 25th, 1858, to Miss Margaret Hudspeth, a native of Philadelphia, Pa. They have one child, a daughter, whose name is Mary E. Mr. Beamer owns a fine upland farm on the Morrell and Sabetha road, two miles from the latter city. The farm is enclosed by a handsome osage orange hedge; is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by means of wells and spring. There is a young and thrifty orchard, and a fine grove of young willows on the place. The improvements are new and first-class. Among which are the comfortable and cosy nine-roomed frame dwelling, with its large stately shade trees overshadowing it. A new and convenient frame barn, 20x36, with fourteen-foot posts. A new and combined granary, corn-crib and wagon shed, smoke house, etc. Mr. Beamer devotes his time chiefly to raising corn, wheat, rye and oats, hogs and cattle. He raises from 3,000 to 5,000 bushels of grain of various kinds; keeps from 35 to 40 fine stock cattle; 30 to 40 stock hogs, and 8 head of horses. Mr. Beamer is an honest and industrious farmer; a prominent and useful citizen, and is popular in his neighborhood.

JOHN R. BLANCHETT, veterinary surgeon, proprietor of Morrill livery, and dealer in fine horses, was born in what is now Arostook County, Me., April 19, 1837, and lived in his native State until his fifteenth year, when he joined his parents, who had preceded him, in Kankakee County, Ill., where Mr. B. resided until August 11, 1862, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company B, One Hundred and Thirteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He was enlisted in Kankakee City, Ill., and was discharged at Chicago, Ill., July 3, 1865. He participated in the battles of Tallahatchie, Ala., Arkansas Post, Black River, Chickasaw Bayou, Siege of Vicksburg, Colliersville, Tenn., Chewalla, Tenn., Guntown, and other minor engagements. At the last named battle Mr. B was captured by the rebel forces under Maj. Gen. Forrest, and was taken to Andersonville, where he was confined however only for a short time, having managed to make his escape from the stockade, and finally reaching the Union lines at Memphis, Tenn. At the time of his capture Mr. B. was one of the color guards of his regiment, and was engaged in attending to the wants of Lieutenant Conway, Adjutant of his regiment, who was mortally wounded in this engagement. After his discharge from the United States service Mr. B. returned to his home in Kankakee County, Ill., where he staid a little over a year, and then on the 28th day of March, 1867, became a resident of Kansas, locating in what is now Morrill Township, Brown County, where he resided twelve years, and where he was engaged in farming. At the expiration of this time he removed to the town of Morrill, where he has resided since. He was Constable of Morrill Township for twelve years, Road Supervisor of the same township eight years, and Clerk of School District No. 10, Brown County, six years. He was married in Hiawatha, August, 1870, to Mrs. Mahala E. McDowell, a native of Kentucky. They have had four children, three of whom are living—Elmer A., Clement E., (died September 9, 1880), Martha E. and Tabitha Jane. By a former marriage Mr. B. had one child, a daughter, named Kittie, who is married to Theophilus Lanning, a native of Somerset County, Pa., and a resident of Morrill Township. Mr. Blanchett owns a choice valley farm on Pony Creek, four and one-half miles northwest of Morrill. The farm contains 180 acres, has 160 acres enclosed with hedge and wire fence, has 117 acres in cultivation, and sixty-three acres in pasture and timber land, and is well watered by wells, springs, and by Pony Creek, and one of its tributaries. There is a thrifty orchard on the place, which covers about three acres, and contains seventy-five bearing apple and 300 peach trees. The buildings on the property are good, and consist of a comfortable frame dwelling, stock stable, good granary, 14x14 feet, corn crib, 14x48 feet, etc. The wheat raised on this farm for a number of years past has averaged twenty-two and one-half bushels to the acre, oats sixty bushels, and corn fifty bushels. In front and on each side of the dwelling is a magnificent maple grove, which covers about three acres, and contains 300 trees. Owing to the fact of his being engaged in other business, which demands all his time and care, Mr. B. will sell this farm, which is undoubtedly one of the finest in the township, to a cash purchaser, cheap. Mr. Blanchett is a live and driving business man, and keeps a well stocked livery, feed and sale stable. In addition to managing this business, his services are frequently called into requisition by his neighbors as veterinary surgeon, in which art he is reputed to be very successful.

W. C. CECIL, M. D., physician and surgeon, was born in Hancock County, Ill., November 5, 1850, and resided in his native State until 1879, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in the town of Morrill, Brown County, where he has resided since. In 1867, Dr. Cecil commenced reading medicine with Dr. W. D. Wade, an eminent practitioner of Plymouth, Hancock Co., Ill. After reading medicine in the office of his preceptor three years, he attended the Eclectic Medical College in Cincinnati, Ohio, one session. He then commenced the practice of medicine at Basco, Hancock Co., Ill.; followed his profession in this place until 1874, then attended another session at the Cincinnati Eclectic Medical College, from which he graduated the same year. He then returned to Basco, practiced his profession until 1877, when he attended another course at his Alma Mater in Cincinnati, returned to Basco, pursued his professional labors until 1879, and then came to Kansas. He is a member of Morrill Lodge, No. 187, I. O. O. F., and is Clerk of School District No. 34, Brown County. At the early age of fifteen, Dr. C. entered the Union army as a private in Company K, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He was enlisted at Quincy, Ill., February 3, 1865, and was discharged at Tullahoma, Tenn., June 25, 1865. He was married in 1868, near Plymouth, Ill., to Miss Sarah E. Robinson, a native of Hancock County, Ill. They have two children, whose names are—Lena V. and Ralph. Dr. Cecil is an able practitioner, of excellent professional standing, and a genial, enterprising and public spirited citizen.

HIRAM CURTIS, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 35, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Meigs County, Ohio, May 1, 1844, and lived in his native State until July 22, 1861, when he enlisted in the United States Army as a member of Company E, Fourth Regiment, West Virginia Infantry, being enrolled in Mason City, W. Va., and was discharged at Wheeling, in the same State, July 22, 1865. He participated among others in the battle of Charleston, W. Va., Siege of Vicksburg, Big Black River, Jackson, Miss., Tuscumbia, Ala., Missionary Ridge, with Sheridan in the valley, and numerous minor engagements. Altogether, he was in over sixty engagements. After his discharge from the army, he returned to his Ohio home, where he resided until the spring of 1867, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hamlin Lodge, No. 185, A., F. & A. M., and of Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He was a member of the Board of School District No. 34, Brown County, three years. He was married November 2, 1872, to Miss Mary C. Bunn, a native of McLean County, Ill. They have three children living—Lemuel, Ross and Clara Eliza. Mr. Curtis owns a fine upland farm of 160 acres; it is all enclosed, in a high state of cultivation, and well supplied with water by means of wells, springs and Terrapin Creek, which flows in an easterly direction through the farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the farm. The improvements are new and first-class, and comprise among others, an elegant frame dwelling, containing seven rooms, stock stables and lots, granary, corn cribs, smoke house, etc. Mr. C. grows 300 to 400 bushels of wheat, 400 bushels of oats, 3,500 bushels of corn yearly, keeps half a dozen head of milch cows, thirty-five to fifty head of hogs, and four horses. Mr. Curtis worked at his trade as a carpenter for many years, but now he is an industrious, earnest and thoroughgoing farmer. He is a veteran of the late war, a prominent and prosperous citizen, and is popular in his neighborhood.

THORNTON J. ELLIOT, farmer, and stock raiser, Section 36, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Racine, Ohio October 13, 1842, lived in his native State until the breaking out of the Rebellion. On the first day of July, 1861, became a member of Company M, Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry. Rose through all the grades from a private to Captain of Company F, same regiment. Was discharged at Yorktown, Va., in the fall of 1863, re-enlisted the same day in the same company and regiment, and was finally discharged from the United States service, November 6, 1865, at Philadelphia. Like all veterans upon re-enlisting, he was offered his veteran furlough, but declined it. In fact during his whole period of service he never had, or availed himself of a leave of absence. In an endorsement made on an official document, by Franklin A. Stratton, Lieutenant Colonel, commanding the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, the following appears, dated Headquarters Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, before Richmond, Va., March 27, 1865. "Captain Elliot has served as an officer or enlisted man for nearly four years, and has not been absent with or without leave a single day during all this time, neither has he been off duty for sickness or other cause during the time named. Has always performed his duties with unusual promptness, fidelity and ability." Captain E., with the company to which he was attached, participated in McClellan's Peninsula Campaign, and was present at Newport News during the fight between the Merrimac and the Monitor. He also took part in actions at the Siege of Suffolk, Va., April 11th to May 4th, 1863; South Anna Bridge, June 26, 1863; Jackson, N. C., July 28, 1863; Bottom's Bridge, Va., February 7, 1864; Nottaway Bridge and Jarrett's Station, May 8, 1864; Flat Creek Bridge, May 14, 1864; Petersburg, June 9 and 16, 1864; Staunton River Bridge, June 25, 1864; Ream's Station, June 29, 1864; Deep Bottom, July 29, 1864; Yellow Tavern, August 21, 1864; Ream's Station, August 21 and 25, 1864; Richmond, September 29, 1864; Darbyton Road, October 7, 1864; Charles City Road, October 13, 1864; Seven Pines, October 27, 1864; New Market Heights December 10, 1864; Five Forks, April 1, 1865; Deep Creek, April 4, 1865; Amelia Court House, April 5, 1865; and Appomattox Court House, April 9, 1865. After his discharge from the army he returned to his Ohio home. In May, 1867, became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm at Morrill, Brown Co., where he has resided since. Was married at Racine, Ohio, October 16, 1866, to Roxa V. Middleswart, of Portland, Ohio. She died August 17, 1868; one child, a daughter, Fluta, was the fruit of this marriage. She was the first child born in what is now the town of Morrill. She died March 9, 1879, in her eleventh year, of scarlet fever. Was again married February 17, 1875, at Hiawatha, to Miss A. A. Middleswart, of Portland, Ohio. Three children, one of whom is living, Frederick T., were the result of this marriage; Maria H., died March 13, 1879; Helen V., July 31, 1877. Oak Point, the charming home of Capt. Elliot, adjoins the town of Morrill, of which the Captain was the founder. This farm and the town site constitute Capt. Elliot's old homestead, the farm itself is as near a model in location, topography and farm improvements as any in Brown County. The pretty home, half a dozen outbuildings, superior board and hedge fences, fine sheltering groves, superb fruit orchards and gardens; and luxuriant blue grass, clover and timothy of the lawns and meadows, not less than the soil and location, make this one of the finest homesteads in the county. Capt. Elliot feeds 100 choice pigs, keeps eight cows, raises a few high grade calves, cultivates thoroughly, and is a systematic and successful farmer. Has acquired a handsome fortune here, lives a life to be coveted and for good judgment, clear insight, ready tact and executive talent, liberal intelligence and manly character, is the peer of any man in this region.

HARRY FLEGHART, boot and shoemaker, was born in New York City, March 19, 1858, and lived in his native city until his sixth year, when his parents removed to Fayette County, Pa., where Mr. F. lived until 1870, when he removed to Philadelphia, where he remained until the fall of 1873, and after traveling extensively in various parts of the United States, in the spring of 1874 located in the Pennsylvania oil regions, where he resided one year. He then after visiting Philadelphia and Baltimore, removed to Wooster, Ohio, where he resided one year. He then removed to Danville, Ill., where he resided until October, 1881, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Morrill, Brown County, where he has ever since resided and carried on business. He is a young, intelligent, active and honorable business man, an excellent workman and a thorough master of his trade, and is well spoken of in the community in which he resides.

WILLIAM FLICKINGER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 10, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Somerset County, Pa., March 6, 1835, and lived in his native State until his thirtieth year, then removing to Ashland County, Ohio, where he resided three years. He then removed to Carroll County, Ill., where he lived until March 28, 1881, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his large farm in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the German Baptist Church. He has been married twice. The first marriage was contracted in Somerset County, Pa., March 6, 1859, to Miss Catharine Peck, a native of the same county and State. By this marriage they had five children, four of whom are living—Lavina (died at the age of two and a half years, January 9, 1863), Calvin, Annie, Samuel C. and Hattie. The second marriage took place in Carroll County, Ill., June, 1872, to Miss Susan Peck, a native of Somerset County, Pa. Two children were the fruits of this marriage, whose names are—Joseph J. and Ada E. Mr. Flickinger owns a fine second bottom farm of 400 acres, all farming land, lying in one body, three and a half miles northwest of Morrill, and 320 acres of pasture land lying two miles south of the home farm. The pasture land is all enclosed, has plenty of living water and a good well, with windmill for raising the water. Pony Creek stock farm, as the home farm is known, is surrounded by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, is one of the most beautiful and productive estates in this region, and is excellently supplied with water by means of wells, cisterns, Flickinger's Branch and Pony Creek, which flows in a southeastern direction through the farm. On the southwest portion of this property are the remains of Fort Plymouth, built during the 1856 troubles by John Brown, and afterwards garrisoned by the Free-state forces, under the command of Gen. James H. Lane. There are three fine orchards on the farm which together contain 800 fruit trees of various varieties. West of the elegant farm residence is a handsome maple grove covering one acre. Along Flickinger's branch of the Pony is a fine grove of willows and cottonwoods. On the south line of the farm is another fine grove of native timber which covers thirty acres. The improvements on the property are first-class, and comprise, among others, a splendid, large and convenient frame family mansion, 30x[illegible], surrounded by handsome grounds adorned by handsome shrubbery, shade trees and evergreens, two tenant houses, new frame basement barn, 38x60, wash house, wood and coal house, granary, wagon sheds, corn cribs, cattle sheds and lots. Mr. Flickinger raises from 500 to 800 bushels of wheat yearly, 800 bushels of rye, 700 bushels of oats, 300 to 400 bushels of barley, 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of corn, feeds 2 car loads of cattle, keeps a herd of 100 head of fine grade and thoroughbred cattle, 150 Poland-China hogs, and 10 head of horses and mules. At the head of the Pony Creek herd stands Gen. Logan, bred by H. B. Putterbaugh, Esq., of Lanark, Ill., sired by Magenta Chief, by Arbiter, No. 16,170, dam Lady Franklin, dropped February 20, 1880. He is an animal of fine lineage and superior personal traits. Fifteen thoroughbred cows are also members of this fine herd, among which is Molly Dunn, bred by S. F. Estabrooks, Esq., sired by Lieut. Gage, No. 12,294. Mr. Flickinger is one of the prominent and prosperous farmers of Brown, speaks in high terms of the county of his adoption, is a useful citizen and stands high in the community in which he lives.

LAFAYETTE M. FOSTER, M. D., physician and surgeon, was born near Oil City, Venango Co., Pa., in 1842, but left his native State at an early age, the family removing to Wood County, Ohio, where Dr. Foster resided until the fall of 1876, when he removed to Savannah, Andrew Co., Mo., where he resided one year and then moved to Nemaha City, Neb., where he practiced his profession and resided until June, 1881, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Morrill, Brown County, where he has been engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery and where he has resided since. Dr. Foster received his early education at Republic, Ohio, attending the academy of this place four terms, where he graduated at the age of nineteen years, in the spring of 1862. While attending this institution of learning he also read medicine with Dr. John Wilson Price, an eminent and successful practitioner of this place. In the fall and winter of 1863 he attended lectures at the Ohio Medical College at Columbus, Ohio, and received his degree of M. D. from this institution February 28, 1864. Immediately after his graduation he received a commission from Gov. Brough of Ohio, appointing him an Assistant Surgeon in the Ohio Volunteer Service, in which he continued until the close of the war, being mustered out of the service June 15, 1865. After his discharge he returned to Ohio and resumed his profession at Mill Grove, Wood County. From there he removed to Missouri, as already stated. He is a prominent and consistent member of the Christian Church, a member of Morrill Lodge No. 187, I. O. O. F., and of Hamlin Lodge No. 185, A., F. & A. M., and of the I. O. G. T. He was married at West Mill Grove, Ohio, in the fall of 1865, to Miss Jane A. Henry, a native of Ohio. They have had five children, four of whom are living, Cyrus C. died August 28, 1882; Irvine E., Rosa J., Maud Mary and Mabel. In the fall and winter of 1878 9 Dr. Foster attended the American Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he graduated May 28, 1879. In the fall of 1880 he took a special course of twelve weeks in the Homœopathic University of Iowa City, Iowa. Dr. F. does an extensive practice. Receives and treats a great many chronic cases at his roomy and elegant residence in Morrill and is a capable and honorable member of the medical profession.

JOHN A. FULTON, farmer, stock-raiser and feeder, Section 32, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Allegheny County, Pa., July 27, 1845, and lived in his native State until April, 1871, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating in Morrill Township, Brown County, where Mr. Fulton has resided since. He is a member of Central City Lodge, No. 125, I. O. O. F. He has been noble grand of his lodge three terms, conductor six years; representative to the Grand Lodge of the State in 1882, and D. D. G. M. of his lodge in 1883. He has been Trustee of Morrill Township, Brown County, two years, a member of the Board of School District No. 52, eight years, and Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms in the Kansas State Senate for four years. Mr. Fulton is a rising politician, has always acted with the Republican party, of which he is a prominent member, and was a delegate to the State Congressional Convention held in Topeka in June, 1882, that had the honor of nominating the "Big 4." He participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company E, Fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Veteran Cavalry, and enlisted in Pittsburgh, Pa., August 16, 1861. Served with distinction and honor all through the war, and was discharged at Pittsburgh, Pa., in July, 1865. He was severely wounded at Gaine's Hill, again at St. Mary's Church, and the third time at Antietam. He took part in the battles of Gaine's Hill, St. Mary's Church, Antietam, second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Mine Run, Gettysburg, through the Wilderness Campaign, and up to the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, beside a great number of minor engagements. Mr. Fulton was married in Green Oak, Allegheny Co., Pa., in May, 1862, to Miss Hester E. Arthur, a native of Pennsylvania. They have five children living—Arthur Sheridan, Catherine M., Elizabeth L., Maggie B., and Hester Mabel. Mr. Fulton's parents, Hiram and Catherine Fulton, are still living, are hale and hearty, and are residents of Sabetha, Nemaha County. His father, since the age of sixteen, lived in Allegheny County, Pa., previous to coming to Kansas, and was for twenty years a river pilot on the Ohio, and is well and favorably known to many of the old steamboat captains on this river. "Willow Grove," as the fine farm of Mr. Fulton is known, lies in Morrill Township, equidistant from the thriving towns of Morrill and Sabetha, being two and a half miles from each place. The farm contains 325 acres, is all enclosed with substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well watered by means of wells, springs, spring branches, and Mulberry Creek, which flows through the south part of the farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the property, which covers three acres, and contains 100 bearing apple, 150 peach, 50 budded cherry, and a number of pear trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place. North of the dwelling is a handsome willow grove, from which the farm derives its name. The improvements are first-class, and consist in part of a new and elegant frame residence, 18x32 feet, with an addition 20x25, two stories high, containing ten rooms, surrounded by handsome shrubbery, evergreens and shade trees; a large frame barn, 40x60; granaries, corn cribs, stock sheds and lots, etc., etc. Mr. F. raises from 1,200 to 1,500 bushels of wheat, 1,000 bushels of oats, 11,000 to 12,000 bushels of corn, and cuts eighty acres of hay, yearly; has twenty acres seeded down to timothy and clover, feeds two car loads of cattle; keeps 100 to 150 fine grade cattle, 200 to 300 Berkshire hogs, and eight head of fine horses. The farm is admirably adapted either for grain or stock-raising, and is one of the model farms in Brown County. Mr. Fulton is one of the prominent and prosperous farmers of Brown, a veteran of the last war, a rising and influential politician, and an honorable man and useful citizen.

ROBERT S. FURNISH, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 13, Township 1, Range 15, P.O. Morrill was born in Jackson County, Ia., March 9, 1844, and lived in his native State until his fourteenth year, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating on their farm (still owned by Mr. F.), which they pre-empted, in what is now Morrill Township, Brown County, in the spring of 1857. In the spring of 1862, the family returned to Jackson County, Iowa, where Mr. F., resided until 1865, except the time spent in the army, when he returned to Kansas, locating on the same farm occupied by the family in 1857, where with the exception of eight years spent in traveling for the benefit of his health, Mr. F. has resided since. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company B, Twenty-Sixth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and enlisted in Clinton, Iowa, in August, 1862, and was discharged at Indianapolis, Ind., in October, 1864. He took part in the battles of Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Grand Gulf, Jackson, and siege of Vicksburg. Owing to the exposure during the siege of this place, Mr. F. was taken sick and was sent to St. Louis, and thence to the hospital at Indianapolis, where he was discharged for disability, from the effects of which he suffers to-day. Mr. Furnish owns a choice farm of seventy acres on Pony Creek. It is all enclosed with substantial fences; is in a good state of cultivation, and well watered. The improvements consist in part, of a new frame dwelling, good frame barn, corn cribs, granary, etc. Mr. F. devotes his attention exclusively to raising corn and stock. He raises 800 to 1,000 bushels of corn, keeps ten to fifteen head of fine grade cattle, forty to fifty head of stock hogs and ten to a dozen head of horses. Mr. Furnish is an honest, upright and prosperous farmer, a good citizen and stands high in the community in which he lives.

THOMAS P. GORDON, proprietor of Elevator No. 2, and dealer in grain and live stock, was born in Andrew County, Mo., August 30, 1858, and lived in his native State until July 23, 1879, and then removed to Morrill, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and of Morrill Lodge, No. 178, I. O. O. F. Mr. Gordon received his early education at home and completed his studies at the High School at St. Joe, Mo. He left this school in 1878 and immediately thereafter bought a half interest in the general mercantile establishment of J. W. Harris, at Avenue City, Mo., the firm being thereafter known as Harris & Gordon. He continued in business in this city until his removal to Morrill, where he and his partner, Mr. Harris, bought out the extensive mercantile establishment of B. Bird, which they carried on until September, 1881, when Mr. G. sold out his interest and entered into the grain business, in which he has been engaged since. In June, 1882, Mr. Gordon commenced the erection of the elevator now operated by him, and which was completed and put in running order in September of the same year, at a cost of $2,000. The elevator is well equipped with machinery and has a working capacity of 10,000 bushels. During the five months it has been in operation there has been handled and shipped from this elevator thirty cars of wheat and over 30,000 bushels of corn. The elevator has been kept busily employed since its erection; is doing a steadily increasing trade and in the near future promises to do a business second to none of its capacity, on the St. Joe & Western Railroad. Mr. Gordon has been engaged in the live stock business since his advent in Morrill, and during the past two years has shipped stock to the Eastern markets which has amounted to over $80,000 annually. He is still a young man and his rise in the world has been owing to pluck and energy that is highly commendable and rarely equalled.

BENJAMIN HALDEMAN, proprietor of Tonsorial establishment, dealer in cigars and tobacco and general agent for Younce's Indian Cure Oil and Pain Destroyer, was born in Montgomery County, Pa., September 24, 1847, living in his native State until his seventeenth year, when his parents removed to Whiteside County, Ill., where Mr. H. resided ten and a half years. He then removed to Falls City, Neb., where he resided until the fall of 1878, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating at Morrill, where he has resided and carried on business since. He is a member of Morrill Lodge No. 187, and of Hiawatha Encampment No. 33, I. O. O. F., and is inside guard of his lodge. He was married in February, 1858, in Carroll County, Ill., to Miss Ellen R. Smith, a native of Somerset County, Pa. They have had three children, two of whom are living, named—Elmer Ellis, Samuel Austin and Herbert Morrison (died August 19, 1879). Mr. H.'s father, Samuel Haldeman, is the proprietor of Younce's Indian Cure Oil, and has appointed his son agent for this popular remedy for Morrill and vicinity. It is a well-known panacea, and is meeting with ready sales wherever known. Mr. Haldeman is a straightforward, intelligent and enterprising business man, and is well known for his excellent social qualities.

JACOB HOFFMAN, proprietor of billiard hall, was born in Lyons, N. Y., February 4, 1845, but lived in his native State only a short time; his parents removing to Milwaukee County, Wis., where Mr. H. resided until May, 1871, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating near the city of Atchison, where he resided eight years, and from there removed to Morrill, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Sabetha Lodge No. 162, A., F. & A. M. He was married in December, 1882, in the city of Atchison, to Miss Emma Herzog, a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. Hoffman is an active and enterprising business man, fair and honorable in his dealings, and is well and favorably known.

JOSEPH KIRK, farmer and stock raiser, Section 1, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Giles County, Va., November 21, 1824, but lived in his native State only a short time, his parents removing to Ross County, Ohio, where Mr. Kirk resided, with the exception of five years spent in Illinois and Iowa, until April 7, 1858, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Palermo, Doniphan County, where he was employed one summer as engineer in the steam flouring and saw mills located at this place. He then removed to Walnut Township, Brown County, where he had charge of the steam saw mill owned and operated by E. N. Morrill at the forks of the Walnut and Mulberry creeks. Meantime he pre-empted the quarter section on which he now lives. In the spring of 1860 he removed to his farm in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Morrill Lodge, No. 187, I. O. O. F., and was the second past grand of this lodge. He was Treasurer of Walnut Township one year. He was married August 14, 1879, in Council Bluffs, Iowa, to Mrs. Louisa Stoffer, a native of Portage County, Ohio. They have two children—Maud Eldora and Bertha Josephine. Mr. Kirk is the prosperous owner of the Pioneer farm. It is a fine upland farm, lying in one of the finest portions of Morrill Township, and contains 241.39 acres. It is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation and has splendid orchards and groves, is well supplied with water and is one of the model farms of Brown County. The improvements are good and in part comprise large and elegant frame residence, containing eight rooms, with good cellar, stock sheds and stables, tool house and carpenter shop, a fine fruit evaporation and drying house, granaries, corn crib, etc. Mr. K. raises from 300 to 400 bushels of wheat, 200 to 300 bushels of oats, 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn yearly; keeps twenty five head of stock cattle, fifty to seventy-five head of Berkshire and Poland-China hogs and ten head of horses. Mr. K. had the honor of establishing the first postoffice in Morrill and of naming and securing the appointment of Solomon Meyers as the first Postmaster. Mr. Kirk was also one of the original stockholders and helped to establish the first and only farmers' co-operative store in Morrill. Mr. K. is one of the pioneers of this section of Brown County, a trusted and honored friend of Hon. E. N. Morrill, a prominent Odd Fellow, an honest and practical farmer and a good citizen and neighbor.

E. L. KREIDER, farmer, stock raiser and dealer, Sections 31 and 32, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Lancaster County, Penn., July 8, 1850, and lived in his native State until April, 1874, when he removed to St. Joseph, Mo., where he was engaged as a clerk in a grocery establishment and resided two years. Thence he removed to Andrew County, Mo., where he resided three years and was engaged in farming. In the spring of 1879 he removed to Kansas, locating in the town of Morrill, Brown County, where he resided two years, and then removed to his farm in Morrill Township, where he has since resided. He was married in the city of Lancaster, Pa., March 17, 1870, to Miss Annie Erb, a native of Lancaster County, Pa. They have one son, Erb. Mr. Kreider owns a fine upland farm of 160 acres; it is all enclosed with substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by means of wells and springs. His orchard is young and thrifty, covers three acres, and contains 150 bearing apple trees, 200 peach and a number of cherry, plum and pear trees. The farm is also abundantly supplied with small fruits of all varieties. The improvements on the property are excellent and comprise, among others, an elegant new family mansion containing nine rooms, with a good cellar, and surrounded by handsome shade trees, evergreens and shrubbery; a large frame barn, 30x36, with an addition 14x16; granary, 14x18; corn cribs, wagon shed, smoke-house, stock lots, etc. Mr. Kreider contemplates making some additional improvements on his farm in the near future which, when completed, will cause it to rank second to none in the township. Mr. K. raises from 1,000 to 1,200 bushels of rye, 1,000 bushels of oats, 3,500 to 4,000 bushels of corn, cuts twenty-five acres of hay yearly, has twenty acres seeded down to timothy and ten acres to clover, keeps 50 to 75 head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 fine hogs and half-a-dozen head of extra good horses. He deals in cattle quite extensively, buying and selling in the Sabetha markets. He is a young, enterprising and intelligent Pennsylvania farmer, a good and useful citizen, speaks in the highest terms of Brown County, where he has made his means, and, aided by his pretty, amiable and industrious wife, bids soon to be one of the solid and prosperous farmers of his adopted State.

S. S. LINDEMAN, manufacturer and dealer in furniture, coffins, sewing machines, organs and musical instruments, window shades, wall paper, pictures and picture frames, window glass, etc., etc., was born in Somerset County, Pa., August 19, 1851, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1877, when he removed to Carroll County, Ill., where he completed his education at the Lanark High School, which he attended until November of the same year, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Morrill Township, where he resided until the following February, when he removed to Richardson County, Neb., where he was engaged in farming and in teaching in the public schools of the county. Thence he removed to Morrill, where he erected his dwelling and engaged in carpentering. In January of 1883 he engaged in his present business. He is a consistent member of the German Baptist Church. He was married in Richardson County, Neb., February 3, 1878, to Miss Lydia Peck, a native of Somerset County, Pa. Mr. L. is a young and energetic business man, a good mechanic, possessed of fine inventive abilities, and his commercial and social standing are of the best. His brother, Josiah Lindeman, was a member of Company K, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. In the fall of 1862, at the age of seventeen years he enlisted at Chambersburg, Pa., went to the front with his regiment, participated in and is supposed to have been taken prisoner by the enemy at the battle of the Wilderness. At all events nothing has been heard of him since. Mr. Lindeman and his family will be under great obligations to any of his former comrades who chance to read these lines, and who may know the fate of their brother, who will inform them of it. Send particulars to S. S. Lindeman, Morrill, Brown Co., Kansas.

JOHN McCOY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 4, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, May 1, 1845, and lived in his native county until June, 1867, when he emigrated to America, locating in Chicago, where he lived for three years and thence removed to Benton Harbor, Berrien Co., Mich., where he lived for three years also; and from there, in 1873, came to Kansas, locating in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a faithful and zealous member of the Congregational Church at Sabetha. He was married in Benton Harbor, Mich., in 1872, to Miss Victorine C. Nowlen, a native of New York. They have three children living—Jessie M., Ira J. and Edward. "Rock Spring," as the splendid farm of Mr. McCoy is called, lies four miles west of Morrill. It contains 240 acres and is drained by Mulberry Creek, a clear, rapid stream. Has a beautiful fish pond stocked with German carp. Has the finest rock springs in Kansas, one of them having a flow of ten cubic inches; and is one of the most valuable stock farms in the county. The creek flows over a rocky bed through the stock yards, which are admirably arranged for shelter and feeding. Mr. McCoy grows about 4,000 bushels of corn and ten acres each of wheat and oats, sows a field to rye for pasturage; keeps 100 acres in native pasture and meadow, and is giving successful attention to clover and blue grass. He keeps fifty high grade Short-horns of superior beef-getting types. Has a few very fine thorough breds, which he is breeding to a handsome London Duke Bull, bred by Mr. Cowan, of Missouri; and is making up a herd of pure bred Short-horns that will be an honor to Brown County. He feeds a few first class steers and 100 model pigs. Is breeding Clydesdale horses. Believes in keeping only the best of stock, and is one of the most successful farmers in Brown County. The farm is also further improved with a cosy home, laid off in forty-acre field and fenced with a superior hedge fence, which affords grand protection to stock. A new basement barn, spring house, stone quarry, thrifty young orchard and vineyard; and bears in every feature the thrifty and methodical farmer. Mr. McCoy has made most of his property here in the last nine years. Is an intelligent, progressive, candid Christian gentleman, who believes there is no finer country than this for men who feed grain of their own growing to stock of their own raising.

E. P. MILLER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 2, Township 2, Range 15, P. O. Morrill; born in Stark County, Ohio, February 19, 1843, living however, but a short time in his native State, his parents removing to Huntington County, Ind., where Mr. Miller resided until October, 1870, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Jewell County, where he lived four years, he then removed to Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He has been Clerk of the Board of School District No. 57, Brown County, three years. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company B, One Hundred and Eighteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted July 4, 1863, at Huntington, Ind., and was discharged March 4, 1864, at Indianapolis, Ind. He took part in an engagement at Clinch River, E. Tenn. After his discharge from the One Hundred and Eighteenth Regiment, he again enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Fifty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, on the 23d day of January, 1865, at Huntington, Ind., and was discharged September 1, 1865, at Indianapolis, Ind. He was married in Huntington County, Ind., January, 1868, to Miss Susan M. Iden, a native of Indiana. They have seven children living—Martha A., John E., Rosa M., Mary Elizabeth, Charles E., Vinnie Ruth, and Sheridan. Mr. Miller owns a fine farm of 165 acres, one and a half miles south of Morrill. It is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation and well supplied with water. There is a fine orchard on the property which covers five acres, and contains 300 bearing apple, 250 peach, 30 pear and a number of plum and cherry trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the farm, among which are grapes, raspberries, blackberries, gooseberries and currants. The improvements are good, and embrace among others, a new, comfortable and convenient frame cottage, two stories high, 18x34, with addition 18x18, and a kitchen 16x17. West of the dwelling is a handsome maple grove. Among the other improvements are stock stables, sheds and lots, corn cribs, 26x32, smoke house, 14x16, etc. Mr. Miller raises 500 to 600 bushels of rye, annually, had 85 acres in corn this year, which averaged 65 bushels to the acre; keeps 10 to 15 head of stock cattle, 100 Poland-China hogs, and 4 head of work horses. Mr. Miller is one of the industrious and prosperous farmers of Brown County, a veteran of the last war, a good citizen and neighbor, and is well and favorably known.

HENRY M. PERRY, farmer, stock raiser and dealer Section 6, Township 2, Range 15, P.O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, is the son of John C. and Sallie Perry, who came from Sangamon County Ill., to Kansas, in October, 1865, locating in Sabetha, Nemaha County, their farm forming subsequently one-half of the old town site of Sabetha, where they resided until 1872. Mr. Perry's father established the first postoffice in Sabetha, and was the second Postmaster of the town. He died May 22, 1871. In 1872, Mr. Perry's mother removed to what is now Morrill Township, Brown County, where she still resides. Mr. Perry was born in Wellsburg, Brook Co., W. Va., March 12, 1850. In 1855 his parents removed to Sangamon County Ill., where they resided until 1865, when the family came to Kansas, where Mr. Perry has resided ever since. Mr. Perry's brother, Thomas C., was a member of Company A, Seventy-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He was the youngest member of his company, and was wounded and taken prisoner by the enemy at Chickamauga, and was taken to Belle Isle, where he died a short time after his capture. Another brother, John J., now a prominent lawyer in New York city, was a Colonel in the Confederate service, having commanded the Fourth Louisiana Cavalry all during the war, and having taken part in one of the last battles of the war, that of Spring Hill, Tenn. The homestead on which Mr. Perry lives contains 146 acres. It is a choice upland farm lying adjacent to the town of Sabetha. Is enclosed with substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water. The orchard covers two acres, and has a great number of all kinds of fruit trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the farm. Near the house is a large and splendid artificial grove of native timber, which covers ten acres, and contains over 5,000 walnut, ash, soft maple, box elder and honey locust trees. The buildings on the property are good, and consist of a comfortable frame dwelling house containing seven rooms, with extra good cellar, 24x30 feet, with an L 16x18; frame stock stables 20x30; granaries, corn cribs, smoke house, stock sheds, etc. Mr. Perry raises from 500 to 600 bushels of oats yearly, 1,000 bushels of corn; cuts twenty-five acres of hay, keeps twenty-five head of fine grade cattle, seventy-five to one hundred Berkshire hogs, and four horses and mules. There is at present on his farm and owned by him a pair of bay mules which were brought from Illinois by Mr. Perry's father, in 1865. They are well preserved, are used every day, and in appearance do not look to be over six or eight years old. These mules are known to almost every old settler in the four northeastern counties of the State. Mr. Perry deals extensively in live stock of all kinds, buying and selling. Mr. Perry is a young, intelligent and industrious farmer, a good and useful citizen, and is well and favorably known for his probity and integrity.

He is a member of the German Baptist Church, and is Clerk of Morrill Township. He was married at Mt. Carroll, Carroll Co., Ill., in July, 1864, to Miss Adeline Meyers, a native of Somerset County, Pa. They have five children whose names are:—John J. Astor, Samuel J. Burnworth, Martin A. Byron, William H. Leroy, and Benjamin A. Cecil. Mr. Smith owns a fine upland farm of 160 acres, lying two miles north of Morrill; it is reached by fine roads, is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by means of wells and Larkin's branch of the Pony which flows through the southeast corner of the farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the property which covers two and half acres and contains 125 fruit trees of various varieties, The improvements are good and consist in part of a new, comfortable and cosy frame cottage containing seven rooms, surrounded by handsome shade trees, horse stable, sheds and lots, granary, corn cribs, etc. Mr. S. raises from 500 to 600 bushels of wheat, 100 to 150 bushels of rye, 300 bushels of oats, 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn, cuts twenty-five acres of hay, keeps fifteen to twenty stock cattle, forty to fifty Poland-China hogs, and eight head of fine horses. Mr. Smith is an honest, industrious and intelligent Pennsylvanian farmer, a prominent and useful citizen and a good neighbor.

ELMER B. SNYDER, manufacturer and dealer in harness, saddles, collars, whips, blankets, etc. The son of J. H. and N. J. Snyder, and was born in 1862, in Richland County, Ohio, but left his native State at an early age, his parents removing to Kansas, and locating in Doniphan County, near Highland, where Mr. Snyder resided until his twenty-first year, when he removed to Morrill, Brown County, where he established himself in business March 1, 1883. He learned his trade with Mr. Norman Case, of Highland, a well-known manufacturer of harness in that city. Mr. Snyder is a young, energetic and prosperous business man, possesses good credit, and as he is the only dealer in his line in Morrill, commands all the trade in the town of his adoption and for miles around. He carries a large stock, has skilled workmen, a large and growing patronage, manufactures his own saddling, etc., and may be set down as one of the thriving and enterprising business men of the county.

FRANK M. SPALDING, dealer in lumber and building materials, was born in Haverhill, N. H., June 1, 1848, and lived in his native State until his nineteenth year, when he removed to Chicago, where he remained about three years, thence he removed to Lexington, Mich., where he engaged in the general mercantile business, and where he remained about two years, and then removed to Falls City, Neb., where he engaged in the lumber business, and where he resided four years. From Nebraska he removed, in 1878, to Morrill, Brown County, where he has resided and carried on business since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was married in Falls City, Neb., May 10, 1876, to Miss Julia E. Kingman, a native of New York. They have two children—Phineas and Hattie. Mr. Spalding is one of the successful and energetic business men of Morrill, and deals extensively in all kinds of lumber and building materials. Buying exclusively of first hands and for cash, he is enabled to compete with any one.

F. M. STARNS, farmer and stock raiser, Section 31, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Sabetha, Nemaha County, was born in Geneva, Kane Co., Ill., December 1, 1836, but left his native State at an early age, his parents removing to Fountain County, Ind., where the family lived seven years. Then they removed to Wapello County, Iowa, being among the original settlers of this county. Mr. S. lived in Iowa until August, 1856, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating at Fort Plymouth, on Pony Creek, in what is now Morrill Township, where the Free-state forces were congregated under the command of Gen. James H. Lane. The same fall, Mr. Starns pre-empted a claim one and a half miles north of Morrill, where he resided until 1861, when he entered the Union Army as a member of Company D, Eighth Regiment Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted at Fort Leavenworth, November 9, 1861, and was discharged at Nashville, Tenn., November 8, 1864. At the battle of Chickamauga, in which he participated, he was severely wounded, from the effects of which he suffers to this day. Owing to his wound he did no further duty with his regiment, but after he had in a measure recovered, he was detailed for light duty at the United States General Hospital at Nashville, Tenn., which he performed until his discharge on account of disability and the expiration of his term of service. After his discharge he returned to Kansas and located on his farm in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has ever since resided. He is a zealous and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was Assessor of Walnut Creek Township four years, and a member of the Board of School District No. 52, Brown County, eight years. Mr. Starns was married in Nemaha County, June 19, 1869, to Miss I. J. Vassar, a native of Missouri. They have six children living, whose names are: Alice E., John F., Mary and Martha, twins, Frank M., and Nellie. Mr. Starns owns a fine upland farm of 120 acres one and a half miles northeast of Sabetha. The farm is enclosed by a handsome osage orange hedge, is in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by means of wells and springs. The improvements are good, and consist of a new and good five-room frame dwelling, a frame barn 32x32 feet, a large corn crib of 1,500 bushels capacity, an 800-bushel granary, smoke house with cellar, etc. Directly north of the dwelling is a handsome grove of native timber which covers two acres, and which, in summer, affords ample shade and acts as an excellent wind-break. Mr. S. devotes his time and attention chiefly to raising corn, hogs, and cattle. He raises 4,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps 30 to 40 head of fine stock cattle, 40 to 50 stock hogs, and 9 head of excellent horses. Mr. Starns was one of the original Free-state men; a veteran of the War of the Rebellion; is a straightforward, honorable man, and an intelligent, practical and successful farmer.

JAMES B. STEPHENS, real estate agent, was born in Jersey Shore, Lycoming Co., Pa. May 5, 1837, and lived in his native State until his eighteenth year, when he removed to Wood County, Ohio, where he resided one year and then removed to Jones County, Iowa, where he was engaged in farming and where he resided until August 12, 1861, when he enlisted at Anamosa, Iowa, as a member of Company B, Ninth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged at Louisville, Ky., September 24, 1864. He took part among others in the battles of Pea Ridge, Ark., Vicksburg, Siege of Vicksburg, Look Out Mountain, Chickamauga and the Atlanta campaign. At the first attack by the Union forces on Vicksburg, Mr. S. who had by this time attained the rank of Sergeant, was in command of a party who were engaged in laying a pontoon bridge across Chickasaw Bayou. The party while thus engaged was under the severe fire of the enemy for over two hours. After the pontoons were laid, Sergt. Stephens found thirteen bullet holes in his overcoat and blouse. After the siege of Vicksburg, Sergt. Stephens was detailed for service in the Ordnance Department where he served until the Atlanta Campaign when he was detailed as a member of the Pioneer Corps, of which he was a member until the surrender of this city, when he was discharged by reason of expiration of service. He endured severe hardships and privations while in the service from the effects of which he suffers to-day. After his discharge from the United States Service he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Mitchell County, where he resided twelve years and was engaged in farming and the real estate business. From Kansas he removed to Nemaha City, Neb., where he resided until the fall of 1882, when he returned to Kansas, locating at Morrill, Brown County, where he has resided since.

A. W. STEWART, painter, grainer and paper hanger, was born in Oneida County, N. Y., December 31, 1836, and lived in his native State until 1873, when he removed to Jersey City where he resided two years and carried on business. In October, 1875, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Morrill, where he has since resided and carried on business. He is a zealous and prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Morrill, and is one of the stewards of this church. He is also a member of the Morrill Lodge, No. 178, I. O. of O. F., and is chaplain of his lodge. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company D, Fifth New York Volunteer Infantry, enlisting in New York City in the fall of 1862, discharged on account of disability contracted while in the service, in New York City in the spring of 1864. He took part in the second battle of Bull Run. Mr. Stewart has been married twice. The first marriage took place in Nyack, Rockland Co., N. Y., in 1858, to Miss Eleanor Smith, a native of New York; she died in the spring of 1870. The second marriage occurred in 1871, in New York City, to Miss Mary F. Conniss, a native of the same city. They have had four children, two of whom are living, they were named as follows: Emma (died in October, 1873), Mamie (died in November, 1875), May B. and Ambrose W., Jr. Mr. Stewart is an energetic, earnest and intelligent business man, a good citizen, and is eminently worthy of the large patronage he is receiving from the residents of Morrill and vicinity.

C. R. VANDOREN, M. D., physician and surgeon, and farmer, Section 25, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Sloan's Village, Schoharie Co., N. Y. His father left New Jersey at an early day, and settled in the Empire State. He was of Holland descent, and his parents spoke the language of that nation. His mother was from Massachusetts. Her maiden name was Sloan, and the village in which Dr. VanDoren was born, was named after her father. In the spring of 1848, he entered the office of Dr. Fox, a prominent physician of Canajoharie, a village of romantic beauty in the valley of the Mohawk, where Dr. Van Doren had formerly pursued his early academic studies preparatory to his collegiate course. In the autumn of 1848, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City; in the fall of 1849 and winter of 1850, he attended a course of lectures at University Medical College, New York, at the head of which then stood the celebrated Dr. Mott, author of several standard works on surgery, and the first surgeon who successfully performed the operation of tying the arteria innominati. In the autumn and winter of 1850-51, Dr. VanDoren attended his third and last course of lectures in Chicago, at Rush Medical College, where he graduated in the spring of 1851. After practicing in Chicago for one year, he returned East and settled in New Jersey, the home of his forefathers. In 1856 he married Miss Amanda R. L. Meeker, a native of Cincinnati, Ohio. She is a relative of Major Daniel Gano, and of the Pendletons of Cincinnati. The fruit of this marriage was one son—Samuel Elliott, now nineteen years of age. Dr. VanDoren continued to reside in New Jersey until the autumn of 1882, when he and his family wended their way towards the setting sun taking Greeley's advice to go West. They landed in Morrill, Brown County, November 18, 1882. Dr. V. immediately commenced building on his farm, half a mile north of the village of Morrill. The farm contains 160 acres, and is beautifully located, the surface of the land being undulating in all this portion of Kansas. It commands a fine view of the landscape stretching over hill and vale to Falls City, Neb., and Hiawatha, the county seat of Brown, and all surrounding country, giving a very pleasing prospect to the eye of the visitor or traveler as he rides over this portion of the State, which, when Dr. VanDoren visited it a few years ago in the lovely month of June, was one unbroken expanse of prairie, where every breeze was laden with the fragrance of thousands of flowers, and the whole beautified by tints of varied hues and colors. Dr. VanDoren is a leading and accomplished physician and surgeon. He has had years of experience and is a strong man in the profession.

D. A. VANDERPOOL, notary public and conveyancer, postmaster and dealer in general merchandise, clothing, groceries, coal, etc., etc., was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in May, 1845, and lived in his native State until his seventeenth year, when he moved to Chicago, where he attended Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College one year. He then secured a position in a coal office, and subsequently in a wholesale grocery establishment. He resided two years in Chicago, and then went to St. Joe, Mo., where he was in the employ of the United States Express Company. He remained with this company twelve years, being most of the time stationed at St. Joe. In the spring of 1876, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he resided two years and engaged in farming; thence removed to Morrill, where he engaged in his present business, and where he has resided since. He is a strict and consistent member of the Christian Church. He is a charter member of Morrill Lodge No. 187, I. O. O. F. He was the first noble grand of the Lodge. He was also a member of Hamlin Lodge No. 87, at the time it was instituted. Is also a member of Hamlin Lodge No. 185, A., F. & A. M. He has been Postmaster at Morrill for over four years past; he was Clerk of Morrill Township one term; Treasurer of the same township one year, and is at present the only notary public in the township. He was married in St. Joe, Mo., in January, 1868, to Miss Philena Trout, a native of Ohio. Mr. Vanderpool is a careful, conservative and prosperous merchant—does business on the cash basis exclusively. He has made his means on the spot, and is an able and thorough business man. He may be truthfully styled a self-made man, his father dying when Mr. V. was only three years of age, and his handsome competency being acquired by his own unaided exertions.

G. W. WILLARD, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 34, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Preston County, Va., September 22, 1819, but left his native State at an early age; his parents removing to Fayette County, Pa., where they lived about eight years, and then removed to Meigs County, Ohio, where Mr. W. lived until April 23, 1867, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. Mr. Willard was a member of the Board of School District No. 34, Brown County, three terms. He was married in Meigs County, Ohio, April 3, 1850, to Miss Lucinda Roush, a native of Mason County, Va. They have ten children living whose names are—Merchant W., married to Miss Temperance A. Hedgecock, a native of Illinois; Freeman T., Stephen J., married to Miss Alice Cottrell, a native of Indiana; Angeline, Martha E., Carmi A., James C., John R., Walter S, and Hammond B. Mr. Willard owns a fine valley farm of 240 acres, one mile west of Morrill. The St. Joe and West Railroad runs through part of his farm. It is enclosed with substantial fences, in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water. Near the barn is a well of pure water, which is used for stock purposes, and which is raised by one of Ingham & Bigelow's wind mills. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the place, and an abundance of small fruits and a fine grove of native trees. The improvements on the property are first-class, and consist, among others, of a neat and comfortable frame dwelling containing five rooms with good cellar, and one and one-half storied frame barn 30x36, good granaries, corn cribs, etc., etc. Mr. Willard raises from 400 to 500 bushels of wheat, 100 to 200 bushels of oats, 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn yearly. Keeps 25 to 30 head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 stock hogs, and a half dozen horses. He is an industrious, prosperous and practical farmer, a prominent and useful citizen, and a good neighbor.

MERCHANT W. WILLARD, farmer, Section 34, Township 1, Range 15, P. O. Morrill, was born in Meigs County, Ohio, June 22, 1852, and lived in his native State until April 23, 1867, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Morrill Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Sabetha Lodge, No. 162, A., F. & A. M. He was married October 12, 1876, in the city of Hiawatha, to Miss Temperance A. Hedgecock, a native of Illinois. Mr. Willard owns a choice upland farm of 120 acres, one and a quarter miles west of Morrill, on the old State road from White Cloud to Seneca. The farm is enclosed by a handsome Osage hedge and is in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water. The improvements are first class and were built from foundation to roof by Mr. Willard himself who is a born mechanic, and consist in part of a comfortable, cosy frame cottage, 22x30 feet, stock stables, a good granary of 1,000 bushels' capacity, two corn cribs, etc., etc. Near and surrounding the dwelling, is a handsome grove of native timber, planted five years ago, which contains 1,000 cottonwood, maple and box elder trees. There is a thriving young orchard on the property which contains 500 apple, peach, pear and cherry trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place, consisting of grapes, strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries and blackberries Mr. W. raises from 200 to 300 bushels of wheat, the same quantity of oats, 2,500 to 3,500 bushels of corn, keeps a dozen graded milch cows, 75 to 100 hogs and five head of horses. In 1876, when he commenced building his home on what is now one of the finest farms, it was a piece of raw prairie. He had but limited means when he commenced, but has by perseverance, industry and grit achieved a handsome competency, and what is better is out of debt. Mr. Willard is a man of rare mechanical skill and is an inventor of no mean gifts. He has worked at and made a success of each of the following named trades and occupations and is ready to work at any of them again at an hour's notice, viz: farmer, carpenter and house builder, stone mason and bricklayer, clock maker, machinist, architect, well digger, platform scale builder and painter. He was the architect and builder among others of the handsome residence of Joseph Kirk, Esq., the elegant house of Mr. James Stoffer, the conveniently arranged barn on his father's farm and the large three storied and costly barn, 54x60 feet, owned by T. T. Myers. He has invented a number of mechanical and labor saving appliances, which have met with favor wherever used.

HAMLIN.

Hamlin is located upon the St. Joseph & Western Railway, seven miles west of Hiawatha. The town is laid out upon the land of A. Leonard, and has a site of twenty acres. The postoffice at this point was opened in 1870, being removed from the old location two and a half miles south of the town. At the time of its removal the town could hardly be said to have an existence, and mail service was performed at the depot by J. Rogers. Mr. Rogers was succeeded as Postmaster by A. Leonard, who opened a postoffice in his store, where it remained until the destruction of the building. It was then located in the store of D. W. Simmons, where it remained during the terms of office of E. N. Ordway and H. P. Kinney. Upon the appointment of A. B. Wager the office was placed in his store, where it remained until the present incumbent, T. C. Mathews, received his commission and placed it in his building.

The first building in the new town was that of Mrs. Leonard, who was engaged in the millinery business. The building now serves as the kitchen of D. W. Simmons. The next store was that of A. Leonard, which was destroyed by fire in 1875. The first residence was built by J. McCuen, and was shortly followed by the dwelling of Wm. Baker.

The first child born in the town was a son of E. N. Ordway; the first death that of a Mrs. Bates, and the first wedding that of James Hays.

Dr. Heath, who came in 1875, was the medical practitioner. He was followed by J. J. Kelley, by Dr. Wm. Moore and Dr. L. O. Hoyt. The two last, who came in 1879 and 1881, respectively, are still located at this point.

The first school near Hamlin was at a point a mile northwest of the town, and was taught by Miss Emma Fisher, in 1871. The school building erected the same year was twenty-four by thirty-six feet and one story in height. The present school building was erected in the winter of 1880-81, at a cost of two thousand five hundred dollars. It is thirty by fifty-six feet, and two stories in height. Rooms are fitted up for three departments, but up to the present time but two have been in use. The first teachers in the new schoolhouse were Mrs. C. Evans and Miss F. Hitchcock. J. W. Smith and Miss Mollie Belts were appointed for the school year of 1881-82. The enrollment of children of a school age in the District (No. 50) is 121.

The first hotel in Hamlin was the Hamlin House. It was built in 1878 by Samuel Myers, who occupied it for six months and then sold to William Murray. It was purchased in 1881 by T. J. Wilson, who now manages it. It is the only hotel of the town.

The town now has three general stores, one grocery, one hardware, one, drug, one millinery and one furniture store, an elevator twenty by sixty feet, the property of J. N. Speer & Co., of Hiawatha, a grain warehouse owned by Thomas Evans, a lumber yard and two blacksmith shops. The population is something over two hundred.

Reserve is a newly laid out station of the Missouri Pacific Railway, located on the old Indian reserve near the State line.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The first religious services were held in the depot, in 1871, by Rev. T. J. Hansberry, of the Christian Church. This church had been organized at a point three miles south some years prior to this time, and was not formally removed to the town until 1876, although services were held with a degree of regularity. The church edifice was erected in 1876, at a cost of $3,000. It is 40x60 feet on the ground and has a seating capacity of 300. Its first pastor, after Mr. Hansberry, was Rev. J. F. Berry, who is still a resident of the town, although the church has passed to the charge of Rev. J. W. Kelsey. The membership of the society is 120. A Sabbath school was organized in 1876, under the superintendence of J. F. Berry, and has continued to the present time. It has a membership of fifty and is under the charge of the pastor.

The Congregational Church was also organized prior to the birth of the town. Its first pastor was Rev. M. Ayers, who preached for some time in the schoolhouse and was instrumental in the erection of the church building. This structure was erected in 1873, at a cost of $2,200; its size is 30x40 feet and its seating capacity 200. Mr. Ayers was followed, in 1875, by Rev. John Cheeseman, who held the office nearly two years. Then came, with slight intervals between their pastorates, Rev. Messrs. Skinner, Matson, A. L. Howard and the present incumbent, Rev. D. Dunham. At the time of the organization of the church it had a bare dozen members, but in a short time this was increased to over forty, at which figure it now remains. A Sabbath school was organized in 1873 and has maintained a healthy growth to the present time. It has an average attendance of forty and is in charge of J. W. Smith.

The members of the German Baptist Church (Dunkards) located on the south side of the Nemaha River, hold their meetings in the Pony Creek Church, the Nemaha River being the north boundary line. The greater part of the members of this organization are located in Brown County, Kan., but some reside in Nebraska. This church was organized in 1870. The minister in Nebraska was D. E. Fry, who is still located in the same place. The minister in Brown County was the late J. J. Lichty, who organized the church. These two ministers, with their wives, were the first members. The church has now a commodious house of worship, 40x60 in size, and numbers about 175 members.

Hamlin Lodge, No. 185, A., F. & A. M.—The dispensation for this lodge was granted by the Grand Lodge of the State in May, 1878, and the charter was granted October 16, 1879. The following named were the charter members: W. E. Moore, Campbell Evans, Augustus Gardiner, Bennett Hicks, A. G. Gardiner, Caspar Gardiner, F. Gardiner, J. P. Miner, J. J. Stafford, A. R. Meyers, J. B. Stewart, F. J. Robbins, B. Ellis, James Cottrel, A. S. Palmer and William Butler. The first officers of the lodge were: W. E. Moore, W. M.; C. Evans, S. W.; Augustus Gardiner, J. W.; A. G. Gardiner, Treas.; B. Ellis, Sec'y.; Caspar Gardiner, S. D.; J. P. Miner, J. D.; J. J. Stafford, S. S.; F. Gardiner, J. S.; B. Hicks, tyler. The lodge holds regular meetings, semi-monthly (the second and fourth Saturdays of each month) in Odd Fellow's Hall, on First street. The lodge at present consists of twenty-two members composed of some of the best citizens of Hamlin and vicinity. The members passed and raised were ten in number. The number demitted was three, and the same number of deaths have occurred among the members of the lodge since its organization. The officers at present are: W. E. Moore, W. M.; J. J. Stafford, S. W.; John Weitner, J. W.; William Smith, Secty.; Peter Pfeiffer, Treas.; A. R. Smith, S. D.; A. Nitsche, J. D.; C. Evans, S. S.; A. Watts, J. S., and B. Ellis, tyler.

Hamlin Lodge, No. 154, I. O. of O. F., was instituted and a dispensation granted therefor by the Grand Lodge of the State January 21, 1879, and chartered October 15 of the same year. The following were the charter members of this lodge: Frank M. Unkefer, Amos R. Smith, P. K. Fisher, Josiah Beam, Samuel Slater, John Slater, George H. Weil, William B. Baker and William A. Murray. The first officers elected were: Frank M. Unkefer, N. G.; Josiah Beam, V. G.; P. K. Fisher, R. S.; A. R. Smith, P. S., and Wm. A. Murray, Treas. The lodge holds regular meetings in the handsome and elegantly furnished hall on First street every Monday evening. The hall, a convenient frame structure, was erected in 1880, and cost with furniture, etc., about $1,500. The hall and furniture is owned by the lodge and what is still better has not a dollar's incumbrance on it. Few lodges, if any, in the State can vie with Hamlin Lodge in this respect. Hamlin Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M., also use this hall as a place of meeting. The present officers of Hamlin Lodge, No. 154, are: D. W. Simmons, N. G.; Samuel Slater, V. G.; E. T. Maury, R. S.; Nathaniel Slater, P. S., and John C. McGee, Treas. The membership of the lodge is forty-two. The past grands of this lodge are: Frank M. Unkefer, Josiah Beam, P. K. Fisher, J. W. Kelsey, A. R. Smith, J. C. Watson and William B. Baker.

The Smith & Ellis Grist Mill was built in June, 1882, at a cost of $4,000. The building is 32x42 feet and three stories in height. It is furnished with two run of buhr-stones, one for wheat and one for corn and feed, and has a grinding capacity of 150 bushels per day. Power is supplied by an engine of forty-horse power.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—HAMLIN TOWNSHIP.

O. M. BACKUS, teacher, Hamlin, is the son of Dr. James H. and Louisa Backus, natives of Maine, and was born in Mason, Warren Co., Ohio, April 17, 1846, and lived in his native State until 1848, when his parents removed to New Castle, Ind., where they resided until 1850. About this time his father's health giving way, he started with a large company of immigrants from Ohio and Indiana to California, with the hope that the journey across the plains might restore a once vigorous constitution to its pristine state, the family meantime returning to Ohio to await his return. At Fort Laramie, the last letter ever received by his family, was mailed by Dr. Backus. Nothing further was ever heard of him by his sorrowing family except that the train divided at Fort Laramie and that the division the doctor went with had not been heard from and was supposed to have been lost or annihilated by the savages of the plains. Should any one who chances to read this sketch be cognizant of the fate of Dr. Backus, they will confer a great favor by sending the particulars to his son at Hamlin, Brown Co., Kan. In the spring of 1859, Mrs. Louisa Backus, having given up all hopes of ever seeing her husband again, removed with her family to Kansas, locating on a farm in Doniphan County, eight miles southwest of Troy. She taught the first public school in District No. 8, in this county and was an educator of intelligence, education and mental strength and had few equals among the teachers of Doniphan County. The family resided in this county until 1863, and then removed to the city of Atchison, where young O. M. attended school and worked in the Atchison Free Press office. In 1865 the family returned to their farm in Doniphan County, where Mr. Backus resided until the fall of 1880, and then removed to Hamlin, Brown County, where he has resided since. Mr. Backus received his early education in the public and graded schools of Doniphan County, and the city of Atchison, completing his course at the National Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio. He commenced teaching in 1867, in Doniphan County, where he was for awhile principal of the Severanse Graded School. He taught altogether four years in this county and is now engaged in teaching a ten months' term in District No. 31, Brown County. He is a teacher of fine reputation, ranks among the best in the county, and always commands a good salary. He is a member of the Christian Church at Hamlin and also of Hamlin Lodge, No. 154, I. O. O. F. and of Hamlin Lodge, I. O. G. T. He was Clerk of School District No. 8, Doniphan County, two terms. He was married in the fall of 1880, in Hamlin, to Miss Alice C. Murray, a native of Pennsylvania. They have two children, whose names are—Kiah J. and O. C.

ELIAS BERKLEY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 17, Township 1, Range 16, P. O. Hamlin, was born in Somerset County, Pa., October 1, 1829, and lived in his native State until 1865, when he removed to Lee County, Ill., where he resided until February, 1872, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the German Baptist Church. He has been a member of the Board of School District No. 63, seven years in succession, and Trustee of Hamlin Township, two terms. He was married in 1851, in Somerset County, Pa., to Miss Annie Miller, a native of Pennsylvania. They have eleven children living:—Cyrus M., (married to Miss Mary Stephens, a native of Kansas); Gillian F., (married to Miss Emma Speicher, a native of Pennsylvania); Henrietta, (married to Irvin Blanchard, a native of Vermont); Annie, (married to N. P. Eglin, a native of New York); James Harvey, William Grant, Orpha, Josie, Minerva, Charles W. and Roscoe C. Mr. Berkley owns a choice upland farm of 480 acres. It is all enclosed; is in high state of cultivation, and is admirably watered by wells, cisterns, springs, and Berkley's branch of Pony Creek, which flows in a northwesterly direction through the farm. The orchard covers three acres, and contains 100 apple, 400 peach, and a number of plum and cherry trees. North and west of the dwelling is a fine grove of native timber which covers two acres. The improvements are first-class, and consist of a comfortable and cosy frame cottage, large frame barn, 34x46, granaries, corn-cribs, smoke house, stock sheds and lots, etc. Mr. Berkley grows 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of small grain, 10,000 to 15,000 bushels of corn; cuts 25 to 40 acres of hay, yearly; pastures his cattle on his own meadows; feeds two car loads of cattle; keeps 80 head of fine grade cattle; 100 to 125 hogs, and 10 head of horses. Mr. Berkley is one of Brown's representative farmers. He is an intelligent, influential and honored citizen; possesses great tenacity of purpose and indomitable energy; great kindness of heart, and has a remarkable personal popularity among all classes.

W. R. BURNHAM, agent and operator Union Pacific R. R., St. Joe and Western division, Hamlin, is the son of Dr. W. S. and Mrs. Ann Burnham. His father is an eminent physician, who formerly practiced extensively in Illinois and Wisconsin; but having acquired a competency, and on account of his age, has now retired from the practice of his profession. He now resides in Richland Centre, Richland Co., Wis., where his son, W. R., was born, September 10, 1864 receiving his early education in the graded schools of his native city. Here, too, Mr. B. and several of his comrades learned telegraphy; having, with unusual enterprise for youths of their age, erected a private telegraph line of their own. Mr. B. and one of his comrades, were, however, the only two who availed themselves of the knowledge obtained, and who have since followed their profession. Mr. Burnham lived in his native State until his sixteenth year, when he paid a visit to his brother, E. H. Burnham, the popular agent and operator at Alexandria, Neb., and while there received an appointment as operator at the station at Seneca, Nemaha Co., Kas., which position he held for four months. He was then advanced to Hastings, Neb., and has held positions continuously since on the U. P. R. R., at various points on the road. He has but lately been promoted to the station at Hamlin, where he is the agent and operator. He possesses the confidence of his superiors on the road. He is an efficient and courteous agent, and is well liked by all with whom he comes in contact.

C. P. CARY, principal of Hamlin public schools, was born in Marshall, Highland Co., Ohio, January 28, 1856, and lived in his native State until his twenty-fourth year, and then became a resident of Kansas, locating at White Cloud, where he resided one year, and was engaged in teaching. From White Cloud he removed to Robinson, where he resided one year, and had charge of the public schools in this town. From Robinson he removed to Hamlin, where he has charge of the public schools, and where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. C. was educated at the Ohio Central Normal School, at Worthington, Ohio, where he graduated as a member of the Scientific Class in 1878, and in the classical course in 1880. He has been engaged in teaching since the age of sixteen, and continued in this profession, after his graduation, immediately thereafter, for a year holding the position of Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Latin, at the Ohio Central Normal School. He is one of the Assistant Examiners for Brown County. Prof. Cary is an educator of rare merit, thorough in discipline, and a man of fine attainments and culture. He was married at White Cloud, May 30, 1882, to Miss Myra Pugsley, a daughter of the eminent and successful physician and surgeon, Dr. E. G. Pugsley, of White Cloud. Mrs. Cary was born at St. Paul, Minn., and ably assists her husband in the schools of Hamlin, of which she is vice-principal. She has had an experience of four years in teaching in the public schools of White Cloud, in Dakota Territory, near Castleton, and was for a time teacher of German in the Ohio Central Normal School, her Alma Mater.

JOSEPH W. DENDURENT, dealer in farm machinery, wagons, buggies, pumps and windmills, Hamlin and Morrill, Kan., P. O. Hamlin. Mr. D. is the son of Joseph and Sarah Dendurent, old pioneers of Kansas. His father was born in St. John's, Canada, and in his twentieth year entered the employ of the Hudson's Bay Fur Company, and continued in the employ of this company for a number of years. He subsequently resided in various States and Territories of the United States, and in the fall of 1857, became a resident of Kansas, locating at Valley Falls. In 1878, the family removed to Hamlin, Brown County, where they have ever since resided. Mr. Dendurent, Sr., relates many graphic tales of the early days of Kansas and the great Northwest. Mr. Joseph W. Dendurent was born in Nemaha County, Neb., March 31, 1856, and came to Hamlin with his father's family, where he has continued to reside. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was married in Madison County, Iowa, December 21, 1881, to Miss Ellen B. Lewis, a native of Iowa. They have one child, a daughter—Sarah Etta. Mr. Dendurent is doing a large flourishing trade in farm machinery, wagons, buggies, etc., both at Hamlin and in Morrill, where he has established a branch of his house under the able superintendence of T. P. Gordon. Mr. D. handles Osborn's Self-Binders, the Moline, Gordon City and Canton plows, Deere's cultivators and Moline and Fish Brothers' wagons, and is one of the intelligent, energetic, and promising young business men of Brown.

THOMAS EGLIN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 8, Township 1, Range 16, P.O. Hamlin was born in Parsippany, N. J., June 7, 1822, but left his native State at an early age with his mother, his father having died some time previously, removing to Montgomery County, N. Y., where Mr. Eglin resided until his twenty-ninth year, and then removed to Newark, N. J., where he resided two years. Thence he removed to Kane County, Ill., where he resided until July, 1865, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Baptist Church of Sabetha. He was a member of the Board of School District No. 15, Brown County, for seven years. He was married in Montgomery County, N. Y., in 1851, to Miss Cordelia Quick, a native of New York. They have one child, a son, N. Pierson. They also have an adopted daughter, Kate. Mr. E. has a choice upland farm of 280 acres. It is all enclosed, and in a good state of cultivation, and has a splendid supply of water, consisting of wells, springs and Rocky Branch, which flows northerly through the farm. There is a fine orchard on this property, which covers six acres, and contains 300 apple, fifty peach, and twenty-five cherry trees. It is also supplied with small fruits of various kinds. North of the dwelling is a magnificent grove of native timber, which covers six acres, and contains a great number of cottonwood, elm, box elder and soft maple trees. The improvements are first-class, consisting of an elegant seven-room stone house, frame stock stable, large hog house, granaries, corn cribs, stock sheds and lots, etc. On a portion of the farm is a fine quarry of superior building stone. Mr. E. grows 1,000 bushels of small grain, 2,500 bushels of corn; cuts ten acres of hay; feeds a car load of cattle; keeps thirty head of stock cattle, forty to fifty stock hogs, and seven head of horses. Mr. E. is a thrifty and industrious farmer, a prominent and useful citizen, and a good neighbor.

ROBERT GASTON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 33, Township 1, Range 16, P. O. Hamlin, was born in the North of Ireland, October 13, 1835, and lived in his native country but a short time, when his parents emigrated to America, and located in Washington County, Pa., where Mr. G. lived until his nineteenth year, and then removed to Mercer County, Ill., where he was engaged in farming, and where he resided a year and a half. Thence he removed to Sioux City, Iowa, where he resided six months, and from there, on the eleventh day of June, 1857, came to Kansas, locating on his farm in Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Congregational Church, and of Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He has been Treasurer of Hamlin Township three years. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company A, Seventh Regiment Kansas Cavalry, and enlisted August 31, 1861, at Fort Leavenworth. In a skirmish at Holly Springs, Mr. Gaston was twice severely wounded, and was discharged on this account at Memphis, Tenn., February 6, 1863. Subsequently he re-enlisted in the same company and regiment at Fort Leavenworth, March 16, 1864, and was finally discharged from the United States service, September 9, 1865, at Fort Leavenworth. He took part in the battles of Corinth, Tupelo, Little Blue, Iuka, Independence, Mo., the second battle of the Little Blue, and other minor engagements and skirmishes. He was married April 3, 1866, in Brown County, to Miss Elvira L. Smith, a native of Maine. They have six children, whose names are—Carrie E., Egbert O., Robert Elmer, Mattie L., John F. and Don C. Mr. Gaston has a fine upland farm of 320 acres, four acres of which is in town lots. The farm is all enclosed, and in a good state of cultivation; is well supplied with water by means of living water, Terrapin Creek flowing through the southeast portion of his farm. The orchard is young and thrifty, and contains 150 bearing apple, 400 peach, and a few pair and cherry trees. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place. The improvements are first-class in every particular, and consist in part of a commodious frame residence, containing eight rooms; frame barn, 24x40 feet; granary, corn cribs, wagon sheds, etc. Mr. S. raises from 500 to 700 bushels of wheat, 150 to 250 bushels of rye, 300 bushels of oats, and 3,500 bushels of corn yearly. Keeps fifty head of grade cattle, sixty to seventy-five head of stock hogs, and seven head of horses and mules

ELI A. GROVER, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Hamlin, was originally from the State of Maine, born in Oxford County, September 30, 1842. When ten years of age his parents removed to LaSalle County, Ill., where he made his home and worked on a farm until 1862. He then volunteered with the Eighty-eighth Illinois Infantry, Company B, and took an active part in all the principal engagements of his regiment, until the close of the Rebellion. In 1865 he came to Kansas, to join his father, J. Grover, who had preceded him two years, and who died in 1874. Eli A. has since been engaged at farming, and now owns eighty acres of good farming land. He was married in May, 1872, to Miss Carrie Parker. Mr. Grover's mother is still living.

JOHN McLEAN HILLMON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 4, Township 1, Range 16, P. O. Hamlin, was born in Montgomery County, Ind., January 29, 1834, and lived in his native State until his twentieth year, when he removed to Tama County, Iowa, where he resided until the spring of 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating at Valley Falls, where he resided until the fall of the same year, when he removed to the city of Hiawatha, coming there when there was only one house besides his own in this now thriving city. He resided in Hiawatha until 1860, when he removed to Illinois, where he spent the winter, and then removed to Iowa, where, on the 10th day of August, 1861, he entered the United States Army as a member of Company C, Tenth Regiment Iowa Infantry, enlisting at Toledo, Iowa, and being discharged at Little Rock, Ark., August 15, 1865. He participated in the battles of Island No. 10, Madrid, Corinth, Iuka, Fort Gibson, Jackson, Miss., Champion Hills, siege of Vicksburg, Chattanooga, siege of Atlanta, Sherman's March to the Sea, capture of Savannah, Goldsboro, Raleigh, N. C. Mr. Hillmon received severe injuries while in the service, which resulted in almost total blindness, for which a grateful (?) country is now allowing him the pitiful sum of $4 per month. After his discharge from the army he returned to his home in Iowa, where he resided until 1868, when he returned to Kansas, again locating at Hiawatha, where he resided until March, 1881, when he removed to his farm in Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A. F. & A. M., Mount Horeb Chapter and Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13, K. T. He was senior warden of his lodge nine years, and W. M. one year. Mr. Hillmon is a true blue Democrat, and has never sought any political offices. He was married in Helena, Iowa, February 24, 1868, to Miss Harriet E. Louthan, a native of Ohio. They have five children living—Eureka R., Thomas B., John W., Mary E., and Esther Florence. Mr. Hillmon owns a choice farm of 160 acres lying on Pony Creek. He has 50 acres of timber, and the remainder of the farm is about equally divided between bottom and upland. The farm is all enclosed, and is in a good state of cultivation; is supplied by wells and Pony Creek with plenty of good water; has a handsome grove and orchards, and has it finely improved. There is a substantial stone house of seven rooms, a stock stable, granary, and other outbuildings on the premises. Mr. H. devotes his attention principally to raising corn and hogs. He grows 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps half a dozen fine grade cattle, 35 stock hogs, and 5 head of horses. Mr. Hillmon is a veteran of the late war, an industrious, intelligent and prosperous farmer, and a good and useful citizen.

Was born in Vermillion County, Ill., March 3, 1838, and lived in his native State until his fifth year, his parents removing in the fall of 1845 to Daviess County, Mo., where Mr. McGee resided until 1860, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, where he resided until 1876, when he removed to Hamlin, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hamlin Lodge, No. 154, I. O. O. F., and is treasurer of his lodge. He was Constable of the city of Severance four years, and Justice of the Peace of Hamlin Township one term. He was married, in 1875, at Severance, to Miss Rachel M. Van Curen, a native of Indiana. Mrs. McGee is an old resident of Brown County and of Kansas, her parents having removed to this State in 1854. She relates many graphic tales of the early history of the Territory and State. Mr. McGee is among the foremost business men of Hamlin, does a safe and thriving trade, and is a steady, reliable and educated pharmacist.

V. B. MOORE, agent and operator, Reserve, is the son of Dr. W. E. and M. E. Moore, and was born in Clinton County, Mo., May 8, 1863, living but a short time in his native State, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating in Mount Pleasant, Atchison County, where the family resided eight years, and then removed to Hamlin, Brown County, where his parents reside at present. Mr. M. received his education in the graded schools of Hamlin, and learned telegraphy from Mr. Al. Wheeler, then agent and operator at Hamlin Station. Immediately after completing his course of instruction, under the direction of Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Moore was assigned as operator to the station at Severance on the St. Joe & Western R. R., where he remained about one year. He was then appointed agent and operator at Reserve, Brown County, on the Missouri Pacific R. R., which position he has held ever since. He is a member of Hamlin Lodge, I. O. G. T. Mr. Moore is a faithful and trusted employee of the railroad company, and is very popular in Reserve.

PETER PFEIFFER, farmer, Section 1, Township 2, Range 16 west, P. O. Hamlin, was born in Germany, September 17, 1838, at Frankfort on the Maine. He came to the United States in 1853, his destination Boston, where his brother, Paul, had preceded him in 1848. Three years later Peter came to Kansas, located at Fort Leavenworth, and accepted a position under the Government as Wagon Master. Here he remained until the close of the Rebellion, and during this trying time acted as messenger through the Confederate lines to the Union Army, and was in the city of Lawrence at the second burning of the same by the border ruffians. In 1865, he settled on the place where he now resides, where he has 320 acres, all under improvements, which makes a very fine farm indeed. Mr. Pfeiffer is a gentleman who has always taken an active part in the public welfare of his county and State, as he came here with the intention to help free Kansas, if such a thing were possible. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hamlin, also Hamlin Lodge, No. 185, A., F. & A. M. He was married, in 1865, to Mary, daughter of Daniel McCoy, who became a resident of Brown County in 1857.

ROBERT PATTON, M. D., farmer and stock raiser, Section 21, Township 1, Range 16, P. O. Hamlin, was born in Warren, Trumbull Co., Ohio, in 1823, and lived in his native State until his fifteenth year, when he went to Canandaigua, N. Y., where he attended the well known academy located in the town, for two years. He then commenced reading medicine with Dr. P. G. Munson, an eminent practitioner of Canandaigua, a former partner of Prof. Frank Hastings Hamilton. He pursued his medical studies under the direction of Dr. Munson, for nearly two years. He then proceeded to Crittenden, Ky., where he completed his medical studies and then attended lectures at the Philadelphia College of Medicine, where he graduated in 1853. Immediately after his graduation he commenced the practice of his profession in Clark County, Ky., where he resided a short time and then removed to Bourbon County, in the same State, where he continued the practice of his profession, and where he resided until the fall of 1861, when he entered the United States army, as an acting Assistant Surgeon, in which position he served almost continuously until the close of the war, and then returned to Kentucky, where he resided until January, 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent and zealous member of the Christian Church of Hamlin. He was married in Flemingsburgh, Ky., in 1856, to Mrs. Julia A. Groves, nee Hall, a native of Kentucky. Dr. P. is the son of John H. and Eliza Jane Patton, and is one of a family of seventeen children, who are all living but three, in various portions of the United States. Dr. Patton's "Broadlawn" farm and herd, are among the attractions in this part of the county, and are worth a day's journey to see. The home farm and neighboring lands belonging to this estate, embrace 840 acres, admirably watered by springs and living brooks. The estate is improved with some ten miles of fine hedge, large timothy and clover meadow and natural pastures, fast running to blue grass. He has a beautiful home, set in ample blue-grass lawns, shaded by large native groves, has a dwelling house on every quarter of his farm for the occupancy of his workmen, and a cattle barn 200 feet long for foraging and stabling, twenty-five acres of trees and orchard. In addition to his old herd of thoroughbred short-horns, the doctor has lately purchased and brought up from Kentucky, twenty-five short-horns, mostly of popular families, has at the head of Staley, a native of Virginia. They have five children living, whose names are: Frederic, Kenton, Bertha, Alden Edward, Charles Hayes, and Chandos. Mr. Reasoner owns a fine upland farm of 240 acres. It is all enclosed by good fences, is in a high state of cultivation, and is abundantly supplied with pure water. The orchard covers five acres, and contains 300 bearing apple, 1,000 peach, and a number of pear, plum and cherry trees. The improvements are good, and comprise, among others, a five-room, cosy and comfortable dwelling, surrounded by handsome shade trees; a frame barn, 24x40; granary, corn cribs, etc. Mr. Reasoner raises 5,000 bushels of corn, 1,300 to 1,500 bushels of small grain, yearly; feeds two car loads of cattle, keeps twenty-five to forty stock cattle, 100 to 150 Poland-China hogs, and eight head of horses. Mr. Reasoner and his brother, Milton, comprise the new firm of Reasoner Bros. They are extensive dealers in general merchandise, lumber, hardware, dry goods, groceries, etc., etc., in the new and thriving town of Reserve, which was only laid out in August, 1882, and already contains a drug store, two general stores, a lumber yard, hotel and livery stable, an elevator, and from a dozen to fifteen dwelling houses; Reasoner Bros. are the most prominent and pushing dealers in the town. They own their own buildings, enjoy excellent credit, are doing a large and constantly increasing trade, and are strong, popular men.

CHARLES M. SPRAGUE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 31, Township 1, Range 15 P. O. Morrill, was born in Gallia County, Ohio, March 9, 1838, and lived in his native State until his eighth year, when his parents removed to Hancock County, Ill., where Mr. Sprague resided until April 1, 1858, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Hiawatha, Brown County, where he resided until the spring of 1860, when he went to Colorado, where he was engaged in mining and prospecting, and where he resided until September, 1862, when he became a member of Company F, Second Regiment Colorado Volunteer Cavalry, enlisting in Denver, Colorado, and was discharged at Fort Riley, Kansas, July 6, 1865. He participated in the battles of Independence and Westport, Mo., and numerous minor engagements. In the spring of 1863 Mr. Sprague and twenty-four of his comrades were selected by the Colonel of his regiment to act as independent scouts in Missouri near Kansas City. He continued in this service about a year, and during this time had many engagements with the rebel bushwhackers who infested this region. He is a member of Hiawatha Post No. 130, G. A. R., and of Star of Hope Lodge No. 1335, Knights of Honor. He was married in Brown County in September, 1867, to Miss Ophelia Frink, a native of Pennsylvania. They have seven children living, whose names are—Adelbert, Lorena, Prestie, Frank, Oliver, Sarah and Charles Jr. Mr. Sprague owns a fine upland farm of 260 acres, all enclosed, in a good state of cultivation and well supplied with water, by means of wells, springs, Terrapin Creek, which flows along the north line, and Sprague's branch of the Terrapin, which flows through the north quarter of Forest Grove Stock Farm, as this handsome estate is called. The orchard covers seven acres and contains 300 apple, 400 peach and a number of pear, plum and cherry trees. The improvements are first-class, embracing, among others, an elegant and commodious ten room dwelling, surrounded by handsome shade trees, shrubbery and evergreens, large groves, a frame barn, two good granaries, corn cribs, stock sheds and lots, etc. Mr. Sprague raises 1,000 bushels of small grain, 6,000 to 7,000 bushels of corn, cuts forty acres of hay yearly, feeds two car loads of cattle, keeps fifty to seventy-five head of fine grade cattle, 100 to 150 head of hogs, and eight head of work horses. Mr. S. is the fortunate owner of a fine farm of 434 acres. It has 100 acres in timber and the remainder about equally divided between bottom and upland. The farm is in a good state of cultivation, is all enclosed, and is supplied with water by means of wells, springs and Pony Creek, which flows in a northerly direction through the farm. There is a young and thrifty orchard on the property which contains 500 fruit trees of various kinds. The improvements are good and consist in part of a seven roomed frame cottage situated on the northeast of Section 5, while on the northeast of Section 4, is a large stone dwelling containing seven rooms, a stone barn 30x53, seventeen feet high, granaries, corn cribs, stock sheds and lots, etc., etc. Mr. S. grows 1,200 to 1,500 bushels of small grain, 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of corn, feeds a car load of cattle, keeps 50 to 75 stock cattle, 60 hogs, and 20 head of horses. He has a fine quarry of building stone on his farm and lately discovered a vein of coal on the property which as far as developed has shown a thickness of eight inches. He is an old pioneer of the State and an honest, industrious and prosperous farmer and a good and useful citizen.

SAMUEL SWEENEY, proprietor of Hamlin restaurant, and dealer in groceries, confectionary, etc., was born in Jefferson County, Ohio, September 17, 1840, and lived in his native State until 1857, when his parents removed to Albia, Monroe Co., Iowa, where Mr. S. resided until the fall of 1870, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in what is now Smith County, being among the earliest settlers of this county. He resided in this county until 1875, and then removed to Hamlin Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hamlin Lodge, No. 154, I. O. of O. F. He has been P. S. of, and is at present one of the Trustees of this Lodge. He took part in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company E, Sixth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and enlisted at Burlington, Iowa, June 23, 1861, and was discharged July 16, 1864, at Davenport, Iowa. He was a faithful and meritorious soldier, endured great hardships, and contracted rheumatism, from which he has suffered ever since. He participated in the battles of Black River, Siege of Vicksburg, Jackson, Miss., Corinth, and other minor engagements and skirmishes. He was married in Piatt County, Ill., March 5, 1874, to Miss Mollie Tipton, a native of Hancock County, Ill. Mr. Sweeney is an honest, straightforward and thorough business man, and is well and favorably known for his strict integrity.

WILLIAM WALLER THOMSON, barber and hair dresser, Hamlin, is the son of John Rochester and Mary L. Thomson, and was born in Pendleton County, Ky., July 19, 1858. His father was a prominent farmer and extensive stock dealer, and resided in Pendleton County, Ky., until the subject of this sketch had attained the age of four years. The family then removed to Flemingsburgh, in the same State, where, when Mr. T. had reached the age of ten years, his father died, leaving a widow and five chidren. Mr. Thomson was educated in the public schools of Flemingsburgh, which he attended until he was seventeen years old. He then engaged in the milling business with his uncle, William Elbridge Waller, in Fleming County. He was thus employed three years. He then returned to his home, in Flemingsburgh, where he resided one year, and was engaged in working at a planing mill. In April, 1879, Mr. T. became a resident of Kansas, locating in Hamlin Township, where he lived three years, and was engaged in farming. He then removed to Hiawatha, where he lived nine months, and was employed as an engineer at the Hiawatha Steam Flouring Mills, thence he came to Hamlin, where he has resided since and carried on business. He is a member of the Christian Church and of the I. O. of G. T. He is a young and enterprising business man, and bears a good reputation in the community in which he lives.

CHARLES E. TOBIE, proprietor of the Hamlin Steam flouring mill, Hamlin, was born in Utica, N. Y., in April, 1848, and lived in his native State until his twentieth year, when his parents removed to Keokuk, Iowa, where his father, Peter Tobie, had extensive contracts with the United States Government on the ship canal at this point. Mr. Tobie resided in Iowa until October 31, 1874, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in the city of Hiawatha, where he was employed a greater portion of the time in farming, and for one year was engaged in the Hiawatha steam flouring mills, owned by his brother, P. D. Tobie. In April, 1883, he purchased the Hamlin steam flouring mills which he operates at present. The mill was built in June, 1882, at a cost of $5,700, by Messrs. B. Ellis and John L. Smith. It is equipped with a full complement of modern machinery, including a forty-horse power engine, and three run of buhrs. The leading brands of flour manufactured at this mill are equal to any in the market and are known as "Golden Crown" and "Lily of the Valley." Mr. Tobie intends to make extensive improvements shortly, and own a mill second to none in Brown County. Mr. T. gives his personal attention to the management of the mills and takes great pride in his valuable enterprise. He is a thorough business man, and the success of the mills is largely due to his energies.

FRANK M. UNKEFER, life, fire insurance and collection agent and Notary Public; agent for the Kansas Mutual, Phenix Fire of Brooklyn, N. Y., Springfield of Massachusetts, and North British Mercantile, Deputy Postmaster of Hamlin, bookkeeper and chief clerk in the extensive general mercantile establishment of Thomas C. Mathews, Hamlin, was born October 29, 1844, in New Paris, Stark Co., Ohio, and lived in his native State until November, 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in the city of Atchison, where he was engaged in painting and where he resided one year. From this city he removed to Highland, Doniphan County, where he entered into the insurance business, lived three years, and then removed to Hiawatha, where he resided about five years and devoted his entire attention to the insurance and loan business. In June, 1876, he removed to Hamlin where he has resided since. He is a member of Hamlin Lodge No. 154, and Hiawatha Encampment No. 33, I. O. O. F., and of Hiawatha Post No. 130, G. A. R. Mr. U. has been representative to the Grand Lodge, I. O. of O. F., of the State of Kansas on three several occasions, once representing Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, of which he was a member at the time, and twice representing his own lodge at Hamlin. He was one of the charter members of Highland Lodge No. 67, and of Hamlin Lodge No. 154, the first N. G. of Hamlin Lodge, and was subsequently honored by a re-election to this important position. He was treasurer of his lodge three terms, and with the exception of one year, its D. G. M. since its organization. He has been Clerk of Hamlin Township three terms. Mr. Unkefer received his early education in the public schools of Champaign County, Ohio, and at North Lewisburg Academy in the same State. At the age of seventeen, he enlisted (August 20, 1861) at Urbana, Ohio, in Company A, Second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, served fourteen months, and at Murfreesboro, Tenn., was transferred to the United States Signal Corps. He served faithfully and meritoriously in this organization, until the expiration of his term of service, and was discharged at Chattanooga, Tenn., August 20, 1864. He then returned to his home in Ohio, and on the 23d day of January, 1865, enlisted at Columbus, Ohio, in Company D, One Hundred and Eighty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged, September 18, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn. Among the battles in which he took part were Perryville, Ky., siege of Nashville, Murfreesboro, Chickamauga and Lookout Mountain. Mr. U. was with Gen. O. M. Mitchell's independent command that left the army at Murfreesboro and, crossing the mountains to Huntsville, Ala., succeeded in capturing two trains and cutting off communications between Memphis and Corinth, thus securing control of over one hundred miles of railroad and 150 miles of the Tennessee River. He also was with the Army of the Tennessee when it was forced to retreat to Louisville, Ky., and after the battle of Chickamauga, when the Union forces were entirely surrounded, the rebels having sent down rafts, breaking the pontoon bridges crossing the Tennessee River, Lieut. Reber, of the signal corps, formerly of Dayton, Ohio, Mr. U. and another member of this corps, volunteered to open communications between Chattanooga and Stevenson, Ala. They were eminently successful in their design, after suffering incredible hardships, among others being forced to swim their horses across the Tennessee. While engaged on this duty, Mr. U. and his companions were the unwilling spectators of the burning and almost utter destruction of a Union supply train then on its way to Chattanooga, by the Rebel General, John Morgan. Subsequently, on the first day of January, 1863, one of the coldest days experienced that winter, while in the upper part of the Sequatchie Valley, Tenn., Mr. U. again volunteered, in company with three of his comrades, of the signal corps, to deliver despatches of the utmost importance to the Commander of the loyal forces at McMinnville, Tenn. In carrying these despatches they successfully eluded 150 rebel bushwhackers, commanded by the notorious George Carter, scaled the steep and slippery sides of a spur of the Cumberland Mountains, then covered with ice and snow, and being forced for miles to drive their benumbed and half-frozen steeds before them, they finally reached their destination, delivered their despatches and returned to the Union lines in safety. Upon their return to camp, they were met and congratulated by the Lieutenant of their corps (Reber) who, evincing much emotion, exclaimed, "Thank God, boys, for your safe return! I never expected to meet you again." Mr. Unkefer was married in the city of Hiawatha, September 1, 1878, to Miss Hattie A. Dilling, a native of Blair County, Pa. They have one child, a son, whose name is Orlando D. Mr. Unkefer is a large-hearted, manly man, and is highly esteemed for his sterling business and social qualities.

CLAYTONVILLE.

Claytonville was laid out as a city in November, 1856, and had a town site of 320 acres. It had at that time fifteen families and one store established by G. E. Clayton, in August, 1857. No city or other officers were ever elected, and the would-be city lapsed into nothingness. The land where it stood is now a farm, or rather part of three farms, the property of S. P. Meredith, H. L. Bradley and I. N. Seymour.

The United Presbyterian Church, at this place is a part of the church at Hiawatha, both being in all essential points one church, and having as pastor, Rev. J. P. Black, who resides at the latter village. Services were held here for nearly a year before their establishment at Hiawatha.

The Sabbath school of this church was organized in 1875, under the superintendence of J. D. Smith, and continued in same hands until 1882, when B. F. Pinkerton took charge. The number of scholars enrolled in 1875, was twenty, that now on the books of the school a trifle over fifty.

BAKER.

In June, 1882, the new and prosperous town of Baker was located by the Missouri Pacific Railroad on the lands belonging to the heirs of the Baker estate (see biography of C. D. Baker). The town now contains six business houses, fifteen private residences and two elevators, and is a thriving commercial center. Mr. C. D. Baker is the leading dealer in general merchandise in this go-ahead new town, and does, and deserves a large trade.

Christian Church of Baker.—This handsome structure was erected in September, 1882. It is 34x50 feet, crowned with a belfry and cost, complete with furniture, etc., about $2,000. Its seating capacity is over 400.

The Church Society was organized January 20, 1882, by Elder F. M. Rains, as Evangelist, and is composed of forty members, among whom are some of the most prominent residents of Baker and vicinity.

The first officers of the society were: John C. Stapleton, E. Harrington and Henry Smith, elders; Dr. W. B. Sittreal, R. E. Bowman and Daniel Mallory, deacons. There is a Sabbath school connected with the church, which has a membership of seventy-five. Daniel Rork is the superintendent.

Elevator No. 1, Baker.—This elevator was erected in August, 1882, at a cost of about $1,500 by Messrs. Speer & Hulburd, of Hiawatha. It has a capacity of 3,500 bushels. There has been shipped from this elevator since its erection 8,000 bushels of wheat, 4,500 bushels of corn, 3,000 bushels of oats, 1,500 bushels of rye, 1,600 bushels of barley and 500 bushels flax seed. Mr. George E. Selleg is the superintendent and has been in charge ever since the erection of the elevator.

WILLIS.

Willis is a new station on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, about six miles south of Hiawatha. It is already a thriving young town with a number of enterprising citizens, who do a good deal of business. It has two handsome churches, several stores and a number of fine residences, and bids fair to soon become one of the important towns of Brown County.

First Presbyterian Church of Willis.—This handsome edifice was erected in the summer of 1883 It is a frame structure, 30x50 feet, with a stately corner tower. The seating capacity of the church is 200, and its total cost, including the furniture, was $3,000. The society connected with this church was organized in the fall of 1870. Rev. D. R. Todd was the first, and Rev. S. M. Farmer is the present pastor. The following named gentlemen are the lay officers of the church society: H. W. Honnell, L. R. Spangler and James D. Stanley, elders; T. W. Stanley and George McNeil, deacons. The membership of the church is composed of some of the foremost and most influential families of Willis and vicinity. There is a prosperous Sabbath school connected with the church.

Willis Wesleyan Methodist Church.— The society connected with this church, formerly known as the Mission Centre Wesleyan Methodist Church, was organized September 19, 1885. Rev. F. D. Hanlette was the first pastor. The church building was commenced at Mission Centre in the spring of 1881, and completed and dedicated in the fall of 1882, at a cost of over $2,000. Rev. S. D. Kinney preached the dedication sermon. In March, 1883, the church building was removed to the new and thriving town of Willis where it now stands. Since the removal of the church building it has been entirely renovated and remodeled. It is neatly and comfortably furnished, and has a seating capacity of 300. The dimensions of the building, including a stately corner tower, are 28x50 feet. The membership comprises thirty-six representatives of some of the foremost families of Willis and vicinity. The first lay officers of the church society were: Ira W. Douthart, class leader; Henry F. Douthart, steward, and Catherine M. Wright, church clerk. The present officers are: John H. Robertson, class leader; Amos Campbell and Elijah Foster, stewards, and Charles L. Ferry, church clerk. Rev. Stephen L. Blanchard, is the pastor at present in charge. There is a flourishing Sabbath school connected with this church. It was organized in the spring of 1875. Henry F. Douthart was the first superintendent and Mrs. Lucy A. Comstock was the first secretary. The school has a good sized library and has a total membership of eighty scholars and ten teachers. M. G. Ham is the present superintendent of the school.

Elevator No. 1, Willis.—This elevator was erected November 1, 1882, at a cost of $6,000. It has a storage capacity of 20,000, with additional storage capacity of 25,000 bushels more, and has a working capacity of six to seven cars per day. The building is owned by the Farmers' Elevator and Mill Company. This company commenced shipping grain from Willis soon after the completion of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, August 15, 1882, and shipped since that time to various points 50,000 bushels of wheat, 30,000 bushels of corn, and 2,500 bushels of small grain of all kinds.

Maple Grove Schoolhouse, District No. 59, is built on the northeast corner of what was once a portion of Mr. Lewis K. Chase's farm (see Biography), the land having been donated by Mr. Ellwood I. Small, a former owner of the farm. It is a neat frame structure 22x30, and was erected in 1872 at a cost, including furniture, etc., of $900. It has a seating capacity of fifty. The first officers of the school district were—E. B. Greene, director; David Moore, clerk, and S. A. McNeil, treasurer. The present officers are—Geo. McNeil, director; Lewis K. Chase, clerk, and Jas. Henry Baxter, treasurer. Miss Mary E. Dickinson (now Mrs. Sam'l Ewell) was the first, and Miss Lizzie Ewing (now Mrs. N. S. Hazen) is the present teacher.

Delevan Schoolhouse, District 56.—This building is a handsome frame structure and was erected in the summer of 1872 at a cost, including furniture, of $1,500. Its seating capacity is fifty, and it is supplied with modern school furniture. Mrs. L. A. Comstock was the first, and M. G. Ham is the present teacher. The first officers of the school district were—John Elliot, director; H. F. Douthart, clerk, and J. M. Bell, treasurer. The present officers are—J. L. Yaw, director; J. W. Douthart, clerk, and John H. Robinson, treasurer.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—MISSION TOWNSHIP.

C. D. BAKER, dealer in general merchandise, is the son of Simeon and Caroline C. Baker, old residents of Brown County, and was born at Battle Creek, Mich., in 1860. In 1868 his father bought the tract of land which now comprises the thriving town of Baker, the family removing to Kansas in 1870, locating at Effingham, in Atchison County, where they resided until 1871, when they removed to the city of Hiawatha, where the family still reside. Mr. Simeon Baker was an old California 49er, and previous to going to the Golden State was in business in Green Bay, Wis., and on his California trip went through the section of country where Baker is now located. In 1868 he purchased 1,120 acres in Mission Township, Brown County, and 480 acres in the vicinity of Effingham, Atchison County. The town of Baker is now situated on his land in Mission Township. Mr. Simeon Baker is now deceased.

JAMES HENRY BAXTER, farmer and stock raiser, Section 14, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1843, but left his native State at an early age, his parents removing to Schuyler County, Ill., where Mr. B. resided until the fall of 1869, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He took part in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company A, Twelfth Regiment Kansas Infantry, enlisting at Wyandotte, Kansas, in the spring of 1862, and being discharged at Lawrence, Kansas, in July, 1865. He took part in the battle of Independence, Mo., and a number of minor engagements. He was married in Schuyler County, Ill., in 1866, to Miss Sarah Clothier, a native of Virginia. They have five children, whose names are John, Charles, Effie, Leonard and Gertie. The new and thriving town of Willis, on the Missouri Pacific Railway, is located upon a tract of land belonging to Mr. Baxter, who was one of the founders of the town, and who named it in honor of his friend, Hon. M. C. Willis. Mr. B. will be pleased to give information concerning the property, values, wants, prospects, etc., of this new town. Mr. Baxter is one of the representative farmers of Mission Township, his home farm of 320 acres, near Willis, being one of the most valuable in the county. It is improved with good buildings, fences, orchards, wells, springs, domestic groves and meadows, and is devoted to mixed farming. Mr. Baxter grows about ninety acres of corn and fifty acres of wheat, and feeds fifty steers and one hundred hogs, has resided here a dozen years, and is greatly pleased with the country.

J. M. BELL, farmer and stock raiser, Section 8, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Madison County, Ky., in 1819, and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year, when he removed to Brown County, Ohio, where he resided continuously until May, 1869, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hiawatha Lodge No. 35, A., F. & A. M., and Mt. Horeb Chapter R. A. M. He was Justice of the Peace of Mission Township two years, and Treasurer of the same township one term. He was married in Adams County, Ohio, February 26, 1845, to Miss Eliza Snediker, a native of Virginia. They have five children, whose names are—Charles, married to Miss Sarah Griffith, a native of Virginia; Amanda, married to B. F. Derstine, a native and resident of Ohio; Kate married to H. F. Yaw, a native of Michigan, a resident of Brown County; Luella, married to Andrew Ammon, a native of Pennsylvania and resident of Brown County, and George, married to Miss Belle Macarthy, a native of Kansas. Esquire Bell owns one among the many fine upland farms in Mission Township. It lies two and a half miles southwest of Willis, and is enclosed by a fine hedge. It is well supplied with water, is in a high state of cultivation, and has fine improvements, embracing, among others, an elegant nine-roomed cottage, good frame barn, stock stables and lots, fine groves and orchards, and is, in short, as good an improved farm as there is in the county. Esquire Bell devotes his attention chiefly to raising corn, hogs and horses. He grows annually 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn, some of his corn last year averaging eighty bushels to the acre; keeps 100 to 150 stock hogs, and eight to ten head of fine horses. Esquire Bell is well and favorably known to the community in which he resides, has been an honored magistrate of his county, and is an honorable, upright man and citizen.

PETER BERNEY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 36, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Everest, was born in the County Carlow, Ireland, December 25, 1817, and lived in his native country until the spring of 1845, when he immigrated to America, locating in New York City, where he resided four years. He then removed to New Orleans, where he resided one winter. He thence removed to St. Louis, where he resided three years, and was engaged in the extensive saddlery establishment of T. Grimsley & Co. From St. Louis, Mr. Berney returned to New York City, where he was foreman for his brother, Thomas Berney, an extensive contractor, engaged at that time on public improvements in that city. From there he removed to Des Moines, Iowa, where he remained one winter, and in May, 1857, became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, five miles west of Syracuse, where he pre-empted a quarter section of land. In 1866, he sold this quarter for $3,600, and then purchased a portion of the farm in Mission Township, Brown County, on which he has since resided and to which he immediately removed. He is a member of All Saints' Church and St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Berney was married in the cathedral in St. Louis, Mo., November 26, 1851, to Miss Ann Purscill, a native of the County Wicklow, Ireland. They have four children, whose names are—Nicholas (born in Doniphan County, May 30, 1859, married to Miss Eliza Gerety, a native of Atchison County, Kan.), Joseph (born in Doniphan County, August 5, 1861), Bridget Anne (born in Doniphan County) and Peter (born in Doniphan County, March 30, 1867). Mr. Berney has a splendid 1,200-acre farm, Myshall Hill Farm, named after the parish in Ireland in which he was born; lies three miles west of Everest. It is improved, with a valuable home, expensive and convenient barns and sheds, and good orchards and fences. It is well watered, and has an abundance of timber, well stocked, domestic meadow, and is an estate fit for a baron. Mr. Berney grows 8,000 bushels of corn; sows rye for winter pasturage; is a successful wheat grower, and is one of the heaviest cattle and swine feeders in the county. He sold $9,000 worth of fat steers and hogs last year, and has now 150 stock cattle and a yard full of prime pigs. Mr. Berney came to this county in 1857 with a land warrant of 120 acres and $40 cash. Has now real and personal estate worth close to $55,000, and pronounces this the best country in the world. Mr. Berney is a public-spirited man, whose word is respected all over this country.

HENRY L. BRADLEY, farmer, Section 22, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Kansas in March, 1871, and located in Brown County, on the farm where he still resides; contains 113 acres, all under a high state of cultivation, and was formerly known as Claytonville. For many years a postoffice was kept there and was only disorganized in June, 1883. Claytonville was the original county-seat of Brown County, but Hiawatha contested for this privilege, and finally won after a long and severe struggle. Mr. Bradley was born April 4, 1838, in Chittenden County, Vt., where he attended school and worked at home with his parents until he attained the age of seventeen years. He then started out to make his own way in the world, and has been engaged at railroading and various other occupations. In most of his undertakings he has been successful, although some have failed, but being a gentleman of strong and determined character he was not easily discouraged with one loss, and abandoned such as were not profitable, to secure something that was. The desire for a new country in which to make his way, finally led him to Kansas, and he is now the owner of a fine farm with everything necessary for convenience and comfort at his stage of life. He was married to his first wife, Catherine Graham, in June, 1858. She died in March, 1866. His present wife was Miss Phebe Bell, whom he married in Vermont in September, 1866. Mr. Bradley is a charter member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 83, I. O. O. F., and the son of John and —— Bradley; his mother's family name was Chittenden. His father was a projector and contractor of railways, and at the time of his death had no superior in this line in the New England States, or perhaps in the Union. He was early connected with the Rutland & Burlington Railroad, and for a number of years was president of the same. At one time, when the treasury was so low that a majority of the directors, among them such capitalists as Timothy Follett and Samuel Henshaw, gave up the project, John Bradley, despite the general gloom, went to New York and raised the means requisite to complete the road. In the construction of the Texas & New Orleans Railroad, he was the controlling spirit, and its treasurer once said to a New York capitalist, that Mr. Bradley's services alone were worth to the company half a million of dollars. At the same time, he was also largely interested in a line of seven steamers, running from New Iberia to New Orleans. In connection with George W. Strong, of Vermont, he built a railroad leading out from Philadelphia into the rich country of West Chester and with Timothy F. Strong and Amos Page he built the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad from Chicago to Oshkosh, Wis. One year later he was one of the contractors on the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad and forty-five miles of the Rutland & Washington Railroad were likewise his handiwork, of which road he was one of the directors for some time. He was the projector and first contractor of the road from Schenectady, N. Y., to Athens. Early in 1858, he contracted for a railroad from Caraccas, the capital of Venezuela, South America, into the heart of the coffee regions of that republic. He had completed seven miles of the road when a civil war ensued, which forced him to abandon the enterprise. The construction of the railway was under the supervision of his second son, Martin C. Bradley, who died of yellow fever at La Guayra, in the fall of 1858. Other railroads, too numerous to mention here, owe their existence and construction to the energy and perseverance with which Mr. Bradley was endowed, but, as has already been observed by what has already been mentioned, he was one of Vermont's most stable and enterprising men, coming from a family well connected. The mother of Henry L. Bradley was the granddaughter of Hon. Thomas Chittenden, the first Governor of Vermont. He was prominently connected with the first settlement and early history of Vermont, especially in politics and the legislature, and took an active part in the suppression of the English force during the Revolution of 1776. But his name is too well chronicled in the history of this State and the United States, to be further extolled here; suffice it to say that to him and a few other gentlemen of his stamp, Vermont owes her birth and her standard as one of the oldest and best States in the Union. Governor Chittenden died in August, 1797.

N. E. CHAPMAN, senior member of the firm of Chapman & Kipp, dealers in general merchandise, Willis, was born in Chatauqua County, N. Y., in 1851, and resided in his native State until his fourteenth year, when his parents removed to Houston County, Minn., where Mr. Chapman resided until the spring of 1871, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in the city of Hiawatha, where he resided until August, 1882, when he removed to Willis, Brown County, where he entered into business. He is a member of the Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A., F. & A. M., Mount Horeb Chapter, R. A. M., and Hiawatha Commandery, No. 13, K. T. He was Postmaster of the city of Hiawatha four years. He was married in 1878, in Oregon, Mo., to Miss Mary A. Sporley, a native of Missouri. Mr. Chapman is an upright and prosperous business man, his firm doing the leading business in Willis. A good and exemplary citizen, and his commercial and social standing are of the best.

LEWIS K. CHASE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 22, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Lyme, Grafton Co., N. H., in 1832, and lived in his native State until 1865, when he removed to Fillmore, Andrew Co., Mo., where he resided ten years and was engaged in hotel keeping. In October, 1875, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in the city of Hiawatha, where he was proprietor of the Hiawatha House, and where he resided about two years. He then removed to his fine farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Lincoln Lodge, No. 138, A., F. & A. M., of Fillmore, Mo. He has also been a member of the Board of School District No. 59, Brown County, for the past five years. He was married in Piermont, Grafton Co., N. H., July 4, 1854, to Miss Ruby Woodward, a native of Vermont. They have two children, named—Elmer E. and Willie A. Mr. Chase is the happy owner of a choice upland farm containing 160 acres. It lies three miles southeast of Willis, is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, is well supplied with water and has good improvements, embracing among others a neat and cosy frame dwelling, stock stables, sheds and lots, splendid orchards, groves, etc., etc. Mr. Chase devotes his attention to growing corn, oats, rye, domestic grass, fruit, grazing and stock feeding with gratifying success. Himself and lady are New Englanders of the best types, and are greatly pleased with the country.

GEORGE E. CLAYTON, attorney-at-law, farmer, stock and fruit raiser, Section 14, Township 3, Range 17, P. O. Hiawatha, was born in Clark County, Mo., August 26, 1834, and lived in his native State until his fourth year, when his parents removed to Madison County, Ill., where Mr. C. lived until the summer of 1856, when he removed to Kansas and located at Wathena, Doniphan County, where he commenced business as real estate agent and surveyor, in partnership with J. R. Plowman, and also that fall taught the first school ever taught in Wathena. In December, he, in company with Capt. Albert Heed and J. R. Plowman, made a prospecting tour to Brown County, then unorganized, but attached to Doniphan County for municipal purposes. He was enraptured with the unmistakable fertility of soil, beauty, freshness and wild grandeur of the then new county, and unhesitatingly resolved to make it his future home, and accordingly a town company was organized, a site for the new county seat selected, and by the company named Claytonville, in honor of the founder, and Mr. Clayton pre-empted a quarter section of Government land adjoining the prospective village as his homestead, and on which he still resides. On his return to Wathena, he was chosen to, in part, represent Burr Oak Township in the first Territorial Democratic Convention, at Lecompton, then the capital of the Territory, which he attended, and the Legislature convening at the same time, he prepared and had a bill offered in that body, for the organization of Brown County, which was offered in the House of Representatives by Hon. B. O'Driscol, member from Doniphan, and conducted to its final passage in the Council, by Judge Thomas Watterson, of same county, now living in Marshall County. In accordance with the then existing Territorial statutes made and provided, it became the duty of the Legislature, in joint session of House and Council, to elect the officers essential to effect a county organization, which was done in compliance with a petition from the voters of Brown County, and resulted in the election of George E. Clayton, Probate Judge, and ex officio Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners which offices he filled with credit to himself and satisfaction to the people of the county, as evinced by his fairness, impartiality, and freedom from partisan prejudice, especially in the completion of the organization of the county when it became his prerogative and duty to appoint a sheriff, county surveyor and coroner, and justices of the peace and constables in each of the four townships into which he had municipally subdivided the county; distributing these offices fairly between political friends and foes. He established a store of general merchandise in Claytonville, in August, 1857, the first in the county, and also obtained the establishment of a postoffice at the same place, and served as Postmaster of the same three years. He is a member of the Baptist Church. Has been Notary Public for the past eight years, and holds this position at present. He took part in the last war, as a member of Company D, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and enlisted at St. Joe, Mo., April 16, 1862, and was discharged at Omaha, Neb., April 1, 1865. His regiment served all through the war on the plains, against the hostile Indians. He participated in a number of Indian fights and skirmishes. He was married June 11, 1857, at St. Louis, Mo., to Miss Mary Caswell, a native of Illinois. They have four children living, whose names are—Herbert D., Cora, married to Henry J. Rhodes, a native of Pennsylvania, and a resident of Mission Township; Nellie and Elsie. Judge Clayton has a choice upland farm of 105 acres, all enclosed with substantial fences, and all in cultivation except twenty-five acres, which are timber land. The farm is finely watered by springs and brooks; there is also a fine fish pond 75x100 feet on the property. The orchard covers about five acres, and contains 1,500 fruit trees of various kinds. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the place. The improvements consist of a six-roomed cottage, placed on an elevated site, which commands a fine view of the prosperous towns of Robinson, Willis and Baker, and the city of Hiawatha. The lawn surrounding the dwelling is covered with evergreens and magnificent elm and maple trees. The other improvements consist of a stock stable, granary and other outbuildings. Judge Clayton had twenty-three acres in spring wheat this season, which only yielded fifteen bushels to the acre; thirty acres in corn, which averaged sixty bushels to the acre; fifteen acres in potatoes, which turned out finely, yielding 2,400 bushels; he cut the grass from ten acres of timothy meadow land, which yielded two tons to the acre; he threshed this year, half of an acre of common millet, which yielded thirty and a half bushels of seed. Judge Clayton at present devotes most all of his time to the cultivation of his farm, but he intends shortly to pay more attention to the practice of law.

P. D. COMSTOCK, farmer, fruit and stock-raiser, Section 8, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born November 12, 1835, in Dayton, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and lived in his native State until his twentieth year. He then removed to Waupun, Fond du Lac Co., Wis., where he resided until the year 1859, when he accepted an engagement as a salesman for Messrs. Wood & McGregor, and removed to Delavan, in the same State, where he resided until the 20th day of October, 1862, when he became a member of Company A, Thirty-second Regiment Wisconsin Infantry. He was a member of this company and regiment until June 4, 1865, when he was transferred to Company D, Sixteenth Regiment Wisconsin Veteran Infantry. He entered this company as a Corporal, and was discharged as a Sergeant

July 12, 1865, at Louisville, Ky. He participated in Sherman's March to the Sea and numerous minor engagements and skirmishes. While in the service he was severely injured while crossing a bridge between Moscow and Grand Junction, Tenn., from which he suffers to-day. After his discharge from the United States Service he returned to his home in Wisconsin, where he remained until the fall of 1868, when he removed to Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hiawatha Post No. 130, G. A. R. He was married in Troy, Wis., December 27, 1860, to Miss L. A. Edwards, a native of Walworth County, Wis., being one of the first white children born in Sugar Creek Township in that State. They have four children, whose names are—Merton M., Mabel, Alice E. and Pearl Leland. "Delavan Fruit Farm," as Mr. Comstock's fine place is called, lies one mile southwest of the young and thriving town of Willis. It contains eighty acres, is all enclosed, is well supplied with timber and water, and is in a high state of cultivation. The farm is finely improved by a new eight-roomed frame dwelling, stock stables and lots, granary, corn crib, etc. On the northeast corner of the property is a handsome grove of native timber covering one acre and containing over 200 walnut, maple, elm and cottonwood trees. The orchard covers ten acres and contains 132 bearing apple, 1,000 peach and a large number of plum, pear and cherry trees. The farm is also abundantly supplied with a large variety of small fruits. Mr. C. raises from 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of corn, 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of small grain yearly. Keeps twenty-five head of stock cattle, fifty to seventy-five stock hogs, and six head of fine horses. Mr. Comstock is a veteran of the War of the Rebellion, a thorough and practical farmer, a prosperous and useful citizen, and has a high standing in his community.

GEORGE CUSHNIE, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 19, P. O. Hiawatha, was born May 19, 1834, in Aberdeenshire, Scotland. He worked on a farm with his parents until 1855, then he emigrated to Canada, where he improved a farm of 100 acres in the county of Grey. This he successfully managed until the fall of 1868, when he came to Brown County, Kan., and purchased 160 acres of unimproved land from the Kickapoo reservation. He has now one of the finest farms in that section of the county, surrounded by hedge, well equipped as to residence, and other buildings, and supplied with all the necessaries pertaining to stock-raising, into which Mr. Cushnie has entered quite extensively. He has always been identified in advancing the public interests and welfare of his town and county but has never filled any official appointments, as this did not coincide with his wishes. He has, however, served a number of terms as Director of the School Board, as educational advancement is one of his chief delights. Mrs. Cushnie, nee Miss Frances Conat, was born in Kent, Eng., but was a resident of Canada at the time of their marriage. She is a member of the Christian Church, while Mr. Cushnie is connected with the Baptist. The names of their children are as follows—Jane, Ellen, Maggie, Barbara, Fannie and John.

HENRY F. DOUTHART, farmer and stock raiser, Section 8, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Dearborn County, Ind., in 1841, and lived in his native State but a short time, his parents removing to Van Buren County, Iowa, where he resided until August, 1862, when he entered the United States Army as a member of Company F, Fourteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Columbus, Ky., and was discharged at Davenport, Iowa, in August, 1865. He participated in the battles of Pleasant Hill, Tupelo, and a number of minor engagements. After his discharge he returned to his home in Iowa, where he attended the Iowa Wesleyan University at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where he graduated three years later, receiving the degree of B. S. After his graduation he was appointed Professor of Mathematics at the Simpson Centenary College at Indianola, Warren Co., Iowa. He held this position until the spring of 1870, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a prominent and zealous member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Willis. He was married in Scotland County, Mo., March 23, 1871, to Miss Susan W. Miller, a native of Virginia. They have four children whose names are: Henrietta, Emeline, Robert and Bertha. Mr. Douthart and his brother Albert own together a fine upland farm of 320 acres. It is all enclosed by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation, is well supplied with water and has good improvements, embracing an elegant, new frame family mansion and good outbuildings. The farm is further improved by handsome groves, orchards, stock lots, etc., etc. Mr. D. devotes his attention exclusively to raising corn, hogs and cattle. He grows from 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn yearly, keeps 100 stock hogs, forty to fifty fine grade cattle and eight head of work horses. Mr. Douthart is an intelligent, prominent and prosperous farmer, a good citizen and an honorable, upright, Christian gentleman.

CHARLES L. FERRY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 17, Township 4, Range 17, P.O. Willis, was born in Walworth County, Wis., in July, 1843, and lived in his native State until his nineteenth year, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company I, Twenty-eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Elkhorn, Wis., August 15, 1862, and being discharged at Brownsville Texas, August 23, 1865. He participated, among others, in the battles of Little Rock, Helena and Camden, Ark., and a number of minor engagements. After his discharge he returned to his home in Wisconsin, where he resided until October 12, 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Willis. He was married May 8, 1871, in Brown County, to Miss Millie Ide, a native of Luzerne Co., Pa. They have two children, named Maggie Alice and Cora Adell. Maple Grove Stock Farm, as Mr. Ferry's fine upland farm is called, contains 200 acres and lies one mile southwest of Willis. It is entirely enclosed by a handsome hedge, is in a good state of cultivation, is well supplied with water and has good improvements. On the north side of the dwelling is a handsome grove, containing 1,500 fine maple trees. Mr. F. devotes his attention exclusively to raising corn, hogs and horses. He grows from 4,000 to 4,500 bushels of corn yearly, his corn last year averaging sixty bushels to the acre throughout; keeps 150 to 200 stock hogs and nine head of fine horses. Mr. Ferry is an earnest, thorough and practical farmer, a prosperous and leading citizen, and a good neighbor.

J. J. FIGLEY, senior member of the firm of J. J. & W. Figley, live stock dealers, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 20, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1842, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1873, when he removed to Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He was married in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1862, to Miss Sarah M. Huston, a native of Ohio. They have five children, who are named Eva L, Andrew, Newton, Elizabeth and Anson. Hickory Grove Stock Farm, as the splendid 320-acre estate of Mr. Figley is called, lies three and a half miles southwest of the prosperous new town of Willis. It is one of the finest farms in the township and has handsome improvements, among which are an elegant residence, a large frame bank barn 40x64 feet, and other good outbuildings. Mr. F. is one of the largest and most extensive dealers in and raisers of stock in this section of the country. He grows 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn and 800 to 1,000 bushels of small grain yearly, has 70 acres in timothy and clover and 100 in prairie grass, feeds five to six car-loads of cattle, keeps 75 to 100 head of stock cattle, 150 to 200 stock hogs and 18 head of fine horses. At the head of his stud of fine horses stands the fine thoroughbred English coach horse, "Captain." He is an animal of superior personal traits and of pure lineage. Mr. Figley is an intelligent, thorough and practical farmer and stock-breeder, a useful citizen and an honorable and upright man.

J. J. & W. FIGLEY, dealers in live stock, Section 20, Township 4 Range 17, P. O. Willis. This firm was formed in the spring of 1880 and has been engaged in shipping live stock of all kinds to Chicago and Kansas City since. They have shipped over the Missouri & Pacific R. R., since the road was opened, ten months ago, over sixty car-loads of hogs and cattle. Willard Figley, the junior member of this firm, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1857, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1880, when he became a resident of Kansas, joining his uncle, J. J. Figley, with whom he has been in business ever since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Willis.

GIFT & ZIMMERMAN, wagon and carriage makers and general blacksmiths, Willis. This firm is composed of two of Willis' most enterprising and industrious young mechanics. Mr. C. William Gift, the senior member of the firm, was born in St. Joseph, Mo., November 7, 1861, where he lived until 1874, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating in the city of Hiawatha, where Mr. G. attended the High School. Here also he learned his trade with his father, Mr. R. H. Gift, one of the oldest carriage makers in the State. After serving his apprenticeship he was employed in his father's shop until September 28, 1882, when he removed to Willis, where he entered into partnership with Mr. Edward Zimmerman, a well known blacksmith and skillful horse shoer. Mr. Zimmerman was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, in 1860, and lived in his native State until his ninth year, when his parents removed to Kansas, locating four and one-half miles southeast of Hiawatha, where Mr. Z. lived eleven years, during this time attending the public and graded schools in Hiawatha Township, Brown County. He learned his trade with Mr. H. B. Troxell, a skillful blacksmith of the city of Hiawatha. After serving his time he removed to Willis, where he and his partner opened up their extensive business. They own their buildings, the main shop being 16x70 feet, with a handsome office in the rear, and an adjoining paint shop, 20x20 feet. They are skillful mechanics, do a rushing trade, and stand as high as regards credit and moral character as any young men in the town of Willis.

MAJOR G. HAM, teacher, Willis, was born October 16, 1848, in Fleming County, Ky. Came to Kansas with his parents, Malcolm and Nancy A. Ham, in March, 1857, and settled on a farm in Atchison County, Section 13, Grasshopper Township, where his parents still reside. He received a liberal education, attending the State Normal School at Emporia, Kan., from 1869 to 1870. He was engaged in teaching in Atchison County, with the exception of one year in Brown County, for four years having had charge of the Kennekuk School, Atchison County, until the fall of 1882, when he took charge of the school at Willis. In 1864 Mr. Ham went to Colorado, where he enlisted at Denver, in the Second Volunteer Cavalry, Company K, and served till the close of the rebellion. He has served two years as Justice of the Peace of Grasshopper Township, Atchison County, and one term as Clerk of the same. He is a strong prohibitionist, and has always taken an active part in the Temperance movement of the State. Mr. Ham and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Ham is a daughter of David and Nancy Kessler, of Kennekuk. They were married in April, 1875. Her name Mary C. They have two children—Nancy A. and William B.

ELDRED HARRINGTON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 32, Township 3, Range 17, P. O. Baker, was born in Walworth County, Wis., in 1840, and lived in his native State until the fall of 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Christian Church of Baker. In politics Mr. Harrington is Democratic and was the candidate of this party in 1874, for Lieutenant Governor of the State. He is a member of Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He participated in the last war as a member of Battery L, First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, and was enlisted at Janesville, Wis., in the summer of 1864, and discharged at Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865. He was married in Elkhorn, Wis., August 19, 1864, to Miss Amorette Powers, a native of Wisconsin. They have three children, whose names are: Grant W., Wynne P. and Jessie O. Mr. Harrington owns two fine farms lying in Mission Township. The home farm contains 250 acres, and farm No. 2, 320 acres. These farms are all enclosed, all in cultivation, well improved and well supplied with water and timber. On the home farm is an elegant residence, a good frame barn, granary, corn cribs, windmills, stock sheds, lots, etc. Mr. H. devotes his entire attention to raising corn, fine grade cattle and hogs. He grows from 5,000 to 10,000 bushels of corn yearly, feeds from three to five car loads of cattle, keeps forty to fifty fine grade cattle, 100 hogs and eight head of work horses. He has 240 acres in pasture, eighty acres in timothy and clover, and the remainder in prairie grass. Mr. Harrington is one of Brown's representative men and is well known to nearly every person in the county. He is a man of wide influence, stands pretty well up to the top in financial matters, is a model farmer and possesses an enviable reputation as a business man and citizen.

JAMES H. HAYES, farmer and stock raiser, Section 33, Township 3, Range 17, P. O. Hiawatha, came to Kansas, in April, 1881, and located on a farm in Mission Township, where he has since resided. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and of the G. A. R. He took part in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company M, First Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and enlisted February 29, 1864, at Chillicothe, Ohio. He was discharged at Columbus, Ohio, September 28, 1865. He participated in the battles of Ebenezer Church, Selma, Ala., Columbus, the Atlanta Campaign and other minor engagements. Mr. Hayes was born in Ross County, Ohio, February 27, 1840, and resided in his native State until he came to Kansas. He has been married twice, the first marriage took place in March, 1861, in Ross County, Ohio, to Miss Susanna E. Weller, a native of Ohio. She died January 13, 1864; by this marriage he had two children, one of whom is living, Bertha A. The second marriage occurred April 19, 1866, in Ross County, Ohio, to Mrs. Martha E. Hermon, a native of Ohio, five children was the result of his marriage, who are all living; Nettie Bell, Lizzie Gertrude, Mary L., Theodore Clifford and William Earl. Mr. Hayes owns a choice farm of eighty acres, it is all enclosed, and has sixty acres under cultivation, the remainder being pasture land. The property is well supplied with excellent water, having a good well and has a branch of Wolf River flowing diagonally across it. There is a small orchard on the farm, which is well supplied with fruit trees. The improvements consist of a comfortable frame house, stock stable, granary, etc. Mr. Hayes had on the farm on which he resides at present thirteen acres in spring wheat this season, which yielded only seventy-eight bushels. He also had two acres in oats which averaged thirty-five bushels, and fifty-seven acres in corn, which averaged fifty-five bushels to the acre.

JAMES HITE, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 36, Township 3, Range 16, P.O. Baker, was born in Marion County, Ohio, February 12, 1837, and lived in his native State until the fall of 1853, when he removed to Tazewell County, Ill., where he resided until the spring of 1869, when he removed to Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also a member of Star of Hope Lodge No. 1338, K. of H. He and his amiable wife are members of Hiawatha Lodge No. 558, K. and L. of H. He is also a member Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company F, Eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Pekin, Ill., in July, 1861, and was discharged at Springfield, Ill., in May, 1865. He took part in the battles of Forts Henry and Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Port Gibson, Raymond, Miss., Jackson, Champion Hills, siege of Vicksburg, Fort Blakesly, Spanish Fort, and other minor engagements. At Fort Donelson he was severely wounded, from the effects of which he suffers to-day. After his discharge he returned to his home in Illinois, where he resided two years and then came to Kansas. He was married in Pekin, Ill., April 4, 1864, to Miss Mary E. Powers, a native of Schuyler County, Ill. They have five children, named:—Cora Bell, Bertha C., Clara G., William Morrill, and Chester Albert. "Cedar Lawn" as Mr. Hite's fine 320-acre estate is called, adjoins the site of the prosperous new town of Baker. It is all enclosed with substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation and is well watered by springs, wells and Hite's branch of the Delaware, which flows in a southwesterly direction through the farm. The property is handsomely improved by a neat and cosy residence, a fine, large, new and convenient frame barn 40x58 feet, good outbuildings and magnificent groves and orchards. Mr. H. grows 5,000 to 7,000 bushels of corn and 2,000 bushels of small grain yearly, feeds two car loads of cattle, keeps seventy-five to 100 head of fine grade stock cattle, 175 stock hogs and sixteen head of fine horses. Mr. Hite is a veteran of the last war, an honest, intelligent and practical farmer, a prominent and prosperous citizen and is well and favorably spoken of in his community.

JESSEE HOLT, farmer and stock raiser, Section 1, Township 4, Range 16, P. O. Baker, was born in Knox County, Ohio, in 1844, and lived in his native State until his eighth year, when his parents removed to Tazewell County, Ill., where he resided until January, 1871, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company B, Seventy third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was enlisted at Delavan, Ill., August 7, 1862, and was discharged at Camp Butler, Springfield Ill., June 24, 1865. He took part in the battles of Stone River and Chickamauga. In the last named battle he was wounded and captured by the enemy; lying on the field for three weeks previous to his removal to Libby Prison. Here he was confined for a short time, and then removed to the Confederate General Hospital, and shortly thereafter was paroled. He subsequently rejoined his regiment at Kenesaw Mountain, but was never able to do duty again. After his discharge he returned to his home in Illinois, where he lived until he came to Kansas. He was married in Pekin, Ill., November 8, 1868, to Miss Nancy H. Hite, a native of Marion County, Ohio. They have two children, named Elmer C. and Edna M. Mr. Holt owns a choice upland farm of eighty acres lying one mile south of the flourishing town of Baker. It is enclosed by substantial fences; is in a good state of cultivation; is well supplied with water, and is improved by a neat and cosy cottage, a new and convenient frame barn, 28x40; good out-buildings, and fine groves and orchards. Mr. Holt grows 2,000 to 2,500 bushels of corn and a small quantity of small grain, yearly; keeps half a dozen milch cows, 40 to 50 stock hogs, and 8 head of fine horses. Among his horses is the famous Clydesdale horse, "Commodore," an animal of fine traits and pure lineage, weighing 1,700, and a fine dapple brown in color. Mr. Holt is a veteran of the last war, an earnest, thorough and practical farmer, a good citizen and well and favorably known.

REV. W. H. HONNELL, missionary for Presbyterian Board in bounds of Larned Presbytery, P. O. Everest. The two brothers, Rev. William H. Honnell and Henry W. Honnell are of a family of eight brothers and three sisters who all reached married life and mature years except the youngest brother, who died a soldier in the Andersonville prison at the age of eighteen. The widowed mother, when taunted by a rebel sympathizer (when the news came that of her four sons in the war one, Rev. William H. was at death's door by sickness, one, Capt. T. C., wounded in battle at Chickamauga and one dead in Andersonville) whether she did regret sending her boys, with smothered tears, replied, "No! I have sent four of them, and rather than have this Union destroyed by traitors I will send the other four, even if not one of them ever returns to me." From such a mother the three Honnell brothers and their only surviving sister, Mrs. George McNeal, all now of Brown County, Kas., received their life and early Christian training. And it is not surprising that they are minister, elder, deacon and earnest workers in the Presbyterian Church. The first two named came first in early childhood from Greene County, Pa., and grew up and were educated in Shelby County, Ohio. The elder is a graduate of Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio, and of Danville Theological Seminary in Kentucky. After his graduation and when he was called to decide his future scenes of labor in the ministry "that divinity that shapes our ends" decided for him and cast his lot in Kansas. It was the intention of the writer to make copious extracts from a paper read before the Synod of Kansas at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the first presbytery in the Territory, held in Ottawa in October, 1882, giving a few recollections of scenes in the early adventures of a life full of manifold labors on battlefields and missionary life in the South and in Kansas, but lack of time and space forbids. Two incidents in his life, however, cannot be passed over in silence. The first, that after years spent in Kansas border war, while temporarily in Kentucky, he had the honor of preaching the first sermon in Camp Dick Robinson, on August 10, 1861, under threat of arrest for doing so, by Gov. Beriah McGoffin. That military assembly, thus consecrated by prayer, broke the neutrality of Kentucky. He was not only in the siege of Knoxville, but was the chaplain of Walford's Cavalry, which headed the ride after and capture of John H. Morgan and his command after twenty-three days and nights through Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio.

G. Y. JOHNSON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 6, Township 3, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Pike County, Ill., in 1841, and lived in his native State until his twentieth year, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company H, Seventy-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, being enrolled at Springfield, Ill., in June, 1862, and discharged in June, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Atlanta, Franklin, Spring Hill, Nashville and numerous minor engagements. Mr. Johnson was wounded thrice while in the service and was a brave and faithful soldier. He entered the service as a private and was discharged as Orderly Sergeant of his company. After his discharge he returned to his Illinois home where he resided until April, 1869, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of Hiawatha Post No. 130, G. A. R. He was married in 1869, in Vinton, Iowa, to Miss Kitty Haines, a native of Centre County, Pa. They have one child, a daughter, whose name is Gracie. Avondale, the home and 325-acre stock farm of Mr. Johnson, is handsomely located on Wolf River, eight miles south of Hiawatha, and is one of the most valuable stock farms in the county. He has 100 acres of woodland which affords fine range and shelter for stock, an abundance of clear running water, thirty acres in clover and timothy and grows 8,000 to 10,000 bushels of corn which he feeds to the four or five car loads of steers and pigs annually sold from the farm. In addition to cultivating his own land he also farms 100 acres of rented land. The attraction of the estate is the Avondale herd of forty thoroughbred Short-horns, which Mr. Johnson has been breeding with much care and is composed of White Rose, Arabella, Phyllis, Rose of Sharon and other popular families. At the head of the herd is the superb Young Mary bull, Parole, which, for superior individual traits, is probably the finest animal ever brought into the county. There are some very handsome cows and heifers in the herd, which altogether is an honor to the breeder and to Brown County. Mr. Johnson is not only a spirited and intelligent breeder, but takes great interest in the advancement of general husbandry and is one of the public spirited representative men of the county.

HORATIO W. JOHNSON, farmer and stock raiser, Sections 19 and 20, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Yankee Springs, Barry Co., Mich., in 1845, and lived in his native State until July 1, 1868, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Willis. He was married in Waterville, Marshall Co., Kan., December 29, 1870, to Miss Elizabeth Adams, a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, a niece of Judge Franklin G. Adams, secretary of the Kansas Historical Society. They have four children, whose names are—Nora L., Ray T., Norman S. and Samuel Adams. Walnut Grove, as the fine 280-acre estate of Mr. Johnson is called, lies four and a half miles southwest of the thriving town of Willis. It is a magnificent farm, and is enclosed by a fine hedge and substantial fences; is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water by wells, springs and a branch of the Delaware, which flows in a southwesterly direction through the farm. The improvements are first-class in every particular, embracing among others, a new and elegant modern frame residence, a large frame barn, stock stables, sheds and lots, pastures, and splendid groves and orchards. Mr. Johnson grows 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of small grains yearly, has 120 acres in timothy and clover and blue grass pastures, cuts from 25 to 40 tons of hay yearly, feeds 2 car loads of cattle, keeps 60 to 75 stock cattle, 100 to 150 fine Poland-China hogs and a dozen head of horses. For the last four years Mr. J. has been engaged in shipping hogs and cattle to the markets in Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago. He has shipped during the past year 20 car loads of hogs and 10 car loads of fat cattle. He is also an extensive breeder of fine cattle and pure Poland-China hogs. At a stock sale of Hereford, Polled Angus and Aberdeen cattle, held in Kansas City, April 25, 26, 27, 1883, Mr. Johnson purchased the fine thoroughbred young bull, Beecher, No. 72, bred by M. C. Cochran, of Canada, and the fine young heifer, Lady Hopeful, No. 57, of the same stock and bred by the same breeder. Mr. Johnson is one of Brown's earnest, intelligent, progressive and model farmers, an influential, popular and prominent citizen, and has a high standing in his community.

These farms are all enclosed with good fences, are in a high state of cultivation, and are well supplied with timber and water; Mission Creek flowing through one of them in a southerly direction. The improvements are good, embracing among others, a neat and comfortable dwelling, stock stables, sheds and lots, handsome orchards, groves, etc. Mr. Small grows on his handsome Mound Valley Farm, as his estate is called, 4,000 to 5,000 bushels of corn, and 700 bushels of small grain, yearly; feeds a car load of cattle; keeps 40 to 50 stock cattle; 50 stock hogs; 8 head of work horses; a dozen head of milch cows, and makes and sells $200 worth of "gilt edged" butter, yearly. He is a hard working, intelligent and prosperous farmer, a good citizen, and has a high standing in his community. Mound Valley Schoolhouse, District No. 66, Brown County, is located on what was once a portion of Mr. S.'s farm, the land being donated by him for this purpose. The building was erected in 1876, at a cost of $600. It is a handsome frame structure, well supplied with modern school furniture, and has a seating capacity of fifty. Miss Kittie Jones (now Mrs. Harvey Richard) was the first, and R. S. Finley is the present teacher.

HENRY SMITH, farmer, Section 26, P. O. Emmett, was born fifty miles north of Philadelphia, in Northampton Co., Pa., January 3, 1832. Farming has been his occupation always—first in his native State, then in Ohio, afterward in Illinois, and finally, in the spring of 1880, he came to Kansas. During the spring of the year following he removed to his present farm, which contains 213 acres, all under a high state of cultivation and excellently improved. Mr. Smith is extensively engaged in stock raising, which he has found to be a profitable investment, and for convenience in pasturing the same he has his farm divided into fields by cross fences. Mr. Smith was married in Illinois, in 1858, to Miss Emma Rork, a native of Ohio. Mr. Smith and his family are members of the Christian Church. They have four sons—William H., Curtis L., Walter E. and Charles F.

JAMES D. STANLEY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 27, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1837, and lived in his native State until March, 1871, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Willis. He was married in Union County, Ohio, in 1859, to Miss M. R. McNeil, a native of Ohio. They have five children whose names are—Mary, married to Frank Willis, a son of Hon. M. C. Willis, a native of Kansas and a resident of Brown County; Clara, Alice, Florence and Luella. "Willow Grove Stock Farm," Mr. Stanley's beautiful home, and 400-acre farm lies four miles southwest of the prosperous town of Willis. It is in high cultivation and finely improved with orchards, fences, buildings, meadows, groves, etc. Mr. Stanley raises about 5,000 bushels of corn and a good wheat crop, feeds two car loads of steers and 150 hogs; has large, well grassed pastures and grazes a good string of high grade cattle; has a group of unusually fine buildings, his house and basement barn being among the very best in the county. Stables most of his stock, and is building up a superior herd of thoroughbred Short-horns, Merinos and Poland-China hogs; and is raising some fine thoroughbred Norman horses. He is one of the progressive, successful, thorough-going farmers of this country, and pays a high compliment to Brown County.

T. W. STANLEY, farmer and stock raiser, Section 29, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Willis, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1846, and lived in his native State until his twenty-second year and then removed to Benton County, Iowa, where he resided two years and thence removed to Adams County, in the same State, where he resided four years. In the spring of 1875 he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Willis. He was married in Kenton, Hardin Co., Ohio, May 23, 1867, to Miss S. A. Cusic, a native of Harrison County, Ohio. Mr. Stanley owns a fine stock and grain farm of 360 acres. It is all enclosed, in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with timber and water, the Delaware River flowing through the southwest corner of the farm. "Mission Hill Stock Farm," as this magnificent estate is called, has good improvements, embracing among others a neat, comfortable and cosy home, a large frame barn 18x50, stock stables, sheds and lots, granaries, corn cribs, handsome groves, and one of the finest and most productive orchards in this section. This orchard contains 160 apple trees, was planted seven years ago, and for the last three years has been in bearing. Mr. Stanley grows from 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 bushels of wheat, 450 bushels of oats and 300 bushels of rye yearly; keeps from 40 to 50 stock cattle, 50 to 75 stock hogs, 20 head of good horses, and the finest and largest lot of Merino sheep in Brown County, about 400 in number, many of them being high grades and thoroughbreds. Mr. Stanley is a practical, prosperous and enterprising farmer, a good and useful citizen, and an intelligent, upright and honorable man.

JOHN C. STAPLETON, dealer in grain, lumber and coal, Baker, was born in Logan County, Ill., in 1848, where he resided until August, 1868, when he removed to Kansas, locating in Powhattan Township, Brown County, where he resided until 1878, when he removed to Monona County, Iowa, where he resided until August, 1882, when he returned to Kansas and located at Baker, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is an exemplary member of the Christian Church. He is also a member of Mount Pulaski Lodge, No. 87, A., F. & A. M., of Logan County, Ill. He was married in Logan County, Ill., in the fall of 1867, to Miss Sarah H. McKinney, a native of Illinois. They have five children living—William Franklin, Lillie Luella, Ernest A., Virgie O., and Nellie Almeta. Mr. Stapleton has been engaged in dealing in grain, lumber, and coal ever since he located in the young and thriving town of Baker. During that time he has handled and shipped to St. Louis and Chicago 110,000 bushels of corn, and 2,000 bushels of small grain; has sold thirty car loads of coal, and over fifty car loads of lumber, all of which was used in Baker and vicinity. Mr. Stapleton leads the trade in his specialties in his neighborhood, attends strictly to business, and being always prompt in paying his bills, and honest and fair in his dealings, he has fairly won the respect of all.

LEONARD T. WHITE, farmer and stock raiser, Section 24, Township 3, Range 17, P. O. Robinson, was born in Fleming County, Ky., November 21, 1819, and lived in his native State until the winter of 1841-42, and then removed to Peoria County, Ill., where he was engaged in farming and butchering. He resided in Illinois until 1869, and on the 1st day of April of that year became a resident of Kansas, locating in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has since resided. He is a member of Hiawatha Post, No. 130, G. A. R. He was Justice of the Peace of Mission Township a short time, and Superintendent of Public Highways of Road District No. 1, Mission Township, one term. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company E, Seventy-seventh Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He entered this company as a private, and was promoted to the rank of Sergeant. He enlisted August 14, 1862, at Peoria, Ill., and was discharged at Springfield, Ill., June 23, 1865. He took part in the battles of Magnolia, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, and the battles at and around Vicksburg. In the disastrous Red River expedition under Gen. Banks, he was captured in the engagement at Sabine Cross-roads by the rebel forces under the command of Kirby Smith. After his capture he was taken to Camp Ford, Texas., where he was held as a prisoner of war over thirteen long and weary months ere he was paroled. After his parole he marched, in company with over 1,000 of his comrades, from the rebel prison to Shreveport, La., a distance of 200 miles, where they embarked on an old Mississippi River boat, the General Quitman, for New Orleans. After they had proceeded on their voyage but a single day it was found that the wheels of the crazy old steamer had given out and needed rebuilding. The ex-prisoners accordingly landed, found an old sawmill, which they repaired, and with characteristic Yankee ingenuity and skill, proceeded to manufacture new wheels for the boat. After the repairs on the steamer were completed, the prisoners again proceeded on their voyage as far as the mouth of the Red River, where they were formally exchanged, and from where they proceeded on another craft to the Crescent City. Immediately after arriving in New Orleans, Mr. White was sent to Springfield, Ill., where he was discharged from the service, and then proceeded to his home. He was married December 29, 1847 in Peoria County, Ill., to Miss Minerva Smith, a native of Kentucky. They have had four children, three of whom are living—James L., a resident of Mission Township, Brown County, and married to Miss Eunice E. Buck, a native of Illinois; John Runyon, died in infancy; Luella Jane, married to George H. Norton, a native of New York and a resident of Brown County, and Cornelius J., a resident of Robinson Township, Brown County, married to Miss Ella S. Proctor, a native of Kansas. Mr. White and his sons together own 427 acres of fine upland, all lying together in close proximity in Mission and Robinson townships. This tract of land is superbly watered by numerous springs which empty into White's Branch of Wolf River. The tract is admirably calculated for a stock farm, and is improved by comfortable and commodious buildings, orchards, fences, etc. Mr. White raises 2,200 bushels of corn, 2,600 bushels of wheat, and 500 to 600 bushels of oats; he feeds from fifty to seventy-five head of the best Poland-China hogs. He plows deep, rotates his crops, keeps half a dozen fine Durham milch cows, a dozen horses, among which are some fine Normans, a yard of fine poultry, and is as near a systematic, thorough, and model farmer as there is in Brown County.

MARTIN CLEVELAND WILLIS, farmer and stock raiser, Section 34, Township 4, Range 17, P. O. Kennekuk, Atchison County, was born in Claiborne County, Tenn., July 20, 1831, and lived in his native State until the year 1855, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Doniphan County, near Charleston, where he resided one winter and then removed to his farm in Mission Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he is also a member of Hiawatha Lodge, No. 35, A., F. & A. M. He was a member of the House of the Kansas Legislature, Sessions of 1866-67 and 1874-75 and Commissoner of Brown County two terms. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a Captain in the Nineteenth Regiment, Kansas Militia, in 1864. He was married in 1852 in Union County, Tenn., to Miss Elizabeth Carter, a native of Granger County, Tenn. They have five children living, whose names are—Francis Lafayette, married to Miss Mary Stanley, a native of Ohio; Christopher Columbus, William D., Susan Mary, married to William R. Honnell, a native of Kansas, and John D. "Locust Grove," as the magnificent estate of Mr. Willis is called, contains 720 acres. It lies one mile north of Kennekuk, Atchison County, and five miles south of Willis, Brown County. The farm is surrounded by substantial fences; is in a good state of cultivation and is well supplied with timber, fine building stone, and plenty of pure water, Willis and other creeks flowing through the farm. The estate is finely improved by a handsome stone residence, containing twelve rooms, a large frame barn 75x100 feet; good outbuildings and splendid orchards and groves. Mr. W. grows from 6,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn, 3,000 bushels of small grain, keeps 50 to 75 stock cattle, 150 stock hogs and 20 head of horses. Esquire Willis was one of the founders of Willis and the town was named after him. He is one of Brown's honored sons, an exemplary, high-toned gentleman, and is very popular in his county.

EVEREST.

Everest is a new station on the recently completed Missouri Pacific Railway. It is fast building, and will probably become a good shipping point for the farmers of the vicinity. It is named in honor of Col. Everest, of Atchison, the attorney of the road. It is in the south central part of the county.

All Saints Roman Catholic Church.—This large and commodious structure was the first church built in Brown County. It was erected in 1868, and dedicated the same year. It cost $1,200. In the year 1882, an addition of twenty-five feet was made to the original building, making its dimensions now 24x75 feet. It is surmounted by a handsome belfry, and is furnished with modern furniture. The seating capacity of the church is 300, and its membership is 500, composed of some of the most influential and prominent families of Mission and Washington townships, in Brown, and Grasshopper township, in Atchison County.

The first pastor of the church society was Father Edmund, O. S. B., who commenced preaching in the Bohemian settlement, in the vicinity of Marak, in 1858. Father John, of the same order, is the present pastor.

Farmers' Elevator and Mill Co.—The steam elevator belonging to this company, located at Everest, Brown County, was erected in July, 1882. It is two stories high, and cost about $6,000. Its storage capacity is 18,000 bushels, and the cribs attached to the elevator have a capacity of 20,000 bushels more, and at the date of writing this short and imperfect sketch (April, 1883), are filled to their utmost capacity. The working capacity of the elevator is four cars per day. It has shipped, principally to the St. Louis markets, since it has been erected, 30,000 bushels of grain of all kinds.

The headquarters of the Farmers' Elevator and Mill Company is at Severance, Doniphan County, with branch houses at Everest and Willis, Brown County. The following gentlemen comprise the officers and directory of the company: Hon. B. F. Harpster, Prest.; J. D. Harpster, Vice-Prest.; Fred. Harpster, Supt.; W. H. H. Curtis, Secy.; H. Charters, Asst. Secy. and Mangr; J. F. Harpster, Treas.; and B. F. Harpster, H. Charters, Fred. Harpster, W. H. H. Curtis, S. L. Ryan, J. D. Harpster, and E. N. Pugh, directors.

This company is undoubtedly one of the largest grain dealing firms in the State, and at present have on hand, stored in their elevators at Severance, Everest and Willis, over 300,000 bushels of grain of all kinds.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP.

DANIEL ANDERSON, farmer, Section 3, Township 4, Range 18, P.O. Robinson, was born in Johnson County, Mo., March 30, 1846, and lived in his native State until his ninth year, when his parents removed, in the spring of 1855, to Kansas, locating in Washington Township, Brown County, where Mr. Anderson has resided since. During the last war he was a member of Company A, Fifteenth Regiment Kansas Cavalry. He enlisted at Fort Leavenworth in December, 1864, and was discharged at the same place, in the summer of 1865. He was married in Brown County, December 29, 1871, to Miss Mary Cowley, a native of Ohio. She died in June, 1882. They had six children, three of whom are living, and who are named—Rosetta Bell, Thomas A. and Hugh. Mr. Anderson's father, the Hon. A. B. Anderson, is an old Kansas pioneer, and was the first Probate Judge elected in Brown County. Mr. A. is the owner of the well known trotting mare, Maggie F., who has a record of 2:30. This fine animal has won in the neighborhood of fifteen races. She was sired by Newry by Lexington, her dam being —— ——, bred in Kentucky. He has been offered, and has refused $5,000 for this valuable trotter. In addition to Maggie F. Mr. Anderson has a fine string of trotting and running colts. He is extensively engaged in breeding fine stock of this description.

SEEVER & ANDREW, proprietors of the Star livery stable, Everest. Mr. Seever, the senior member of this enterprising firm, was born in Buchanan County, Mo., December 19, 1853, and lived in his native State until his eighth year, when his parents removed to Atchison County, in this State. Here Mr Seever resided until his seventeenth year. He then removed to Leavenworth County, where he resided a short time, and after various removals, in the fall of 1881 located in Hamlin, Brown County, where he was engaged in the livery business, and where he lived until February, 1883, when he removed to the new and thriving town of Everest in the same county, where, in conjunction with his partner, Mr. Andrew, he built the large livery stables of which they are now the proprietors. Mr. Seever was married in 1878, in the city of Hiawatha, to Miss Mary A. Erp, a native of Missouri. They have three children—Gertie, Mertie A. and Clyde A. Mr. Andrew was born December 12, 1857, in Upper Canada, and lived in his native country until his twelfth year, when his parents removed to the United States, locating in Atchison County, this State, where Mr. Andrew lived until February, 1883, when he removed to Everest, Brown County. Messrs. Seever & Andrew represent the livery, feed and sale business in the lively new town in which they are located, with a dozen head of fine horses and corresponding equipages. They own a new and convenient barn, 43x72 feet, erected in the beginning of the present year. They are clever and accommodating men, have a large patronage, and hold good positions in the business community.

HERBERT CHARTERS, manager and assistant secretary of the Farmers' Elevator and Mill Company, Everest, was born in the town of Napanee, Ontario, Canada, in 1854, and lived in his native country but a short time, his parents removing to Oswego, N. Y., Mr. Charters receiving his early education in the graded schools of this city. In 1871, Mr. C. removed to Port Huron, Mich., where he resided three years and was engaged as a book-keeper in the Pine Grove Brewery, a large establishment. Thence he removed to Toledo, Ohio, where he remained one year and was employed as chief clerk in the Oliver House in that city. From Toledo he went to Fairfield, Neb., where he was engaged as chief book-keeper for the firm of C. F. Shedd & Co, the largest and most extensive grain dealers in that State. He resided in Fairfield three years and then went in the interest of the same firm to Leadville, Colo., continuing in the employ of this firm about a year as superintendent in charge of large saw mills in Lake County, near Leadville. Mr. Charters then entered Burlingame's Assay Office, where he learnt assaying in all its branches, and then opened an assay office at Breckenridge, Colo., he was thus engaged about one year. While engaged in assaying, Mr. C. incorporated in company with others, the Frisco Discovery and Mining Company, of which company he was a director and secretary. From Breckenridge he went to Canyon City, Colo., where he was cashier for the D. & R. G. R. R. He held this position for a year, and then became a resident of Kansas, locating at Everest, Brown County, where he bought an interest in the Farmers' Elevator and Mill Company, and where he has continued to reside. He is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Charters is a young and enterprising business man, a prosperous and prominent citizen and has a high standing in the community in which he resides.

FRANCIS MARAK, JR., senior member of the firm of Marak Brothers, dealers in general merchandise, groceries, boots and shoes, flour, feed, etc., Everest, was born in Moravia, Austria, September 6, 1842, and lived in his native country until 1857, when his parents immigrated to America, locating in Washington Township, Brown County, where the family has since resided. Mr. Marak is a member of the Roman Catholic Church. He was Deputy Postmaster of Marak Postoffice eight years, and a member of the Board of School, District No. 19, Brown County, three years. He participated in the War of the Rebellion as a member of Company H, Thirteenth Regiment Kansas Infantry, enlisting in September, 1862, at Robinson, Kan., and being discharged at Springfield, Mo., in March, 1863, for disability contracted while in the United States service. He was married in 1866, in Atchison County, to Miss Johanna Donahue, country born Irish-American. Marak & Sons started the first general mercantile establishment in Washington Township, Brown County, January, 1874, at Marak postoffice. They continued in business in this place until July, 1882, when their father sold out. Then Marak Brothers removed to Everest in the same county, where they have carried on business since. They are among the strong popular growing firms of the town, enjoy excellent credit and are men of acknowledged strength in the community.

E. W. METZGER, senior member of the firm of Metzger & Co., dealers in groceries, provisions, flour, feed, books and stationery, wall paper, etc., etc., Everest, was born near Lancaster, Pa., in 1834, and lived in his native State until his twentieth year, when he removed to Summit County, Ohio, where he stayed a short time, and then went to Sterling, Whiteside Co., Ill., where he resided until 1859, when he removed to Shell Rock, Butler Co., Iowa, where he lived until 1872. He then removed to Fall City, Neb., in which State he resided until September, 1882, when he became a citizen of Kansas, locating at Everest, Brown County, where he has lived since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Falls City Lodge No. 9, A., F. & A. M., and Falls City Lodge No. 13, I. O. O. F. While residing in the State of Nebraska, he was for three years Postmaster of the Preston, Neb., postoffice. He was married in Sterling, Ill., in 1855, to Miss Nancy Johnson, a native of Bedford County, Pa. They have three children living, whose names are—Andrew Robert, Lucius Hulbert (married to Miss Lide Tracy, a native of Kansas), and Alta Mabel. Mr. Metzger is a practical and thorough miller, and has been engaged at working at his trade ever since his fourteenth year. He now has sole charge of the extensive flouring mills at Everest, and the excellence of the flour manufactured there is in a great measure owing to his skill. His son, Lucius, has charge of the store, which has and is deserving of a large trade. Mr. Metzger is a plain, common sense, practical man, and is highly spoken of by his neighbors.

GEORGE PIERCE, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 27, Township 4, Range 18, P. O. Everest, was born in Sangamon County, Ill., in 1829, and resided in his native State until the spring of 1847, when he became a member of Captain Adam Dunlap's Independent Cavalry Company, of Schuyler County, Ill., being enlisted at Rushville, Ill., in the spring of 1847, and discharged at the close of the Mexican War, at Alton, Ill., in 1848. After the close of the war he returned to his Illinois home, where he resided until August, 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Washington Township, Brown County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Christian Church. During the War of the Rebellion, Mr. Pierce was an employe of the United States Quartermaster's Department under Capt. Samuel Hipple, United States Volunteers, and was stationed for a long time at Cape Girardeau, Mo. Subsequently, at the time of the Price raid, he was a member of Captain White's Company Fifteenth Regiment Kansas Militia, enlisting at Atchison in the fall of 1864, serving fourteen days and being discharged in the same city. Mr. Pierce is Deputy Postmaster of Everest. He was married in Petersburg, Ill., in 1850, to Miss Virginia Hall, a native of Illinois. They have five children, whose names are—Elbridge, married to Miss Julia Adkinson, a native of Indiana; Mary F., married to Thomas Roach, a native and resident of Illinois; Della, married to Robert Iles, a native of Kansas and resident of Everest; Ophie and Willie. Mr. Pierce owns a fine upland farm of 320 acres, situated two miles southwest of Everest. It it all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation, is well supplied with water and timber, has an elegant residence, and good outbuildings and other improvements. He grows 4,000 bushels of corn, 800 bushels of wheat, and 400 bushels of oats yearly, feeds a car load of cattle, keeps 65 head of fine stock cattle, 65 hogs, and 13 head of horses. Mr. Pierce is a veteran of two wars, an old pioneer of Kansas, a thorough and practical farmer, a useful and prosperous citizen, and has a high standing in the community in which he lives.

JUL. THORSON, farmer and stock raiser, Section 27, Township 3, Range 18, P. O. Robinson, was born in Norway, June 20, 1836, and lived in his native country until his nineteenth year, and then immigrated to America, locating in Manitowoc, Wis., where he lived two years, and was engaged in farming and logging. From Wisconsin he came, in the fall of 1858, to Kansas, and located in Sumner, Atchison County, where he lived sixteen months, and then went to Colorado, where he remained three years, and was engaged in mining and prospecting. From Colorado he returned to Kansas, locating in Washington Township, Brown County, where he has resided ever since. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. He took part in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company C, Maj. Pope's Independent Battalion, Kansas Militia, and enlisted at Robinson in the fall of 1864; served fourteen days, and was discharged in the city of Atchison. He was married in Washington Township, Brown County, April 14, 1871, to Miss Carrie Nelsen, a native of Norway. They have five children, whose names are—John T., Sarah Isabel, Annie Matilda, Oscar Nicolai and Henry Edwin. Mr. Thorson has a fine upland farm of 210 acres, all enclosed with substantial fences, and having 100 acres in cultivation, the remainder being timber and pasture land. The farm is well watered, has a small orchard, and has good improvements. Mr. Thorson also owns another farm, five miles from the home farm, which contains 161 acres. This is also upland, and is an excellent grain farm. It has seventy acres of tillable ground, the remainder being pasture land. He raises on both farms from 1,200 to 1,600 bushels of wheat, 400 to 500 bushels of oats, 150 to 200 bushels of rye, 3,000 bushels of corn, and cuts and cures from 25 to 30 tons of timothy and prairie hay each season. He feeds from 20 to 25 steers and 50 to 60 head of hogs yearly for the markets. He keeps 47 head of stock cattle, 50 head of stock hogs and 7 head of horses. Mr. Thorson was a poor man when he first came to Brown County, but now, owing to hard work, economy and the rich and prolific soil of his adopted State, he possesses two as good and as well stocked farms as there are in his vicinity. He is honest, intelligent and persevering, and is highly esteemed by his friends and neighbors.

WILLSON B. WAY, senior member of the firm of W. B. Way & Co, dealers in general merchandise, dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes, hardware, groceries and queensware, Everest, was born November 25, 1844, in Lansingburg, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., and lived in his native State until 1863, when he removed to Memphis, Tenn., where he resided five years. Then he removed to Philadelphia, Pa., where he lived ten years and was engaged as a book-keeper in the large wholesale establishment of A. A. Shomway & Co. In June, 1878, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Leavenworth City, where he was a member of the firm of H. M. Hoffman & Co., dealers in musical instruments. In the spring of 1880 he removed to Effingham, Atchison County, where he engaged in the general mercantile trade. June 16, 1882, he removed to Everest, Brown County, where he erected his fine store building and warehouse, and where he has been in business since. He is a member of the Baptist Church. During the War of the Rebellion he was a member of Company K, Fourth Regiment Enrolled Militia, District of West Tennessee, and was Quartermaster Sergeant of his regiment. Mr. Way was married in the city of Philadelphia, in November, 1873, to Miss Ellen Lord Dewey, a native of Philadelphia, and a direct descendant of Phineas Stearns of the Boston tea party. They have one child, a son named Sylvester B. Mrs. Way's grandfather was Col. Bond of the Continental army. He was at Bunker Hill, and lost his life at Ticonderoga. Mr. Way is a descendant on his father's side of an English Quaker family and French Huguenots: on his mother's side from John Rogers, the martyr. The firm of which Mr. Way is a member carry a stock of about $15,000. They do the leading trade in their line in the thriving town in which they are located. Expect to sell $50,000 worth of goods during the coming year, and are one of the ablest business firms in the county.

POWHATTAN TOWNSHIP.

WILLIAM N. CASSITY, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Wetmore, was born June 5, 1831, in Fleming County, Ky. Reared in that county and at twenty-five years of age left for the West accompanied by his brother, M. P. M. Cassity, now of Wetmore. He recounts their adventures for a day or two after their crossing into Kansas at Little Santa Fe, and their wading into a small lake one night to get a drink, the lake bearing the name of Cassity's Lake to this day. They finally made but lost claims in Miami County, and returned to Missouri. William N. then attended the land sale at Osaukee and secured the farm adjoining, where he has ever since resided, as through litigation, exchanges, etc., he secured his present 160 acre farm, paying $800 therefor. It was raw prairie and to-day with its improvements, fencing, buildings, orchard, etc., is worth $6,000. Mr. Cassity married January 16, 1862, Miss Annie E., daughter of Peter Shoemaker, of Wetmore. They have four living children, William J., Mary A., Mrs. E. Jenks; Peter A., and Isaac Newton, all born on the Brown County farm. Mr. Cassity and family belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

L. P. HAZEN, farmer, P. O. Capioma, was born in 1823, in Lewis County, N. Y.; came West to Fond du Lac County, Wis., in 1846; returned two years later to New York, and in 1855 located in Butler County, Iowa. The year of 1857 found him on a farm in Rock Creek, Nemaha Co., Kan. During his nine years residence there, he served one term as County Surveyor and one as Chairman of the County Board of Commissioners, which office he resigned upon his removal to his present home in 1866. Mr. Hazen has a good and well improved farm. Since his location here he has been twice Surveyor of Brown County; is a Republican of Whig antecedents. He married Sarah J. Quinn, of Warren County, Ill., and they have five children, all born in Kansas.

E. JENNINGS, farmer, P. O. Wetmore. Mr. Jennings came to Kansas in 1857; bought a claim in Granada Township, and lived on it three years and in 1861 settled where he now lives. Has developed from the raw prairie of twenty-two years ago a fine farm and enjoyable home. Has 166 acres and a sixty acre timber lot; 300 apple trees, small fruits, etc. He was born in Columbiana County, Ohio, October 28, 1818; was removed by his parents in 1825, to Union County, Ind., and reared there and in Vermillion County, where he married Sarah J. Trellinger. She was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, and four children have blessed the union, viz.: Orrin, Alonzo, Laura and Alma, all born in Warren County, Iowa, where Mr. Jennings lived from 1844 to 1857.

ARMSTRONG MARTIN, farmer, P. O. Capioma, was born in 1822 in Columbiana County, Ohio, from whence he came to Kansas in 1857. His first claim was on Grasshopper Creek, where it crosses the Brown and Nemaha County line. He was unmarried and began almost penniless, the early strugles to get ahead in the world "when all were poor, but seemingly none so poor as I," are vividly recalled and pleasantly related by Mr. Martin. In the fall of 1858 he married and began in a humble way to prosper. Selling the Grasshopper Creek farm, he located where he now resides. Here he has 480 acres of land, 320 in Brown and 160 in Nemaha counties; it is well improved and provided with good buildings. Mr. Martin was a Douglas Democrat in ante-bellum days and a war Democrat later. He relates that in 1864 his was one of the only three Democratic votes cast for McClellan electors in Brown County. The others were Robert Ray and —— Armstrong. Mr. Martin has been twice married and has a large family of children.

AMASA OWEN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 15, Township 3, Range 15, P. O. Comet. He was born in Whitewater County, Ind., September 12, 1819, but lived in his native State only a short time, his parents removing to Cincinnati, Ohio, where they resided until Mr. Owen had reached the age of ten years, when they removed to LaSalle County, Ill., where Mr. Owen resided until October, 1856, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating near Hiawatha, Brown County, where he was engaged in farming and where he resided for seven years. He then removed to Powhattan Township, in the same county, where he has resided since. He was married in LaSalle County, Ill., July 16, 1843, to Miss Maria Louisa Wiley, a native of Switzerland County, Ind. They have four children living—Daniel W., George W., Isaac Bentley and Alfred Wiley. When the war of the Union broke out, Mr. Owen gave his eldest son to the Union cause. This son, Daniel W., was born in LaSalle County, Ill., and enlisted in Company I, Thirteenth Regiment, Kansas Volunteer Infantry, August 19, 1862, at the city of Atchison. He served all through the war and was discharged at Little Rock, Ark., June 26, 1865. He was a brave and faithful soldier, shared in all the dangers of his command and suffers to this day from the hardships endured while in the service. Mr. Owen owns a choice upland farm, lying in Powhattan Township. The tract is one mile long and sixty-four rods wide, and contains 128 acres. It is all enclosed by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation, and well supplied with water by means of wells and springs. There is a young and thrifty orchard, a handsome maple grove on the farm. There is also plenty of building stone on the property. The improvements are good, among the rest is a comfortable log-house, stock stable, sheds, and lots, granary, corncrib, etc., etc. Mr. Owen raises from 75 to 100 bushels of wheat, the same quantity of oats, forty to fifty bushels of rye, 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of corn, yearly; keeps half a dozen head of cattle, thirty to forty stock hogs; half a dozen horses, and from fifteen to twenty head of fine sheep. Mr. Owen is an old pioneer of the State, and relates many graphic incidents of the early days of the State. During the troubles of 1862 he took part in a recounter between the Free-state and Pro-slavery party at Padonia, Brown County, and helped to defeat the former. He is an honest, hardworking farmer, a prominent citizen of Brown County, and is well known for his sterling integrity and good qualities.

GUSTAVE STEIBLER, farmer, P. O. Sabetha, came to Kansas in 1859, from Paris, Edgar Co., Ill., where he had followed his trade, that of wagonmaker. He began with eighty acres of his present farm, built a frame shanty and almost without a dollar began pioneer work. The "hard year" (1860) nearly starved them out, but the good sense and womanly pluck of Mrs. Steibler was such that she insisted in using money sent from Illinois, to bring them East again, to tide the family over the winter and it was done. To-day Mr. Steibler has 570 acres of well improved and valuable land and as good farm buildings as can be found in his vicinity. His cottonwood grove of three acres furnishes more wood than is needed for home use and the appointments of the farm are in all respects first-class. Mr. and Mrs. Steibler have three children and can look with content and pride on their Kansas record.

JAMES P. WIMBERLY, stockman and farmer, P. O. Netawaka, Jackson Co., Kan. Mr. Wimberly was born March 11, 1828, in Bath County, Ky., and educated in Danville, Ind. About 1846 he located in Rochester, near Springfield, Ill., and with that town as his home he ran on the Mississippi steamers. In 1860 he came to Kansas from Iowa, where he had lived about one year. In early life he had united with the Christian Church and for many years preached that faith through Kansas, living at Atchison, Nemaha and Jackson counties, and seeing many frontier experiences, and through exposure contracted a lung trouble that caused his retirement from active labor in the pulpit. For the past few years he has resided in Powhattan Township, Brown County, as a stockman and farmer. His wife was Amanda Bishop, of New York, and of their two living children—John H. Wimberly is a Jackson County farmer and Mary J. is Mrs. W. W. Garvin, of Powhattan.

RICE COUNTY.

RICE, the central county of Kansas, was created by the Legislature of 1867, and was organized August 18, 1871. Its special County Clerk was Edward H. Dunham, its special County Commissioners were Daniel M. Bell, Theodore A. Davis and Evan C. Jones; temporary county seat Atlanta, which was located on the north one-half of Section 9, Township 20, Range 8, west of the sixth principal meridian.

It was named in honor of Samuel A. Rice, Brigadier General of United States Volunteers, who was killed at Jenkins' Ferry, Ark., April 30, 1864.

Rice County embraces Ranges 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 of Townships 18, 19, 20 and 21. Its northern boundary is 102 miles from Nebraska; its eastern, 179 miles from Missouri; its southern, 81 miles from Indian Territory; its western, 194 miles from Colorado. It is bounded north by Ellsworth, east by McPherson, south by Reno, west by Stafford and Barton counties.

Four counties lie between it and Nebraska; seven, between it and Missouri; three, between it and the Indian Territory; seven, between it and Colorado. It is twenty-four miles across it from north to south, thirty miles from east to west, having an area of 720 square miles. Its original area was 900 square miles. It embraced Township 22 in Ranges 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, now Reno.

MUNICIPAL TOWNSHIPS.

The number of the municipal townships in Rice County is twelve, and may be described in the following manner:

Center.—This township embraces Township 20, Range 9. Its northeast corner is watered by Cow Creek.

Lincoln.—This township is quite well watered, Cow Creek and Plum Creek enters in its northwest corner. Its location is Township 19, Range 9.

Eureka.—This, the latest formed municipality in the county, is Township 18, Range 9. Plum Creek passes through its southwest portion.

Farmer.—This is the northwest township of the county, being Township 18, Range 10. The northeast part of it is watered by Plum Creek, the southern part by Cow Creek.

Pioneer.—This township embraces Township 19, Range 10. Its northeast corner is watered by Cow Creek.

Raymond.—This, the southwest township of the county, embraces Townships 20 and 21 of Range 10. It is watered by the Arkansas River and by Rattlesnake Creek.

Valley.—This township embraces the west five-sixths of Township 20, Range 9. It is watered by the Arkansas and Rattlesnake, which empty into it near its western central part.

Sterling.—This township contains Sterling, the largest town in the county. Its area is fifty-four square miles, embracing the south one-third of Township 20, Range 9, the east one-sixth of Township 21, Range 9, and Township 21, Range 8. The Arkansas passes through its southwest corner.

Atlanta.—This, the central township of the county, has an area of sixty-nine square miles. It embraces the south two-thirds of Township 19, Range 8; the north two-thirds of Township 20, Range 8; the northwest quarter of Township 20, Range 7, and twelve sections in the southwest part of Township 19, Range 7. It is watered by Cow and Little Cow creeks and tributaries of the same. Lyons, the present county seat, located in the exact center of the county, is the objective point of this township.

Victoria.—This township has an area of seventy-two square miles. It embraces the west one-half of Township 18, Range 7; Township 18, Range 8; the north one-third of Township 19, Range 8; twelve sections in the northwest part of Township 19, Range 8. It is watered by tributaries of the Little Cow Creek and the Little Arkansas River.

Its area is 108 square miles. Its southwest part is watered by Cow Creek; its northeastern by the Little Arkansas River.

The following is a list of the postoffices of the county in the fall of 1882: In Farmer Township is the postoffice of Glen Sharrald; in Eureka, Prosper; in Victoria, Kansas Center and Noble; in Union, Bartgestown, Coopersburgh and Little River; in Lyons, Lyons and Mitchell; in Sterling, Sterling; in Valley, Alden; in Lincoln, Allegan and Chase; in Raymond, Raymond. New Cincinnati is a former postoffice in Center Township. Voyls, Wildwood, and Wayside are among the abandoned postoffices.

EARLY SETTLEMENT OF THE COUNTY.

February 28, 1870, John A. Carlson homesteaded the northeast quarter of Section 3, Township 20, Range 6; Andrew John Johnson the northwest quarter of said section; C. S. Lindell the southeast quarter. April 4, 1870, August Johnson located a claim on the southeast quarter of Section 25 in the same town and range; John Enrick Johnson on the northeast quarter of said section; John P. Johnson on the east half of the northwest quarter of Section 24 said town and range. April 18, 1870, O. W. Peterson on the northeast quarter of Section 14 of the same town and range.

August 20, 1870, R. M. Hutchinson, A. J. Howard and J. E. Perdue (firm of Hutchison & Co.) stopped upon the Little Arkansas River with 4,000 head of cattle. Messrs. Howard and Perdue located their claims in January, 1871.

March 1, 1872, a Sunday school was organized, and preaching had in Mr. H. P. Ninde's house, Rev. J. B. Schlichter, superintendent.

In April, 1871, Isaac Schoonover built his house on Plum Creek, hauling the lumber for it from Salina, sixty miles.

In November, 1872, O. Y. Smith built his house, bringing from Peoria, Ill., the brick for his chimney, having the first farmhouse in the county with a brick chimney.

Buffaloes were very plentiful in the spring and summer of 1871 in Rice County, and their meat was of great value to the early settlers. Leonard Loomis, on the day he was seventy five years old, killed five buffaloes at seven shots.

April 19, 1872, at 8 o'clock P. M., on the Santa Fe trail, near Little Cow Creek, in Atlanta Township, Probate Judges Levi Jay, by the silver light of the moon, united in marriage Daniel M. Bell and Miss Mary M. Houks.

April 3, 1871. Rev. F. J. Griffith turned the first furrow on his claim. In the same month P. G. Carter commenced breaking on the southwest quarter of Section 15, Township 20, Range 8.

June 23, 1872, a Sunday school was organized at Williston and Magoffin's Hall, at Atlanta; Dr. Henry Fones was elected superintendent; Mrs. William Lowrey and Mrs. F. Chitty, assistant superintendents; Mrs. M. Williston, secretary; W. T. Nicholas, assistant secretary.

August 10, 1882, Mr. Nicholas was a somewhat prominent candidate for Auditor in the Republican State Convention. August 31, 1882, William L. Brown, of Sterling, was made the Democratic candidate for State Auditor, and at the polls, Rice County, gave him twenty majority, while Republican majorities in the county reached as high as 179.

H. L. Millard, of Sterling, on January 9, 1883, was elected Chief Clerk of the Kansas House of Representatives.

June 28, 1873, The Rice County Agricultural Society was formed. John M. Muscott was elected president; William C. Summer, vice-president; G. W. Voyls, secretary; T. C. Magoffin, treasurer; Moses Birch, Alexander Clark, M. J. Morse, J. H. Ricksecker, S. B. Terry and T. H. Watt, directors. During the year its membership reached 100. The society held a fair at Atlanta September 24 and 25, 1873. In 1877, at the Arkansas Valley Agricultural Society, Wilson Keys was chosen president; William R. Lee, vice-president; J. H. Stubbs, secretary; Samuel Jacobs, treasurer.

The Rice County Horticultural Society was organized November 8, 1871: Rev. J. B. Schlichter, president; Dr. George Bohrer, vice-president; C. Taber, secretary; S. B. Hampton, treasurer.

The Kansas Cane Growers' and Manufacturers' Association was organized at Sterling, December 29, 1881. Its officers were as follows: President, Reginald M. Sandys, of Sterling; Vice-President, John Bennyworth, Larned; Treasurer, J. V. Brinkman, Great Bend; Secretary, R. M. Rugg, Marion; Assistant-Secretary, W. E. Fostnot, Little River.

January 1, 1872, James A. Moore and Ada Cartwright were married by Judge Levi Jay. An early marriage in the county was that of Amelia, daughter of Rev. F. J. Griffith, to W. T. Nicholas.

John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, located at the mouth of Little Cow Creek in 1870.

Nelson Reed, who settled on Section 15, Township 20, Range 8, in 1870, claims to have been the first settler that found the first corner stone in the county erected by Government surveyors, which was located on Section 18 of said township and range. He made the first trip among the settlers to Ellsworth for provisions.

Leonard Russell came to the county in November, 1870. There were then four white men in the county.

Union City, the headquarters of the Ohio Colony, located about three miles southeast of Atlanta, was the locality where Edward Swanson murdered P. B. Shannon by shooting him, August 27, 1871. Swanson fled, and was never arrested or punished for his crime, though James J. Spencer, the Sheriff, started to make the arrest, but never returned to Rice County. Spencer, the northwestern township of the county, named after Spencer, was afterward changed to Farmer. It is said that Shannon, a short time before this occurrence, remarked, "You must kill a man, before you can have a graveyard."

John Chitty, aged eighteen years, son of Ferguson Chitty, died August 28, 1871, the first death among the settlers.

In September, 1871, in Atlanta Township, George and Angie, twin children of Robert and Elizabeth McKinnis, were born; in Union Township, a son of T. Cowger.

The first train of cars that passed through Rice County was on July 22, 1872, the line having been opened from Hutchinson to Larned.

The Salina, Atlanta & Raymond Railway Company was organized in 1872, and Rice County voted to its aid $175,000, but it became defunct.

It is reported that, in 1863, a train of emigrants was broken up near the Plum Buttes, in Farmer Township, and William Magee reported to Historian Muscott. Two miles from there, on the trail, in April, 1874, he found in the vicinity broken and partly burned wagons, plows, barrels, tubs, boxes and earthenware, and that for miles there lay scattered around unworn boots and shoes, crisped by prairie fires and the scorching sun, with other articles, indicating the place to have been the scene of a general massacre, as a row of graves was visible, for some years after, near this spot. Directly east of the Buttes, in a basin surrounded by sand hills, a small party of Mexicans were surprised, and all butchered, at about the same time of the first event. Tradition has it, that in 1846, a man by the name of Jarvis was murdered near the creek that bears his name, by three doctors, who were his companions, from the mountains. He was said to have much money.

Blackman E. Lawrence, County Treasurer of Rice County, in October, 1876, proclaimed that the safe of the County Treasurer was robbed of $9,000. Treasurer Lawrence resigned November 25, 1876, and was succeeded by Patton Himrod, who had been appointed by the County Commissioners. William T. Drew, of Burlingame, who had been County Clerk of Osage County six years, was employed as an "expert," and a report was made in December that there was a deficit of $18,126. Mr. Lawrence was arrested and held for trial. A change of venue having been taken to Reno County, the trial commenced at Hutchinson in January, 1878, and in February, on a jury verdict of "guilty," Judge Peters sentenced the prisoner three years to the State penitentiary.

Of the railroad lands in Rice County the A., T. & S. F. Railroad Company had 169,459 acres, of which 66,415 acres remained unsold January 1, 1883. The Kansas Division of the U. P. Railroad had 24,456 acres.

The statistics of the county for 1874, show 180,299 taxable acres in Rice County; 12,387 under cultivation; 18,040 bushels of spring wheat; 1,092 of winter wheat; 2,880 of rye; 1,488 of barley; 30,220 of oats; 18 of buckwheat; 450 of sweet potatoes; 3,975 of Irish potatoes; 1,840 gallons of sorghum; 2,463 cattle; 10 sheep; 1,688 swine; 975 horses and mules. Relief bonds were voted by the county to the amount of $4,000, the vote being 136 to 117. S.T. Kelsey thought 500 persons in the county would need assistance; another correspondent to the State Board of Agriculture reported 450. W. T. Nicholas, County Clerk, reported: "There will be unusual suffering in our county the coming winter, but how many families I am not prepared to state correctly. There was not anything raised but some wheat, oats, rye and barley, and very little of the above-mentioned articles, on account of the grasshoppers." Another correspondent reported that three-fourths of the people needed assistance, and added: "Having traveled over the largest part of our county, I find that about three-fourths of our people are almost entirely destitute of food, fuel and clothing. Some are now living on boiled wheat, and not half enough of that. The amount of bonds issued will not be half the amount required to support the people until the new crops come in."

The Grasshopper Incursion of 1874.—The centennial historian of Rice County, John M. Muscott, gives the following sketch of the grasshopper scourge:

"This pest, about the time of the first settlement of the county, had visited us on one or two occasions, and departed without any serious injury. But when they came in 1874, the details of the sufferings of our people at that period, in consequence of this terrible visitation, have been so freely and vividly portrayed through the press of the United States, as to render any extended repetition of them unnecessary at this time. Suffice it to say, that for five days preceding the appearance of the grasshoppers in that year, unusually hot winds from the southwest prevailed, until July 25, when the mercury stood at 106 degrees in the shade, 116 degrees in the sun, at 2 o'clock P. M. On the following day the wind suddenly shifted into the northeast, and about 2 o'clock P. M. the grasshopper storm burst upon us; and they increased in numbers until the 28th, when the climax was reached. The wind shifted on the following day to the south, and remained there until August 1, when it returned into the northeast, and on August 2, a fresh installment came from that quarter, and remained until August 7, when most of them took their departure, the wind still blowing from the northeast.

"For the first three days after their appearance, the whole heavens were darkened with their presence and the earth with their bodies. They covered every tree and plant, and every green thing—the prairie and water courses. They flew like hail in the faces of men, dashed themselves against every object, animate and inanimate, and as they rushed through the air or near the earth, and struck an opposing object, the rattle of their contact resembled the sound of a hailstorm on the roof, or the clashing of sabres in the scabbards of a squadron of cavalry at full gallop. Like the frogs and the locusts in Pharaoh's time, they were every where.

"When this scourge had fairly settled down upon us, the stoutest hearts quailed before it, and gloom was depicted on every countenance. The plow was left standing midway in the furrow, and for a while all farm labor was virtually suspended. The most gifted pen and the most eloquent tongue are inadequate for the task, for language is too poor to paint the scene of desolation wrought by the grasshoppers of 1874.

"But the silver lining soon rose above the dark cloud. Early in September, copious rains refreshed the parched earth, and thus prepared the way for the most bountiful crops the ensuing year that Kansas ever produced. Relief to the stricken people poured in from abroad, and never was aid more timely and necessary, or even more gratefully received by any people, than it was by the citizens of this county, that fall and the ensuing winter. For our people knew and felt that their destitution was not the result of slothfulness or extravagance on their part, and that no human foresight could have averted this calamity. Joyfully and without any humiliation on their part, they received the bounty of others. The scourge of 1874 was not wholly unmixed with blessings, nor without some useful lessons. Men's hearts grew larger and beat with quicker sympathy for each other, in the presence of this wide desolation."

ELECTIONS AND COUNTY OFFICERS.

The first election held in Rice County was on September 26, 1871. W. T. Nicholas for County Clerk, received all the votes that were cast. Moses Burch, William Lowrey and S. H. Thompson were elected County Commissioners; T. C. Magoffin, County Treasurer; James J. Spencer, Sheriff; J. W. Holmes, Coroner; G. W. Poole, Register of Deeds; T. S. Jackson, County Surveyor; Levi Jay, Probate Judge; H. Decker, County Attorney; William H. Van Osmun, Clerk of the District Court. Neither Evan C. Jones or S. H. Thompson acted as County Commissioners, directly following their elections. Atlanta received sixty-four votes for county seat; Union City, about three miles southeast of Atlanta, had forty-eight votes.

At the general election held November 7, 1871, the foregoing named officers were mostly re-elected. J. M. Leidigh was elected a Commissioner in place of S. H. Thompson; Henry Fones was elected Coroner; W. P. Brown, County Attorney; Evan C. Jones, County Surveyor and Superintendent of Public Instruction; Rev. F. J. Griffith, Representative to the Legislature, receiving eighty-five votes and seventy-seven majority.

In March, 1872, S. H. Thompson was appointed to succeed J. M. Leidigh as Commissioner. In June T. J. Fulton succeeded W. P. Brown as County Attorney.

November 5, 1872, on the vote for Representative, F. J. Griffith received fifty-nine; H. P. Ninde, eighty-six; William Lowrey, ninety-four. Since then its Representatives have been elected as follows: In 1873, Rev. M. J. Morse; 1874, Dr. S. M. Wirt; 1875, Ansel R. Clark; 1876 and 1882, Dr. G. Bohrer; 1878 and 1880, Rev. John G. Eckles.

Rice County at first was in the Twentieth Senatorial District, and J. H. Prescott of Saline was its Senator. Under the next apportionment it was in the Twenty-ninth District, and John H. Edwards of Ellis, and Solomon Stephens of McPherson represented it in the Senate. By the Apportionment Act of 1876 it was located in the Thirty-seventh District, and Thomas T. Taylor of Reno, J. C. Strong of Pawnee and Simon Mots of Ellis have been its Senators. By the Apportionment Act of 1881, with Barton and Rush, it constitutes the Thirty-sixth Senatorial District, and elects a Senator in November, 1884. It is the One Hundredth and First Representative District; it was the One Hundred and Fourteenth by the apportionment of 1876.

At first Rice County was in the Eighth Judicial District and was attached to Ellsworth County for judicial purposes. W. H. Canfield was then Judge of the Judicial District. In 1872 and since then it has been in the Ninth District, and its Judges have been W. R. Brown, S. R. Peters and L. Houk.

The division of the townships of the county into Commissioner Districts is as follows: First District—Farmer, Eureka, Lincoln, Pioneer, Raymond, Center and Valley. Its population in 1880 was 3,109. Second District—Sterling, Atlanta and Victoria. Its population in 1880 was 3,937. Third District—Union and Washington. Its population was 2,246 in 1880.

County Commissioners—Daniel M. Bell, Theodore A. Davis, Evan C. Jones, Moses Burch, J. M. Leidigh, William Lowrey, S. P. Thompson and Alexander Clark successful contestants against W. L. Smith, Peter Gosch, O. Y. Smith, Thomas H. Wible, George D. M. Goff, W. C. Willard, J. K. Miller, J. S. Chapin, James E. Perdue, J. M. L. Gore, George F. Miller, Samuel Cameron and J. C. Seaward. The Commissioner longest in service was William Lowrey.

County Clerks—Edward H. Dunham, William T. Nicholas and C. M. Rawlings have been the Clerks; Mr. Nicholas having held the office from September, 1871 to January, 1882.

County Treasurers.—T. C. Magoffin, B. E. Lawrence, Patten Himrod and James E. Perdue have been the treasurers.

Register of Deeds.—G. W. Poole, J. Q. Manning, E. J. Arnold, John W. White, Moses Burch and J. F. Crocker have filled this office.

County Surveyors.—T. S. Jackson, Evan C. Jones, Kirk Himrod, H. P. Colegrove, Warren McClure, Frederic E. Pratt, and Jesse Brown have been the surveyors elected and appointed.

Sheriffs.—James J. Spencer, Joseph Taylor, J. M. D. Howard, Henry Sherman, W. L. Smith and T. A. Butler have been the sheriffs.

Coroners.—J. W. Holmes, Henry Fones, C. W. Hodge, Carlos A. Clobridge and W. M. Lamb have been the coroners elected and appointed.

Clerk of the District Court.—William H. Van Ornum, T. H. Watt, J. H. Stubbs, William R. Lee and S. J. Smith have been the district clerks.

County Attorneys.—W. P. Brown, T. J. Fulton, I. H. Ricksecker, Ansel R. Clark, John M. Muscott, John W. White, A. J. Abbott and J. H. Bailey have been the public prosecutors.

Probate Judges.—Levi Jay, W. B. Connor, G. W. Voyls, C. T. Daniels, S. H. Jones and George W. Clark have been the judges.

Superintendents of Public Instruction.—Evan C. Jones, R. D. Stephenson, Mrs. N. E. Harley and J. K. Farrar have superintended the public school work.

COUNTY LINES AND COUNTY SEAT.

In the Kansas House of Representatives of 1872 Rev. F. J. Griffith represented Rice County; Rev. C. C. Hutchinson represented Reno County, which had been organized January 1, 1872, and on the 6th day of January had elected Mr. Hutchinson by a vote returned of 112, its Representative to the State Legislature. It was a patent fact that C. C. Hutchinson, et al., of Reno County desired the south tier of the Congressional townships of Rice County so as to make the town of Hutchinson an eligible county seat for Reno, and the interests of Atlanta and the northern portion of Rice County seemed not to be averse to parting with the said Township 22 in Ranges 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, one-fifth of the territory of Rice, so as to prevent Peace, now Sterling, from having good chances of being the county seat of Rice. March 7, 1872, an act took effect placing the territory above named in Reno County, Mr. Hutchinson's bill providing for the same having passed the House February 14 by a vote of 59 to 27, as appears from the journal. Mr. Griffith voted for it, Mr. Hutchinson against it.

April 12, 1876, an election was held for the relocation of the county seat with the following result: For Peace (now Sterling), 336; for the Center, 457; majority for the Center 121. The location of the Center was on Section 4, Township 20, Range 8, and four acres of said section was conveyed to Rice County by Truman J. Lyon and wife May 26, 1876, and recorded June 2, 1876. On June 17, an election was held for the purpose of voting on loan and the public buildings, and the proposition was carried by a majority of sixty-six. In August, 1876, E. C. Sooy of Great Bend had the contract for erecting the court house at Lyons, (taking its name from Mr. Lyon) for $10,400. The Commissioners appointed G. W. Fulton superintendent of construction of the court house. The Commissioners accepted the court house from Mr. Sooy, the contractor about June 20, 1877. County Clerk Nicholas took possession of his office in the court house December 20, 1876. The building is of brick and a neat structure. The court house yard is very well adorned with thrifty trees. The county has a poor farm valued at about $3,000. It has free bridges aggregating about $2 500 in value.

A Statutory Anomaly.—In chapter 24 of Dassler's Compiled Laws of Kansas, Section 61 defines the boundaries of Reno County and its northern tier of townships, embraces Town 22, of Ranges 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10; while Section 63 of said act in bounding Rice County, locates Town 22, of Ranges 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, as its southern tier of townships, making this same territory of 180 square miles in Section 61, in Reno, and in Section 63, in Rice County. By the last Section, Nickerson, an important railroad station, would be in Rice County, and the southeast corner of Rice County, two miles from Hutchinson, the county seat of Reno. A future reviser of the statutes of Kansas will undoubtedly take cognizance of this inharmony of the two co-related Sections of Chapter 24, defining the boundaries of the counties of Reno and Rice.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

In 1871, there was 130 persons of school age in the county; in 1872, there was 293; in 1873, 476; in 1874, 785; in 1875, 933; in 1876, 1,438; in 1877, 1 794; in 1878, 2 577; in 1879, 3,175; in 1881, 3,258; in 1882, 3,488.

The number of organized School Districts in the county in 1872, was 9; in 1873, 14; in 1874, 37; in 1875, 41; in 1876, 50; in 1877, 56; in 1878, 60; in 1879, 62, in 1881, 71; in 1882, 72, with 87 school buildings and 95 school-rooms.

The total expenditures for school purposes in 1872, was $118; for 1873, $1,629; for 1874, $8,685; for 1879, $22,895.33; for 1882, $49,782.

The total valuation of school property for 1872, was $486; for 1873, $11,500; for 1874, $13,600; for 1875, $18,546; for 1877, $21,701; for 1879, $38,016; for 1882, $49,782.

The average pay of male teachers per month, in 1882, was $33,33; of female teachers, $27.54.

Before the establishment of County Normal Institutes, in 1877, a great deal of interest had been manifested by the teachers of the county in their work, and many teacher's meetings had been held. During the six years of Normal Institutes, the teachers of Rice County have been in attendance upon their Institute in numbers ranging from 50 to 69. The conductors have been H. P. Colegrove, J. R. Campbell, L. T. Gage, H. K. McCormell and W. G. Hamrick. The school at Sterling employs six teachers, W. G. Hamrick, principal. Rice County has a Teachers' Association; its President for 1883 is Prof. W. G. Hamrick; its Secretary, Mrs. Annie W. Sollett. It was organized May 25, 1878.

Rice County School Bonds.—The total bonded debt of the School Districts of Rice County, as reported for 1882, was $34.732. This aggregate does not include the following lot which are a part of the Permanent School Fund investment, as officially reported, and which bring a historic name for the town of Raymond, the station west of Sterling, on the A., T. & S. Fe Railroad:

The foregoing described bonds were purchased on October 16, 1872, of B. Haywood, of Topeka, for the sum of $9,237, by the School Fund Commissioners. A Committee of the Senate of 1876, consisting of Messrs. Peffer, of Montgomery; Johnson, of Leavenworth, Barnum, of Bourbon; Judd, of Wyandotte, and McMillan, of Linn, submitted a report February 11, 1876, concerning this matter, which is found in the Senate journal, of 1876, pages 254, 255, 256 and 257.

In the House Journal of 1876, pages 541 to 620 inclusive, is a completer history of the matter, submitted to Speaker Haskell by the Committee on State Affairs, consisting of Messrs. Taylor, of Reno; Brumbaugh, of Marshall; Kellogg, of Clay; Huff, of Wyandotte; and Page, of McPherson.

In his report for 1875, Atty. Gen. Randolph stated:

"I have brought suit against said District for the sum of $2,762.80, with interest on $762 80 of said sum from June 1, 1873, and with interest on $1,000 of said sum from June 1, 1874, and with interest on $1,000 of said sum from June 1, 1875; which suit is now pending in the District Court of Rice County."

In his report for 1876, the Attorney-General, in a semi-humorous manner, explains his action in the premises in the following manifesto:

"District No. 8, Rice County, was organized July 18, 1872, and was then bounded as follows: Commencing where the south line of Township 19 intersects the east line of Range 10, west; thence south with said range line to the south line of Township 21; thence west with said township line to the east line of Range 11, west; thence north with said range line to the north line of Township 19; thence east with said township line to the place of beginning—said boundaries including a territory twelve miles long and six miles wide, and having almost as many square miles as several of the minor Germanic principalities—Schwartzburg-Sondershausen, for example.

"At the time said suit was begun, three other school districts (Nos. 38, 39 and 40) had been in part organized out of the territory originally included in District No. 8, so that said district then consisted merely of a sandy, uninhabited and treeless tract of land six miles in length and three miles in width, lying wholly south of the Arkansas River. Thus had the district been designedly dissected quite out of existence. When the above action was begun against School District No. 8, its corporate life had been so nearly gerrymandered out of it that it has never since been able to be brought into court and to have and enjoy its day therein. It had then almost breathed its last. Having no director, no treasurer, no clerk, no schoolhouse having thereon 'a belfry and a good bell that can be heard two miles' (see Exhibit 6, attached to the above report, page 548 of the House Journal, 1876), that school district has become so nearly a nonentity as to be but the shadow of a shade and to exist only in name. Stat magni nominis umbra. It may to-day be looked upon as in fact defunct. Since its birth was illegitimate, it came to an untimely end by foul means, as was to be expected.

"Perhaps by some process akin to Huxley's theory of evolution, the remains of School District No. 8, Rice County, may some day be resurrected, a new corporate life be breathed into it, and the forlorn hic jacet of to-day be blotted from its tombstone.

"At the late December term of the District Court of Rice County, for obvious reasons hereinbefore appearing, I dismissed the suit begun against said school district as aforesaid.

"Who concocted the worthless bonds under consideration, and into whose pockets the net proceeds arising from the sale thereof finally found their way, fully appears in the testimony appended to the above report of the House Committee on State Affairs. The committee, at the close of their report, recommended that 'the Attorney-General of the State, under Section 2, Article 12 of the Constitution, commence suit against the stockholders of the Shawnee County Bank, the said bank having gone into liquidation; against the stockholders of the Marion County Bank, which bank has gone into liquidation; and against S. N. Wood, for the recovery of the amount ($9,237) paid on said bonds, and the interest thereon.'

"After the above report was submitted, it was moved that the same lie upon the table, and that 300 copies thereof be printed, which motion prevailed. It seems that thereafter the House took no further action in the foregoing matter." Three-fourths of the members of the House were registered as straight Republicans, and the House of 1877 more decidedly Republican, made S. N. Wood a presiding officer. Mr. Wood, as a candidate for Congress in 1882, received sixty-one per cent. of the vote of Raymond Township.

PRESS HISTORY.

The Rice County Herald was started at Atlanta April 19, 1872, by a Mr. Frazier, and soon after it was sold to the Shinn Brothers. They sold it to Smith & Wallace, who soon after moved it to Peace, now Sterling. In 1875 it was moved to Hutchinson, Reno County.

The Rice County Gazette.—Edward Bronson Cowgill commenced at Peace, January 20, 1876, the publication of the Gazette, a Republican paper. In 1879 it became an exponent of the principles of the Nationalists, but in September, 1880, it returned to the support of the successful Republican party.

In 1876, two monthly real estate papers were started at Peace—the Homesteader, by Smith, Stubbs and Ricksecker; the Valley Echo, by Clark and Page. These papers were enthusiastically devoted to the interests they represented.

The Weekly Bulletin.—This paper, published by Charles D. Ulmer, was started May 17, 1877, at Lyons. He removed it to Sterling November 1, 1877, and it remains as one of the able Republican papers of the county.

The New Home.—J. H. Ricksecker started this paper in 1879 at Sterling as a monthly. It was Republican in politics.

The Recorder.—In September, 1879, Rev. W. J. Williams started this paper as a monthly, devoted to the upbuilding of the Congregational denomination of Christians.

The Lyons' Republican.—Clark Conkling commenced the publication of the Republican at Lyons in September, 1879. Its location insures for it a good permanent support.

The Central Kansas Democrat.—This paper was started at Lyons in 1879, by Edward W. Wood and W. J. Fuller. It is aggressively Democratic in its politics. Mr. Wood is the present editor and proprietor.

The Rural West.—W. E. Fosnot and brother commenced the publication of this paper at Little River in 1881. It is devoted to agricultural interests, quite specially to the cultivation of sorghum.
